THE SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord; for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 2, 1901.

NO. 1.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR.

JOSEPH LUFF
D. W. WIGHT

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, JAN. 2, 1901.

GOOD-BYE, 1900.

In saying, "good-bye" to the year 1900, it will be well that we remember that it has been one of the most eventful years in the general affairs of the world of the last decade.

The closing days of the century will leave the nations of the earth, including the American Republic, face to face with problems to be solved which will tax the powers of the world's ablest statesmen to secure a solution of and leave the world in peace.

The difficulty in China is not past the peril point, nor are the allied powers sure of the attitude that China's ministers will assume in regard to the note defining terms of adjustment offered to them by the powers. And still outrages are occurring and some of the foreign troops are busy putting down Boxer or insurgent risings in different parts of the kingdom. The situation is perplexing, and through real or apparent jealousies between some of the powers there is fear of a failure in harmony at the last. What the result will be is a matter of grave import.

What with her part in the Chinese troubles to maintain, the distress in her Indian possessions, where famine and pestilence have taxed statesmanship and material resources alike heavily; the parliamentary uneasiness of the Irish; and the persistent efforts of the Boers in South Africa to resist the power of the army, England has her hands full. Her resources for men, money, and war materials are taxed to the limit; and though her ministers declare that the war will be carried to a successful issue at all costs of men and means, the end is by no means reached, nor is it easily told. Whether the empire will be able to overcome in this multitude of strife and maintain its old time prestige and possessions is vet to be decided.

Queen Victoria, good and able ruler that she has been, now in her eightyfirst year, is failing at last, and but a few months hence must pass the bourne, and leave the affairs of state to those who come after her. Who will be her successor? and what will be his procedure as a king? Is there still a sufficiently strong sentiment in favor of the "divine right of kings to rule" to perpetuate the rule of the heir apparent of the Guelph dynasty by seating and maintaining the Prince of Wales as the King of the British Empire? Will there be new ideas, new policies, new measures to follow the installation of Victoria's son? Will the constitutional monarchy idea of government still be found sufficient to withstand the pressure of the enormous debt being augmented every day, with the burdensome appendage of royalty which, it is passed into a proverb, is but a figurehead in the real administration of the governmental powers; or will there have grown up a sentiment favorable to republican forms of government which may depose the king and establish a different form of rule?

Whatever may be the result of the African war, England is evidently facing a serious crisis in its history, and the possibilities for national disaster and distress are peculiar and great. Lord Kitchener is demanding men and horses and other sinews of war, which the home authorities are hardly able to grant and send him, nor is it easy to see how they are to be supplied. So serious is the situation that a striking increase in the soldier's pay has been offered, from one shilling sixpence to five shillings, if we remember correctly.

America's resources are being drawn upon by England for horses, mules, and food products, to supply the army in the field. It is estimated that the average life of an American horse in the South African campaign is about six weeks. Anyone can readily see what a frightful expense of money and animal life attends the subjugation of the Transvaal.

But, England is not alone in the lists of nations being tried in the crucibles of political and national strife. The leading nations are all in the throes of evolution and trial. Russia's policies have been trembling in the balances hinging upon the illness of the Czar. For, while the cry would have been, "The Czar is dead. Long live the Czar!" in case the present ruler had gone down in his fight with disease, no one could venture to say what the character and policy of his successor would have been. But he is now recovering, and the world is still spared the crisis that might have followed the issues of death.

Germany is in the active energies of national conflict with a ruler on the throne who is strongly imbued with his personal importance in the general affairs of the nations and Germany in particular. Count Waldersee, of Germany, is in charge of the allied forces in China; and notwithstanding the apparent concert of the powers, there is room for apprehension.

What of the others? France is on the watch. Japan, Italy, Spain, Holland, Austria, the United States, are all watching, and while the spirit of mercantile expansion and profit is trying sedulously to shape the destinies of the different interests involved to a peaceful and advantageous ending for all parties, it almost goes without saying that at any moment the kindling spark of division, disagreement, and possibly war, may be struck from the flint of selfishness by the steel of friction and the "abomination which maketh desolate" result.

The United States, like the other nations, has her issues at stake, and her different problems of diplomacy, measures of policy, and national moral and material economy to consider and dispose of.

Whether the men to whom these tasks are at present confided will be wise and patriotic enough to dispose of the questions before them for solution and public answer to the people successfully or will fail to do so, is a matter of anxiety to all. It is the hope of all lovers of the country who desire the greatest good to the greatest number, that there will be no mistake made by which the stability of the government will be fatally endangered, and that right will finally triumph. It is, however, no child's play at governmental measures and political procedures that now engages the attention of the statesmen of the American Republic. There has been no such crisis since the period before the internecine war of 1860-65, and none in the history of the Republic, as we view the subject, in which the interests involved have been greater, the peril from mistakes more threatening, or the possible results to foldisastrous than the present one of international and domestic political

We pray that the Lord will graciously entreat the land of Zion for his people's sake.

The church has been much blessed in some respects during the passing year. We believe there have been fewer serious difficulties in the different fields of labor then for some years past. But the skies are not all clear. There are pending differences from which trouble may ensue.

This is especially true where there is not as yet a requisite degree of the spirit of accommodation, between men of differences of thought and opinion. or where the friction of contention has wrought irritation. Men cannot "sink out of self into Christ," who cannot in a sense sink out of self into harmony with Christ's body, the church.

However, we hope that when the issues and events of the passing year have been fully thought over, and the mind cast forward over the pathways opening in the new year, there will be a broader, better, more tolerant view of the Christ idea prevalent in all the ranks of the laborers, in the gospel field; and the unprofitable works of the year that is going will be abandoned and forgotten in the resolutions for a nobler, more earnest devotion to God and his cause for the new year.

Let us bid the passing year a graceful, grateful good bye, and greet the new year with a hearty, cheerful hail of welcome, in renewed courage and increased fidelity to God and the good of our fellow men.

WHAT IS A LIE?

In the ordinary acceptation of the term a lie is anything told or acted with the intention to deceive. order that any statement shall be accounted to be a lie, it must be untrue in fact, must be known to the person making it to be untrue, and must be told with the intention to deceive. There must be knowledge that the statement is false and an intention to make the falsehood do duty as a truth before the charge of lying will hold.

A man may make a statement that may be untrue upon a misunderstanding of facts, or a misconception of what gave rise to the thing stated, and so may be made in entire innocence of any intention to deceive or to convey false information upon the part of the one making it. His motive may be of the purest, his intention an absolutely good one, and yet what he may state may be wide of the truth.

A man may misunderstand what another says, and subsequently in relating it may misconstrue what he heard in such a way as to do the speaker a grave injury, and yet have no intention to make a false statement or mislead his hearers or deceive them; he has told what is false and yet may not be guilty of lying.

In this latter day work both the faith and the men who present, teach, and defend the faith, are very frequently maligned, and both men and faith grossly misrepresented by men who are accounted honest and fair minded in the community where they live and are known. They themselves misconceive the character of our people and through the misrepresentations of other men resulting from prejudice, they are led to state very erroneous and false things about the church, its history and its faith. Here is an instance.

A reverend gentleman, Burns by name, and preaching at Painesville Ohio, during the excitement about the seating of B. H. Roberts as a representative from Utah to Congress. undertook to enlighten his congregation upon the evils and awfulness of Mormonism. As reported in the Painesville Republican for March 10, 1899, he said:

The pastor's severest rebuke of Mormon. ism was on its degrading and debasing effect upon womanhood. He then related how a woman embraced the representative of Bud-dhism after he delivered his discourse at the World's Parliament of Religions in Chicago much to the humiliation of all right-minded people who know that Buddha was the greatest enemy to woman the world ever produced.

Rev. Burns said that in 1830, at Fayette, Seneca county, New York, the sect calling themselves the Church of Jesus Christ, Latter Day Saints was founded by one Joseph Smith. He then read from the principles and belief of the church showing the monstrous and disgraceful nature of the religion. He pointed out that the very fundamental tenets of the religion was the doctrine of pural marriage and read extracts from the writings of Joseph Smith and Brigham Young in defense of the claims that the Bible teaches plural marriage. He read from books of the church showing that the religion teaches that there are many gods who have many wives and beget other gods and when a soul falls from grace among the gods it is punished by being sent down to the earth to inhabit a body. The religion teaches that God as well as the Devil visits men in earthly form and talks to them. It teaches that a woman must be called from the grave by a husband and if she has no husband she must lie in the grave forever. This is the monstrous excuse for plural marriage.

Referring to the claim made by Mormons at Kirtland that they do not believe in polygamy, Rev. Burns said it was impossible to believe in Mormonism without believing in plural marriage.

The greater part of the foregoing is erroneous,—may be said to be false. The principles and belief of the church organized April 6, 1830, are neither "monstrous," nor "disgrace-ful." Neither is the "fundamental tenet of the religion" the "doctrine of plural marriage." The reverend doctor could not have read anything from the writings of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, and founder of the church, Bible teaches plural marriage," for he never wrote a line in such defense, not one.

We do not know what books of the church Rev. Burns read from, but we venture to state that those books were not published before the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, as such teaching as he has presented cannot be found in any of the church books published in the lifetime of Joseph Smith and under his rule and with his sanction. And to this statementof the reverend doctor we may safely challenge the proof, which we do.

Again, Rev. Burns is reported as saving that it was "impossible to believe in Mormonism without believing in plural marriage."

This is entirely incorrect, for there are many thousands whom Rev. Burns and his coministers would insist upon calling "Mormons," believers in Mormonism," who do not believe in plural marriage, polygamy, or any other form of desecration of the domestic relation, or degradation of womankind.

We do not attempt to defend any of the deformities, or excrescences fastened on the faith of the church as the same was originally stated by Joseph Smith, and his associate ministers, for we have little more regard for them than Rev. Burns has; but when that gentleman in his zeal to strike at and destroy those abnormal things classes the whole of the faith and doctrine under the head of one of the obnoxious additions and condemns all, we have very serious objections to urge against such classification and denunciation, as they are erroneous and false, and wholly unwarranted by the rules of social ethics.

If Rev. Burns intended his strictures to apply only to those features of Mormonism, so called, which are at variance with the revelations of God to the church, and the teaching of the early elders based upon those revelations, we might not have anything to say, but let those who are holding to the abhorrent things take up the lines of defense against the attack made on them: but the reverend Dr. went out of his way to directly attack those of the faith at Kirtland, our brethren in bonds; hence our right and our essay to defend against such indiscriminate condemnation.

Adhering to our line of thought: If Rev. Burns makes his statements, relying upon the accumulated false information from many sources hostile to the faith, he may be innocent of the charge of lying; though he is guilty of publishing what is false; but if he deliberately falsified with the intention to deceive his hearers, then he not only states what is false, but he lies as well.

We would fain believe that many of these reverend gentlemen who are so "in defense of the claims that the zealous in trying to prevent the spread of what they call Mormonism are ignorant of the facts and acting upon false statements made by others, which they think themselves to be warranted in believing. How else can the idea of the sanctity of the clerical character be accounted for? Surely otherwise honest men will not deliberately engage in lying, even though it be for the purpose of defeating a real or a supposed enemy.

In the intercourse of men with their fellows it sometimes happens that men make misstatements of things occurring under their observation through inadvertence, or a lapse of memory, a forgetfulness, or false remembrance of what was said or done in their presence. In some instances this works to the disadvantage of others, and these through irritation denounce the men for falsifying, sometimes even charging them with Tying; when in truth the very ingredient which turns an untrue statement into a lie is lacking, the intention to deceive.

Again, it sometimes occurs that a man is thought by others to be an untruthful man, for the reason that he persists in denying what these others say that he must know from the fact, as they understand, that his circumstances were such that he had opportunity to know, and therefore, say they, he must know and does know, and lies when he says that he does not know. As an instance of this sort of a charge, we relate that during the ministration of Bro. W. W. Blair, in Utah, two or three elders who had joined the Reorganized Church there. and were impressed with the belief that the prophet, Joseph Smith, had been in the practice of plural marriage at Nauvoo, and that the prophet's son must have known and did know of that practice. In talking the situa-tion over with Bro. Blair, they stated to him their belief, with the further statement that they believed that when the prophet's son said that he did not know of such practice, he was deliberately lying, stating what he knew to be false. They required that he should retract such statement of lack of knowledge and admit that he did know that his father did so practice. If he would not do this, they would quit preaching.

The result of this was that as the son of the prophet had no knowledge of what these elders said he must and did know, he persisted in stating publicly and privately, at homeorabroad, that he did not know that Joseph Smith his father had any other woman as a wife but Emma Hale, whom he married, January, 1827. This statement the prophet's son still persists in making, notwithstanding there are men who say that he is lying when he makes it and knows that he is lying.

Whatever others may think, believe.

and say in regard to the matter above referred to, the prophet's son has no fear of the penalty stated in the word to be visited upon them "who make and love a lie." He has no knowledge of the alleged guilt of his father as others have charged and now charge him with having, and has no fear of the possible consequences to follow such disavowal of knowing.

Further, the prophet's son has a clear comprehension of the situation, of the incentive to fie to shield his father's memory, and all the possible accessories to the whole affair, and the fact of such comprehension has no weight in determining his action in the case; what he knows he is willing to state, what he does not know he will not admit knowing to change the current of opinion or events one whit. Besides this, if he did know what it is alleged by these men he must and does know, he has both the sense and courage to aver such knowledge, and take the consequences that would follow.

There are such instances occurring almost daily in this great contest of gospel work among the men in and out of the church; each differing in detail, but all verging within the pale of our text. A truth, words, or facts, may be distorted by mistake, misapprehension, misunderstanding, and misstatement, do great to our work and our misstatement, do damage standing with our own people, or the outside world. Falsehood may stand with truth's mask over his face, and deceive men by specious argument and coloring of truth; but time with steady purpose and deft fingers will unravel the knots in the web tho' never so skillfully wrought and expose the lie, if it be there.

Men may err in their judgment of men, in their conception of what they have said, seen, heard, or read of themselves, or others, and thus put themselves into false attitude before their fellows; they may even state an absolute truth in such way as to make it appear to be untrue; or state a falsehood under the impression that it is true, and burden others with the belief that he has lied. How careful. then, ought we to be that we are sure of our grounds when we make averments that they are not only true to ourselves, but when being investigated they may be found to be true: or if untrue, that in our statement of them there does not lurk the element to make them lies, the intention to deceive.

CHANGE IN HERALD MAKEUP,

We now present the HERALD to our readers in a new form. What has been the cover will become a part of the paper, making the HERALD a teen.

put under a department of the paper entitled "Selected Articles," and though not so numerous, we trust they will be even more acceptable.

It is our object to make the HERALD continually better, and we trust that we will be seconded in our efforts by every member of the church. The HERALD'S interests are church-wide, and every Latter Day Saint should take an active interest in its maintenance and assist to make it ever reflective of church thought and alive to the best interests of the church generally.

In this the first issue of the new century we present an enlarged paper to our readers, and wish them a most prosperous and happy new year, and sincerely hope that the "hastening time" is fully ushered in, and that the culmination of the great work will be rapid.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE REORGANIZATION.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

The short sketch of my experiences with the church, considering the length of time in which they have occurred, occupying as they have nearly half a century, is submitted in the hope that some good thought may be furnished to the reader which shall make him more earnest in the gospel work, and more confident in the directing hand of the Lord in the affairs of his people.

Two important things have prevented giving these experiences to the people through the third volume of the Church History: 1. I could not prepare in time. 2. I was informed that the space properly allotted to such a sketch would not be sufficient for more than one fourth of what I had in preparation, and it was my preference to who in preparation, and it was my preference to publish as I had written or not at all, believing that in this way only those who read could gain the benefit which the experiences set out may furnish.

Sincerely and respectfully,

E. C. BRIGGS.

Lamoni, Iowa, December 25, 1900.

Prompted by the request of many of the Saints and the dictates of my own mind, I write this sketch of my life, fully realizing that in the judgment, before God, I must answer for every idle word written as well as spoken.

Were I capable of glossing, and in fancy or romantic style portraying to the reader's mind gilded pictures to fascinate the imagination I would not do so. Nor do I write to challenge critical examination of style or diction: but I trust that the facts and experiences which I shall relate will tend to confirm the hope of the older, and strengthen the faith of the younger and rising generation who may read it, and be attractive and convincing to those not yet converted to the faith of the kingdom of heaven.

In such a work as this I must necessarily intersperse my own experiences in "the marvelous work among the people, even a marvelous work and a wonder;" or, as the founder of twenty-page paper instead of a six- and a wonder;" or, as the founder of teen. The "cover articles" will be the great Methodist Church chose to term it: "The times which we have reason to believe are at hand (if they are not already begun) are what many pious men have termed the times of The Latter Day Glory'—meaning the time wherein God would gloriously display his power and love in the fulfillment of his gracious promises that 'The knowledge of God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.' And yet the wise men of the world, the men of eminence, the men of learning and renown, cannot imagine what we mean by talking of an extraordinary work of God. They cannot discern the signs of these times. They cannot see signs at all of God's arising to maintain his own cause and set up his kingdom over the earth."—John Wesley's Sermon, 71. I was born February 20, 1836, in Wheeler, Steuben county, New York. My parents' names were Hugh L. and Polly Briggs, nee Polly Damon. In our family there were ten brothers and five sisters; four brothers still living.

My parents moved from New York to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, arriving there June 10, 1838. About a year later we moved to Jefferson county, Wisconsin. I remember my first religious impressions were at a prayer meeting at this place. While many were kneeling at the altar and my eldest brother, Silas H., was engaged in prayer, others began praying also, whereupon my brother ceased and soon they all stopped. Then Silas prayed again, and I could understand him; but soon others commenced praying, as before, shouting and saying "Amen," at which Silas again ceased to pray and soon they all discontinued. They began and ended in this manner some three or four times, then all arose and sang a hymn.

The singularity of my brother's manner, the confusion created when all were praying, and the stillness at intervals when they ceased while they were yet kneeling, made a lasting impression on my mind. At times I felt pleased, and again sad; but all the time was dissatisfied at what I saw and felt.

My brother Edwin went forward to the anxious seat during this meeting. The calm yet solemn sensation when all were quiet was pleasant to my mind. I attended several of these meetings during the winter, but nothing seemed to attract my attention until in the following summer. When I was attending meeting on one occasion I heard some one remark that "God was killed." I was startled at the statement. I had heard of the crucifixion of Christ, but did not understand it. I thought, Now we will all live forever, for I had had it impressed on my mind that God caused all death. For some days I had considerable pleasure in the sentence was very impressive upon I thought which had been expressed in meeting.

One morning I went into the house and said to my mother, "I am glad that God is dead, for we will live forever now." Mother then explained to me that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of God. His mother was called Mary, and lived at Jerusalem. He was a child once, but grew to be a good man, and was taken by wicked men and put to death. Three days later he arose from the dead in an immortal state and ascended to his Father, to God in heaven. She also said if we would do right and be good we should be raised from the dead and would go to heaven. This simple, plain story I believed. It did me good, child as I was. First it impressed me with the thought that I must try to be good so that I would be raised from the dead and go where there is no more trouble and sorrow. Secondly, it led me to ask many questions about God, the Savior, his apostles, and prophets.

Little by little I soon learned that all of his apostles were killed excepting John the Divine, who was thrown into a caldron of boiling oil but escaped unharmed and afterwards was banished to the Isle of Patmos, where he wrote the apocalypse.

Then the Savior's question to the Jews, Which of the prophets have not your fathers killed? led me to believe that all of them had been hated, persecuted, and killed by mistaken fanatical, religious, and bigoted people.

In the fall and winter of 1841 and 1842 my mother explained, read, and told us children Bible stories until I had a very good idea of the lives of the patriarchs and prophets generally. To illustrate: We would say, "Tell us of 'Cain and Abel,' or the 'three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace;' of 'Joseph that was sold into Egppt;' of 'David and Solomon:' of 'Peter's confession and denial of Christ: of 'Paul's conversion," etc.

As I learned of these men's characters, goodness, or badness, they made lasting impressions upon my mind, the nature of which I may explain some other time as I proceed with my narrative. Suffice it to say I had a fairly good idea of these men and their acts before I could read very much for myself, owing to the instruction of my dear mother, who was a Methodist. I also had three older brothers and two sisters who belonged to that same church.

While attending sabbath school in the summer of 1842, the superintendent, Mr. Hollister, told the class of the goodness of God, how his mercy endureth forever. That God is love, and though "a mother might forget her sucking child, yet God could never forget his children. This last my mind. The thought of my mother forgetting one of her children seemed impossible to me. I contrasted her watchcare over her children with the watchcare of a God who is everywhere, and at the same time watching over all of earth's children; and that he loved them better than any earthly parent was capable of loving their own children because he is God and knows how to love better than earthly parents; yet, how he could love better than mother I confess was a mystery. The thought that a mother could forget her child seemed impossible, and that God could not seemed a mystery, until one beautiful day my sister Mary came home on a visit with her first babe in her arms. I remember well how fond she was of it, with its sparkling eyes and dimpled cheeks. She caressed it. rocked it to sleep, and laid it on the A little time passed and we were all merrily visiting, when all at once sister exclaimed, "Where is Elias?" No one knew. The barn was searched. A hasty visit was made to the little brook and spring below the house, but he could not be found. My sister was almost frantic and exhausted with fear. At this juncture I went into the house, and there lay the little one quietly sleeping on the bed, just as I remembered having seen my sister place it there but a short time before. I ran to the door and called to my sister, and when I informed her that the baby was peacefully sleeping on the bed, she laughingly exclaimed, though she trembled from head to foot, "Oh, I remember having laid it there asleep!"

This simple little occurrence brought vividly to my mind the Sunday school lesson that a mother may forget her sucking child but God cannot forget his children. It was no mystery now. I could see how easily poor, weak-minded mortals could forget, be distressed, and sorrowful, and in a rage do wrong, while God is love and never forgets his own, for "his mercy endureth forever."

During the remainder of the week I took comfort in the thought that God was so good. The lesson was indeed a blessing to me. The very next Sunday Mr. Hollister told us of hell, and of the doom of the condemned. How all who did not experience religion and become Christians would be damned and cast into a burning hell, there to suffer forever, "Where their worm dieth not," "and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up forever and ever, and they have no rest day nor night."

And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat," And that Dathan and Abiram went down alive into the pit and the earth closed upon them. These thoughts and many more were impressed upon our minds. I was distressed at the thought that God had determined such a horrible fate for the wicked. He was the author of the spirits of all flesh, knew the end from the beginning, and knew before he made them that but few would be saved.

I said to Mr. Hollister, "Last Sunday you stated, 'God is love,' and how could he punish the wicked in that manner?" His reply was, "The Bible says, 'I will laugh at your calamity; I will laugh when your fear cometh. I was crestfallen at this quotation. I knew it was in the Bible, and that all Christendom professed to believe the Bible, and that my mother believed it. The thought never had occurred to me then that the ministers of the different churches were in many things misrepresenting the Bible, God, and Christ. I did not dare to tell Mr. Hollister my thoughts, lest I might offend him; for I loved him as a man and teacher. He was a quiet, pleasant dispositioned man, very considerate, and would not offend one purposely. But the idea that he could love a God who would torture most of the human family in hell forever was so absurd to my mind that I soliloquized: "You lie if you say you love God; I hate him from the bottom of my heart." I believed all he had taught me of God and heaven, all that mother had taught of God and of hell and its torments, and the misery of the damned, there to welter forever. I realized fully, as I never had before, that I had always been taught the cruel, revengeful, unrelenting torture of the wicked.

On my way home from that Sunday school, I made up my mind I would read one more chapter in the Testament and never read another while I With this determination I reached home, took the Testament and read the third chapter of the gospel according to St. John. While I read, my mind was opened to realize and understand that all punishment inflicted upon the wicked they brought upon themselves through their own wickedness and disobedience, and this was permitted in order to work a reformation and benefit for those who suffer such punishment. I seemed to realize that their punishment would cease as soon as they would do good and not evil. A feeling of inexpressible joy pervaded my whole being as these thoughts passed through my mind, and again I felt love and thankfulness in my heart for the divine works. Ever since that moment all my service in religious warfare has been prompted through fear of offending a just and good God; also the love of principle because it is right, and calculated in its nature to make men godlike, pure, and holy, rather than to create a fear of torment.

I thought I read the above sentiments in the Testament, and as I laid down the Bible I exclaimed: "Mother! Mother! I do not believe in a Methodist hell." She did not hear me, so I went to the other room and was about to tell her my change of views, when something seemed to say, "Do not, for fear she will feel badly." I was happy in the new thought that the Savior was good and was indeed the one who will draw all men unto him and save those who are lost; that he was author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him; or, as the ancient apostle said,

For they [our fathers] verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but he [God] for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin,

In February, 1842, was the first time I remember of hearing anything of the people called "Mormons," except horrible stories of their wickedness. My father had been gone about a week to Milwaukee, and on his return home stopped over night at the Rock River hotel, in Beloit, Wisconsin. After he reached home, and while he was hanging up his overcoat, he remarked: "Mother, I heard a strange thing last night. I stayed at the Rock River hotel, and it was crowded with strangers from all parts of the country; beds all full; and barroom and dining room floors; and I slept in the dining room. During the evening a stranger from Quincy, Illinois, was telling about Joe Smith, the Mormon prophet. He said he was a swearing, drunken blackguard, a gambler, horse-racer, and blackleg, that he gambled on the boats up and down the river. As he made this remark, the landlord, who was behind the counter, said to him, 'Stranger, I keep hotel here to make money, and your money is as good as anyone's, but you are too g-d-mean a man to stay under my roof. I kept hotel in Quincy, and Mr. Smith has been at my house hundreds of times, and a more marked gentleman never ate at my table. I do not know or care a - about his religion, but you know every word you said about Mr. Smith is a G--- d--- lie, and you can take your duds and leave my house.' This terrible rebuke to a stranger under such circumstances and in such horrible language by the rude man was a real surprise to me, and made a lasting impression on my mind. thought, Is it possible he told the truth? And if he did, and Mr. Smith is a real gentleman, what could I think of the clergy who had always spoken of Smith as a wicked man, and the 'Mormons' as the roughest, wickedest, and most ignorant people in the world. In fact, I had never heard any good of them before. Could it be a fact that this wicked hotel keeper had told the truth?" These thoughts crowded themselves on my mind for some time.

Our house was the home of all the ministers at quarterly meetings for a long time. Elders Merriam, Ostrander, and the great revivalist Knapp, a Methodist, but later joined the Baptist Church, were frequently at our house. There were also several ministers at Beloit who called at our house. They always appeared to be so kind and good that I naturally reverenced them. Then, I was naturally religiously inclined. But the only impression I now remember of their making on me, relative to religion, was the view that we are saved by faith only; that God was a person without body or parts; and that Christ is God, all of which looked very mysterious to me; that he did miracles in order to convince the people that he was God; that he sent his apostles to work miracles to assist in establishing his church, but afterwards did away with these because they were no longer needed. I often questioned mother why there were no prophets in the church now and the gifts of the Spirit as enjoyed in the days of the apostles and prophets. But I got no satisfaction, only the statement that they were not needed, for we were saved by faith in Christ, and that he was God; but how he could be without a body and yet be raised from the dead, eat with his disciples, be handled by them, and see him go up into heaven, and sit at the right hand of the Father, without having a personal identity was a puzzle.

These things afforded me no satisfaction or rest. Meanwhile, my mother's Bible stories comforted me. though I felt sad and perplexed to think there would be no more prophets or gifts of the Holy Ghost among the people; and I wondered why it was that all professors agreed that these were done away, excepting in their revival meetings where the denominations agreed to hold services in order to convert sinners to Christ through prayers and exhortations without referring to any of their denominational differences, for they said these were nonessentials to salvation.

I will illustrate them by giving a little occurence that came under my own observation when I was but a child, and which will also show how I noticed things in my youth. I had attended meeting in one of the adjacent neighborhoods, when perhaps thirty or forty persons of ages all the way from the little schoolgirl to the gray-haired grandfather, with the minister, were bowed around the altar in prayer. Some were shouting and praying, others kept saying, "Hallelujah!" etc., until the confusion and excitement were distressing. Many became exhausted, and some fell to the floor.

Meeting closed, and on the way home the class leader remarked: "There was a great outpouring of the Holy Ghost there tonight."

A Mr. Samuel Wright replied with an oath: "I do not believe it."

The class leader rebuked him for swearing, and Mr. Wright retorted: "I do not mean any more when I swear than you do when you pray. Now you prayed tonight for a Pentecostal Holy Ghost. You did not mean any such thing, or believe you would receive any such thing. If forked tongues of fire had appeared to you, you would have all run away, nearly scared to death."

These remarks impressed me very forcibly, as illustrating the fact that the people did not believe in the Holy Ghost that led men to speak in tongues, prophesy, see visions, have revelations, heal the sick, cast out devils, have the gift of discernment, or the knowledge of God; and in fact the manifestations among them of what they called the Holy Ghost was not in harmony with what the Scriptures teach were the manifestations of the Spirit in apostolic times, for "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all the churches of the saints;" for, according to the Bible, when the people of God met they had the gifts of the Spirit and prophesied, spoke in tongues, and interpreted, that all might be edified together.

All the revival meetings that I had ever attended were accompanied by confusion and without edification. Iremember all of our old neighbors, when speaking of their experiences, always referred to the time of their conversion at the anxious seat as the happiest time of their life. They had not gained a single intellectual thought by their experience. That led me to think they were not making any progressin heavenly things, but were just as ignorant as they were before they began their religious life. No one could define his doctrine or tell what it took to constitute a Christian more than to be a moral man. Yet there were many good, moral men who did not pretend to be Christians.

I was but a child, yet, through the little I had gleaned from my mother's Bible stories, the Sunday school, and meetings, I had become very anxious to know more about God and religion, and often thought I would go to the altar to be prayed for, that I might become a Christian. I always said my evening prayer.

As I write, I cannot remember one clear, Bible, doctrinal thought taught me when a child by these ministers that gave me comfort and peace of mind. Darkness seemed to enshroud all their explanations of the Bible, as all those beautiful principles set forth in the examples, doctrine, and experiences of ancient men of God were said to be done away or no longer needed. This "was a mystery," they said, and it was not intended we should understand them.

While all this conflict was going on in my mind, mother received a letter from my eldest sister, Louisa Parkinson, saying that my brother Jason was coming home, and that he had joined the "Mormons" (referring to the Latter Day Saints), and when we received him we would receive a "Mormon" preacher. We were all surprised. Father and mother talked in undertones, and felt grieved at heart, and wondered how it was possible he could be so deceived and led away among such bad people. They expressed the hope that when he returned he would be easily shown the error of his way and reclaimed to the Christian church.

I was sent off on an errand; but none knew how sad I was over the news of my sister's letter. While walking along I thought what a disgrace it was on the family for him to join such a church. And the thought, Oh! what a disgrace it would be on the whole neighborhood, suddenly burst in on my mind as if some one spoke to me. I then sat down and wept bitterly over it for some time.

It may be that some of my readers will say, How could a boy so young in years have such pungent thoughts and grief over the question of religion. I can only say in reply to this that it has always been a marvel to me that, young as I was, I should have been so wonderfully exercised on this subject, until very recently I have had reasons to believe that God was preparing me for a work that needed a preparation; and that if it had not been for my early experiences I should not have been able to withstand the storm of adversity I have had to meet, and may yet have to pass through.

(Continued.)

CONFIDENCE AND BROTHERHOOD.

Faith is the motive power in all intelligent creation. Confidence in self, likewise confidence in others, conserves life and develops the best qualities of heart and brain, whilst distrust contracts the affections and abridges our capacity for spiritual and physical action. Realizing this, it would seem that all men, and particularly those who claim to be moralists, would direct all their energy to conserve this power which is of so much consequence to the human race. Ask any reputable physician or surgeon as to the correctness of my position, and he will tell you that he is handicapped when his patient loses confidence; confidence in his ability to deal with the case in hand; confidence as to the favorable outcome of the malady.

What business man succeeds without it? How quickly is there a run on the bank when the creditors lose confidence in its ability to pay? So it is in national affairs. That which we call patriotism is nothing more than confidence in one's country and her institutions. Think you that an army would long succeed were they fighting under a banner they did not respect, or defending a country they did not love?

Again, and more to the point, how noticeable is the defeat and utter rout of an army when the privates lose confidence in their officers. Do you think it would encourage discipline in an army for the various grades of officials to discuss the weaknesses, real or imaginary, of their superior or associate officers before the promiscuous army? An officer who wishes to continue the official respect which every well-regulated army should have for its officers, would realize it was suicidal to his own prestige to continually berate his superiors or associates. For, if he once succeeded in begetting distrust in others of the official rank, how long would it be ere they would suspect him? That man who desires respect for himself, whatever position he holds, should ever aim to develop respect for others.

It seems to me that some of these reflections are pertinent to our church work, and we, who are shareholders in this spiritual institution, and of course equally interested in its standing among men, should see to it that no act of ours should cast discredit on the cashier or shake the confidence of the people in the integrity of the president of board of directors.

It will not do for us to say that we are working in the interests of the church when, by insinuation and innuendo, we bring a cloud upon any of the representatives of the institution. So long as men are acting in an official capacity, so long are they and their influence inseparably connected with the work. An injury done a representative oftentimes does infinitely more harm to the work he represents than it does to himself.

True, we should not uphold crime or condone wrong. The most rigorous endeavor should be made to see that every man is worthy of the confidence we repose in him. If any man is guilty of an infraction of the law, or has violated the covenant made, or the trust imposed, there is a proper way of adjustment.

To select a man for a position and then hamper him by reflection and insinuation, is a freak of satanic love. So long as we select men to act for us, it is our bounden duty to uphold them in positions to which we call them. If there is an apparent stepping from the path of honor and rectitude, we should do all in our power to reclaim; failing, recourse should be had to the method of adjudication provided in the law.

Officials should not be too independ-They should be easy of approach; they should be willing to give audience to every man who desires to present complaint or criticism.

We are all human. Very few of us can, at the present time, see "eye to eye." Why should we at once question a man's motive simply because he may differ from us or his actions be those which, from our lofty standard of honor and integrity, are distinctively wrong?

True, there is but one perfect standard of honesty; but experience has taught me that what one man would consider perfectly legitimate, another would look upon as absolutely sinful. We cannot bring all men to this perfect standard at once. It will take much time, endurance, and patience. Drastic remedies are ineffective and sometimes abortive.

Remember, I am not asking that we compromise ourselves or condone wrong. No one can contend for the enforcement of the law and an honorable administration of church affairs more than I.

"Well," says one, "Are not public actions public property?"

Certainly.

"Are not the ministers of the church amenable?"

Yes, but remember that they are amenable to the body whom they serve and not to an integral part of that body alone. If a man is a president of a branch he is answerable to the entire branch, but in no sense is he answerable to a half dozen disgruntled members. This is true of every officer in the church.

I concede without reserve, that the actions of our public servants are public property and I hold myself open to accept or reject any official act whether of associates, superiors, or inferiors. But is it not the better plan when discussing the actions of men that we separate their personality from their acts thus far, that we ever concede that a man may be wrong and still be sincere? What wounds one the most is to have men question his honor. Brethren should never question a man's honor until the last "straw" which might lead to his For the exoneration is destroyed. sake of the man, for the sake of the cause he represents, he should be permitted to offer his defense ere we enter judgment against him.

from one of my fellow ministers. He closed his epistle with these words, "Yours in bonds." The question quickly came, "What bonds? Why, in bonds." "Are they servile bonds? No. it cannot be, for in the gospel regime all men are free, -made free through the blood of the new covenant. Are they temporal bonds? No, for we have no compact, no business association that in any way obligates us to each other in contradistinction to all the rest of our fellow creatures. It must be, "In the bonds of the gospel covenant." This covenant implies duty to God and service to man; i. e., the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of good men. Paul expresses this sentiment:-

Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity love], which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body.— Col. 3: 12–15.

Paul also wrote to the Ephesian

I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. . . Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Eph. 4:1-3, 31, 32.

From this we gather that this bond is effected through the "unity of the Spirit" by "forbearing one another in love," and that "charity [love] is the bond of perfectless."

How clearly is this illustrated by the Apostle Paul:-

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity [love], I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity [love], I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity [love], it prefiteth me nothing.—1 Cor. 13: 1-3.

He then proceeds to enumerate the fruits of this charity or love:-

Charity [love] suffereth long, and is kind; charity [love] envieth not; charity [love] vauntath not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.—Verses 4-7.

We are here clearly taught that our religion availeth us nothing save we are actuated with that love which moved a Christ to die for his weak and erring brethren.

In noting carefully the status of the Not long since, I received a letter world I am impressed with the ruthless manner in which confidence is betrayed, reputation blighted, and men's motives questioned on the slightest provocation. Friends of a lifetime are estranged over fancied wrongs. Is this correct? We are truly living in the time prophesied of by the Master:—

And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. . . . And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.—Matt. 24:10, 12.

These are, as Paul said:—

Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, etc.—2 Tim. 3: 3, 4.

The statement of the Master here stands out in bold relief:-

As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.—Luke 6:31. Ere we censure another let us place ourselves in his stead and compare

For years, I have made it a special point to study the character and quality of other organizations, secular and religious, to discover, if I could, wherein lay the cardinal distinction between our work and theirs. The characteristic difference between all human or satanic institutions and that of the Master lies in the practical emphasis of this text:-

A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another. - John 13:34,

As embassadors for Christ we must stand by one another. It is not demanded that we condone crime or shield an infraction of any human or divine law; if our brethren err let us be frank with them and rebuke them for their wrong. As Paul says:-

Rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith.—Titus 1:13.

Again:-

Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear.-1 Tim. 5: 20.

This public rebuke should be given when the offense has been a public

Solomon said:-

Rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee. -Prov. 9:8.

The following, also, is pertinent:-He that saith unto the wicked, Thou art righteous; him shall the people curse, nations shall abhor him: but to them that rebuke him shall be delight, and a good blessing shall come upon them.—Prov. 24: 24, 25.

Again:-

He that rebuketh a man, afterwards shall find more favor than he that flattereth with the tongue.—Ibid. 28:23.

The fact that men have accepted the gospel and sacrificed all of their personal ambitions, in a worldly way, in uniting their destinies with the church. should entitle them to our confidence until such time as they prove themselves unworthy. Men differ on many things and in divers ways. It is possible for my brother to hold views the very opposite of my own and still be honest. There should exist a fraternal bond that will command our support even when surface indications give warrant for distrust. To stand by a man when all is sunlight and to desert him when darkness envelopes him is unmanly, and lacks the first essential of fraternity and brotherhood. Perchance when the "mists have rolled away" we shall find it was only an eclipse after all, and the light will shine forth as brilliantly as ever. It is not when "all is fair and all is bright" that brethren need your support, but when the clouds hang low and the storm beats vehemently upon the unfortunate victim. Then we should evince that charity "which is the bond of perfectness," by throwing out the lifeline of Christian brotherhood to our unfortunate shipmate.

In no sense would I convey the idea that public officers are not amenable to the body, and we should see to it that they acquit themselves as men in the performance of the work imposed. We should not throw any barriers in the way of their performance of duty, however. Possibly our brother has been guilty of an infraction, possibly he deserves our repudiation; but let us exhaust the gospel method of adjustment ere we throw him overboard.

Peter tells us:-

Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous; not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrarywise blessing.—1 Pet. 3:8, 9.

See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently.—Ibid. 1:22.

We are instructed to be—kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another.

—Rom. 12: 10.

Suppose some brother has gone wrong, what is our duty under the premises? James says:—

Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins.—

Tames 5: 19: 20

I am not in harmony with the idea, however, that because men hold certain positions in the church they will not err; that God will not permit them to do so. This has been the illusion of every apostasy since the days of Adam. Every man in the church, from president down to laity, is liable to go wrong-to fall; and the best way to prevent it is to rally to their support giving them every encouragement in the performance of duty, but holding them to a strict accounting for their official and individual acts so far as it relates to their standing in the church. To stand by a man simply because of his official position in the church, and accept his direction without question, is fanaticism. To make a man a target for our criticism simply because he is our superior, is treason.

When I consider the breakers we have passed, there comes to mind the words of Christ.—

My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another, and forgave not one another in their hearts, and for this evil they were afflicted, and sorely chastened.—D. C. 64: 2.

In 1894, the Lord said:—

My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received.—D. C. 122: 1.

The following, from the Christian Advocate, is pertinent along this line:—

If your friend goes wrong, even grievously wrong, it is base in you to desert him. Then more than ever, does he need your help, and, in the supposition that he has been your true friend, he is entitled to it. Of course, you can neither approve or condone his wrongdoing. It may become your painful duty to tell him with the utmost candor what you think of his faults, but never to kick him while everybody else is engaged in the same business. To do that requires no courage—but a little cheap bluster.

Again:-

A word of encouragement at a critical moment in a life sometimes changes a whole career. One can never tell when the precise moment is at hand, and a stinging repartee, or careless, unkind slur may turn a struggling soul back and ruin a brilliant future at the moment when a generous word would inspire a confidence which might lead to future success. Really it is the little words that discourage, the careless words, the words dropped without thought. One can never know the responsibility he or she has for the success or failure of a life through a single word.—Boston Budget.

That is what we are put in the world for, to help one another. You can pass on the kindness by serving my good friends, who in return will do their best for you.—Louisa M.

Away back in 1866 the editor of the Herald, under the editorial caption of "Pleasant Chat," gave this wholesome advice:—

One of the most beautiful and strongly marked characteristics of all the ancient worthies was that of confidence in their cotemporaries and colaborers. That it was requisite that they should have respect, esteem, and a spiritual regard for each other, when their intercourse had proven their good qualities, is a point beyond dispute; but that they should either feel or exhibit any confidence in those whom they had never tried, and with whom they had been associated only in the relation of fellow workers in one common cause, seems to have been enjoined upon them by some obligation superior to the mere attraction of affiaity, or the love of their fellow men in a universal sense.

It is quite doubtful whether the commandments, as contained upon the tables of stone, were considered of such rigorous force as to preclude the exercise of the natural disposition, whether to receive into confidential relation, or to exclude from closer communion. How then shall we attempt to account for that strange repose, that secure resting, satisfied with the actions of each other, that indefinable trust and confidence with which they evidently regarded each other?

There is but one way to account for it, and that is the gospel way; i. e., that it was a duty incumbent upon them by the covenant of grace, the terms of which they dare not disregard, and to the fulfillment of which they felt pledged by love of their fellows, by their good fellowship one with the other, but above all, by their spiritual standing before God.

Perhaps as remarkable an instance of this strange confidence in coworkers is found in the instance of our Savior trusting to Peter and to Judas, both of whom were found strangely wanting, the one by an absolute and perfidious betrayal, the other by a painful and cowardly denial of the Teacher who brought them the news of salvation.

Do you find in the intercourse of this man among men, with those by whom he was surrounded, as his fellow servants, any indications of servile fear and suspicion of their uprightness and integrity. Nay more, do we see in the disciples themselves, any lack of confidence in each other? While those who became adherents to the faith were selling their estates, or possessions, and laboring for the advancement of the cause, there was such a complete bond of faith and confidence existing between ministers and people, that existing between inflisters and people, that the price of their possessions were laid at the apostles' feet, and in the Savior's day Judas carried the "bag," and not one com-plaint, or withholding of confidence. All history points to one element of success, in every combination of men, for every purpose under the sun, that has ever occupied the time and talents of God's creatures upon the earth and that element has been the bond which bound them together. So varied have been the experiments tried, and the oaths invented, by which it has been sought to keep the many separate interests naturally accruing, securely tied to the well-being of the body, that numberless schemes, covenants, contracts, compacts, and oath-bound combi-nations are offered to the view, and each testifying of its efficiency, only by its success secured by the faithfulness with which each integral portion remains in active and confidential connection with every other portion of the whole.

The financial compacts have a cent per centum bond, the observance of the conditions of which in integrity and good faith increases the individual and collective good. The secret combination compacts rest the fidelity of their members upon oaths by which secrecy and an observance of the terms of the compact are secured. Governments, not absolute, depend for their existence upon the faith and good will of their subjects, received not by "oaths," nor by cent per centum, but by intelligence, honesty, and virtue, yielding esteem for, and confidence in, all the administrators chosen by the people or created by law

Of this last class is the CHURCH, and a want of confidence held, fel, and manifested among the members, is deleterious and works for harm; while esteem for, and confidence in, all its acting members is absolutely essential to the success which we pray for, hope for, and work for. Let us have it. It is asked as a favor. It is implored as a necessity. It is demanded as a right, that we exist and fail not —Saints' Herald, vol. 10, No. 9, November 1, 1866.

In order to maintain this confidence, we must adopt the policy pursued in Book of Mormon times:—

And they were strict to observe that there should be no iniquity among them; and whose was found to commit iniquity, and three witnesses of the church did condemn them before the elders; and if they repented not, and confessed not, their names were blotted out, and they were not numbered among the people of Christ.—Moroni 6: 2.

God, through Joseph the Seer, said: Purge ye out the iniquity which is among you.—D. C. 43: 3.

And ye shall see that my law is kept. He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you; for it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom, should be given to them that are not worthy, or to dogs, or the pearls to be cast before swine.—D. C. 41.2

Nothing tends so much to shake the confidence of the Saints as the passing over of some violation of the law, whether in the chief or lesser officers of the church. All men are amenable to the law, and should be held to a strict accounting. To criticise a man when you know he is not doing right, and at the same time do nothing to correct the evil and save the brother, is almost spiritual murder. To go to a man and tell him of his wrong is much more difficult than to tell some one else; but it is right, and the other is decidedly wrong. Joseph gives some wholesome advice in the Herald for March 1, 1868, under the head of "Pleasant Chat":-

When will the men of Israel learn to govern themselves; to control their own spirits; to hold the even balances of their own temper; to examine as closely for the means for their own cure of the seeds of evil as they do for the cure of others; that "the righteousness which is by faith," does not alone consist in brilliantly preaching the word, but is the struggling, striving, stirring life of actual warfare against the practices of evil, and the misery which ensues, not only in the world at large, but in their own persons.—Page 73.

In the issue of the Herald of January 1, 1876, under the head of "Christian forbearance," the editor has this to say:—

This is a singular and very rare virtue; is seldom innate, and where inherent, is never so strong in itself as to render cultivation unnecessary. This virtue is to be acquired by practice; a constant performance of those things demanded of the Christian in his daily intercourse with his fellow men. There are not many days in the lives of saints—Christians—in which there are not opportunities for calling into exercise this virtue; and in no one direction is there more need of its exercise, than in that of belief and speech.

Men differ widely in their mental constitutions, and in their ability to receive and retain moral impressions; and so seriously does this difference affect the body of believers, that there is the greatest need of the active intervention of this Christian forbearance; and that too among otherwise excellent saints.

Proscription is, and has ever been, the bane of the church; and the flerce anathemas of the strictly "orthodox" sentiment have ever been lying intrenched, ready to be hurled at the daring or unfortunate man or men who have staggered or deliberately stepped over the prescribed boundaries of belief or practice.

We do not all think exactly alike; we do not all, as yet, see "eye to eye;" that is, to define this expression as it is usually understood, we do not understand and see each and all subjects exactly alike. Nor is it to be expected that, not seeing exactly alike, we shall all express our thoughts and views in the same language, or even in approximate language the one with the other.

This inability to see, or this failure to see, should, in itself, form a bond of sympathy between those who hold grand, fundamental truths together, and alike; it should, of itself, save the weak from the aggressiveness and haughtiness of the strong, and also protect the strong from the peevishness and querulousness of the weak; but where this fails to accomplish this end, there is then ample room and an absolute necessity for the intervention of the Godlike, Christlike, saintlike forbearance; and where this intervention is not had, peace departs and pity weens.

We are almost inclined to supplement the apostle's expression, "Whence comes wars and fightings?" with "From your intolerance, your failure to forbear one with another." Nor would we be very far from the truth in making the statement.

We must be more forbearing and tolerant or we shall not be even imitative Christians, let alone being Christians in very deed.— Page 16.

Under the head of "Ministerial friendship," the editor of the Herald in issue of May 6, 1893, said:—

One of the moving causes to official criticism is official jealousy, and this is so far beneath the dignity of a servant of the Master, the lowly Nazarene, that no man should give place to it for a moment. It is unmanly, unlovely, and unchristian, and the one who will permit himself to be influenced by it in his intercourse with his fellow gospel ministers, will cherish a scorpion to sting himself in due time; while in the meantime he will be the means of poisoning the peace and quiet of his fellows and lose the power and dignity of his calling. No man of worth in the field can afford to be jealous of a fellow preacher, no matter how far his fellow may surpass him in the presentation of the word, or how much better he may appear to be preferred by the hearers. If another can present the truth more effectively than he can, he should feel in his soul to say, amen, and help that other to do all the Lord may bless him in doing. The ministers of the word should study to make themselves helpful to their coworkers. The more blessed a man The more blessed a man may be in his efforts in his own field, the more helpful to others less able and blessed than he, should he be. The higher his own standing, the more assured his calling, the more useful and helpful to his compeers should he be. His attitude towards his comrades should be one of confidence and strength inspiring. He should strive to prove to others by his deportment and teaching that he might be found when needed, and to be depended on when found. He should be steadfast in his purposes and his friendship, unwavering in his allegiance to God and the truth, and willing to endure contumely, harshness, malice from those without, and any amount of misunderstanding and misapprehension and their consequent treatment from those within; without losing his self-control, or allowing himself to descend to retaliation, vituperation, or quar--Page 275.

Again, under the caption, "Official jealousy," the editor of the Herald said in the issue of December 1, 1878:—

We hear now and then of a certain sort of jealousy on the part of elders in the church of certain other officers who are, fortunately for themselves and the church, being blessed in preaching the word and attracting attention. It seems to hurt the vanity of these jealous elders to see any advancement upon the part of others. To us this is a strange thing, to see a class of men who should be, by both precept and example, hearty well wishers and active coworkers with any and all who can and will labor, belittling themselves and detracting from the usefulness of any who may be blessed beyond themselves. Instead of hailing the success of those who are thus rendered useful by a measure of the Spirit as a token of the love of God and the care of Christ manifest towards the church and the work in which all are interested, they weakly give way to jealousy and meanly strive to cripple the usefulness of their colaborers. Instead of rejoicing in the good that cometh to the cause, and cheerfully giving their approval of the work being done, they scowl and frown upon the efforts made, thus giving "aid and comfort to the enemy." Why is it that men called to be saints can do this? Christ reproved this spirit when he told the disciples who wanted him to forbid certain ones from speaking in his name, to forbid them not, that if they could so speak in his name, they surely were not against him.

Young elders (and old ones too, for that matter) should meet with certain encouragement, if they are blessed, to become useful; and more especially should older ones not be jealous of the younger ones. We have now in mind a rising young elder, who has met with official jealousy, which is somehow crippling him in almost the first days of his real usefulness, the very days when his stronger brethren ought to stand firmly by him, reprove him if need be, in gentleness of spirit, and help by suggestions as to the words or manner, if either could be improved, for the work's sake; but to be jealous of usefulness, or celebrity, is degrading, and therefore disgusting. How any man can permit himself to cultivate such a disposition and still prate about the Spirit of Christ being at work in him to "will and to do, according to his good pleasure," is to us a mystery. Anyone who is thus jealous should set about a severe selfpruning, for it is an ugly and pestiferous weed, and never rest until he could look upon a brother's success with real pleasure both on account of his brother's good and the good of the cause.-Page 360.

An epistle of the quorum of the twelve, of the old organization, contains the following advice:—

Be honest; be men of truth and integrity, let your word be your bond, be diligent, be prayerful; pray for, and with your families, train up your children in the fear of the Lord, cultivate a meek and quiet spirit, clothe the naked, feed the hungry, help the destitute, be merciful to the widow and orphan, be merciful to your brethren, and to all men; bear with one another's infirmities, considering your own weakness; bring no railing accusation against your brethren, especially take care that you do not against the authorities or elders of the church, for the principle is of the Devil; he is called the accuser of the brethren; and, Michael, the archangel, dared not bring a railing accusation against the Devil, but said, the "Lord rebuke thee, Satan;" and any man who pursues this course of accusation and murmuring, will fall into the snare of the Devil, and apostatize except he repents.—Times and Seasons, vol. 1, p. 13.

These men recognized that it would not do to make even the authorities of the church immune from answering for their official standing. They said:—

If a man sin, let him be dealt with according to the law of God in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, and then leave him in the hands of God to rebuke, as Michael left the Devil.—Ibid.

Joseph Smith said:-

The rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven; and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled, only upon the principles of righteousness. That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, to gratify our pride, vain ambition, or to exercise dominion or compulsion over the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness; behold, the heavens withdraw themselves, the Spirit of the Lord is grieved, them amen to the priesthood, or to the authority of that man; behold, ere he is aware, he is left to kick against the pricks; to persecute the Saints, and to fight against God.-Ibid., pp. 131, 132.

In an epistle of the twelve, issued in 1842, we find the following:-

Beware of an aspiring spirit, which would lift you up one above another; to seek to be the greatest in the kingdom of God. This is that spirit which hurled down the angels-it is that spirit which actuates all the churches of the sectarian world, and most of the civil and military movements of the men of the world-it is that spirit which introduces rebellion, confusion, misrule, and disunion, and would, if suffered to exist among us, destroy our union, and consequently our power, which flows from the Spirit, through the priesthood—which spirit, and power, and priesthood can only exist with the humble and meek of the earth .- Ibid., vol. 3, p. 895.

We have thus given here an admixture of advice along these lines which will serve to show the necessity of cooperation and brotherhood. should uphold and sustain each other; should not give credence to a current rumor that is deleterious to another without proof. Having evidence which seems to impeach our brother, he should be acquainted with the proof we have in hand first, and should be afforded the right of defense or confession. Failing in either, we should at once proceed to a legitimate adjustment which does not comprise the publishing broadcast of the facts in hand, but a procedure according to church law to bring the refractory to judgment.

Love being the obeying or fulfilling of the law, we can in no particular acquit ourselves unless we thus fulfill, and in every action there should be clearly disclosed the true spirit of Christian brotherhood.

> Respectfully submitted, T. W. WILLIAMS.

1322 Myrtle Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

Selected Articles.

EATING HABITS OF MANY NATIONS.

BY G. EDWARD FULLER, DIVISION OF FOODS, PAN AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Honest investigation serves to take the conceit out of us as we discover how crude are some of our eating habits when examined in the light reflected from older and perhaps, in some cases, inferior civilizations. Theodore Child, of savory memory, intimated that Brillat-Savarin understood little about eating, though he knew how to talk of it, and my experience is that to know who to talk it to is quite a lesson in self-restraint. There is nothing more unfeeling than descanting upon the pleasures of the table to the dyspeptic, or the person with an inert palate. However, we must remember that the term palate is now but a figure of speech, inasthe tongue is the seat of tasting in three divisions: the tip responding to acids and pungent things: the middle sensible to sweet and bitter, while the back part devotes itself to flavors emanating from fatty substances. When the butter on the bread is good, or when we have sugar on it, we may now be permitted to eat it butter side

The Malays have a proverb: "Get first what you like to eat, for you are always sure of what you don't like," and the Japanese have one: "If a man declares he has never taken anything but delicious food, the truth will be shown in his appearance. If he is stout and well looking, then may he be credited, but if, on the contrary, he is poor and lean, then it is impossible that he should have lived on food good for his sustenance."

To many the division between "foods" and "food accessories" is a hazy one, but there is a pronounced distinction, and the new science of dietetics makes the division plain. Foods must contain nutrients, while food accessories may or may not. determination by rigid test that some of the most delectable of luxuries long classed as foods (the mushroom, for instance) are wholly wanting in nutriment, and proof that certain much maligned condiments (notably black pepper, when properly selected and prepared) contain peptic tonics which aid nutrition, are all in line with the interdependence of the two classes covered by the terms "foods" on the one hand and "food accessories" on the other.

Regarding the divergent theories of life involved in eating to live or living to eat, is it not possible to set up the compromise principle that a thing worth doing at all is worth doing well? Especially if it is worth doing three times a day. Is not the doctrine of eating to live quite sordid, even as the mania for living to eat is dissolute?

We have much to learn from the Japanese, Chinese, and French concerning habits of amiability, and even decorous joyousness at the family table. How lugubrious is the average family meal with us! It seems to be a mere meeting place in many families for nagging and bickering.

Black pepper is the king of food accessories, but one cannot enjoy it in the thirty-third degree until one learns how to get it and how to use it.

A pepper expert ought to know whether he is in London, Paris, or Amsterdam by the pepper, if by nothing else. In London the pepper is strong without fragrance, going there from the Straits Settlements. In Paris fragrant with little strength, from the Malabar coast of India. In Amsterdam from Java, with neither strength nor fragrance. The peptic much as it has been determined that and tonic effects of black pepper proceed from piperine, oil, and resin, which are only obtained in full when the berry is plucked before ripening; after ripening the berry is vilely manipulated into white pepper, so that, it will be seen, white pepper is merely spoiled black pepper. pepper is another story, as Rudyard says, and the writer has just sent out circulars for the Pan American exposition, which is to be held at Buffalo next year, to all the potentates, planters, and botanists of the countries and states of Pan America, from Patagonia to the Philippines, arranging for a collection extensive and exhibit extraordinary of all the kinds, sorts, and varieties of red peppers grown in all the gardens and plantations of all the Americas. - Chicago Tribune, December 2, 1900.

BALDNESS AND LOSS OF HAIR.

BY DR WILLIAM ALLEN PUSEY, PROFESSOR IN THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS.

The little things are those that cause in the aggregate the greatest amount of pleasure or the greatest amount of trouble. Most of us are able to summon the fortitude to carry us through our great troubles; it is the little, nagging difficulties that give us nervous prostration. Loss of hair may be classed as one of the minor troubles of mankind that cause. in the aggregate, a large amount of pretty keen annoyance. For baldness is the sort of trouble that is borne with greatest equanimity in one's wife's relations. It is a thing that is dealt with philosophically by anyone who has it not. The average individual who has it, or who sees the threatening thinning on his forehead or crown, throws his philosophy to the dogs, and begins a life of more or less secret sorrow, which time does not lessen. If some one should discover a real cure for the shining pate he would probably get a greater aggregate of gratitude than the discoverer of anæsthesia. It is likely that would give him a place in the Hall of Fame.

There are four varieties of common baldness—senile baldness, premature baldness, baldness due to constitutional disorders, and baldness due to local diseases of the scalp. Senile baldness, like wrinkles and gray hair, is simply an expression of the normal changes in the skin that are produced by increasing years. Premature baldness is usually hereditary, and is simply senile baldness occurring too soon. The condition of the scalp in this form of baldness is identical with that in genuine senile baldness. Senile baldness and premature baldness are conditions entirely beyoud the range of medical relief. Premature baldness is not an indication of senile changes in other tissues than the skin. It does not indicate lack of vigor or furnish any indication as to the constitution or life expec-tancy of the individual. Partial or complete baldness is associated with disorder of the general health of various kinds; acute fevers, nervous disorders, many sorts of nutritional disturbances are all at times responsible for falling of the hair. A familiar example of baldness due to acute disease is the baldness that follows typhoid fever. This form of baldness, like all baldness due to constitutional diseases, usually rapidly disappears when health is restored. The form of baldness due to nervous strain is a rather common variety. It is frequently seen in overwrought, nervous women; not so frequently in men. The prospect of recovery in this form is good, but by no means so certain as in baldness due to acute disease. Baldness is at times produced by overwork, long continued mental strain, severe shock, or other trials on the nervous system, but the grateful theory that baldness is commonly produced by overwork, great intellectual activity, and excess of gray matter is not built upon solid facts; it belongs rather to that large group of opinions of which the wish is father to the thought. Of the local conditions that produce baldness, the one that is of great practical importance is dandruff. Next to heredity, and perhaps before heredity, dandruff is the great cause of baldness. druff in its several degrees is a disease known as seborrhœic eczema; it is pretty generally accepted that the disease is due to a micro organism, and its importance as a cause of baldness is widely recognized among ex-The baldness that results from dandruff is similar to that from senile causes, and after once complete is beyond repair.

It may, perhaps, be seen from the foregoing that the prospect of recovery from baldness depends upon the kind of baldness. The individual who rapidly loses his hair from acute disease or from disorder of the general health may feel fairly sure that under the care of his physician his hair will return. The man or woman whose locks are thinning may still have hopes of retaining some of them. The head that has gotten shiny and smooth from gradually developing baldness is shiny and smooth for good, and the possessor of it may just as well make up his mind to accept it philosophically. Try to believe that it is an evidence of intellectuality, and that the bald-headed man is the forerunner of that advanced stage of civilization when all mankind will be bald. There is probably no truth in either of these propositions, but there is no reason why one should not get as much comfort out of the situation as possible.-Chicago Tribune, December 9, 1900.

THE ART OF PLAY.

BY THE COUNTESS OF JERSEY.

One of the stock accusations against the present age is that too much attention is paid to play, and that more serious interests are neglected in consequence. It might be worth while to inquire whether the real faults are not that the amount of play is unfairly distributed, and that play itself in some cases has become such a business that it has ceased to be recreation; in fact, while work accuses play of usurping her functions, the gayer sister may occasionally retaliate with a similar complaint. In the East, Princes and great men, instead of dancing and playing games themselves, hire others to perform in their presence, and if Englishmen cease personally to contend in athletic sports and confine themselves to witnessing and betting on matches between professional teams, the object of such exercise is, to a great extent, lost. On the other hand, if large portions of the population, whether rich or poor, toil from early dawn far into the night, while others wear them-selves out in pursuit of pleasure or rust out in loafing, the failure in true amusement is equally evident.

These, however, are subjects too extensive to be dealt with in a limited space, and all here proposed for consideration is whether the young can be trained to play as well as to learn in a rational manner, or whether the former part of education is more wisely left to their own discretion. First let us ask for a moment what is the function of play in human life? Surely to relax the strain of thought and to recuperate brain power where toil is mental, and to accompany rest with pleasure and change of idea where it is bodily. In the case of young children, most, if not all, real work must be mental. They have to exercise memory and intelligence to accumulate facts and ideas which will be useful to them in subsequent study and in after life. The kindergarten may render this exercise attractive, but it cannot abolish it. Therefore, in such hours of leisure as are not devoted to food and sleep, the best kind of play is that which brings the child's limbs and observation into practice. It is most objectionable to try to insinuate hard facts into play hours, and thereby to continue the tax on memory, even in a manner agreeable to the unconscious victim.

When a child is playing a game do not attempt to make it a vehicle of fresh information. Of course, there is no objection to utilizing facts already known. When children are playing the old game of "post" they may safely adopt the names of towns found in their geography books, flowers may be correctly colored in "floral loto," and when variations of such games as "happy families" launch into "naval commanders and their principal victories" no harm can ensue. But this should entail no sort of examination nor fault finding with ignorance out of school hours.—Chicago Tribune, December 9, 1900.

Letter Department.

MALHEUR CITY, Ore., Dec. 21.

Editors Herald:—It has been quite a while since I have written for publication, but I have not been idle. The year 1900 is nearing its close, and looking back I cannot boast of many—seemingly—great results for the cause, yet I have been busy and tried to do what I could.

From California I was transferred to eastern Oregon. I left California September 8. Up to that date I had preached in California a total of 106 sermons and attended 109 other services. During all of this labor there was never an application for baptism until my 105th sermon, when two strangers (to me) made application. As it was the first gospel sermon they had heard, and in an organized branch and district (Santa Rosa), I referred them to those in charge of the work there. So while I tried to sow with a liberal hand in California, laboring in San Francisco, Oak. land, San Benito, Prunedale, Los Angeles, Gilroy, San Jose, Encinal, Mountain View. Santa Cruz, East Cliff, Capitola, Santa Rosa, and Sacramento, I can only pray that others: may be permitted to gather some fruit of that sowing.

Since leaving that field for Oregon I have also been busy. My first sermon in this state, this season, was upon the 15th of September, at Cottage Grove. The attendance there (for one week) was small, but some were interested. At Scio I spoke six times to fairly good-sized audiences. Three times at Dallas, and then on to Portland. This may seem like a good deal of travel for a little preaching, but I was getting to my field of labor and was sowing what seed I could by the wayside as I passed; also visiting and trying to strengthen the Saints. I trust that I accomplished some good thereby. On my way up to this point I visited, also, for a short period, each of the following places, but found not opportunity for preaching there. Ashland, -where I found Bro. C. W. Butler and family; Roseburg and Looking Glass, Drain, Lebanon, and Sweet Home. I was well received by the Saints in each of these places and found them mainly strong in the faith. At Portland I was joined by Bro. D. L. Harris and together we answered an invitation from the branch president of Castle Rock, Washington, to pay them a visit. A week's meetings were held there and three children of the Saints baptized. Returning to Portland by the help of Saints and friends (and I feel like saying, Thank God for as earnest Saints and friendsthough not Saints-as some we found there) a place of meeting was secured, they renting a vacant store building, -and we held a week's services here. Although we commenced in a blizzard (something a little unusual for "Webb foot," but still a genuine blizzard), our meetings grew each evening, and we feel that a success was scored there. We found a dozen Saints in Portland and vicinity, and do not think we could have found them all in the short time we spent there either. However, when we left it was with the promise that Bro. D. L. Harris would soon return and continue the work there. I think he is there now. Here we secured a sixty-day ticket by special favor of the O. R. and N. R. R. officials, and began our journeying east the 28th of November, our ticket reading to St. Joseph, Missouri.

We dropped Bro. D. L. off at Hood River where he had an appointment, and we stopped off at The Dalles, where we were cared for and ate, not only Thanksgiving dinner, but Thanksgiving breakfast and supper as well, with our old playmate, cousin, and brother in Christ, G. W. Clark. I found himself and wife still in the faith and doing quite well. Of course the time was all too short, but we could not stop longer, so took the midnight train from there the 29th, and the next day ate dinner with the family of Bro. H. H. Elmer near Summerville. As the work in this vicinity was pressing, we only rested and visited a couple of days here, and then on to this point, reaching here the 4th of December and commencing services that night. Our interest here has been quite good. We have preached here, up to date, nineteen sermons since arriving. We think to preach a few more times here and then the condition of the roads will have a good deal to do in determining our next move. We had looked for snow here, and behold, mud! Points in the country near here are awaiting our coming, but unless it snows, or at least freezes up soon, we will not be able to answer the calls, as the roads are too bad for the people to come to hear. The Saints here seem strong in the faith and the cause has many friends. We hope for some additions here before we go hence, but cannot tell.

We expect to be at home in Lamoni about the close of January. Our guns are not spiked, nor the banner down, but we are trying to make a good fight for "the faith." Ever laboring and praying for Zion's cause, Your brother in Christ, I am,

A. M. CHASE.

WILMINGTON, Ill., Dec. 25.

Editors Herald:-Since November 30, Bro. A. J. Keck and I have been very busy having held twenty-nine consecutive meetings in twenty-four days. We held a two weeks' meeting in the town of Essex, where we had a fair hearing and good attention. Sr. Gregson is the only member of the church living there, and she with her husband did all they could to make the missionaries comfortable and get the truth before the people. Through Mr. Gregson's effort, we secured the use of the town hall and the loan of what chairs we needed from the opera house. We think the work there should still be looked after. From there we came to Wilmington and held near a week's meeting with the Saints.

Next we went to Deselm and held a week's meeting there. People were busy making preparations for Christmas, yet we had fair attendance and a number seemed interested. Bro. J. B. Roush made an opening here some few years ago, and nothing has been done since. The people still remember "Johnny," and speak well of him. Bro. Keck returns to Deselm tomorrow to continue the effort there, while the writer turns his face homeward for a time.

With hope and good cheer,

H. E. MOLER.

CATHERINE, Mo., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:-I have been a reader of the Herald since I accepted the true gospel of Jesus Christ. Was baptized September 12, 1900, by Bro, T. R. White, and have been trying to live a Christian life since. My greatest desire is to live faithful and humble before the Master, that I may enjoy his blessings and be useful in helping to bring others to the light. There are no members of our church here but myself. Have been trying to work for the Lord since I became a member of the church. A lady and her husband here are favorably impressed with our church. Will join it the first opportunity. Have been looking for Brn. T. R. White, C. P. Welch, or J. N. Stephenson here to hold meetings. Could distribute some church literature here to good advantage. Hope to build up a good church here.

Yours in gospel bonds. ISAAC ELDRIDGE.

PLANO, Ill., Dec. 21.

Editors Herald:-I was somewhat interested in the article on Herald cover of December 12, entitled, "Was Jesus three days and three nights in the heart of the earth?" The position taken by this writer to prove his points by wresting the Scriptures, may be all right, but I doubt the propriety of such a course. Have also noticed some of the Saints, elders as well as lay members, have fallen into the same habit in some instances of wresting the scriptures in order to prove certain points: but more especially this question about the Savior being three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. Some it is said will wrest the scripture to their own destruction: however that may be, I think many do greatly err, and I may be one, but I look at that question in this way: Jesus did not go into the heart of the earth until after his resurrection; for the tomb, (or sepulchre), was not the heart (center of the earth. For further proof turn to Ephesians 4:10. Here the Apostle Paul plainly says: "He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things." This language is very plain: it was the resurrected Christ that ascended, hence if the same, it was the resurrected Christ that first (before) descended into the lower parts (heart) of the earth when he went to preach to the spirits in prison, as recorded in 1 Peter 3:18-20. This would give him ample time to fulfill the prediction of being three days and three nights in the heart of the earth, without wresting the scripture to prove it. Let us use his same scripture quotations with one other, and we will see it in a different light.

"And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the Sabbath."-Mark 15: 42.

"And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!"-John 19:14.

"The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that sabbath day was an high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away."-Verse 31.

This is plain enough, and shows that the crucifixion transpired not only upon a preparation day before their regular sabbath day. but also upon the passover preparation day, making that sabbath day a more high, and honorable day, than their regular sabbath, because of the two events transpiring on the

Let the scripture interpret itself, then there will not be so many seemingly contradictory opinions.

As ever for the truth and right, WILSON L. GORTON.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Dec. 20.

Editors Herald:-Things are much better with me now than a year ago. I came to Stewartsville, November 1, 1899. Was so deaf I could hear hardly any preaching, but I went every time. Brn. Cushman and Foss came there, and they would place me a chair on the stand. That helped me. I felt that they were my friends. I am getting stronger. my whole desire is to do my duty. My daily prayer is that I may be faithful.

I have always wanted to see some one healed whom I knew was sick. I saw it in a way I never thought of. I was at Bro. Faul's in harvest, and his mother was very sick. I was asked to pray, and I felt that she would get better, but her time was short. Some time after I heard her limb was broken, then I said she would not get up. And she did not. I was sorry to think she had to go, but that was my first testimony, and it strengthened me.

One more: On July 22 I went home from church and went to bed. I was taken with a cramp in my stomach. I got up. I was alone, and it was near twelve o'clock at night. I was in so much pain I did not know what to do. I wanted to send for Bro. Head, but could not. Then it came to me to take a spoonful of consecrated oil. I did so and went to sleep. In the morning I went to Bro. Faul's, and in the afternoon I was taken again. Brn. Head and Dice came there. I got so bad I could not stand. I asked them to administer to me, and I got up and went to work. Now I know that the signs follow those who believe.

If you want God to bless you, do his will. Pray in your family. Go to church, and train your children in the fear of God. We must not think we will not have trials.

Your brother in Christ,

F. T. DALSIE.

THEODORE, Ala., Dec. 20.

Editors Herald:—The conference of Mobile district was held at Three Rivers, Mississippi, December 8 and 9. Everything passed off pleasantly, and Saints seemed to enjoy the conference all through, and also the meetings that followed. Three Rivers is about three miles from Escatawpa, the scene of troubles with the mob, through which we passed some three years ago. It is the nearest place of meeting for the Saints to Escatawpa now, the small house in which they formerly met there having been burned by the mobbers (presumably, at least, as it was done in the night) a short time after the troubles in the tent.

Quite a change in sentiment among the people has taken place. A number of those who were in the mob have expressed themselves as being sorry for the part they took, and say they will never be led into such work again. One man who was in the mob attended the preaching service Sunday night, and listened to the writer. I was informed afterward that he said it was the best sermon he ever heard in his life, and that he could not see how anybody could object to it. Some of the children of the mobbers were in attendance at some of the meetings, also.

One of the men (?) James Campfield, who waylaid and abused me on the highway, September 4, 1897, was afterward sent to the penitentiary for a crime committed prior to that time (shooting into the house of a Baptist minister, whose wife narrowly escaped being hit) and died there. Another one, —, report has it, has been hung in Texas, though I could not verify this report, and cannot say that it is true. Still another mobber, desperado by the name of Jobson, it is reported, met a similar fate in Alabama, though I could not get full particulars, if true.

The Rev. Mr. Huff, the M. E. preacher who headed the mob, has moved to other parts. So has the Baptist school-teacher who seemed to be his first lieutenant. Col. Thomas Ford, the chief lawyer who defended the mobbers in the first trial, and in doing so used the Spalding story, and every slanderous thing he could think of, including polygamy, after stating to me and Bro. Frank Scarcliff that he knew there were "two classes of Latter Day Saints, and that we were of the nonpolygamous class," died of (supposed) yellow fever about three weeks after the first trial.

Captain P. K. Mayers, proprietor of the Democrat-Star, that showed us some measure of friendship, permitting the use of his columns for a statement of our faith, is still "on deck" and looks well for a man of his age. I called on him and had a pleasant chat. I also visited the law office of Bullard and Bullard, who acted as counsel for the Saints in the suit at law with the mobbers. One of them, who was foreman and did the pleading (sorry I have lost first name), was away, having moved to a higher altitude for the benefit of his health, having contracted malaria, in Cuba, he having gone there, as captain of a company, during the war with Spain. His brother was at home, however, and with him, I in company with Brn. W. L. Booker and Simon McDowel, had a pleasant half or three quarters of an hour's talk. It was thought by many that the course they took in befriending "the Mormons" would injure their business as lawyers, but judging from what I could gather in the conversation with Mr. Bullard, they are doing better now than then. He said those who were mad with and wanted to fight his brother, afterward got over their mad fit and became his "chums." The Bullards are fair, broadminded men, and believe in the principle that justice should be meted out to all. 'If all lawyers were such as they, I am sure there would not be half as much corruption in the courts of the country as there is now. May they have true success in life.

While at conference I formed the acquaintance of Bro. Thomas Fry, who was, at the time of our troubles, a member of the Baptist Church. He had never investigated our claims, but was caused to do so by those troubles. His investigations led him into the light, and he is now a member of the church, and with a measure of zeal, works for its interest. He reminded me that on the day of the trial, September 4, 1897, I gave him and one of our brethren a "lecture" for going into a saloon and taking a drink. I told him I had forgotten it. "Well," said he, "I have not forgotten it, and it did me good, too." I told him if he was benefited, I was glad. His reply was, "I was benefited very much." In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good."

Some of the Saints have learned a valuable lesson, and know better how to behave under severe trials than they did before, and a number of the people, so lawyer Bullard informed me, understand our position better. He said the mobbers were very much surprised when they were convicted in the final trial. The fine assessed was small, but it was a moral victory in favor of the truth. I feel that I can afford to await the final arbitrament, when full and complete justice will be meted out to all, and with that I shall be satisfied.

Fall and winter have been remarkably fine. Cabbage and other vegetables are growing right along, down here yet. Flies are active and have to be brushed out of one's face occasionally the same as in summer time, though there are not so many as there are in summer. Three days ago I called on Bro. Jacobs at Three Rivers. I got a pocketful of pecans, and two mosquito bites. Wonder how that will sound to the dwellers in the "Pine Tree State" all wrapped up in thick coats, furs, etc. The pecans were real nice; not so the mosquito bites. Bro. Jacobs was busily engaged, grinding the juice out of his sugar cane and boiling it into syrup. From two acres of land he expected to make about six hundred gallons. He does all the boiling in one sixty-gallon kettle, and all the grinding on a one-horse mill, and hauls the cane to the mill in a one-horse wagon. Slow but sure. This, to a person who can put this and that together and form logical conclusions without having to be told everything in detail, is an index to the farming business of this part of the Sunny South.

Elder D. E. Tucker left us on the 18th inst, with his face Missouri-ward. We were sorry to lose him, for our number of missionaries is small anyway, but he has staid in the mission a long time and worked hard, and as he desired a transfer to Missouri for the winter, we granted it, though with reluctance, and wish him great success wherever he goes.

My mission address till February 1, 1901, is Garland, Alabama. In bonds,

T. C. KELLEY.

NEWBERG, Ore., Dec. 2.

BISHOP E. L. KELLEY. Lamoni. Iowa:-It is with pleasure I send my tithing this year. It is not very much, but I am very thankful that I have been permitted to earn this much. I feel that it is my duty to tell you and the church how the Lord made it plain to me to continue paying my tithing. You will doubtless remember me writing you to advise me what to do, as I had so little I thought perhaps the Lord did not require me to pay any tithing. You will also remember I related to you that a dear sister had told me that she believed I was doing wrong to give that much money away from the family. When I wrote you before I wanted to believe that she was right, because it is not very often I get hold of any cash, as I have to trade all my butter and eggs out at the store for groceries or whatever we need that they have. But sometimes they don't have what we need, and then it is very handy to have a few dimes to go where we can get it. So you will see the temptation to keep the money when I have it.

I have had a hard time to get money enough together to pay my tithing, as small as it is, sometimes; but thank God, since my heart is truly in the work, a way always opens and I have plenty for all my needs. In the first place the Lord showed me in a dream.

I thought I was living in a clean, new house, everything was nice and pleasant; but I was going to move, and this dear sister that I spoke of was there, and was going to help me to move. The great trouble was, I was going to move back into an old, dirty, tumbled up house that I had left, give up my new home for an old one that looked like it was hardly fit for pigs. I saw at once what a state I would be in if I quit paying my tithing, and praise the Lord, he directed me to Luke 12, beginning at the 13th verse and read to the 48th. I read it as a message directed to me (and I hope others will read and get the same blessing), showing "my covetousness and little faith," also showing where I was neglecting my duty in not trusting the Lord, for he says, "Rather seek ye the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you."

If we are faithful to do our part, the Lord is more than faithful to do his. And then again he says, "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching." I don't think he will find us watching if we neglect to pay our tithes into the storehouse, as he has commanded us to do, because we would be anxious to have everything done if we were looking for him.

There are a great many things we can apply this chapter to, but this is one thing, we know to be his will, and he has said, "that servant which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes," and we are the same as an unbeliever. I pray God to deliver us from this portion, that we may be found faithful in all things.

Wishing you and all the Saints a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year,

> I am your sister in Christ, MRS NELLIE I. MCCULLEY.

> > BAXTER, Iowa, Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:-Bro. H. A. McCoy and I started out about six weeks ago for a gospel campaign. Called on Concord branch, but on account of bad weather and sickness could not do much. Found Brn. Sam and Ed Rowley very busy operating a coal mine and building dwellings. Ed in connection with his temporal duties does not lose sight of the Master's business. He preaches every Sunday at North Liberty, and commands considerable respect of the community. While there I chanced to meet his father-in-law, a Holiness preacher. After a few hours' talk, I was informed he wanted a debate with some of our men. He would get a great man of their faith and annihilate latter-day saintism, remarking that he was anxious for this, on account of his daughter. Bro. McCoy being district superintendent of Sunday school association, organized a school at Round Top, which we hope will live to do good work.

At Grinnell, at the hospitable home of Sr. Russell, mother of Elder F. A. Russell, we were the recipients of the generosity of the Grinnell Saints. At this place we held forth at their neat little hall for about two weeks, and with them enjoyed the power of the good Spirit. With the consent and knowledge of missionary, J. W. Wight, we organized a branch, with the ordination of Bro. E. J. Clarke to the office of elder, Jerome Wildermuth a priest, and Albertus Walls a teacher. About ten charter members and about that number received by letter, resident in the city, now comprise the Grinnell branch. This branch is in a good healthy condition spiritually, with zealous and honest officers, who we believe will receive every encouragement that a body of Saints can give. They fasted in prayer long for this favor from God, and we feel like saying that it is a planting of his hand, not soon if ever plucked up. May his peace and love abound, is our prayer. We bade adieu to this little flock, and to Elder Russell, who by telegram from home reached there in time to share Thanksgiving dinner prepared and served at the hall by the Saints. The elder remained over Sunday and preached. It was with reluctance that we said good-bye, but with a proud feeling that we have such noble defenders of the cause.

There was no one to meet us with conveyance at Gladstone, and as the city street cars did not run five miles out in the country, we gathered up courage and walked out like soldiers, but very tired ones before we reached our destination. We received a hearty welcome at the home of Elder Hand. The next evening opened meetings at their branch schoolhouse; held about sixteen services, and baptized two—one a young man of sterling qualities and good repute, the other a girl of ten, both children of Saints, respectively, John Miller and Anna Walters. Good and honest Saints abide here.

We are now in Jasper county, to hold a few services before holidays, then on home to Perry, where we expect to labor in our home branch the rest of the year. I find Bro. McCoy, our district clerk, an unflinching laborer, ready to take his turn in the rostrum, from which he distills good and wholesome doctrine.

Now as the sleepy time draws on preceding the soon coming of Christ, let us trim our lamps and keep them burning, and sound abroad the word. There must be no sleeping soldiers in the army of the Lord.

J. W. Morgan.

BEAVER, Texas, Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:-Our worthy brethren Hilliard and Smith closed a series of sermons in our little town Monday night. We enjoyed them so much, and sorrow that they had to leave so soon; but hope they will be able to give us another visit soon, and stay longer. The work in this country is spreading fast, and prejudice is giving way. Where schoolhouses were closed against us, they are now open and good congregations to preach too. In the future I hope to be able to do more than I have in the past. I have been hindered of late on account of sickness in my family, but am able to leave now for my work. Hope and pray the Lord will bless us with health, that I can continue in the field. Ever praying God's blessing upon falling humanity, that salvation may reach all,

Your brother in bonds.

B. F. RENFROE.

PITSMOOR, Sheffield, Eng., Dec. 13. Dear Bro. Joseph:-As you do not often hear from this side of the Atlantic, I thought of just sending you a few lines to let you know we are still engaged in the Master's cause, though not making that progress we should like. On Sunday, December 9, last, I was privileged to baptize one precious soul, by the name of Davies, from Conisbro, some miles from here, into the kingdom of God, who had for weeks hungered after righteousness to such an extent that she could neither eat nor sleep nor do anything else, until she had followed her Savior through the watery grave. We had a grand time, I can assure you. Our conference (Sheffield district) will be held in Clay Cross the second Saturday in January. The Saints there are building a very neat chapel, and I believe from what I have heard they would very much like Bro. Joseph Smith to come over and dedicate. What say you, Bro. Joseph, eh? Trusting you are quite well and enjoying the Spirit of our heavenly Father,

Your brother in gospel bonds, JOSEPH ARBER.

47 Montford Road.

PUEBLO, Colo., Dec. 20.

Editors Herald:—Please note that my address is no longer Conifer, but is Ellicott, El Paso county, Colorado. I moved away from Conifer last May. Am not permanently located yet. Present address will only hold good while my wife is teaching a term of school at Ellicott.

C. R. DUNCAN.

"PATTING ON THE SHOULDER."

Editors Herald:-In your issue for December 19 appears a brief but pointed article under the above caption, written by Bro. J. A. Upton. It seems to me that the sentiment of this article should meet with hearty approval from the Saints in general, and from the ministry in particular. In the past we have indulged in the follies referred to in Bro. Upton's article far too much, and it has been done, as it always is, to the injury of individuals and the cause of truth. We should learn to discern between flattery, blarney, and "patting on the shoulder," on the one hand, and true encouragement in the right, on the other. The first is reprehensible and injurious; the second is needful and beneficial. That which manifestly tends to destroy true character, rather than to build it up, as Bro. Upton shows, should be rejected. I trust the article referred to above will be read by the Saints in general, and carefully considered.

J. R. LAMBERT.

MAQUOKETA, Iowa, Dec. 26.

Dear Herald:—I desire to learn whether the children of my brother, Jesse Miller, who lived near Trenton, Grundy county, Missouri, and who died there in 1867 or 1868, are still living. I think the names of two of them were Grant and Sherman.

Any information as to their whereabouts will be thankfully received, and I trust that any brother or sister reading this letter and knowing anything of them will write me.

MRS. H. W. ROBBINS.

ESSEX, Ill., Dec. 26.

Editor Herald:—It is with gratitude to my heavenly Father that I can tell you that after many past failures, at last the gospel has been preached here in full.

On Friday after Thanksgiving Elders Moler and Keck commenced meetings in the town hall to a fair audience, and continued until fifteen sermons had been delivered, with mostly a good attendance, sometimes a full house. Our Methodist friends turned out in force and by their earnest attention added much to the interest of the meetings. The minister came out three times, and though a small effort was made to injure the work that had been done, it amounted to nothing. I think good was done, some prejudice removed, and I think if we are not left too long without more preaching, some will eventually come into the church in this place. The Methodist membership are out of harmony with their pastor and have absented themselves from their services, so that even the choir and organist are "no more," and the pastor starts the hymns from the pulpit.

I pray that more work can be done ere long. Any elder is welcome to our home with the best we can do for him.

I thank God that my youngest daughter has come into the church this year, and I have hope that my husband may yet do so. Dear Saints, pray for us here, that the work may be planted in this place. I have not written to the Herald for years, but my heart is still in the work, and I want to live for it while I live, and die in it when I die.

Wishing all the Saints a Happy New Year, SR. C. N. GREGSON.

LINN, Mo., December 24.

Editors Herald:-Bro. Beebe and I arrived in the Whearso branch in Osage county some two weeks ago. This branch is so far from any other that but few of the traveling ministry have visited it. Brn. Bond, Gillen, Walters, and a few others have labored here. It is the only branch in the St. Louis district in Missouri except the St. Louis branch. There are sixty members belonging to this branch many of whom live close enough to the church to attend meeting. When we came we found the branch in poor condition, as the presiding elder, Bro. John Mantle, had died and the other officers were negligent, but since our arrival a branch president and priest have been chosen, together with a teacher and deacon. This being Christmas week we expect to have meeting at the church. Elder Wilson still lives here and both he and wife are firm in the faith. We expect to start a Sunday school and Zion's Religio-Literary Society here soon, if God

Bro. R. T. Walters made this branch a pleasant call as he was on his way from Illinois to his home in Cedar county, Missouri. Truly we were cheered by his sermons and friendship. I was glad to read of the Saints in Springfield, Missouri, having started to erect a church. I hope they will succeed in building one that will be a credit to the work in that part of the field. To build a church, Saints need to be united and untiring in their efforts. May God speed the work. Brothers and sisters in the cause of truth, whether we be found in the land of Joseph or some other, or even in the far off isles of the sea, let us labor together in love that the work of the gathering and restoration of Israel may be accomplished in its time and that we may be found worthy to stand when the judgment shall sit. C. J. SPHRLOCK.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"The soul which grasps the helpful thoughts that spring Along the line where grander natures serve, Which gives sweet sympathies to twine and cling, And watches lest the tempted one should swerve, Hath found the tendril's mission, strong and fine—The coil which holds the world to plans divine."

NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS.

It may perhaps have entered the mind of many of our readers that New Year resolutions are both short lived and foolish. In many cases we grant you they are the former, but are not prepared to say they are the latter. Such resolutions, as a rule, result from the struggles of an awakened conscience, the desire of amendment. They arise in the heart and soul of the individual through dissatisfaction with his or her past life, and a determination to do better in the future. Is it not in this frame of mind that most lasting and radical changes have their origin? If dissatisfaction never came to the individual. would he ever long for change? Would he ever aspire to that which is better, nobler, higher than his past contains? If this be true, we cannot afford to look with indifference upon the struggle of any human soul, even though it prove short lived, but have reason to be thankful that neither indifference nor perfect hardness of heart has yet come to one who is traveling the same hard journey of life we ourselves are. It comes to the writer that we ought rather in all things to remember the extent and weight of our individual responsibility, and to recognize the fact that much good may be done by encouragement, and very much evil by distrust and discouragement.

Faith, hope, and charity are all indispensable in the Christian warfare, and we are persuaded that a proper amount of faith in and encouragement of an individual has gone far towards helping many a soul to stem the tide and breast successfully the adverse waves of life; while on the other hand, the lifeboat of many a one has been wrecked through want of such a portion of faith and encouragement as might, without the slightest detriment to self, have been extended to them.

We have never been in the habit, to any great extent at least, of forming resolutions for the future with the incoming of a new year; but looking the future in the face, as the old year is drawing to its close, the strong desire comes to speak a word of cheer and encouragement to those who like us are striving to fight a good fight and lay hold upon eternal life. It has pleased the Lord to tell us that "it is pleasing in his sight that we be cheerful in our warfare." Cheerfulness is a tonic which invigorates the whole system. It gives clearer light to the natural as to the spiritual sight, and helps in every way to strengthen us for the conflict of life, hence it becomes a positive duty. We need all the strength obtainable from every legitimate source, that we be not overcome and fall out by the way. There comes before our mind, as we write, a beautiful picture, and upon it is engraven a lesson we may carry through the year with us, and if the lesson enter our hearts deeply enough, we may form a resolution for the new year which the Lord will help us to keep.

The host of the Assyrians came up against Israel, and the king of Assyria took counsel with his army and said, at such a place will we surround and destroy our enemies. But many times the prophet Elisha, being instructed by God, sent word to the king of Israel, warning him of his enemies' designs, and Israel was saved. So often did this happen that the king of Assyria grew discouraged, and he demanded of his servants to tell him who among them was for the king of Israel? for he thought surely there must be a traitor in his army.

"And one of his servants said, 'None, my Lord, O, King; but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bedchamber." Then the king commanded that they should find out for him where Elisha was, and he would make him a prisoner. And they said, "He is in Dothan." Then in the night the king of Assyria sent a great host with horses and chariots, and surrounded the city.

"And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, a host compassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, 'Alas, my master! how shall we do?"

There will be times in the year upon which we are entering, when, like the servant of Elisha, you and I, in our blindness, will behold only the host encamped round about us. Times when the heavens will seem far removed from us and darkness wrap us in as a mantle, and we will almost forget the resolutions we formed and fully intended to carry out. But if we can only remember to go to the Master in faith, as Elisha's servant went to him, the answer will surely come, "Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them." Let us pray to God earnestly, not only that our own eyes may be opened to discern truth, but that those who are perchance opposing, may discern it, for as surely as "the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha," so surely will truth be vindicated and her cause triumph.

NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS.

At this, the dawn of a new century, and one which the prophets of ages past, as well as of the present time, have designated as the age to witness the commencing of the sublime conditions of our Master's reign, we the Daughters of Zion, a society which aims to assist in the great preparation which precedes that glorious event, send greeting to all members and friends of the organization. We feel to congratulate all concerning the progress of the work during the past year. We have been much encouraged by the support given us by many of the leading officials of the church, and the increased good feeling toward our work in a general way.

We have not only received friendly notices through the Ensign, but by the kindness of its editor we have obtained space in its columns, where our work is under the careful and efficient supervision of Sr. H. B. Curtis, who is deeply interested in the welfare of our young, and will spare no pains to make the department interesting and instructive to them.

We notice with pleasure the excellent work that has been done in the Autumn Leaves, under the editorship of Sisters Stebbins and Davis, who have been ably seconded by Dr. Bertha Greer in her "Health Notes." We feel to thank God that he is raising up so many noble women who recognize their responsibility to him to labor in this line of work. Truly our dear Sr. Walker, who has labored so long, and is still laboring so earnestly for the proper development of God's children, must rejoice to see such an army of workers coming to the front in the different departments of church work.

Still there is room for more workers, especially in this cause. We would be glad to see every woman in the church united in an earnest effort to put down some of the great evils of the world which threaten-our homes and make it hard for us to keep them pure as the homes of the Saints ought to be. Oh, what a responsibility is upon us! What a work is before us! To the extent the motherhood of the church rises to meet God's requirements, so will their posterity rise nearer to the will and character of God.

What wisdom, what patience, what love we need! Can we counsel together too often, that we may unitedly plead with God for wisdom, and seek from every available source the knowledge and counsel we most need?

When our elders tell us that they could not preach with liberty of Spirit in certain places because of the example of the home life of the Saints in those places, can we doubt the need of such work as this society aims to do?

We are often encouraged by hearing our sisters tell how they have been enlightened in their work since they began to take interest in the Daughters of Zion movement. Mothers who have raised their families say, "If I had had the opportunities of counsel and literature which the sisters now have, I feel that I should have been able to have done better by my children than I have done."

It is the earnest desire of the advisory board to keep in touch with all the locals, and to do this it will be necessary for them to report from time to time to the corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. H. Robinson, Lees Summit, Missouri, that none of them be overlooked.

We trust that all will feel free to write for any help or information they need, either as to organizing or conducting locals, and as far as the board is able, it will be cheerfully given.

ADVISORY BOARD.

"WHITHER GOEST THOU?"

"Whither goest thou, O Savior, Without royal diadem, With thy regal hand unsceptered?" "Bethlehem."

"Whither goest thou, O Savior, Lord of Life and Lord of Death, Light of men, in darkness shining?" "Nazareth."

"Whither goest thou, O Savior, Second of the Trinity, Blessing joy and soothing sorrow?" "Galilee."

"Whither goest thou, O Savior?
We would rise and follow thee, Glory of thy people Israel."
"Calvary."

"Whither goest thou, O Savior, From the grave returned to be Resurrection, life, and glory?" "Bethany."

"Whither hast thou gone, O Savior, Lord of purity?"

"Whither I have gone, thou knowest.
I am he

"Who hath overcome and conquered; Those who follow me

Yet shall hear my voice,—'Ye blessed, Come and see.'"

From "Dies Panis," by E. Hamilton.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A young sister who feels most keenly her deprivation of all church privileges, earnestly desires your faith and prayers in her behalf, that God may be pleased to open the way for her to be with the Saints, also that her father's interest in the church may be reawakened and deepened.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR. Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

The following is an article by sister Julia Hansen, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, upon the subject of Christmas entertainments, and is so full of good thoughts upon that line that we are glad to present it to our readers before the buoyancy of the Christmastide is too long forgotten. And if there is a Sunday school that has not in some appropriate way celebrated the birth of our Savior, we trust the leaders therein will give this subject serious thought before they let Christmas pass again unobserved. We believe that to observe a Christmas in an appropriate way is one of the best lessons that Sunday schools can teach. What is better?—ED.

CHRISTMAS AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

I saw a laughing child go forth to play. The sun shone brightly, flowers bloomed on every hand, birds sang in the trees, all nature seemed glad, giving royal greeting to the happy child. Busily she went from flower to tree, seeing new objects of interest on every hand, but ere long weariness came and she sank down to rest.

Reclining on the soft grass her attention was attracted by sweet tones, music drawing nearer and nearer. Raising her head she listened and heard the following verse:—

When the shepherds watched by night, O'er their flocks on Judah's plains; When the hills were bathed in light, Joy bells rang a sweeter strain.

Though all had seemed beautiful before, child that she was, her senses were quickened, the sunshine was brighter, the flowers sweeter, and with a thrill of happiness she joined in singing the sweet song learned months before.

A youth went proudly forth to battle with the world. Often he had been warned of the pitfalls that lay before him, of the dangers that threatened on every side, but strong in his own integrity he feared not. He saw only a brilliant career, where the failures would be few, the victories many. But, alas, the world was cold, his good impulses were frowned upon, his noble aspirations ridiculed, his love of truth and beauty was fast fading away, when on Christmas evening, as he walked the streets of the city, on the very verge of despair he heard a voice, "Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

The present faded away, and he lived again in the past, the memories of childhood and home, the Sunday school with its Christmas festivities all crowded upon his brain; but more vivid than all else was the story of the Christ, the tidings of great joy flooded his soul, and once more he felt strong to meet opposition and temptation, remembering the promise of the Divine One, "and lo, I am with you always."

A mother sat by the cradle side, singing and sewing as mothers will, thinking as she sang of the sleeping babe that should be so pure, so lovable, so beautiful, the joy of her heart, and in old age her stay and support.

A few days have passed away, and surrounded by flowers we see the tiny form resting in its last sleep, the heartbroken mother bending over it, when out of the stillness and the gloom she hears the belis ringing, "Peace on earth, good will toward men;" and anon to the ears of her soul speaks a voice, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." Peace has come to her, for she realizes that though her loss and her sorrow are great, the Man of sorrows has reached across the chasm and given her the peace, which he came to earth to give "to all people."

Christmas has come, and she binds up her own wounds and goes out to transmit to others the happiness and cheer which has come to her, notwithstanding her heart aches with its loneliness.

Does this seem exaggerated? I believe not. Every joy is intensified by the memory of the Babe of Bethlehem; every duty made easier by recalling how he did not his own will; every sorrow lightened by the thought of how he triumphed over sorrow and wrong, and the whole world made better by that which impresses on our hearts the story of his spotless life.

As we near the Christmastide the question comes to Sunday school workers, What are we doing to make this story a part of the very lives of the children? What does Christmas mean to us? Is it a time for exchanging gifts, for family reunions, for feasting and merry making only? A story is related of a little girl who had been told that we celebrate Christmas because it is Christ's birthday. On Christmas day, when all were seated around the table enjoying the dainties placed before them, she glanced from one to another as though something was being forgotten. Toasts had been proposed by different members of the company, and turning to her mother, she asked for a glass of wine. It was given, and rising in her chair, she held the glass high, bowed her head, and said reverently, "Here's to your health, dear Lord." Was not the lesson an opportune one, and one that may well be taken home by us all? In our Christmas festivities, do we not forget the prime object in view-that of inspiring greater love for him whose advent to earth we celebrate.

Our national holidays receive their due share of attention, as they should, and not a child but can tell us about the Fourth of July, and Decoration day; but ask the children about Christmas, and many will answer that it is the day we have turkey, and when Santa Claus comes: and in telling this, have exhausted their store of information.

What is the remedy? What can the Sunday school do? Make each Christmas a day so full of the true Christmas spirit that the children will look back to it as the happiest day in the year, and look forward to the coming holiday with a feeling of love and reverence.

To do this we must not decide that we are too busy this year to have any Christmas entertainment; that after all it is pleasanter to stay at home, eat a big dinner, and perhaps go to sleep afterwards. But let us resolve that this Christmas shall not go by without each child knowing something of the true significance of the day.

How much time and labor is spent in our public schools to prepare for the celebration of Washington's birthday. This is as it should be; but the Sunday school should be willing to spend as much time in preparing for the proper celebration of the birthday of One infinitely greater than our Washington.

Much patience as well as time is needed to do this, but I believe the results are sufficient to justify us in doing our best. The program which has been prepared for us this year is an excellent one, and as has been said, one that can be adapted to the needs of every school.

The story, old, yet ever new; the story that never loses its charm, but has inspired the best in literature, art, and music; and more than this, has been the inspiration of the noblest lives for nineteen hundred years is the theme, and in song and recitation it is told again; and again we are led to see what a beautiful thing is a life of absolute truth and purity.

Think you that the rehearsal of these things leaves no impress on the soul of the child? It has been said that our every act. no matter how insignificant, affects the whole after life either for good or for evil, and not only our own lives, but all life, all the world. Meredith says,

"No life can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife

And all life not be made purer and stronger thereby,"

If we accept this broad view of social influence, and I think we cannot consistently reject it, we must believe that every child that takes part in a Christmas entertainment, every child that is present and hears the exercises, has imbibed into his very being that that will prompt him to live nobly; and though he may wander far from the path of rectitude, whisperings of the past will come to him, now with overwhelming force showing him how far he has gone astray, and again with tender solicitude salling the prodigal back to the faith of his childhood. Aside from the moral influence on the children, let us think of the happiness we bring to them. Was the child ever known who didn't want a Christmas tree? This alone seems sufficient reason for having something of the sort.

If children could be shown the beauty of religion, that it is intended not alone to make us happy hereafter, but now; and that everything enjoyable is not a sin, half the battle would be won, and it is within the province of the Sunday school to do much in this line; and as each glad Christmas comes, cause them and us all to exclaim with Pope:-

> Hark! a glad voice the lonely desert cheers: Prepare the way! a God, a God appears: A God, a God! the vocal hills, reply, The rocks proclaim the approaching Deity. Lo, earth receives Him from the bending skies! Sink down, ye mountains, and, ye valley, rise; With heads declined, ye cedars, homage pay; Be smooth, ye rocks; ye rapid floods, give way; The Savior comes. . .

> > JULIA E. HANSEN.

FAR WEST.

Convention of above district met with St. Joseph branch, December 14. Superintendent C. J. Craven in the chair; Grace Constance secretary. The following schools reported: Zion's Star, South Park, Aspey mission, Kingston, Mount Pleasant, Wakenda, Pleasant Grove, and Cameron mission. No report from Stewartsville and German Stewartsville. District superintendent, also superintendents of schools reported schools in very good condition. It was moved and carried that secretaries of schools make out reports and mail with delegate credentials to district secretary, one week previous to convening of each convention. As those who were assigned parts on the program were not prepared, short talks were given on the different subjects by workers present. The subjects were: "What can we do to get the young people to become more interested in Sunday school work?" "What relation is the Sunday school to the church, and how will it benefit us in our homes?" and "Shall we give rewards?" Resolved that we favor the use of International lesson texts in our Quarterlies was then taken up and discussed; yeas and nays being called, the motion was lost. Adjourned to meet at same place and day previous to next district conference, at 10:30 a.m.

GENERAL CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

Notice is hereby given that at the next convention of the association in April, 1901, motions will be made to amend as follows:-

1. To amend article 2, section 1, page 15 (1900 edition), by striking out, "see that teachers follow methods advised by the superintendent of the association," and insert, in lieu thereof, "and advise the adoptive the superintendent of the superintendent of the association," and insert, in lieu thereof, "and advise the adoptive the superintendent of tion of such methods of teaching as he by investigation shall decide to be practicable."

VIDA E. SMITH. LAJUNE HOWARD. LUCY LYONS RESSEGUIE. SUSIE MADER. C. B. KELLEY.

Notice is hereby given that at the next convention of the association in April, 1901, motions will be made to amend as follows:-

1. To amend article 1 on page 15 (1900 edition) to read: The officers of each Sunday school shall consist of a superintendent, assistant superintendent, secretary, treasurer, librarian, and when necessary, other assistant superintendents, assistant score-taries, assistant librarians, chorister, organist, and janitor.

- 2. To amend paragraph 2, article 2, page 15, by inserting the word first before the word assistant wherever it occurs, and by adding at the close of the paragraph the following: Other assistant superintendents shall have charge of such departments of the school, as its size and condition may require, acting in harmony with the counsel and advice of the superintendent and first assistant superintendent.
- 3. To amend paragraph 1, article 7, page 17, by making the word assistant in the second line read with the first assistant and assistant in charge of each respective department.
- 4. To amend paragraph 5, article 7, page 18, by making the word assistant read assist-
- 5. To amend article 2, section 3, page 15, by adding, The assistant secretary shall assist the secretary as occasion demands, and, in the secretary's absence, shall perform all the duties of secretary.
- 6. To smend article 2, section 5, page 16, by adding, The assistant librarian shall assist the librarian as occasion demands, and, in the librarian's absence, shall perform all the duties of librarian.
- 7. Substitute for article 5, page 17, All officers shall be elected by the school except the assistant superintendent other than the first assistant superintendent, assistant secretaries, and assistant librarians, and shall take their places the Sunday following.
- 8. To amend article 5, by adding section 2, All the assistant superintendents except the first shall be elected by the teachers of their respective departments and the superintendent and first assistant.
- 9. To amend article 5, by adding section 3, The secretary shall have choice of his assistants by conferring with the superintendent and his assistants.
- 10. To amend article 5, by adding section The librarian shall have choice of his assistants by conferring with the superintendent and his assistants.

LAJUNE HOWARD. Susie Mader. LUCY LYONS RESSEGUIE. FRANCES W. DAVIS. ELIZA CHASE

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Sunday school convention of Nodaway district association will be held at Guilford, Missouri, February 1, next. See program in Herald, December 19 last, page 828.

Conference Minutes.

WESTERN WALES.

Conference of above district held at Saints' chapel, Island place, Llanelly, November 3. Resolved that T. Jones act as secretary pro tem, and that the missionary be associated with the president. Ministry reporting:
Missionary A. N. Bishop, Elders David
Lewis, L. Bishop, Evan Lewis, John O.
Evans, D. Thomas, G. Davies; Priest D. Morris; Deacon D. Edwards. Resolved that we omit the reports of branches until next conference, when we hope to have reports correct. Resolved that the tobacco question be left on the table. Sunday morning prayer meeting in charge of Elders Evan Lewis and J. Jones; afterwards short addresses were given by Elders G. Davies, D. Thomas, D. Lewis, and A. N. Bishop. Afternoon sacrament meeting was in charge of Elders A. N. Bishop and D. Lewis. Preaching in the evening by D. Lewis and A. N. Bishop. The suthorities of the church in America were sustained. Elder A. N. Bishop was sustained as missionary for Wales. And all elders, priests, teachers, and deacons were sustained by our faith and prayers. A vote of thanks was tendered our late secretary, and Elder A N. Bishop was chosen in his place. Adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

Miscellaneous Department.

MISSIONARY REPORT BLANKS.

The following was adopted by the last General Conference:

"Resolved, that the Board of Publication provide blanks to be sent to the missionaries as early as January 1 of each year, upon which they are to report to the Church Secretary, not later than March 1, to compile for publication in the Herald; said blanks to be in accordance with the tabulated form of reporting as previously adopted."

Blanks have been forwarded to all general missionaries, who are requested to include report of labors to March 1, and forward promptly for publication. Any failing to receive blanks will be supplied on application.

R S. SALYARDS, Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, Jan. 1.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

The following named brethren are requested to send items to me, so that our record may be more nearly complete. When born; baptized; when, where, and by whom ordained: A A. Baker, W. A. Carroll, C. J. Clark, J. A. Gillen, S. D. Love, B F. Miller, Ola Olson, J. S. Parrish, W. A. Prewett, J. C. Severine, J. S. Strain.

F. C. WARNKY, Sec. 2422 Wabash Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO MEMORIAL FUND TO JOSEPH AND HYRUM SMITH. THE MARTYRS.

Previously reported$25	52
Lily of Zion Sunday school, Michigan.	60
Anna Wise, Kansas 1	00
LIST, MINERVA JOHNSON AS FOLLOWS:-
Bro. and Sr. Will Dodson, Nebraska	10
Bro. and Sr. T. Erwin, Nebraska	10
W. M. Dodson, Nebraska	10
Jane Storer, Nebraska	10
Emma Payne, Nebraska	10
Chas. Hurshman, Nebraska	10
Chas, Hurshman, Nebraska	$\cdot 10$
J. P. Johnson, Nebraska	10
Kenneth Johnson, Nebraska	10
Minerva Johnson, Nebraska	10
LIST, R. M. ELVIN AS FOLLOWS:-
Jno. A. Anderson, Iowa	50
Dan'l Anderson. Iowa	.50
M. R. Crake, Ontario	50
LIST, J. W. WIGHT AS FOLLOWS:-
Mary H. Raymond, Montana	50
Susan M. White, Montana	50
Gomer Reese, Montana	50
Carl W. Lange Wissensin	50
Carl W. Lange, Wisconsin	65
I. M. Lane, Iowa	50
	OU
AS PER LIST ETHEL CASE, CONIFER, COLORADO.
Tag Varan Coloredo	25
Jas. Kemp, Colorado* Frances M. Kemp, Colorado	25
Jos. E. Kemp. Colorado	25
R J. Kemp, Colorado	$\frac{25}{25}$
Elizabeth Elliot, Colorado	$\frac{25}{25}$
Oline Acres, Colorado	25
Peter Case, Colorado	25
Emma Case, Colorado	25
Total to date,$34	77
E L KELLEY,

Presiding Bishop. December 29, 1900,

RELIGIO AMENDMENTS.

Proposed amendments to the Constitution and By-laws of Zion's Religio Literary So-

Art. IV. Membership. Section 1, Admit-ince. Add at the end, "Except in cases where letters of removal are presented, when vote may be taken at time of presentation."
Art. IV. Membership. Section III. With-

Substitute the following: member who may wish to withdraw from the society shall give one week's notice of his intention to do so, except when he desires to remove and unite with another society, in which case if in good standing, he shall be given a letter of removal, recommending him to membership in such society, and vote may be taken without one week's notice."

Com., JESSIE M. CAVE. CLEMENT MALCOR. ANDRES C. ANDERSON.

By order of Decatur district convention. December 18, 1900.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of Northwest Kansas district will meet at Blue Rapids, Saturday, February 2, at 10:30. A full report from branches is desired, also from elders, priests, and teachers of labor done. Presidents of branches should call business meetings not later than two weeks before the conference, and forward reports, that we may get them before conference meets. Many reports are received after adjournment. At our last conference only two branches out of eight reported, and about the same per cent of the ministry. Such conditions should not obtain. Our spiritual growth has been dwarfed; my late visit among the branches evidenced the fact. With twenty years' association with the work in this district, I never witnessed the spiritual tide so low. May our heavenly Father inspire each with new zeal in the dawn of the new century, is our prayer.
A. KENT, Pres.

Conference of Northern Nebraska district will meet at Saints' church, 1818 North Twenty-first street, Omaha, January 25, at 7: 30 p.m. The priesthood are especially requested to make written reports of labor performed. Election of officers for ensuing year will take place. Branch statistical reports, communications, and notices to be sent to James Huff, 1818 North Twenty-first street, Omaha, Nebraska.

FRED A. SMITH, Pres. JAMES HUFF, Sec.

Conference of Tennessee and Kentucky district will meet at Foundry Hill branch, near Puryear, Tennessee, at ten o'clock, Saturday, Tebruary 9, 1901. Send reports in good time, to P. B. Seaton, Puryear Tennessee. All the ministry to report labors by letter or in person.

T. C. KELLEY.
P. B. SEATON.

Conference of Kirtland district will convene with Cleveland branch, February 23 and 24. Branches, send full reports to J. W. Baldwin, 97 Elm street, Sharon, Pennsylvania. Branches are specially requested to be represented, as important matters are to be disposed of.

F. J. EBELING, Pres. J. W. BALDWIN, Sec.

Northeast Missouri district conference will convene at Bevier, February 9 and 10, at ten o'clock. Election of delegates to General Conference and some other important features will come before the body.

J. A. TANNER, Pres.

BORN.

WELLS -At Deer Lodge, Montana, December 19, 1900, to Elder G. B. and Sister Adelaide Wells, a son

BISHOP.-To Bro. and Sr. Bishop, a daughter; born November 5, 1900, at Dinas. Blessed December 9, at Porth, by Eiders A. N. Bishop and L. Bishop and Evanelia.

MORRIS.—To Bro. and Sr. Morris, a daughter; born September 30, 1900, at Dinas. Blessed at Porth, December 9, by Eiders A. N. Bishop and J. G. Jenkins, and named BARBOUR.—Minnie Evaline, daughter of Charles A. and Sr. Minnie Barbour, of Indian Valley, Idaho, was blessed November 26, 1900. Minnie was born December 27, 1897, in Indian Valley.

MARRIED.

POWELL—HINDERKS.—At the home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. T. T. Hin-derks, four miles north of Stewartsville, Mis-souri, December 20, 1900, at six p. m., Bro. D. C. Powell and Sr. Mamie Hinderks; Elder T. T. Hinderks, father of the bride, officiating, assisted by Eider D. E. Powell, father of the groom. The ceremony was witnessed by a large company of relatives and friends. The Kinnaman quartet from St. Joseph, Missouri, made the occasion pleasant with their musical voices. Quite a number of beautiful presents were given as a token of the high esteem in which Bro. and Sr. Powell are held, and with them the best wishes for a long and happy married life.

DEWEISE -Sr. Angeline Daweise was born October 30, 1830, in Bradford county, Pennsylvania; died December 6, 1900, near Woodbine, Iowa. She had a manifestation of her death a few days before she passed away. She attended the funeral of her grandson, She attended the funeral of her grandson, and as she stood by the casket in the church, December 2, she kissed him on the forehead and said, "Tommy, grandma will soon be with you." She took sick that night and died the following Thursday. She fell asleep in Jesus, and her body lies in the Woodbine cometery. Funeral talk by her nephew, cemetery. Funeral talk by her nephew, Eider W. A. Smith, assisted by S. B Kibler.

HARTNELL.—At Juniata, Tuscola county, Michigan, John Hartnell died very suddenly at his home, December 6, 1900, aged 71 years and 6 months. He leaves a wife, four sons, and two daughters to mourn his departure. Funeral sermon by Elder A. Barr, at the Saints' church, to a large concourse of friends and relatives. He was buried in the family burying ground as Vassar, Michigan, there to await the resurrection of the just.

ELIASON.—At Deer Lodge, Montana, December 13, 1900, Margaret Eliason, aged 84 years. Born August 16, 1816, at Malung, Sweden. Came with husband to America in 1862; settled at Soda Springs, Idaho. Husband died in 1867, leaving a family of nine children, who, since grown, have tenderly cared for her. Was baptized in November, 1869, at Malad, Idaho. Moved to Montana in 1871; settled near Deer Lodge, where she lived with her son, Bro. John Edason. While visiting with her daughter, Mrs. Trask, in town, she took ill and passed away peacefully.

town, she took ill and passed away peacefully. Interment in Deer Lodge cemetery; funeral services conducted by Elder G. R. Wells.

GREEN.—Barnett M. Green was born in the state of New York, February 6, 1827; died at the home of his son-in-law, near Hastings, Iowa, December 15, 1900. He was a member of the old church and joined the Reorganization in an early day; he held the office of a priest, and bore a faithful testimony both in public and private to the truth of the gospel. He was the father of nine children, seven of whom, with his wife, preceded him to the spirit world. He leaves two daughters and eight grandchildren to mourn. Funeral sermon at the McLane schoolhouse by Elder A. Badham.

SEELY.—At the Saints' Home, Lamoni, Iowa, November 14, 1900, Sr. Mary Ann Seely, widow of Bro. Jesse Seely, of Savanash, New York, sometime deceased, aged $6

The Saints' Herald.

(Established 1860)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price. $1.50 per year.
Address communications for publication to
"Editors Herald."

Marriage, birth. and death notices: Marriages, $1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business mana-

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as re-ceipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E. Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications years, 8 months, 10 days. Her end was a peaceful one, and by agreement her remains were taken east by Bro. Wm. H. Kelley and interred by the side of her husband in the family plat. So pass the righteous to their MILLER —At Alexandria, Virginia, 9:40 a. m., December 22, 1900, of cancer of the stomach, Sr. Jennie Miller, aged 53 years, 7 months, and 12 days She was a great sufferer, bore her suffering patiently, and ever bore testimony to the truth of the 'angel's message." She rests in peace.

message." She rests in peace.

McClure—At Burlington, Kansas, December 17, 1900, Lewis McClure, in the 46th year of his age. He was born in Indiana, April 14, 1855; baptized April 10, 1876; married to Miss Hattie Porter, August 29, 1879; nine children were born to them, eight of whom, with the faithful companion, are left to mourn their great loss. Funeral at Pleasant Hill Christian church, near Burlington. Elder W. C. Cadwell preached the sermon, assisted by Elder P. Cadwell. The Christian friends deserve sincere thanks for timely help during the service. Nearly the whole neighborhood attended to show the esteem in which he was held. He held the office of teacher.

COBB—In Lower Lake, California, December 19, 1900, Mrs. E. E. Cobb, a native of Ohio, aged 74 years, 2 months, and 12 days. The funeral took place from the M. E. church, Friday, December 21.

The leading feature of the January Arena, which begins the twenty-fifth volume of that standard review, is a symposium on "Christian Science and the Healing Art." There are four contributors, who write from opposite though equally authoritative view points. The discussion is candid, dispassionate, lucid, and unusually free from overstatement. It may be read with equal profit by both adherents and opponents of Mrs. Eddy's cult, and will be found of absorbing interest to any intelligent mind. Another contribution of the "advanced" order is "The Spiritual in Literature," by Sara A. Underwood, who presents some startling proofs of the widepresents some startling proofs of the spread belief in communication with the despread of the communication with the communication spread belief in communication with the departed. Other splendid articles are: "A Problem in Sociology," by Prof. W. H. Van Ornum; "The Legal Road to Socialism," by W. H. Phillips; "The Pan-American Exposition," by Frank E. Elwell, and the first of a series of papers on "The Criminal Negro," by Miss Frances A. Kellor, whose portrait forms the frontispiece to this issue. An interview with Joseph Haworth, giving the terview with Joseph Haworth, giving the noted actor's reminiscences of his experience with the classic drama, is an interesting feature. Editorial comments on "Topics of the Times" and "Books of the Day" conclude a remarkable 25 cents' worth of the best reading matter issued by an American publishing house. $250 a year. The Alliance Publishing Company, New York.

WHAT a veritable mine of valuable information the Pan American Exposition will be for business and professional people, mechanics, agriculturists, and in fact all who are engaged in the various vocations in life, besides affording them the rarest entertainment imaginable. From this wonderful exposition of the achievements of the Western Hemisphere during the nineteenth century, they will return to their homes and pursuits better equipped for their work. Those who would not avail themselves of the benefits to be derived from this unprecedented Congress of Ideas would find themselves outstripped by others who had wisely accepted the golden opportunity to familiarize themselves with what has made so much for progress. No one with a progressive turn of mind can afford to remain away from an Exposition which will be so rich in its educational aspects and lasting in its pleasant impressions, as the Pan-American.

An attractive and characteristic feature of The World's Work for January is an article by Henry Harrison Lewis, describing "A Day's Work on a Snow Plough," as it is to be witnessed on the mountain division of the Canadian Pacific Railway. How man and the machine combine to do successful battle with the great storms which yearly sweep the Rockies is set forth in graphic fashion.

The familiar question, Can a man make a small farm furnish a living? is answered in "Going Back to the Soil," a suggestive article contributed by J. P. Mowbray to the January number of The World's Work. Mr. Mowbray believes that such a farm when accessible to market can be worked at a profit if the owner has intelligence, industry, and good health; and he cites a number of strik-ing examples in support of his point-of-view.

ADDRESSES

W. S. Macrae, Saltillo, Faulkner county, Arkansas. James Craig, Glen Easton, West Virginia.

S. D. Goostree, Iuka, Illinois (permanent address).

Arthur Allen, mission address, church corner of Glasgow and Dickson streets, St. Louis, Missouri.

U. W. Greene, 19 Sherlock Place, Brooklyn, New York.

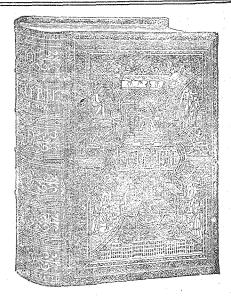

John B. Roush, 2942 California St., Denver. Colorado.

Alma C. Barmore, 352 Lippincott Street, Toronto, Ontario, care of T. C. Hattey. L. R. Devore, Holden, Missouri.

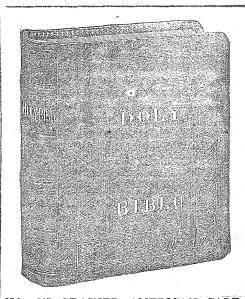

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Ad-THE PATRIOT, Lamoni, dress, Iowa.

A postal card brings a sample copy.

NO. 420 AMERICAN MOROCCO, raised panel, full gold sides, back and edges, raised panel, full gold sides, back and edges, new pronouncing parallel Bible. References. Both versions Old and New Testaments in parallel columns line for line, upon each page. Large quarto. Size, $12\frac{1}{2}x10\frac{1}{2}$ inches. Two Bibles in one volume. Every proper name is divided into syllables, and an accent mark is placed over the syllable upon which emphasis should rest. A new pronouncing dictionary of nearly 4 000 scriptural proper dictionary of nearly 4,000 scriptural proper dictionary of nearly 4.000 scriptural proper names; marriage certificate, family record and temperance pledge; four full-page maps in colors; twenty-five full-page Doré engravings; five full-page illustrations in colors; scripture illustrations; chronology, coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; concordance; Psalms in metre; the reviser's preface, etc. Price, \$5 25.

NO. 415 GRAINED AMERICAN CALF, padded sides, round corners on covers, gold edges. Large quarto size, $10\frac{1}{2}$ x12\frac{1}{2} inches, containing the Authorized Version Old and New Testaments; marginal references; fullpage maps in colors; history of the books of the Bible; forty-eight full-page illustrations; chronological tables; photo-views of scenes in Bible lands; coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; pronouncing dictionary of scripture proper names; apocrypha; mar-riage certificate, family record and temperance pledge in colors; chronological index; Psalms in metre; twenty-five full-page Doré engravings; six full-page illustrations in colors, etc., etc. Price, \$4 25.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER, Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162,781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All etters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

STOCK HOUDERS: Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eila D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

UIT-TO-B

THREE BOXES POSITIVELY GUARANTEED to cure any form of tobacco habit or money cheerfully refunded. Sent postpaid on receipt of $1.50. U.S. stamps taken. Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, Ill., U S. A.

T. P. COOK, Pres. and Mgr.

J. P. EPPERSON, Sec. and Treas.

AUTOMATIC WEATHER STRIPS FOR BOTTOMS OF

Patented in United States and Canada

Made of steel and sheet metal. No rubber or springs to wear out or break. Indestructible and guaranteed to keep out all rain, snow, and cold. Simple in construction and give universal satisfaction. Made in lengths and styles to suit any hinged door. Work on old thresholds as well as new.

These strips will be sent prepaid to any address within the limits of our territory upon receipt of $1.00 each for galvanized iron facing or $200 for copper facing. Give EXACT width of door with order. Splendid chance for good agents. Brethren

Cook & Epperson,

Manufacturers and Dealers. E. Des Moines, Iowa. Lock Box 73.

SAINT	rs' HYMNAL. Words and	5
	music.
108.	Paper covers, each	30
	Per dozen 8	20
110.	Cloth, limp	35
		75
111.	Cloth and leather	50
112.	Full leather
113.	Gilt edges 1	25
	Flexible, leather 1
THE	INSTRUCTOR, A compendium of the faith and doctrines of the church by Elder
	G. T. Griffiths.
126.	Cloth	75
127.	Leather	L 00
128.	Flexible	1 50
GOSP	EL QUARTERLIES.
	Published by the General
	Sunday School Association.
	Designed for use in Sabbath school work. Issued quarterly.	3
73.	Senior Grade, per quarter	. 08
	Per year, in advance	25
74.
	ter	05
	Per year	15
75.	Primary Grade, per quarter	05
	Per year	15
	2 or year

R(OK	OF MORMON. Large type
		edition.
	92.	Cloth, leather backs and corners
	93.	Seal grain russia, gilt edges	2	00
	109.	Flexible, gilt edges	4	00
٧a	TATE	* * * * * ****************************
) P	111/1	'S' HARMONY. Music only.	41	۸۸
•	LU1.	Cloth, leather backs	1	UU
T.T	יישיי	NSES, NOTICES, ETC.
Shell A	175	Elders, per dozen		12
	176	Priests, per dozen		12
	177	Teachers, per dozen		12
	165	Deacons, per dozen		12
		Blank preaching notices, per		7.64
	a	hundred		50
	167.	Certificates of baptism and		- membership, per dozen		12
-	168.	Baptism and confirmation		21.10
		certificate books with stubs		25
	169.	Letters of removal, per dozen,		12
	170.	Marriage certificates, per
		dozen		25
	171.	Ministry and branch cards, with name and address, or place of worship and hours of service on face, and Epitome, or What we Believe, on reverse side, 23x45 inches, 250	1	00
14	172.	Branch statistical reports, per
		dozen		40

HOMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in DeKalb county. Missouri, four miles from Amity, and five miles from Clarksdale; near line of Rock I-land rathroad and switch station, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchaser. Terms reasonable. Address, J.O. SOUTHARD, Mgr., Amity, Missouri, or CHARLES P. FAUL, Clarksdale, Missouri,

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good ph tograph, and get 25 stame photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 ligh photo button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents; extra buttons 10 cents; extra buttons 10 cents; extra buttons processed buttons for ploture 20 cents. Your photograph will be returned Send silver.

W. M. KECK Photographer, 49-13t

DR. E. S. SWEET, DENTIST.

Decoe Building,

WOODBINE,

IOWA.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a.m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a. m.

Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C. B. & Q. at Leon.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chi-cago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road Leaving Lamoni at 8:08

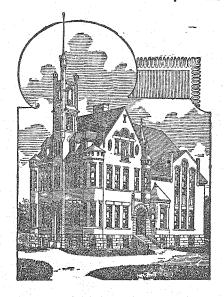

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning.

GRACELAND....

GOLLEGE.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Telephone 71

For catalogue or further information, address, PROF. R. A. HARKNESS, President, or I. W. ALLENDER, Secretary,

LAMONI, DECATUB Co., IOWA

THE SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord; for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 9, 1901.

NO. 2.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - EDITOR.

FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR.

JOSEPH LUFF
D. W. WIGHT

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, JAN. 9, 1901.

THE "PASSING OF HELL."

It would still seem that truth has opportunity for its advancement.
Our genial brother, Hiram Dickhout,

Our genial brother, Hiram Dickhout, living at Hamilton, Ontario, believes in letting people know where the truth may be found. So, also, does Bro. Alma C. Barmore, like Alma of Book of Mormon times. Through the former, the latter-named brother is at Hamilton engaged in a month's efforts in Queen's hall, with small but increasing audiences, and hopes for the work.

As if to aid Bro. Barmore, the Morning Post had an editorial upon the topic of the caption given above, which we insert for the benefit of the thoughts given in two replies, one of them by Bro. Barmore.

PASSING OF THE BELIEF IN HELL.

An American paper remarks that among the things which the closing century is leaving behind it, not the least important is the belief in eternal punishment. We are seeing belief in eternal punishment. today, it says, the passing of the belief in hell. It is true, it still lingers in remote parts of the country, but in the great centers it has virtually disappeared. This could hardly be said so broadly of Canada, we imagine; but still, one of the most noticeable of the many changes in Canadian theological thought and popular belief is the retirement into the background of this old-time doctrine. One does not need to be very old to remember the day when it occupied the forefront, when indeed no sermon was complete without a lurid picture of the never-ending tortures of the lost. We do not refer to med æval days when some were wont to say that one of the chiefest joys of the saved would be to behold the sufferings of the lost, but to twenty-five years ago when the belief in hell was a real thing to the great mass of the people of this country. It is not a real thing to them now. They hear few, if any, references to it from the pulpit; it is fading away upon the hori-zon of the past. We venture to say that in gon of the past. We venture to say that in the majority of city churches no direct insistence upon the doctrine is made from one year's end to another. Many things have tended to bring about the change; for example, the general growth of religious doubt; the shaken confidence in the literal interpretation of the Scriptures, resulting from the attacks of the Higher Criticism; but chiefly the feeling that an all-good God would not condenm his creatures to eternal tor-ments. To the average man it is idle to ments. To the average man it is idle to speak about God's justice, the necessity of eternal punishment in order to vindicate that justice, the depravity of human nature, and so on. He comes back to the question which he ever asks himself: Would an earthly father treat his children thus? This may be illogical, it may be untheological, but it is the way in which the ordinary man reasons, with the result that he no longer accepts the doctrine. He is willing to acknowledge that there may be future punishment of some kind for a certain time, but that his punishment will be never-ending and with no hope of escape, he does not believe. Dante's words, "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here," have no longer any real meaning to him. What effect this change of belief shall have on men's moral conduct is yet to be seen. Whether it shall cause a loosening of moral obligations, or whether it shall produce a higher and nobler conception of God and duty, this is a problem time alone can solve. In the meantime, as the American paper puts it, "We are witnessing the passing of the belief in hell."

THE PASSING OF HELL.

Editor Morning Post, Sir:—The Post deserves praise for its occasional editorials on the religious side of life. We wish from our daily papers light on life as it is affected by the city council, the market, the race course, the theater, and all other happenings. But we desire also to see the discussions of changes in the religious temper, and of their effect on life. Such changes of temper and temperatures in the mental atmosphere are current events, and that they are potent factors in moulding the destiny of our people may be seen in the present marked change in the moral value of war, and the warlike spirit. There is a general demand for information on and discussion of these deeper currents, and the best journalists in Britain, the United States, and Canada are recognizing this demand and supplying it. The Post, therefore, in handling these themes is in running with the foremost.

The editorial in last Monday's issue dealing with the change in our view of hell, and with its probable moral effect, is an illustration of what I mean. In reference to it may I be permitted a word of approval and a word of criticism. Without doubt, as the article points out, the popular sense and the consequences of a life of sin is vastly different from what it was at the beginning of the cen-Leaving theories aside, the dread, or of a literal fire is going or gone. The sense of a literal fire is going or gone. The idea, too, of the eternal duration is losing its And hope, even, is not entirely absent. Whether this changed attitude to the future is the result of a true or a false instinct, the fact of it cannot be questioned. It is, too, a potent fact on the lip of the community and fraught with vast issues, and journalists are but skimming the surface of current events if they fail to mark it and to discuss its effects. Does the departure of the fear mean coming lawlessness, or does it mean the coming of a spirit which will fulfill the law?

But while the editorial in question called

But while the editorial in question called attention to an important fact—a fact which must be taken account of by those who have a serious interest in the arrest of crime—I think its title and general impressions are misleading and convey a meaning not intended by the writer. The impression it leaves is expressed in the title, "The Passing of the Belief in Hell." But the changing of our belief about hell is a very different thing from the passing of that belief. The belief is not passing. Indeed, allowing for the change in our point of view, there never was a clearer vision or a purer sense of the misery that dogs the heels of the evil-doer than in the last half of this century. This century has brought home to us that the inevitable result of violated law is misery or privation, and that the only escape from the misery is through obedience. Instead of studying hell by trying to peer through the fogs which lie between us and the shore of the great beyond, we study it as we find it on earth. And probably, when all has been said, hell on earth is our best object lesson of hell beyond the earth. The law of continuity brings home the impression that, in essence, the two are one; that they are but the different stages in the "valley dolorous" into which men enter when the "straightforward pathway they have lost." Our feeling that the two are one makes us feel as certain as we can be about anything in this realm that the result of violated law will be the same in both. Since then our sense of the inevitable misery of disobedience here is keener than ever, we may be sure that our sense of it, then, is not passing.

But I cannot close without a word pointing toward the light. While it is true that the wars of sin, which are the wars of hell, were never, on account of the increase of compassion, more felt than now, it is also true that those who are enduring them were never more felt for, or had more strong arms, clear heads, and loving hearts at work for their deliverance. Love does not despair. And while we feel the woes of humanity more deeply than ever, we have more hope than ever for humanity. Is not this hope which expects through obedience to law to triumph over misery born from above?

J. M.

THE PASSING HELL.

Editor Morning Post, Sir:—The letter under the above caption in the Post of the 10th inst., with your comments, challenged the writer's attention, and a few thoughts are penned in response to your request. There has, without doubt, been a great change in the public mind of recent years relative to the place and duration of future punishment. It is not, however, safe to say the belief in hell has passed or is passing away. On the contrary, the most earnest and diligent Christian people still believe in the existence of that place, but their belief has undergone and in some instances is now undergoing a change. They cannot, and will not relinquish that belief in an absolute sense so long as they retain their faith in the Holy Scriptures, for it is evidently based upon the Bible. However, since every divine principle and institution has in some one's hands undergone a perversion, this subject is no exception to the rule. That which God has said can be relied upon in its original form, for it is the What man production of infinite wisdom. originates, since he is finite, is susceptible to improvement, and may by various modifica-tions at last reach a condition of at least relative perfection. We hail the present be-lief in regard to hell not as a human patent or copyright, as it were, but as a return to or copyright, to the original.

Why this change? Was it caused by moral degeneration? Does it prove complicity with the transgressor? Certainly not. The best of people still believe in the administration of justice. They don't think it should be robbed by mercy or judicial carelessness or wickedness. They still believe in legal punishment, but deprecate lynching or any other form of illegal or violent treatment. As one point in evidence we refer to the decrease in the death penalty. The crimes for which it is prescribed are much less numerous than formerly. this change? Evidently because of a growing disposition to look upon punishment as a means having in view the benefit of the culprit. This idea is in harmony with the Bible when properly interpreted. See Hebrews 12:9, 10; Lamentations 2:31-34. It also recognizes a difference in sin or crime. It does not, therefore, follow that punishment hereafter means that all must suffer to the same degree or length of time. However, the Bible, like the law of the land, teaches capital punishment. Jesus says there is a sin which can never be forgiven. It must, therefore, receive the maximum of punishment under divine law. We call this "capital punishment" to illustrate, but it doesn't end existence, although written of as "the second death." This sin he calls "the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost." It is the same as that which John represents as a "sin unto death." Of the guilty person Jesus says, "He hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation." From this we conclude that all who do not commit this sin will have forgiveness and are not in danger of eternal damnation. All other sins will either be [for] given or an adequate punishment be suffered and the individual then be permitted a reward of merit. This reward will exhibit variety as Paul teaches in 1 Corinthians 15:41, 42. "The glory of the sun" represents those who have been fully obedient in this life.

For a further description of the unpardonable sin please read Matthew 12: 31, 32; Mark 3: 28, 29; Hebrews 6: 4-6; 10: 26-29; 2 Peter 2: 15, 20-22, and 1 John 5: 16.

The doctrine of hell as formerly believed was the product of theological domination. and was employed to hold those who might otherwise break the fetters of their creed. It was born through desire to impel obedience by fear. As love prompts obedience, and the principle that "the goodness of God leads to repentance," obtains, it passes away. This improvement, strange as it may seem, has not always received the support of the churches. In some cases they have by necessity adapted themselves to it, and in a few instances not that as yet.

This doctrine originated during one of the darkest periods of the world's history, and was used to stop discussion and awe the heretic. There can be no doubt that within a few centuries after Christ the Christian system underwent a considerable change. Darkness prevailed and became to quite an extent, "the mother of devotion."

This condition, as is always the case, came on with a unified people. Unity is a good thing if the right kind, otherwise it isn't. Periods of discussion and degeneration are never contemporaneous. Men have gone into the maze and meshes of darkness with Men have gone one idea, accompanied by meek, tame, timid submission to authority. "The horrors of the damned" were graphically depicted to bring about this condition. Then when the reformation began it required as much more discussion as was required to fill up the years it had been neglected. Not only discussion, but violence and bloodshed. All this aug-mented the doctrine of hell. The reformers didn't reform in this respect, but each church seemed to retaliate by warning its enemies concerning its dangers, and in some cases were too anxious to await the judgments of eternity, so instituted miniature hells here. Consequently human beings were martyred at the stake. Why do so? If God is going at the stake. Why do so? If God is going to punish his enemies in livid flames of literal fire hereafter, why can't his people give them a foretaste here. Thus they may have reasoned.

There seems to have been a two-fold awakening in the commencement of the sixteenth century. The human race began to emerge from the old world of geography and theology into a new. And just as there began with the discovery of the new world a period of discovery and conquest, so there began (peculiar co-incidence) a siege of religious discussion and subjugation. The former was accompanied and enforced by munitions of war, the latter by intoleration and implements of persecution. The Indian war wixoop was heard and the tomahawk brandished along with the rattle of the musketry of contending powers.
While the existence of God is not the product of human imagination, yet it cannot be denied that his attributes are colored thereby. If men are warlike, revengeful, and vindictive, so also is God according to their representation. The Lord varies somewhat, then, according to whether they are at peace or in war. The red man's war cry has now died out, the question of ownership has been settled, and the periods of peaceable rational occupancy long since began. So also violent persecution is no more, bitter contentions have ceased, and the terrors of hell are no longer heard, for we are now within the period of religious occupancy. So may it remain. However, we appear to be nearing social, religious, and national upheavals again when some or all of these contending and destructive agencies may be called out.

The writer will thoroughly discuss this subject Sunday, the 16th inst, at 3: 30 and 7 p. m., at Queen's hall, corner Hannah and Queen streets.

A. C. BARMORE.

The publicity created by this discussion secured the following nice editorial notice of the work of Bro. Barmore and the local brethren:-

THEY ARE NOT MORMONS.

Yesterday the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints began a month's siege of Hamilton. Sunday afternoon and evening A. C. Barmore, of California, spoke in Queen's hall, corner Queen and Hannah streets, to a small audience. The meetings will be continued each evening for a month or so.

From their epitome of the faith and doctrines are learned some of their beliefs. They believe that men will be punished for their own sins, not for the transgressions of Adam, that through the atonement of Christ all men may be saved by obedience. recognize the gospel's laws and ordinances faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, laying on of hands for the receiving of the Holy Ghost, resurrection, and eternal judgment. They also be-lieve the canons of Scripture are incomplete, but that God through his Spirit will continue to reveal his word to man until the end of time, and that men may receive the gifts of faith, discerning of spirits, prophecy, revelation, healing, visions, tongues, interpretation of tongues, wisdom, charity, and brotherly love. They, too, look for Christ's personal Touching marriage, they believe it or-dained of God, and that man should have but one companion in wedlock. A paragraph from their pamphlet says:-

This church is in no sense connected with Salt Lake Mormons, who are improperly called Latter Day Saints. Polygamy never was, nor ever can be, a doctrine or practice among those who follow the teachings of Christ and the Holy Spirit, Polygamy originated with the leaders of the Utah church; and that church has "departed from the faith" of the pure grantle water as touch by faith" of the pure gospel system as taught by the Church of Christ; both of former and latter days; and the Utah church has clearly fulfilled the prophecy of Paul.

INSURANCE, SECRET SOCIETIES, ETC.

We have lately had quite a run of articles on the subject of insurance, beneficiary societies, secret societies. and such like; quite enough, we think. for the importance of the subject.

So far, the church has not assumed to legislate upon the various phases of conduct open to individual examination and decision, including the questions of insurance, neither in the ordinary insurance companies of the time, or by uniting with the various beneficiary societies, the articles of association of which provide for stipends for members disabled from work by accident or sickness, and a sum in reversion to the family in case of death.

It is understood by all that the church believes and teaches that every man is to be judged for himself, is responsible to God for his own acts, and is to answer for the use of his life. his talents of brain and muscle, and must stand or fall upon the exercise of his own judgment in personal conduct in all things. The attitude of the church is largely advisory, cannot be dictatorial, as both the law of the Lord and the land forbid the church to exercise any power over its members by which they are put in jeopardy of life, person, or property.

From what has been written, we think that anyone who chooses to read and reflect may draw such conclusions as will put them into the ways of duty in regard to their own cause of conduct in the premises.

We insert one other letter on the topic from a brother in England, and will there drop the subject for other and more vital topics.

CLOCK WATCHERS.

In an address to the students of a business college in Philadelphia, not long ago, Ex-President Grover Cleveland made the following pithy point against "time servers." We commend the reading of it to every reader of the HERALD, for its force and truth-

I must not longer delay reference to one of the most vicious errors that can by any possibility gain a lodgment in the mind of anyone who has set out to make a fight for the living which the world owes us all. I mean the notion that if the daily allotted task is done, and if the exact time prescribed for daily la-bor is spent in work, every duty that can profitably be discharged has been met and every advantage that can follow faithful service has been gained. It may be true that all has been done which under the strict terms of an agreement for service can be required; and even if this has been done in a perfunctory and listless spirit by those who are punctual at the morning hour, and who diligently watch the clock for the closing hour of work, they will probably avoid charges of inefficiency, and may not deserve reproof; but when a chance opens for promotion and betterment of prospects, they are quite likely to see these rewards pass to those who with less adventitious surroundings have occasionally, at least, begun labor a little before the morning hour, and who have not only during the day shown an interest and enthusiasm in their tasks, but have even been detected at work after the clock has struck the quitting hour. It is a dreadful mistake to suppose that a little extra effort in favor of the work in hand and in the interest of an employer passes unnoticed, or that it will remain unrewarded. The neglect of such effort may, therefore, be a serious hindrance to present advancement; besides breeding habits and methods of business which, if the field of independent activity and competition is ever reached, will prove a handicap to success .-Iowa State Capital.

LET US GO BACK TO PRIMITIVE METHODS.

Rev. Marquis, of Detroit, at a union service held at St. Paul's Episcopal church, November 29, last, is reported to have said:-

THE MISSIONARY OF TODAY.

"The fact is that within the last fifteen hundred years the borders of Christendom have been enlarged, mainly through conquest and colonization. Since the nations of Europe were won for the church no nation or people of any consequence has been won for it.

"In view of these facts I maintain that the church must return to the missionary policy of the first three centuries. First of all, the missionary of today must go forth, as did the missionaries of those days, as a citizen of the kingdom of Christ. The early Christian had no state to appeal to. He pointed to no civilization as the product of his religion. He boasted not of the wealth, the military power, the material progress of the nations which had accepted his religion. He had no gunboats and armies to call upon when death awaited him in the arena, or at the stake, or by the sword. So must the missionary of to-day go forth. Let him forego his citizenship in this or that country and, as a citizen of the kingdom of Christ, identify himself with those to whom he preaches. What can they do for China who go about wrapped in the flags of those nations which at the point of the sword and at the cannon's mouth, have taken her territory and demanded her com-What can he do for China who goes as a citizen of that state which by force of arms fixed the opium curse upon the people he would convert? Let the missionary, if he hopes to be effective in God's hands, renounce these relations and say with St. Paul, the greatest missionary of the church, 'Our citizenship is in heaven."

Rather a sweeping confession of the futility of the modern method of church propagandism. Will the church for whom Rev. Marquis was talking heed his speech? Verily, nay.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Sr. Floralice Miller, of Dunnville, Ontario, January 1, says that Bro. MacDonald, of Sherbrooke, reports that Bro. Tomlinson had done a good work at Sherbrooke and at Low Banks. A great deal of prejudice of long standing was removed. He also baptized three of Bro. MacDonald's children. The Saints were cheered and good was done among them by Bro. Tomlinson's visit.

Bro. Charles H. Lake, who came west to take a situation in Business Manager John Smith's department at years in the employ of the Office Bank and Library Company, of Boston, and upon severing his connection with that firm received an excellent letter of commendation from F. B. Ingraham, the Treasurer of the company, for faithfulness to duty and devotion to the interests of his employers. There is nothing which commends a man to his fellows in business relations like devoted carefulness and faithfulness

Bro. and Sr. Sundeen, of Minne-apolis, have the honor of being the parents of the first child born in that city of 200,000 population at the opening of the twentieth century. The Minneapolis Journal is advertising for a name for the babe, which is a girl.

In the holiday season, the assistant editor and wife spent a very pleasant week in St. Louis, at the home of Bro. and Sr. F. H. Johnson. It was a very agreeable rest from the routine of office work, and we feel that we were benefited by our visit. We were glad to meet with the Saints of that place, and worship with them in their neat little church building which their energy has procured. The St. Louis Saints certainly deserve great credit for the successful efforts made to get such a pleasant gathering place as is the "Rock" church building. Our St. Louis friends treated us so nicely that we shall surely take advantage of the next opportunity to visit with them again.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE REORGANIZATION.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS. OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

[Correction:-In this article, Herald for January I, 1901, page 4, column 1, the 21st line should read, "I was born February 20, 1835."]

Suffice it to say, my brother soon came home. We were all pleased to see him. We could not see any difference in his appearance, and I do not remember that there was any reference made to his religion by the family until he held some meetings in our district schoolhouse. He held three meetings. He quoted the Bible readily and it seemed to me that he knew it all by heart. His quotations were not long, but from every part of the Bible.

The knowledge that I had gained from my mother's oft-repeated Bible stories now seemed to give me an understanding of his sermons that I had never realized while hearing others preach; but the peculiar application of each passage was so different from the HERALD office, has been for four anything I had before heard, that I was disappointed and displeased with the three discourses.

On the way home from the third meeting, my brother said to me: "How do you like my doctrine?" I suppose he had noticed my strict attention to what he had said.

I unhesitatingly replied, "I do not like it."

He continued, "Why not?"

I replied: "According to your doctrine the gospel of Christ has not been preached for eighteen hundred years, or since the death of the apostles, and all of our fathers and uncles (and some of them were preachers) are lost and gone to hell.'

He replied: "They never heard this doctrine, did they?"

I quickly answered, "No."

He then said: "The Bible says where there is no law there is no transgression, for sin is the transgression of the law."

I then said: "The Apostle Paul says the gospel is the power of God unto salvation; and if they never heard it, they are lost; and it does not look reasonable that God would permit the whole world to be lost until Joe Smith came along with the gospel as you explain it."

He replied: "I have not explained it; I have only quoted the language of the Bible."

"But," I continued, "you have just quoted a verse here and a verse there in the Bible. Had you read the whole chapter I guess you would have found it to mean differently from what you make out of it."

He then continued: "Admitting that I have given the true light on the subject, our forefathers have not heard the gospel, have they?"

I answered. "No:" and I remember I felt a little irritated at such a thought.

He then continued: "Admitting I have given the right light on the Scriptures, you remember Christ said, 'In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also.' As much as to say there were other places in the Father's house, not in hell, for those who had not heard the gospel he was then preaching."

And again he said: "You remember it is written, 'There is a celestial glory, a terrestrial glory, and a glory of the stars; and as one star differs from another in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead; but every man in his own order. There is a first and a second resurrection, and every man is to be judged according to the deeds done in the body, and rewarded according to his works, whether they be good or evil."

As my brother made these quotations, a flood of light seemed to burst in upon the sacred pages as I never saw before, and I was converted in my innermost soul to Christ. His whole life of sacrifice to save the human family seemed to be spread out before me. My brother continued:-

"For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord of both the dead and living. 'Being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison,' 'that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.'

As he gave these quotations, my soul was enraptured with joy and love to God, for I could see and realize as I could never see before, how "his mercy endureth forever," and that all the sons and daughters of Adam's race would indeed hear the gospel of Christ in purity, and obey it. For "no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby,' "that we might be partakers of his holiness."

The manifestation I had already had, that punishment was permitted to come on the wicked to bring about a reformation, and that when they cease to do evil and learn to do well they would indeed be saved, though they had died in sin, that the arm of the Lord was not shortened that it could not save; and my soul was lit up with the glory of God, my Savior. A calm, serene sensation pervaded my mind, and I heard these words; "You will yet receive this gospel, be baptized, and ordained an elder, and preach it to your fellow men." How these words came to me, or who spoke them, I did not know; but they were so impressed upon me that they have ever been as fresh to my mind as though just spoken.

The Bible was now a new book to me, and many things so obscure before were now plain. The scure before were now plain. church and kingdom of God had suffered violence from the days of John, and had been taken by force, and was now reestablished by the angel flying through the heavens with the everlasting gospel, to preach to them that dwell on earth, to every nation, tongue, and people. (Rev. 14: 5, 6.)

I soon learned that the word Mormon was not the name of a people, but of a book. And the enemies of Mr. Smith, through prejudice against him, were persecuting him and the Latter Day Saints because they believed the gospel of Christ just as it was preached eighteen hundred years before.

There is another incident I will now mention in my early experience. turn father reported that on the way church.

One evening father came home from Beloit, and as we sat down to supper he said: "Jason, some of the friends at Beloit sent word for you to come down and preach in the Methodist church."

Jason replied, very quietly, "All right. Give out an appointment and I will go down."

Father smiled, but none of us said a word about it. After we had gone to bed I heard father say to mother.

"What does the boy mean? Does he really mean he will go and preach in the church at Beloit?"

Mother said, "I do not know, I am sure."

The next morning father was going to town, and I now remember very distinctly how perplexed he looked as he took up the lines to start. Looking up, he called to Jason, who was then in the house. When Jason came to the door, father said:-

"Do you really mean that you will preach in Beloit if the friends there make an appointment for you?"
"Yes. Why not?"

The appointment was made. My brothers were getting out fencing for father, and worked as usual every day. The second evening before the appointment came, father asked mother if she had seen Jason writing his sermon. She had not.

"What does the boy mean?" said father. "I guess I will tell him he need not work tomorrow."

The next morning, while we were around the breakfast table, he told Jason he need not work that day, for he was in no hurry for the fencing. But Jason replied, "I'd just as leave work, and I am in a hurry to get through," and so went to work as

The evening finally came for the meeting, and Jason asked father how he was going to town. Father replied, "Are you going to town?"

Jason answered, "Is not this the evening of our appointment for meeting?"

Father smiled and said, "I will take you," and mother went along.

After they had returned, and had retired they talked over his sermon, and expressed surprise at his information of the Bible; so father concluded to take him up to Aztaland, and on the way call on Elder Ostrander, a Methodist minister, and visit Elder Merriam also, and see if they could not bring the boy around all right again.

Silas was still living there on the old farm near Aztaland, but we had moved forty miles south, near Beloit. and were living on a new place. Father was not going to tell Jason the object of the visit. The journey and visit were made; and on their re-they called upon Elder Ostrander, and just before they went into the house he said to the Elder:-

"My boy has come home a Mormon, and I have brought him up here to have you show him his error."

"Oh! that is all right, Bro. Briggs; that will be an easy job."

And Father related: "When we went into the house they were soon busy in conversation. Jason quoted the Bible, answered every question, and seemed to understand the whole Bible. Bro. Ostrander could not do anything with him. After dinner we talked about two hours, and Elder Ostrander arose and went out doors. I followed him. I saw he was bothered, and so was I; and just as we got out doors Elder Ostrander turned around to me and said: "Bro. Briggs, we can do nothing with your son. only thing that can be done is to hop on old Jo Smith.' I replied, 'My! you must not do that.'

"When we got up to Aztaland the ministers there could do nothing with him, and became angry. Jason had the Bible on his tongue's end. My! I do not see when the boy learned it!"

I could see father was disturbed about my brother, and disgusted with the manner in which he was used by the ministry. He thought he ought to be met with Bible arguments instead of scandalous stories about Mr.

As time passed on I became more and more interested in the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints. The Times and Seasons, a monthly published at Nauvoo, Illinois, was a welcome visitor at our house. I could not read much in it, but mother, sister, and brother Edwin read it, and I was very anxious to hear it all read when it came.

In the winter of 1842-43, mother went to the state of New York on a visit. The most I remember of that winter was that sister kept house. It was a long, lonesome winter, and we were all very anxious for mother's return. Spring came, and finally mother and little brother, who could now talk and run alone, returned. Mother told us of meeting with the Millerites; they had said she would never see her family again, for the world would be destroyed before the lakes opened in the spring. She replied to them she knew better, for Jerusalem had not been built up yet, and the Jews gathered back to their own land; and that Christ would appear there on the Mount of Olives; that just as he went up in sight of his disciples as they gazed up into heaven when he ascended, so should he in like manner descend again. She also told us she had been baptized on her way out at Waukesha in the fall by Elder Babcock. That was the first that we knew she had joined the It was this year, 1843, the revivalist, Elder Knapp, was at our house the last time, and soon after went to Chicago, attended the Baptist conference, became concerned about baptism, and to quiet his conscience was there immersed and joined the Baptist Church. Soon after this, while in the harvest field, my father's remarks about it were:—

"Elder Knapp has been a Methodist all his life, has preached until he is an old man, and has just found out he has not been baptized, and that sprinkling is not baptism," and said, "Boys, before you undertake to jump a stream, be sure you can light on the other shore, lest you may fall in the water;" that is, be sure you are right before you join any church. And then he continued: "I understand a man may be a gentleman and a moral man, yet not a Christian. But no man can be a Christian that is not a gentleman. Christianity commences where a gentleman and moralist stops.'

These remarks led me to decide that I would not hastily join any church, but be careful and watch all churches, and accept none that did not have the form of doctrine, claim the power, and have the organization of the church just as the New Testament said it was during the apostles' times: and when I was twelve years old I would get permission of my parents to visit some of our relatives, and while gone from home, go to Nauvoo, see Mr. Smith, and if I became fully satisfied I ought to be baptized, I would join the Latter Day Saints. The history of Joseph Smith and the persecution of the Saints in Kirtland, Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois, were being published then, and I was very much interested in it.

Sometime during the spring of 1843, I heard father tell of some strange things he had seen where some one had been mesmerized and was completely under the control of the one who mesmerized him. made a very strong impression on my mind for days, and in the fall of 1843 my brothers, Silas and Jason, and cousin, Almon White, came to our house on their way to Nauvoo to attend conference. The night before they were to start I requested Jason to ask Mr. Smith what mesmerism is. He promised to do so, and next morning, when they were all ready to leave, I renewed my request. When When he came back, the first question I asked him was, "What did Joseph Smith say about mesmerism?"

He replied: "I asked Joseph the question. He answered, 'It is the power that spirits of men in tabernacles under clairvoyant influence may wield over each other.' Said it was a similar power as that of lying spirits, foul spirits, called devils in the days of Christ, only the one which is of men cannot have so much power over others in the flesh; disembodied spirits can have much more power, and are the means by which devils would work miracles in the last days to deceive if possible the very elect, and the Saints ought not to have anything to do with it."

This was some satisfaction to me, yet I could not comprehend devils working miracles. And all those in stances so frequently mentioned in the Bible of devils, foul spirits, unclean spirits, were inexplicable mysteries. I could not say I believed there were any such things as evil spirits, or that they could do anything among men.

In the winter of 1843-44, I had become fully satisfied that Smith was a prophet of God. Mother had read to us the Voice of Warning, a pamphlet published by Elder P. P. Pratt, which was explicit and vigorous in its defense of the gospel of Christ, and the government and kingdom of God as understood by the prophets and apos-

I became satisfied the unscrupulous stories circulated against Joseph Smith and the Latter Day Saints were false, and I soon found out that many who were the authors of the slanders circulated against the Saints were ministers who narrated them in their meetings in order to prejudice the people against hearing the Latter Day Saint elders preach. I was full of expectation in the triumph of the church, though persecution raged everywhere against it, and Mr. Smith's life was often threatened. But the idea that he could or would be killed was never entertained by me for a moment. I was full of hope, and joyous in the blessed truth of the gospel restored again, as in the days of old, and for the ministration of angels. In fact, I was not ashamed of the gospel, nor cared if others called me a "Mormon," because I believed the gospel, and my people were members of the church that others called "Mormons." All was brightness and happiness to me, for I now loved God with a better understanding than I ever did before. I believed God was a real person and lived in heaven. I believed Jesus Christ also to be a real person in the exact image of his father's person, who had ascended to heaven, there to remain until he came again in person to dwell on the earth with his Saints a thousand years; and that the Holy Ghost is also a person of power and intelligence, not in the person of God or man, but is a substance everywhere present, capable of manifesting itself in the form of a dove, in a dream or vision, revelations and miracles, is everywhere present to bestow blessings upon all those who are worthy to receive them; in a word, is the means or power by which sight.

Jesus Christ cast out devils, and needed not that any man should tell him what was in man, for the Holy Ghost was given him without measure. It was the power by which the disciples spoke the wonderful things of God to so many different nationalities on the day of Pentecost; and the power by which Christ was raised from the dead, and the same power by which all men will ultimately be raised from the dead, some to the better resurrection and celestial glory, and others to lesser glories, but every man in his own order; some in the first resurrection; others, not so worthy, in the last resurrection. And all to immortality, honor, and glory, for they cannot die any more, being equal to the angels and children of God.

With all these bright thoughts before me in my tenth year, I rejoiced indeed that I had found the kingdom of God on earth, and that God was no respecter of persons; that faith comes today through hearing the gospel preached just the same as it did eighteen centuries ago, and that miracles followed those who believed now as then. I felt to praise his holy name in my inmost soul.

But, says one, you were too young then to have and appreciate such experiences as these.

I do not say I could so well express them then, but I had all these general thoughts then, and as I now write, am only able to express them better and more fully as they come to my mind, and they are true as I expect to stand in the judgment to answer for what I write.

One bright, beautiful day in July, we had all been to dinner except my brother Edwin. He had been to Beloit. Upon my entering the dining room he was sitting on the lounge reading a newspaper, awaiting preparation for his lunch, and read the account of the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the "Mormon" prophet and his brother, at Carthage, Illinois, by an infuriated mob. As he read the account, a strange power, such as I never experienced before, rested on me. It seemed to rest on my head first and pass down through my whole body, and was repeated three times in the same manner. I was transfixed so I could not move, and was lost to all sensibility and consciousness of everything I ever did or thought of, but realized I stood in the room, mother and brother present. And then I saw a marble statue of a person, and while I looked at it I wondered what it meant. And a voice, a little back of me and to the right, said (and I seemed to be conscious that some person stood there), "You are compared to that statue," and it passed away, or in other words, out of my And immediately I saw a beautiful hand, it seemed almost transparent, extended out towards me, and a pointed, flowing white sleeve hung from the wrist. As I looked at it, I noticed that between the thumb and index finger it held a spotless sheet of paper. The under leaf hung down a little lower than the other, and I could see between them; and as I gazed I wondered what it meant, and the same voice said, "You are compared to that sheet of paper;" and as it passed from my sight, a serene, calm, peaceful sensation pervaded my mind and all around me. And then I heard a voice just in front of me and over my head say, "Joseph, the son of Joseph. is the prophet of the church." Then I was conscious of the fact, or seemed to realize, that the prophet, Joseph Smith, was dead, and his son would take his place in the church.

As I came to my normal condition again I did not seem to realize that anything unnatural had occurred, only a sad conviction left on my mind that the prophet had been killed, and a real anxiety about his little son Joseph taking his father's place. I remember that Jason said at first he did not believe the story of the assassination; but I did, and we waited with great anxiety for the paper published at Nauvoo, expecting it would confirm the news of his death, and I fully expected the same paper would announce that little Joseph, his son, had taken his place. Some days, and it seemed weeks, passed before it came; and when it came all dressed in black, I asked mother what it meant. She said it was draped in mourning. I then knew our worst fears were to be realized; but my surprise was great when it did not say a word about little Joseph taking his father's place; and in fact, I thought the paper showed that the church did not know who would. My vision in open day and the voice, "Joseph, the son of Joseph, is the prophet of the church," was vivid before my mind, and I thought, Was I deceived? Was that a manifestation from God? And if so, why did it not come to pass? Or, was it from the Devil?

I confess I was much troubled in my mind, but yet hoped something would develop soon to relieve my distress of mind. The thought came to me that Joseph was a little boy. How could he be the prophet to the church? Samuel, I remembered, was a prophet when but a child, and received the word of the Lord. While all these things were perplexing me, the Times and Seasons came again and again, and finally it was published that the Twelve claimed to be the leaders of the church, and with the announcement that Joseph stands in his own place behind the vail, and let not another presume to take his place, for making rather awkward gestures he stands in his own place and always will.

Many claimants to the leadership of the church had arisen. James J. Strang claimed to be the successor of Joseph by a letter of appointment. James Colin Brewster, Gladden Bishop, and others followed with their claims to be leaders and prophets to the church, until confusion reigned complete, it seemed, in the church.

While I was in this state of mind, I had a vision, but I cannot now remember the circumstances I was in when I had it. In the vision I stood north of the city of Nauvoo, Illinois, and saw the woods and prairie north and northeast of the city, with scattering houses in the timber, on the hill, and down the sloping plain to the low land along the river. While I viewed the city I saw a thin mist like crape, descending from the northeast of the city. It settled down on the trees first, but did not stop its course until it settled down closely over all the city; and while I stood wondering in my mind what it was, a voice near by, to the right and a little back of me, said, "It is the spirit of whoredom, and it will be poured out upon the church first, and then it will be poured out upon the whole world." And immediately I stood in a room. A fireplace was in the west end. The door and door casings were made of heavy lumber, very nicely finished and polished. The window casings, mantelpiece, and baseboards were of the same material, and resembled black walnut lumber; and while noticing the fine workmanship, I saw two women near the east end of the room. They were clothed in nicely fitting black, and wore bonnets fastened like the shaker, tied close under the chin. They walked side by side as though they took hold of each other's arms, but yet they did not. Each was in tears, crying and wringing her hands as if in distress, and one of them said, "Is that so?" They walked toward the fireplace, and again one of them spoke out in her sobs as though her heart would break, "My God! is that so?" By this time I was much moved by sympathy for them, and I exclaimed, "My God! what does this mean?" And again one of them said, "If it was not for the future, I would not do it." I then seemed to understand that they were being taught something repugnant to their feelings that caused them great sorrow and anguish of heart as they sobbed and wrung their hands and slowly walked toward the fireplace. And immediately I saw two Mormon elders following these women. They, too, walked side by side, and their raiment was fine broadcloth in shining luster. They were gleefully talking together, with their hands. I then noticed the contrast between the women and the men. The first were in agony of soul; the others in a mood of laughing indifference, full of glee. The first in plain, dead black; the others in fine broadcloth. And while I gazed at them with wonder and astonishment, again one of the women exclaimed, "My God, is it so!" And I repeated in the anguish or my heart, "What does this mean!" And a person I had not noticed before seemed to stand at my right and said, "They are being taught whoredom under a new name to take away the reproach, and whoredom sits a queen over all manner of corruption." And immediately after corruption." And immediately after I saw a pail of blood splash on the floor just behind the men, and the person standing at my right passed behind me, went up to them, took hold of one of their coat collars, showed me the seams of the collar. then took hold of one of the sleeves and pointed to the seams of the sleeves, then took hold of the skirt and showed me all the seams of the coat, and around the skirts, and every seam was lined with blood, and he then said, "That is murder, and murder is the sister of the queen; and the queen and her sister sit and preside over all manner of corruption that flesh is heir to."

This vision troubled me for days. I could not understand it; did not even know the meaning of the words. Sometimes I thought I would ask my mother what they meant, but I was afraid to ask her. I thought it was some horrible thing that was being taught those women. And while meditating over the matter in the latter part of the summer of '44, I resolved to go and ask my mother the meaning of the words used by the person in my vision, but when I got near the house a voice said to me, 'It was the besetting sin of the prophets and kings of ancient Israel." then I was afraid, and a feeling of anguish and astonishment came over me, and it seemed impossible to believe that the ancient prophets could be guilty of such wickedness, for I had always been taught to revere the names of the prophets and kings of Israel.

(To be continued.)

WATER BAPTISM.

"Do the Scriptures teach that water baptism was obligatory in the Jewish age only?"

This proposition was affirmed in public debate, by M. A. Hughs, in the brick church, at Lamoni, Iowa, on December 11 and 12, 1899, and was denied by me. The following is a portion of the notes of a brief summary, or recapitulation, made by the negative, at the time. I came across them by chance, as we say, and thought possibly they might be of some use to some of the readers of the Herald, if not to some of the missionaries in the field. I regret that a portion of the notes has been lost.

J. R. LAMBERT.

"1. My opponent's positions are as follows: That the Jewish age is from the Exodus until A. D. 70; that the law of Moses was binding during all that time; that baptism, the baptism practiced by John, Christ, and the apostles, originated with the law of Moses, and was binding as a part of the old covenant.

"2. I have shown that the water baptism of the New Testament was for the remission of sins. Mark 1: 4; Luke 3: 3; Acts 2:38. That it was for the 'answer of a good conscience toward God, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.' 1 Peter 3: 21. That baptism saves us. 1 Peter 3: 21; Mark 16:15, 16. By it (baptism) we fulfill the righteousness of which God is revealed in the gospel. Matt. 3: 15; Romans 1: 16, 17.

"My opponent has utterly failed to show that such baptism as this is provided for in the law of Moses—hence has failed to prove his proposition.

"3. I have shown that the Christian dispensation was introduced by John, and that the law of Moses was being taken out of the way from John until the death of Christ, when it was nailed to the cross, and perished. Luke 16: 16; John 1: 5-9, 29-32; Mark 1: 1-4; Eph. 2: 13-16; Col. 2: 13-17."

Selected Articles.

THE NEWEST STATEMENT OF AD-VANCED CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY.

The school of higher Biblical criticism, which has numerous representatives in most of the Christian denominations, is usually composed of the younger men, whose views are largely influenced by the new critical researches of the German scholarship. A notable exception to this rule is the Rev. L. L. Paine, professor of ecclesiastical history in the Bangor Theological Seminary, a Congregational institution. Although he received his own theological education some forty years ago, his new book, entitled "A Critical History of the Evolution of Trinitarianism and its Outcome in the New Christology," contains most radical teaching. He regards the fourth Gospel as a Gnostic document of a date not earlier than 150 A. D. The opening chapters of Matthew and Luke are, he says, spurious, and some other parts of them have slight historical value. He regards the miraculous birth story as a fable, and the doctrine of the divinity of Jesus as a piece of metaphysical speculation. He recognizes, however, an historic Christ, and, somewhat in the same manner as Mrs. Humphry Ward, believes that this Christ will draw all men to a higher life and to God. The Christian Work, (non-denominational, December 6), in commenting on what it calls this "very newest theology" of Dr. Paine, says:—

"It may as well be recognized frankly that theology is undergoing a great change. A good deal of medieval speculation is being sloughed off. The fraternization of denominations shows that far less importance is attached now than formerly to theolog-There is vastly ical distinctions. more study of Christ himself than there was once, and dogmas not very plainly stated in the Christian documents are put forth much more modestly than they were once. All this is the healthful result of modern historical and scientific methods. Alarming as they are to the more conserva-tive, it is still a fact that in the propagation of the gospel and in ministering to the needs of the ignorant and suffering, upon which our Lord laid an emphasis not yet fully appreciated - Dr. Stalker says that theology has done no sort of justice to the ethics of Jesus-the evangelical churches are doing more than in any previous period. The time when any leading divine can say that Christianity is a dogma to be believed rather than a life to be lived is very near its end, if it has not reached its end. But there is not yet any indication that the supernatural elements in the personality and career of Jesus of Nazareth are losing their hold upon men, and if the churches that profess the name of Jesus Christ are gradually and perhaps unconsciously dropping doctrines that were prominently held centuries ago, it is because these are now believed to be medieval and not apostolic; it is not because the Christian documents are rejected, though the correction of the text has relegated to the margin or expunged a few phrases that have been overworked as texts of doctrinal sermons."

Letter Department.

SERVADO, Okla., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald:—We had some good meetings in September and I was baptized into the church. I think my husband will soon follow. This is indeed a glorious work, and I hope to be able to help some in the great work God has before his people.

People here most of them are at a low ebb, spiritually. One lady remarked that she didn't believe they would ever wake up unless some "new denomination" should come in

Ever striving to hold up our banner, I am, Your sister in the faith, MRS. E. RALSTON. ROSETTA, Idaho, Dec. 20.

When I last reported through the Herald, I was at Boise City, Idaho. Am now in the "mountains of Israel." The people live in the gulches, on the sides, and on the tops of the mountains, up here in Nez Perce county. It has been my aim to visit as many points in western Idaho, before conference time, as I can consistently, and be conscientious in filling my appointment by our missionary in charge of the Rocky mountains (Bro. D. W. Wight). I wanted to learn the situation and conditions existing in my mission field, to see the Saints and counsel with them for the future as well as the present prestige and success of our labor of love. To labor together as coworkers with God, in love for Zion's weal, is the covenant obligation entered into when we obey the law of adoption by baptism, even "the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints." Those who live where there are good branch privileges and associations, where those do their duty who are "appointed by the Holy Ghost as overseers of the flock" of Saints, to nourish and feed the lambs with the sincere milk of the word; to instruct and admonish kindly and faithfully, that there be fruits meet for repentance developed as rapidly as may be, enjoy an advantage over those isolated, just as children with good school privileges should prize and utilize their opportunities, yet, to get the mind and conscience fully awake, to treasure up the "words of life" as written, or as the voice of the Comforter counsels;

> We feel it a pleasure to serve thee, And love to obey thy commands, for this awakening and enlistment of the affections of the heart is the all-important lesson to be learned as early in our childhood as possible. To hearken to and heed the voice of the Good Shepherd; to put aside our childish (carnal) ways and walk according to divine counsel, and so develop the divine nature, that it shall be our nature to be exemplary every day, before all men, and that the "true light" may shine brightly through us wherever we may be; whether with the Saints or with the worldly, should be ever an open lesson before our eyes by day and night, till fully learned, and by practice, applied. I believe, from observation and experience, it is as easy for the wide-awake soldier to maintain his integrity, and that of his cause abroad as at home, and it is not to our credit if we do not. This is a sword with two edges, I know, but truth is what we claim to press into and apply for our purification and sanctification. "If ye love me, keep my commandments," and they "are not grievous," Because iniquity abounds, the love of many grows cold, but those who excuse themselves for inconstancy because of the conduct of others, are themselves under the bondage of sin. This is a great leprous sore, of which Saints should never be afflicted. Like a drunken man, such is an object lesson to teach us self-inspection. To learn our duty and stand approved, in meekness and love unfeigned and in the unity of the faith, cannot be kept before our eyes too constantly, by all wishing to see the whole flock to be clean of scab, or any other disease, infectious or not.

I held only two services while at Boise, but had several privileges to talk at services held by other denominations. Was kindly treated there as a rule, as elsewhere. Held services west of Boise as I referred to in my letter, and the people came out and did the singing in true Christian order, and kindly asked me to their homes, and to return there when I came back to Boise.

Left there on the 22d October for Emmett. Canyon county, Idaho, and stopped in that region about two weeks. Had a home with Sr. Augusta Hanson's family, about six miles below Emmett, on the Payette river. Sister Hanson is a widow and has had a struggle in life to sustain herself and family, but the children are now grown up, but not so zealous in the Master's cause and their own welfare spiritually as they should be, still there is good material in them for Latter Day Saints. They see the need of Christian grace, and the "beauty of holiness," but lack some one or more to lead out in obedience to the gospel law. Held several meetings about there, but attendance was not very good. Distributed considerable gospel literature from house to house, as I do all along my travels, asking the Lord to bless the seed as "bread cast upon the water."

At Payette, on the O. S. L., I stopped a day and night, as I had sent a notice to the local paper, asking any members of the Reorganized Church living in those regions to notify me by letter there of their whereabouts. This I usually do in places where I know of no Saints, for I have learned that travel and accommodations call for more cash than missionary work should, in a Christian land, or at least strangers in a strange land are expected to contribute freely for the advantages of civilization. It exacts its tribute, and as I have seen some of our Lamanite aboriginal customs aforetime as well as here, I do most heartily thank the Lord for advantages and the privileges the "open door policy," of what God hath wrought by the nation he has planted in the "land of Zion," to teach the nations of the earth the principles of government by the people.

At Payette, I was shown the town and country by Mr. A. E Wood, a real estate agent, whose solicitude for the prosperity of his country interested me, and he hitched his fine black roadsters to his chariot to prove to me the adaptability of those regions, to fruits and cereals, to reward industrious home seekers. About dark that eve I boarded the train for Weiser and so did not see the country lying between the two towns. The next day I rambled about Weiser and visited the Signal office to see about my notice to our Saints, sent some days to it with request to publish, but politics was so pressing and had so absorbed the editor's time, he came near forgetting it that week, and it came in too late for insertion the week before. However, he assured me it should go in that issue, and also gave me a kindly notice.

While I waited to hear from Saints about Weiser in answer, I concluded the next day to go up to Middle Valley to where Bro. S. D. Condit had written me were some Saints of "days agone." The Pacific and Idaho

Northern railroad is building through this section up the Weiser river to Seven Davils mining camp, and trains run as far as Cambridge, in Salubria valley. Getting on the train at 8: 30 a. m., 9th November, I asked the conductor if he would slow up and let me off at the first house in Middle Valley, -about thirty miles up the river. Found him goodnatured and obliging. "Ask and ve shall receive," is truly the proper course in more ways than one. As the train stopped the conductor said, "Here is your station." I lost no time in going about one hundred and fifty yards to the house, where I found Bro. Ben Shaw, and told him I was seeking the "lost sheep of the house of Israel." Said he, "I am one." He is quite a cripple from rheumatism. His wife was up the valley about five miles, and I rode up with him in the afternoon to his brother's. William Shaw, where his wife was. Found Bro. and Sr. William Shaw had joined the Christian Church. I told them before I left the valley it was not seemly to trade sunlight for starlight. They assented to this, but sometimes, stray sheep do join other flocks for companionship. Sometimes stray sheep get sickly, and even scabby, too, and then they care little what becomes of themselves; they lose courage and their appetite becomes so vitiated and abnormal that they (mis)use that most abominably filthy weed, tobacco. However, if I cannot see the ill effects of such evils, or any other evil, my brethren and sisters, come boldly forward and tell me, so I may speedily put away the evil, that I be no longer a stumbling-block to the giddy world, who excuse themselves because of sickly, or scabby sheep in the fold. There is a warm spot in Bro. and Sr. Wm. Shaw's heart for "the faith once delivered to the Saints," and the Spirit says they shall be reclaimed. Bro. Ben Shaw's wife and two grown daughters ought to be with the Saints. May the Lord bless them with believing hearts, to buy the truth, as also William Shaw's family. I held one service there in the schoolhouse to a good. attentive congregation. The Christian people did the singing. After service a Mr. G. W. Williams who was preaching there for them asked the privilege to reply, when he commenced a caustic criticism of the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints, the divine origin (or claim) of the Book of Mormon, and authority of Joseph Smith, and before we left the house challenged us to debate on the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith. I told him if he could produce the proper credentials we would try and accommodate him the coming year, that debates were entered into by us under direction and counsel of the missionary in charge, and men must be known to have the authority of their churches to represent them. This would help our cause there very much, I am confident.

From here I went up to Indian valley, and Middle Fork of Weiser river. Found some lambs and sheep up there and a chance for a zealous worker in true wisdom. Bro. Henry Shaw, of Middle Fork, was ready with team to carry the messenger from place to place, but the weather and roads were so bad to get about there that only two services were held in those parts; one a sacrament service Sunday, the 25th at Bro. Ben Shaw's, son of Henry Shaw, the members present testifying to a desire to lead a consistent life, and to see the gospel spread abroad. Sr. Charles A. Barbour, of Indian Valley, and her husband, though not a member, were very kind, and I had the pleasure of blessing their little girl (Minnie Evaline) on the morning of the 26th of November, before Bro. HenryShaw and I left for Middle Valley on my return. We started out for a sleigh ride of about twenty-five miles, but sleighs need more snow than mud to make the ride pleasant. However, we got to his brother William's in due time, and were made comfortable. I thank all the dear Saints and friends for their kindness. More workers are needed with zealous hearts, and willing hands, and able bodies, that can play mountaineer in earnest. Cash, too, is needed quite often.

While here I got a letter from Bro. James N. Cato, of Weiser. His sister, Sarah Isabelle Ross, who has lived there several years. saw my notice in the Signal and told him. So I was made welcome and comfortable with him and his family of the Wakenda branch, Ray county, Missouri. They came out there last February. I wish we had at least a family like them as a nucleus in every school district, not less zealous for the Master's work. Bro. Cato thinks he can assist in the work the coming summer. He shall, by the help of the Lord, have the privilege. Had an ample Thanksgiving dinner with them. I am very glad to meet with Saints. Let us all wake up to our privileges, and show to the world that we love the truth. Who can weigh the good influence one good, earnest family, or even person, may exert in any community

On my return to Weiser, I found I had only twenty-three miles to go till my permit privilege would end at Huntington. I sent off an application to Portland for this, and spent Thanksgiving day and others at times from house to house with gospel tracts, and chatting with the folks. On the Lord's day. Bro. Cato, Belle and Grace (daughters) and I attended the Baptist services, but the stove being out of repair, it was too cold to enjoy the sermon, still I got some good points on "sin against the Holy Ghost." Bro. Cato's sister, and sister in the new covenant, came up to see them on the 4th of December, and I made acquaintance of another sister. All had dinner together, and then I left to take the afternoon train for Lewiston via Pendleton and Riparia, for from this point to Lewiston, Idaho, I had the pleasure of the first good boat ride since the Civil War, up and down the Mississippi river. December 5, about three p. m., I boarded the two-year-old vessel named the Spokane. But before I start on my way up the Snake river, I must say I got left at Weiser, as the train was just leaving the station as I came in sight of the depot. Well, I was too slow for once. So I just concluded to stay at the depot till 1:37 a. m. of the 5th. This was not so bad, either, for I pulled up a long seat to the stove about eight p. m., and after feeding it liberally with coal, lay me down to rest, to think or sleep as I felt best. It was clear the agent was kind-hearted, too, for he brought me a bucket of coal, and a light to read by, and I thanked the Lord for the civilization of today, and did not forget to thank the agent. One-thirty-seven came in due time, and so did the train, and I was soon nicely seated in a good reclining chair, in a nice warm room, feeling well, and thankful to the Lord for our civilization and to the employees on the road, and the favors shown to those who "aim mankind to bless" with the law of love, in granting me the rates belonging to "soldiers of the cross."

At Huntington, I soon exchanged $5.75 for a ticket to Lewiston, and took my chair again in the car. Here, while meditating upon my conditions and surroundings, I noticed a big, burly, good-natured man before me in the next chair, who seemed chatty. So I soon learned he was just over from London, England. Now was my chance to learn of his views of "my country." Soon I found he had eyes to see, and the disposition to concede progress of the American Yankee. He was free to agree that this is a great people and a great country in more ways than one. I was interested in what he had to say of England and his observations of America. If I interested him fairly, it was time well spent, and before we got to Pendleton, I gave him some gospel literature which he thanked me for. He went on to Portland and I changed cars for Riparia.

On the Spokane, after taking in the situation, and an effort to get fifty cents' worth at the supper table, for I had only had a dozen crackers since dinner the day before at Bro. Cato's, and securing a fifty-cent cot for the night, I asked the captain for the privilege to lay some reading matter on the reading table. I put the "Manuscript Found" with other tracts from Herald and Ensign offices. The captain took a look at the Manuscript, and others looked the rest over. Some soon commenced to ask questions, and this gave me more to do than I anticipated, and so bedtime came all too soon. A train connection occurred at nine p. m., which took several of the people who were only there waiting for the trains. I soon went to bed, leaving some reading "Creed making" and Bro. Evans' sermon on the Book of Mormon. A little before four a. m. on the 6th the deep breathing of the Spokane woke me, and I found she was pushing us up stream at the rate of about seven miles per hour. Daylight, I eagerly waited, and we met it about twenty miles up the river. I wanted to see all that was in sight along the journey by water. As the shadows dispelled so we could clearly see the banks, they looked more like Dixie land than Idaho. The moss-covered rocks and carpet of green, as well as the weather, reminded me more of May than the 6th of December. At various places along the banks were large warehouses filled with grain for shipment, some of which was let down from the mountain tops by basket tramway. I was told the tops of the mountains were farmed, and in summer was a vast grain field. Where I am now located "among the everlasting hills," I find that is true. We reached Lewiston about three p.m. Going up from the landing I met a hotel proprietor (Thatcher House), who kindly offered me accommodations for the night reasonable, and carried one of my satchels. Leaving them there I walked down to Northern Pacific railroad depot to learn the most suitable train for the morning to Spalding, and coming back, I met the hotel proprietor and a Baptist evangelist coming to meet me. After chatting with the Baptist (S. D. Foster) an hour, and giving him an outline of the gospel restored, and some tracts, we bade good-byes, and he took a waiting hack for home, a few miles over in Washington, asking me to try and come over before I left for the east. He said he had heard the Utah elders shortly before and wanted to know more about it. It was quite dark by this time, and I went to my room, and shortly to bed. At 7:30 a.m. on the 7th I left for Bro. Jason R. Butler's, near Rosetta, via Spalding.

At this place I asked for the way to Rosetta, or J. R. Butler's, and was told, "Out in the country, maybe twelve miles east." Leaving one satchel in a store, with the smaller I started to look for the stray sheep. After wading mud and climbing hills till about three p. m., I located the domicile of Bro. Butler, after five hours of as faithful walking as I have had since we Yankees chased the Johnnies when they tried hard to keep ahead of us. Sr. Butler, from the plentitude of her ready store, soon spread the table with enough to satisfy several hungry people, and as I had eaten nothing but a light lunch since leaving Riparia, I thanked the Master for the gospel of these latter days and the good things which spring from the bosom of Mother Earth, as well as the hands which ministered to my needs. Have formed the acquaintance of the little colony of Saints in this region, and Bro. John D. Price, of Nez Perce, who was over and stopped with us last night. Bro. Price and Bro. Lewis Clark are very much needed in the vineyard as quickly as they consecrate themselves wholly to the Lord and his cause. There is plenty of material here for a nice little fold. But these men are young and could be of service.

Here I must stop, for this article is already long, and some of the Saints, I am told, have a horror of long sermons, or letters. We have some warm-hearted Saints here, if they are scattered. We hold meetings about two and one half miles eastward on Sunday, but the roads and conditions are not favorable for night meetings now. Go to Nez Perce in January. Bro. Price says he will make ready. Always for Zion's weal,

CHARLES ALBERTSON.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Dec. 31.

The Saints' Herald:-As a little branch we are trying to enjoy ourselves; we have a Sunday school at our home at two o'clock and meeting at three, ever since Brn. Mintun and Baker were here last summer with the tent. We seem to be here alone, but are doing the best we can. I feel thankful that our Father in heaven has not forgotten us. Our Sunday school is growing; I have a happy little class of eleven scholars, and only one child a Latter Day Saint. If I had more time I could have more come, but it takes work, and there are no workers here in this town of forty thousand people.

It seems to me we ought to have a church. I don't see why we are so neglected by the church: there seems to be good interest. Bro. Hogaboom is living in this place now, so he can help us. He has preached on Sundays and has been blessed by the Spirit of God; he is a good speaker, has good liberty, and we feel thankful to have him here. He is unable to do much on his own support and I wish he could get a little help from the church. There is a great work to be done in this place.

On Christmas we had a tree, and it was a great success. Our house was well filled; a great many strangers were present. children spoke pieces and sang a Christmas song. At the close I asked Bro. Hogaboom to make a talk, which he did with good liberty, and every one seemed delighted. The children told me it was the best time they ever had at a Christmas tree. So I feel more than paid for my trouble.

I thought I must write to the Herald and let the church know that in Sioux City there are a few anxious Saints who would like a little attention from the church.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for our little branch in Sioux City. With love,

Your sister in Christ,

MRS. M. E. TOWNSEND.

BUTTE, Mont., Dec. -.

Editors Herald:-While waiting for the train to take me home, which train is one hour late, will pass some of the time in a few lines.

Was called yesterday by telephone message, which said that Sr. Mary Ann Griffiths had been given up by the doctor and was in a dving condition. Took first train here and found her in a most critical condition-a combination of bronchitis and pneumonia. We invoked the aid of the Great Physician at once, and relief was received. Later on in the evening, Bro. Levi Atkinson came, whom. we discovered to be an elder, and feeling strengthened by his presence and believing that two elders should officiate when possible, we administered again. We left her much better, and trust she will recover, though the atmosphere in this smelter city is altogether against nature. This family is related to Apostle G. T. Griffiths, the afflicted one being a niece. They had not previously met Elder Atkinson, as his work in the mines allows him to go around but little. Bro. Atkinson is a Lamoni man, where his family still resides. He tried during today to introduce me to Brn. Young and Butterworth, of Iowa, but we did not find them in, but we met Sr. Robinson, with her husband, formerly of Lucas, Iowa, also Sr. Carrie Sund, which was a great pleasure to all of us.

Butte is a great and busy city of some sixty thousand people. There was once a branch of the church here, but it became disorganized, and very few if any of the original number remain, to our knowledge. I find that those who are now here are not much acquainted, as there is not a thing to bring them into personal contact, except chance. I have a desire to replant our colors, notwithstanding a smallpox scare, and get the few here organized into a little band who will second my efforts, and try and reach the many thousands who know not God, and who are daily exposed to the iniquity and frivolities of one of the wealthiest and wickedest cities in the world—I think it leads them all in the latter quality. I hope the brethren will cooperate and make a much need effort.

Last Sunday I baptized an excellent man in Deer Lodge, the first fruit of labor at that place for the writer. As our labor has been expended with no apparent results, we all were made happy, and welcomed Bro. Spragg to our very small band of workers. This brother wrote his former pastor something like this: "Dear Sir:-When I was baptized into your church, I took upon me an obligation to help support the same. Inclosed you will find five dollars. As I have now discharged this obligation, I feel free to say to you that I have found more light than you have, and I therefore request you to erase my name from your list of members. Respectfully yours." I don't hesitate to baptize a man of this stamp. I leave you to make your own deductions. The first thing he wanted was a Book of Mormon to read. I think he has come into our ranks to stay, or he would not have gone into water from which we cut the ice, on a day when new ice was forming to seal up the watery tomb at the moment of baptism. We felt like singing,-

> "We want no cowards in our band, Who will our colors fly."

When we last wrote, the birth of a baby boy in our home was stated to be news that exceeded every other from this section at present. The above has developed since, and we will all agree that a natural birth does not exceed a spiritual one in importance, even though the first mentioned happens in one's own family.

GOMER R. WELLS.

MANCHESTER, England, Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—I see, occasionally, letters in the Herald, in which Saints give their opinions on secret or benefit societies. The last letter I read on the subject appeared in Herald for October 7, from Bro. Miller, and a little while before that came one from the pen of Bro. Maloney, and further back still was one from Bro. Cairns, and again, about four years ago, there were several on the same subject. One, I remember, the writer's opinion was much after the style of Brn. Maloney and Cairns, quite the opposite to that of Bro. Miller.

At that time I was a member of the society of Free Masons, and also the Ancient Order of Foresters. Both these societies I joined in the town of Hamilton, Scotland, where our Bro. Cairns resides, and where our worthy young brother, J. W. Rushton, is now laboring in the Master's cause. I joined these societies in 1873, about twenty-seven years ago. A few months after being initiated I left Hamilton and went to Edinburg, and from there to London, and had my membership transferred from Hamilton to a court of the same order held in Red Lion street, Holborn. I paid my subscriptions regularly for twenty-three years, which in that time amounted to about forty pounds; and in the whole of the time I was a member I did not receive a penny for either sickness or funeral expenses, which, of course, was so much the better for me and the society.

After reading the letters above-mentioned of four years ago, I thought much about the matter, and asked myself the question, Is it right for me, calling myself a Saint of the most high God, to help to support these societies, when the church of which I profess to be so proud is so much in need of support; and while there are some very good people amongst the members of these societies, yet the majority of them are worldly, and their object in joining is not, as they say, to help their fellow creatures, so much as it is to help themselves?

I thought much over the matter. I turned it over in my mind. I looked at it from every side I could think of. I prayed over it. It seemed to me a great risk to run, for I am now getting on in years, and the society might have been very useful to me. However, I came to the conclusion that I would send my quarter's money, which was then due, and also my letter of resignation, and after that I would pay that money in the church. So my first club money was sent to the church on the first of January, 1898, and has been kept up ever since, and I shall continue to do so as long as the Lord enables me to earn it. The money does not amount to very much, but if every Saint who belongs to these societies could see his way to do the same, it would be a great help. The gospel has to be preached in all the world for a witness. What are we doing to help it along? Are we giving the necessary support to the church it requires? If we were, there would be more missionaries sent out to perform this work. But instead of that, some have to be called in. Why, how is this? The answer is. There is not sufficient fund in the Bishop's hands to support the families of those brave men (for brave they are) who leave wife, children, and all that are near and dear to them to proclaim this restored gospel. Although I have had no experience myself of missionary work, yet I feel sure their task, if I may call it such, is no easy one. One day they may fare very well, and the next day the opposite. But I feel that this is not so much trouble to them as thoughts of those they leave behind. Let us then see that the church is better supported, financially and otherwise. This work we profess to love so much is worth very far more than we shall ever be able to do for it. We know the blessed Master does not expect more from us than we are able to do, but what we can do he expects us to do, and do it well. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," is the scriptural teaching.

My idea for leaving these societies was not with the intention of taking some of the money for my own use. I should be afraid to do so when I remember there was one Ananias who sold his possessions to give to the same church that we belong to, but kept back a portion of it for his own use, and for so doing the lives of himself and wife were taken; and the same God who deprived them of life reigns today. He has not changed.

Our Bro. Miller asks, Are these lodges or societies doing good, and would it be beneficial for Latter Day Saints to join them? I believe they are very useful to people who live, as it were, from hand to mouth and cannot take care of their spare money. Such I would certainly advise to join some one of these societies. But Latter Day Saints have something better to look forward to than these societies or worldly people. We have a house not built with hands, eternal in the heavens.

I could give several reasons, if space would allow, why Saints should not be mixed up in these societies. I might here mention just one reason: I speak of the oath you have to take to become a member of the society of Free Masons. So long as I do not state the nature of that oath, I am not divulging the secret; but to me it is a dreadful oath to take, and no true Latter Day Saint would be guilty of taking such. But the mischief is, you do not know what you will be called upon to do until you are brought in contact with it, for no one is allowed to divulge the secrets of Masonry.

Again, Bro. Miller in his remarks, if I remember rightly, quotes that passage of scripture found in James 1: 27, "Pure religion and undefiled before God," etc.; but it is not necessary to become a member of these societies to be able to attend to the above, for it is the duty of every Saint to visit the fatherless and the widow, etc., whether we are members of these societies or not. Bro. Miller also said there is a great demand for these insurance societies and lodges that the church does not fill. How is it the church does not fill this want? Why, for the simple reason that the Bishop has not the means at his disposal to carry on the work that is done by these societies, because we will insist in helping to support these societies when we should be giving that help to the church, and so long as we continue doing so we must expect the church to remain poor financially.

Saints, there is great need of unity amongst us. We do not seem to have the confidence in each other we should have. If we had more confidence in each other, perhaps we should not then be so dependent on the outside world for employment, etc.

We had a very good instance of this want of unity in this city. About four years ago we started a ccoperative store, and the articles we sold, groceries, etc., were the best that the market contained at the price we paid, and as we paid money down for all we received, very likely some of it was better than those would get that did not pay ready cash. But for all this, there were but few of the Saints out of the great number we have in this city that would come out and join us in this undertaking, whether it was mistrust or what. It may be some of them thought the committee was making something out of the concern. Whatever the cause was. I don't know, but they refused to help or unite with us: nor did they ever come to offer a word of encouragement, knowing as they must have known, that the work was very trying upon those who were working hard and trying their very best to make the undertaking a success. The society was started and carried out, so far as it went, for no other purpose than to help the Saints here to better themselves, so that in time we should not be so dependent on the outside world for our employment, etc., and also to help the church generally. We had a good, valuable stock and plenty of money to carry it along, and there was every prospect of it turning out a grand success, for we seemed to get on remarkably well, even with the few; and if all the Saints out of all the five branches we have in this city had put their shoulders to the wheel, I feel sure our hopes would have been realized. But they would not come out, so, after working the concern about three years, and seeing there was no prospects of our numbers increasing, and the work being too heavy for the committee,-for although we were getting on so well, yet we were not in a position to employ a manager to conduct the business: had all or most of the Saints here united with us, then we should have been well able to have employed a manager,-we decided to wind up the affair, which we did about the middle of this year 1900.

What a pity it is we cannot trust each other more, for are we not brethren and sisters, members of one family? Then why trust so much in these societies, and people who are not of us? Let us, dear Saints, cultivate a better feeling; let us have more love and symathy for each other. Depend upon it, we get but little sympathy from the outside world; for directly our former acquaintances find out what we belong to, they soon give us the cold shoulder. Then let us cling closer together and be a greater assistance to each other, and also help the church, not only financially, but in every possible way we can, and let the Bishop of the church feel that he has our confidence.

Bro. Miller said it is the duty of every man to make ample provision for his wife and children to live comfortably upon in the event of his death, and I think, if I remember right, he quotes that passage of Scripture, "If any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." I do not seem to be able to read the above portion of Scripture as Bro. Miller and others do. I believe that we should provide for them as long as we are able to do so. I believe that it is expected of every man while in this probation not only to provide every necessary of life for his wife and children, but to do all he can to help the poor, especially the poor of the household of faith. If the money that is in the world were circulated more, instead of storing it away out of sight, there would not be so much stealing nor yet so much sin in the world. I believe there is many a good man who thieves because he and his family are in want of the necessaries of life. It causes a man to covet. It is natural enough to be covetous when a man is hungry and sees another man with plenty of food. clothing, etc. I believe we as Saints should set the example in the world, and instead of storing our money away where it is no use to anybody, to circulate it and use it to give to those who need it. I believe that when a man has done all he can for his family and his fellow creatures, and lives a righteous life, and is then called off this stage of action, then the Lord steps in with that blessed promise to be "a father to the fatherless, and a judge of the widows," and I fully believe he will fulfill his promise in such a way that not only will be provide the necessaries of life for the family, but the love that existed in the family circle will not be missed so much, for when the Lord does a thing he does it right and well. Now it does not seem to me reasonable that the Lord would have made the above promise if he expected the husband to do it. I do not know how or in what way my family will be provided for in the event of my being called away.

I hear some say, Look what a burden it would be on the church if all the widows and their children became dependent on it! Well, I do not know whether my family will be supported through the church or how, but of this I am quite sure, that if I help the church with my means all I possibly can, and keep faithful to the end, that the Lord will be true to his promise and that my family will have great cause to be thankful I took such a course. I would much rather leave my family in the care of almighty God than in the care of riches, or rather money and property. Let us, then, use the means God has given us for the spread of the gospel. We are taught by our Savior not to lay up treasures on earth. Although this advice was given to his disciples in the sermon on the mount (Matt. 6: 19-21), yet it is intended for advice and instruction to us just as much as it was to his immediate followers.

We see by the instruction given that there is a possibility of money or treasures that are stored away becoming lost or stolen, but the Father's promise will stand sure. In Doctrine and Covenants we read: "And if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my storehouse."-42:14. If we let the church have the use of our money, we shall then only be giving to the Lord that which belongs to him, "For the earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof."-1 Cor. 10:26. Again, in Doctrine and Covenants: "I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things therein are mine."-101:2. So all the money and property we claim to be ours is not ours, but the Lord's. Dear Saints, the Lord does not want our money, but he wants to see how much we are willing to sacrifice for the cause we profess to love so much. The greater the sacrifice the greater the blessing. Depend upon it, if we are true to our calling, neither we nor our families will ever want the necessaries of life. The Psalmist says: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."-Ps. 37: 25.

Of course, to comply with all the foregoing would seem very hard to those who are in good positions and well able to make good provisions for their families. There are not many such who would care to give up all to follow Christ. It seemed very hard to that young man who inquired of our Savior, saying, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?" And after our Savior explained the law and commandment to him, the young man made answer and said, "All these things have I kept from my youth up: What lack I yet?" "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor," says the Master, "and thou shalt have treasure in heaven."-Matt. 19: 16-22. You remember the young man went away sorrowful. I am afraid we have the same as this young man seemed to have, greater love for our possessions than for Christ. I am a poor man myself, but feel sure that if the Lord spared me a few years in the position I am in now, I could lay by something for my family, if I neglected the church. But I love this work. My heart is in the work, therefore I could not neglect my duty to the church willfully.

Some of the above may appear boastful, but such is not intended, neither is it intended to hurt the feelings of Bro. Miller or anyone else; but thought that some one or more who might read my letter might be inclined to do as I did after reading the brother's letter of four years ago. I am told we should use wisdom in all things. Well, what I have done in giving up these societies is using the wisdom God has given me in the best way I knew how.

In gospel bonds, W. MADDOCK.

FREMONT, Ind., Dec. 28.

Editors Herald:-I returned home on Saturday from a trip northward. We stopped one night with the Coldwater branch, and met with some of the officers at the home of Bishop Stroh, and had a pleasant councilmeeting. Advised the officers to attend to all duties made incumbent upon them by virtue of their ordination, to watch over the flock and feed the sheep of God. At Hartford I expected to meet Bro. W. E. Peak, missionary of the southern part of Michigan; but owing to the appearance of diphtheria in the city, he had been notified not to come. I found the home of Bro. Francis Robertson, teacher of the branch, was quarantined, and his daughter very sick indeed; but by request of Srs. Robertson and Turnour, we met with the Saints at the home of Sr. Troumbel, and had prayer for the sick sister. Held meeting in the chapel in the evening, and was joined by Bro. S. W. L. Scott, and held on Saturday evening and Sunday morning. In the afternoon Bro. Scott baptized three in the Paw Paw river, and they were confirmed at the evening services. Held meeting on Monday evening, also another special prayer service for the sick. On Tuesday morning we learned the sick were much better.

Being joined by Bro. W. E. Peak, moved on to Grand Rapids, and remained there until Saturday morning. I was called home on account of sickness of my companion; found her very ill; but glad to say at this writing she is much better, and I praise God for it. I also thank all our friends and Saints for kindnesses rendered and sympathies extended in our affliction previously, when our son was taken from us.

So far as I am able to see, the work in this district and entire mission is in a better condition than in the past. As president of this district I have urged the officers to attend to their duties, and as sub-missionary of this State, I have tried in my weakness to encourage all the missionaries in their work. Good reports come from the southern part of Indiana. We would like to name all, but space forbids.

I was at the conference in southern Indiana in August, and it was well attended, and good work was done both in and after conference. Bro. J. H. Lake was with us and presided. Conferences in Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district were excellent; the Holy Spirit was manifest on both occasions for the comforting and encouragment of the Saints. Our missionary was with us and Bro. Lake is a teacher by precept and example; and to say the Saints love him is not overdrawing the picture. The Saints here are praying that the Lord may spare him for many years to come. Of course the Saints of this branch especially love him as he baptized the first twelve here and gave much good counsel and instruction.

At our fall conference Bishop Hilliard was with us, and gave some of his views of the work of the Saints without any sugar coating; and in keeping with our promise to him, we have talked to the Saints about their duties in a financial direction. What the result will be, time will tell; but we must declare the whole counsel of God; must also practice what we preach. I believe many could pay a little who are not doing so, and many could commence paying tithing by small payments.

Ever praying and working for Zion, I am your brother, G. A. SMITH.

RAVENWOOD, Mo., Dec. 31.

Bro. Joseph:-I have just finished reading the third volume of Church History, and I have no fault to find, but think it good. In chapter 34 I like the comments very much upon all subjects. I do not think I have any objection to the second volume. In the first volume I think the history and comments concerning the army the Lord called to go up to redeem Zion to be misleading. My understanding is, that the Saints would not send up their money to purchase. The Lord wanted to see if we would fight, and in this he was not mistaken, as the record shows, one hundred of the strength of the Lord's was the limit, and enough to redeem Zion; but we got two hundred and over. We knew the Lord would have to help us, and when the Lord saw we were more willing to fight than purchase, he told us we would have to wait a little season for our redemption, and I think it was a trial of faith.

Abraham was once tried when he was called upon to offer his son, although he was forbidden to shed blood as well as we were; therefore, his trial and ours are similar. Now the history and comment read different to me than the views of that army, and if my views are correct, the comment on history of that camp is as I have said, misleading.

Lyman Wight understood this army to mean blood, as you will see under page 487. first volume, when he speaks of the camp going into history, he says it has taught us this lesson that Zion must be redeemed by purchase instead of by blood.

There has been quite a bit of talk about the redemption of Zion, but we must wait till the Lord with his chastening hand sweeps off the wicked; then, I think will be the time the kingdoms of this world will be the kingdom of our God and his Christ; and the Lord has said in 1834 that we had to wait for our redemption till this was done, and I cannot think the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of God and his Christ till Christ shall come.

JOHN HAWLEY.

MCCUNE, Kan., Dec. 29.

Editors Herald:-In the Toledo (Ohio) weekly Blade for December 27 last, there is an article entitled, "Religious Progress of the Nineteenth Century." The writer confines himself particularly to the religious progress in the United States. He says:-

"This movement has resulted in an enormous broadening of the religious life of the people. There is a greater liberality of opinion; there is more individual liberty, without censure; there is greater leniency in our judgment of our fellow men on religious matters. We are approaching an era of true liberty of conscience in such things, and for the first time in human history. This broadening has resulted from two things -one the vast increase in popular education and the spread of knowledge among the masses."

Before comment, we wish to quote him a little further on. Here it is:-

"On the other hand, notwithstanding the growth of broad religious tolerance, within the century, there have been in the United States during that time, a number of religious movements which attracted many converts, and none of which could have existed but because of popular ignorance. Perhaps the most notable of these is Mormonism. It is a sad commentary on human credulity, that any one could accept in good faith Joseph Smith's story of the finding of the 'golden plates,' buried in a New York hill; of his miraculous 'translation' of these inscribed plates by the use of Urim and Thummim, which, like the plates, no one ever saw; or believed that the ten tribes of Israel journeyed to America, and had here great cities and fearful battles."

You will notice in the first quotation the phrase, popular education, in the next popular ignorance. Query: Can popular education and popular ignorance flourish side by side? This writer says they cannot; for he makes this statement:-

"There have been many other small fanatical religious movements in the United States in this century, some of which began only a few years ago, and still flourish. The spread of an intelligent knowledge of the Bible will cause their decadence."

This last statement takes the form of a prophecy. For one, I have no fear of the decadence of that portion of the human family that accepts in good faith the story of Joseph Smith finding those plates in a builder and maker is God. For he dwelleth

New York hill; of their translation by the use of Urim and Thummim; and of the journeying of part of Israel to this country who had here great cities and fought fearful battles. And I will tell you one reason why I think so. On turning over just one leaf of the same issue of the Blade, I came across these startling headlines: "Mississippi's prehistoric wall, forty miles long, and built of hewn stones laid in cement." And after a lengthy description of it, in which they allude to it as possibly being the wall of Copiah, referred to in Mexican legends in pre-Mexican time, and that the wall seems to terminate in a great walled city covering an area of four miles square, they finish the article like this:—

"If the intelligent [which probably means the popularly educated American public can be convinced that there is in Mississippi a monument older than the pyramid of Cholula, and of a glimpse of its history and the strange people who built it, they will surely make haste to rescue the ruins." We wonder if they will.

W. I. CLARK.

GLADSTONE, Ill., Dec. 28.

Editors Herald:-In this great dispensation of time, amid confusion, deception, and false teachings, what a glorious thing it is to know that there is a sure standard by which we may know the truth. Men have failed in all ages of the world to establish such a standard, whereby they might know the truth, infallible truth, that cannot be rejected by any earthly tribunal. Such testimony is not invented by mortal man. For instance, if the Lord says of the temple that was in Jerusalem, that there shall not be one stone left on another, the world knows today it is so; or if the Lord has said that he would lead the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, he will do it, whether anybody gets there first with a balloon or not. The Lord is able to do his pleasure, who works everything after the counsel of his own will. He is able to melt down the icebergs and Edenize the globe, and he will not give his glory to another. The spirit of prophecy is the Lord's, and his testimony of himself to his Saints; and how little the world knows about the testimony of the Lord, and the foreknowledge of the future. Surely those who have not a knowledge of the testimonies of the Lord will be taken unawares, in the fulfillment of great events which will serve only the protection of the righteous.

No wonder the prophet hath said he is like a refiner's fire and fuller's soap, and who shall be able to stand. Or again, what house will you build unto me, seeing that my hands hath made all those things. Heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool. Behold the heaven of heavens cannot retain thee. Who then is a faithful and wise servant whom he hath made ruler over all his goods.

The gospel is the only plan for the building of God's house or kingdom, for the indwelling of his Holy Spirit, that is the house that must be built unto him in the most holy faith, which house will stand forever, whose not in houses made with hands. Therefore, thus saith the prophet, "Jacob shall not be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale. But when he seeth his children, the work of mine hands," etc. Jacob is to see all this, and when the Lord brings forth Zion again, they are to see eye to eye and face to face. There is to be some great event that is to serve as an eye opener, that those who have erred in spirit are to come to understanding, and to learn doctrine; and in that day the deaf are to hear the words of the book. On, on, then, to the victory, when the kingdoms of this world shall be transformed into the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ! But if the Lord builds not the house, it will never be built; for he says the house is the work of his hands, which house is the whole house of Israel, and Jacob is never more to be ashamed; neither is Rachel to weep or lament for her children, but is to be comforted, and her children to return from the land of the enemy.

I remain as ever in the faith of the fulfillment of the everlasting covenant.

JACOB L. RUST.

CASTLE ROCK, Wash., Dec. 27.

Editor Herald:-I am glad to be able to tell you and all Saints, that out here, in the fine town of Castle Rock, located in the beautiful Cowlitz Valley, that lies surrounded by costly timber covered hills, in our "evergreen" state of Washington, exists a live branch of the Church of Jesus Christ. A little fire of divine love and truth, is kindled. May it grow and increase! It started naturally, with a couple of Saints, who lived their religion, silently but surely. I believe Brn. A. M. Chase and H. Holt to be the first to tell the people here the true state of affairs. This resulted in a few joining forces; but our number is yet small. We were organized as a branch by Bro. Griffiths, a year ago last June, and we are still alive and hope to continue so.

We have a fine Sunday school, which meets in the Saints' hall every Sabbath. Our superintendent is Elder S. Crum. Scholars are bright and promising. We decided, as an encouragement to them, to have a Christmas evening entertainment, which was a great success, thanks to the untiring effort of (I wish I could say all, but I can say) nearly all; and the labor of love will surely be rewarded. A ship, "Zion," was built, that filled the entire end of the hall, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The ship was loaded down with a wonderful cargo, that glittered in the bright light and was later on distributed by the crew (three boys in white) commanded by Santa Claus. Under the arch in front of the ship, was placed the Bethlehem star (illuminated). It all was fine! The program could not be surpassed, thanks to superintendent, and the school did its part well. "Five little mothers," was fine. No. 18, "Scaring Santa Claus," was done nicely by little Sylvia Bushard, four years old; but when Santa appeared the tables were turned, and Sylva had the scare, which raised the house at her expense.

For music we had to use Christmas pieces in the Saints' hymnal, as the program came too late. Had two violins to assist the organ. The hall was packed full, and standing room at a premium. The program lasted for nearly three hours.

Of four entertainments in town, ours was considered the best. May God bless it and may it add more children to our school, and may the old increase in knowledge! May they work more in unity! May peace and good will be ours.

Oh! Jesus, help the Saints to see
What thou hast done for us,
Thy life so pure and heavenly,
From cradle to the cross;
O, that we be like thee, possessed
With love to each and all,
That thou from heaven may us bless,
And prosper large and small.

Happy New Year to all!
Your little brother.

P. J. BEBE.

r. o. Dedi

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 17.

Editors Herald:—The writer came to this place the 8th inst. and began a series of meetings, which have been advertised by the inclosed handbill. A reporter of the Morning Post came to the services the 9th. He wrote us up under the heading, "They are not Mormons." The article is herewith inclosed. In the same issue a letter entitled, "The Passing Hell," appeared with the editor's comments. This was the 10th. The editorial in question was printed the 3d, and my contribution on the subject the 15th. I inclose you all these papers. You

The Saints here have a nice hall which they get the constant use of for six dollars a month. Our audience is small as yet. There were about a dozen strangers present last night. Some of these are taking interest. We confidently expect a larger attendance as the meetings continue.

may make through the Herald any mention of them you choose.

Yours in bonds,

ALMA C. BARMORE.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 19.

Editor Herald:-I came to this city on the 12th inst. from Niagara Falls. Bro. Warren got the use of a hall on St. Paul's street for Saturday evening, also Sunday the 16th. I had it announced through city papers that I would lecture on Saturday evening on "Brigham Young a false prophet" and "Polygamy of the Devil," thinking it would bring the people out; but only a few came. Preached in hall on Sunday, but could not get it longer. Preached in Bro. Warren's house, with attendance small, but interest good. In all I have held sixty services and feel good has been done. Some promised to pray over the matter. I also distributed tracts in the city, and think that with the interest now there. if the work was looked after, some would obey the gospel. Bro. and Sr. Warren and their son James are the only Saints living in the city. Bro. and Sr. Kline did live there. but have recently moved to Michigan. They were a great help to the work there, and will be missed. Bro. and Sr. Warren, who were baptized by Glaud Rodger in England fifty years ago, are firm in the faith, they welcome the missionary, and provide for his needs. The elder's heart is made glad while with them. May they live long and have God's best and richest blessings in their declining years.

I also labored at Welland and Niagara Falls. There are some noble hearted Saints at the Falls, who are struggling to come up higher, and prove their acceptation with God, for he says: "By this ye shall know them to be my disciples, if they feed and clothe you and give you money." Some have endeared themselves to me, and their kindness shall never be forgotten. Also the kindness of the Saints at Low Banks and Sherbrooke will ever be remembered, as there are Saints there, too, who supply the missionary's wants. May the sweet Spirit of the Master abide with them.

Yours in the conflict of truth,

S. Tomlinson.

AURORA, Ill., Dec. 28.

Editors Herald:—I came to Aurora in 1892, from Cleveland, Ohio, about six months after entering the church. My circumstances or conditions since then have been such that I have had privileges of attending meetings only as special efforts have been made to open up the work here, or as I have been elsewhere for short spells and most always improved the time of looking up the Saints' meetinghouse.

I came into the work through corresponding with Bro. Gowell, who had already preceded me some months, he knowing, possibly, better than any other human being what my condition was and how to reach me, as we had formerly worshiped God together in the best light we had before hearing the greater light that had been revealed in our dispensation. I took but little interest, however, at first; either in what my brother said, or the reading matter which he placed in my hands, as I, like others, no doubt, thought I had all the truth on gospel lines that was worth knowing. But this opinion continued but a short time, when, as I now believe, I was providentially directed to move from Chicago, where I was then residing, to Cleveland, Ohio, my former home, as a means to separate me from the people I was then worshiping with, and contented to a great extent; but being separated and among strangers, I became more thoughtful and mindful of what had been written to me, and accordingly became very much discomforted; and when I would go here or there in search of rest, and find none, I became, as I thought, of all men most miserable. I carried tracts in my pocket containing the faith which was somewhat strange to me then, and at times I would read a few lines and put them back in my pocket again and wait a more convenient season. But the more I put it off the more miserable I became; but withal I would compare notes with the different religious leaders I came in contact with, using the points brought out by the Saints in the different works I had seen up to that time, especially "Presidency and Priesthood," by W. H. Kelley, loaned me by a Bro. Hands, of Cleveland. I found that work contained more than could be overthrown on short notice. So I continued to peruse its pages with more or less interest. Sometimes those I talked with advised me to identify myself with some religious body, and not be wasting my time on the outside; but those thoughts were not my thoughts, neither did they know what I was passing through during the time I was investigating. I had been identified with two or three different religious faiths, and now it became a more serious matter than it had ever been before, and I wanted time, and much of it, before being caught in a net again.

The time for the General Conference at Kirtland was approaching, and Bro. Gowell gave me a pressing invitation through the mail to attend. I complied and went to Kirtland one Sunday. I was somewhat disappointed, no doubt from the fact that I was somewhat like Naaman the leper when he came to Elisha, I thought I would see and hear some great thing, which I learned later my mind was not then capable of seeing or receiving.

After one of the meetings, I entered the hotel across from the temple, where a number of the elders and Saints were gathered. I entered into a little conversation or discussion with one of the elders, who came at me with the boxing gloves on, so to speak, and was going to knock me out and do me up right off. But fortunately for me, a more considerate elder observed the conditions obtaining, both in the elder who was driving me hard, and my peculiar condition also; he therefore, excusing himself to the one who was handling me rather roughly, said he thought he knew what I wanted, and was looking for, and thought he could give me some help. So he took me to one side and began to talk to me more calmly and reasonably. I felt much better in his company, and have thought many times since of the good effect the latter had upon me, and how unwise we may be at times through our zeal not according to wisdom.

I returned home the same night with many thoughts, some favorable, some otherwise, and somewhat disappointed also. About that time an unknown paper came to my address named the Zion's Ensign. Its pages I perused with more or less interest, until I read an article which contained the words I have heard and read many times since, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." This appealed to me very reasonably and strongly, and I shortly afterward made preparation to visit Kirtland once more. I took a few extra clothes under my arm this time, not saying a word to anyone as to what my intentions were. When I came to Kirtland I found a place to put my extras and entered the temple. Services had already commenced, so I entered somewhat unnoticed. Bro. Griffiths was preaching, using statements made by false prophets during our days, to which I listened with more interest than on the former occasion.

After service I met a sister who formerly resided at Cleveland, to whom I was directed while investigating. I secured the Book of Mormon and other reading matter from her previous to this time. She was somewhat surprised to see me at Kirtland; but when I made known my intentions she with others was made glad. After dinner there were two extra meetings, one at the water's edge and another in the temple. I did not notice or remember all that was said to me by the speaker during the confirmation, but was reminded by others of some things which I was somewhat surprised at: but like one of old. I pondered them in my heart. So, accepting things upon their merits, I returned to Cleveland that evening. There were then but two or three Saints there, and as no meetings were held I did not have the opportunity of developing into the knowledge of the new faith very fast.

Shortly after this I received word from a firm which had moved from Chicago to Aurora, Illinois, while I was at Cleveland, offering me a better position than I had. I accepted, after talking it over with Bro. Griffiths, who was passing through Cleveland at that time. I was informed that I would not be a great distance from Plano, where a number of Saints were, which I kept in mind, and after attending service in Aurora for the first time, I hastened to take a train for Plano, in search of those whom I had learned to love in the gospel. I spent, during the afternoon, a more pleasant and profitable time with them than with others in Aurora in the morning.

I have been living in the hope that the great work that God is doing elsewhere would have a foothold in Aurora, but as yet I have been disappointed a number of times in observing the condition of the Saints here. as well as those on the outside. As the Apostle Paul said to the people who made a profession without the practice in his day, They are not all Israel who call themselves by that name, so it is true also in regard to some who go by the name of Latter Day Saints. They do not help the work along by their actions, and other religious people are not slow to observe that their actions are not in harmony with what they understand of Christ and his work. So their example offers them no inducement.

I have now been in the church nine years, and have not as yet been privileged to meet with the Saints regularly. I think the experience which I have passed through since living in Aurora has been the means of making me stronger in the faith in some directions than perhaps I should otherwise be, so I am somewhat encouraged to observe that time has not all passed away unimproved.

I spent a few weeks with the Saints in Cleveland, my former home, this summer, and still have pleasant recollections of a profitable time spent while there, the first time since entering the church that I have had the privilege of attending meetings continuously (nine weeks). I found some earnest and devoted Saints there, whom I shall not soon forget, and had I not been hindered in my desires I should have returned to make my home among them in Cleveland once more. When I moved from Cleveland to Aurora but few Saints were there and no meetings. Shortly after, the work was opened up, a number of Saints moving in, and others accepting the faith through their efforts. I learned a short time since they had secured the service of two missionaries and were making a special effort to do more than they have of late.

I am glad to note the life of the Saints in this work to do what they can to advance its cause and interests, and hope that some day I may have greater privileges than I have had hitherto. I feel well in the work when I am doing the most. There are also two sides to this doing. While we may not always be privileged to do for others all we should like, we should never forget our own personal work of examination to see that we are in the faith, and are growing in faith and knowledge and that we do not forget the importance as individuals, to seek first the kingdom of God and its interests, and to seek to establish the righteousness of God by obeying its laws and commandments.

Yours in gospel bonds,

F. T. HAYNES.

572 Douglas Avenue.

NECEDAH, Wis., Dec. 31.

Editor Herald:—I have been steadily and actively engaged in preaching the gospel since I last wrote to the Herald, sometimes preaching to large crowds of anxious and interested listeners, and sometimes to small audiences. Many prejudiced people to contend with.

Isaiah said: "Come now, brethren, let us reason together." I wish to relate some of my experience and observations. If I understand the Scriptures correctly, in the days of Christ and the apostles, when they were talking to the Jews they did not dwell altogether upon the fruits of the spirit in telling them how to live, but rather tried by using the scriptures (the law and the prophets), to set forth the claims, and prove that Jesus of Nazareth was really the Christ. Today the sectarian world, as well as ourselves, have the record of Jesus and the apostles, and they say they believe it. It has been my experience that when we go into a new place, the news goes ahead of us that we are, as the world says, "Mormons." Then when we preach the first principles they will say, "Well, they believe in Jo Smith, but they dare not preach it." Many other times I have noticed, and the words have reached our ears, "We heard some of your people and they preached the first principles until the last eve, then they preached a sermon on the Book of Mormon and went away. My experience is and has been that where we have come out soberly and boldly, long before our series of meetings were finished, and tell the people about the restoration of the gospel, defend the divine calling of Joseph Smith, and the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, show to the people that we are proud of the restored gospel and of the humble servant, prophet and seer, through whom it came, that we will gain many more friends among those who are the more intellectual and reasoning people. Then when they obey the truth it will be because they believe it, and they intend to stick to it. I have almost always had the larger audiences where the restoration has been fully explained than where it has not been mentioned.

I expect to go north again in a few days. I preached near home last Sunday to a crowded house, mostly very interested listeners. Bro. Muceus preached a series of meetings at this schoolhouse with good liberty and large crowds. We feel that the seed sown may develop for good in the future. He has now gone farther north for the winter. Ever praying for the redemption of Zion, I am,

Your colaborer,
J. B. WILDERMUTH.

LADD, Ill., Jan. 1.

Editors Herald:—We are still alive and enjoy the good things that come to those who are trying to do the will of God. We have at present Bro. J. T. Hackett with us, and he has told us something new and he has still more for us. We enjoy his visit very much, and I guess he does not feel lonesome, for his time is all taken up.

We are but few now, and we like to ask questions and hear sermons, so he is preaching each evening of this week, which is something we have not had since September. We are living and trusting in the Lord to lead us on and make use of us the best way he can. Please remember us out here in the middle of the field, that we may not be lost.

Yours in Christ.

LEON SNOW.

LOWER LAKE, Cal., Dec. 26.

Editors Herald:—I will try and write a few lines telling of the death of our beloved sister Cobb. During her life she did everything she could to care for those who were trying to spread the gospel. Her trials in this life were great; but on her dying bed, three nights before she breathed her last, she bore a lasting testimony to those around her of the reality of a happier life beyond. She saw invision the Savior; and sang sweetly:—

Jesus can make a dying bed
Feel soft as downy pillows are,
While on his breast I lean my head,
And breath my life out sweetly there."
E. C. GRAUMLICH.

FANNING, Kansas, January 2. In last week's Herald, page 833, is a sickly squib on "confession?" and the writer thereof is "scalawag!"

Now, ye editors, see here, please do not be compromised in any such work as that any more. It lowers, debases, and degrades the standard of our literature, and more especially "the church organ," to have such articles signed, Investigator, Honest seeker after the truth, Superior, Inferior, Brother, Sister, Friend, Scalawag, Dead Beet, Knave, Fool, or any other false, fictitious name. It being "The Saints" Herald, the common reader, and the most remote patron has a right to know who are the contributors of readable articles.

Let the dying year and the dead century be the requiem of such work, and turn over a new leaf, and it will do all good. The æsthetic taste of Garrett would hardly let "Scalawag" into the fair columns of the Ensign. A blow of a friend is far better than a traitorous kiss. You have few if any more loyal, sympathetic friends than your humble servant, hence I take the liberty to suggest reform, and improvement. Wishing thee only good with health of body, peace of mind, and prosperity in all lawful ways, I am truly.

M. T. SHORT.

[Does Bro. Short wish the editors to presume that the writer of the article on page 833 of the HERALD for December 26, 1900, did not sign his right name? If the article was good, let it stand on its own merit, not on the virtue of the name over which it was written.—ED.]

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Talk happiness. The world is sad enough, Without your woes. No path is wholly rough; Look for the places that are smooth and clear, And speak of those, to rest the weary ear, Of earth, so hurt by one continuous strain Of human discontent and grief and pain."

RELATION OF HOME AND SCHOOL.

In the discussion of the question of the relation of the home and the school, we find that education in its broadest sense is three-fold, an unfolding and development of the whole nature of the child; a culture of the head, the hand, and the heart. To connect the idea of education wholly with the instruction given in the schoolroom and the accomplishments acquired under the tuition of special masters, is a mistake. The larger part of a child's real education comes from other sources than the school or college; and the home, with its varying details of everyday life, is the best of schools. Relationship between home and school should be very close. As the child should develop and learn at home as well as at school, the time and privileges of one should not infringe upon the other.

In some instances we see where the duties of home are such that the child has not sufficient time for school work, and on the other hand, we find many times where the requirements of the school are of such a character that all the time out of school, as well as in, has to be employed in order to maintain the grades required. This, we think, should be corrected, and the work of the school be confined to the school hours, and not encroach upon the time that should be devoted to development at home. The pupil's tasks should be varied from time to time, and made pleasurable and progressive.

True education, in all lines, is a process of growth; and in domestic education, as in any other, there should be the opportunity afforded for climbing upwards, not only from one step to a higher of the same grade, but from one department of work to another, as strength and proficiency are gained; and the child ought not, for this reason, be deprived by the school of the benefits that accrue from well-directed home training, which teaches the nobility of labor, and aids in the formation of habits of industry. Coupled with the intellectual training of the school, it offers the child an all around education, which school work alone fails to give. It is the little learned from day to day that sums up at the end into something accomplished.

We find today the land full of high school and college graduates broken down in health, their brain filled with book knowledge, much of it acquired by time spent at home, that should have been devoted to recreation, and development in home duties, a knowledge of which goes far toward making our best mothers and home companions; a lack of such knowledge causing much dissatisfaction, dissensions, and unhappy homes.

The age when teachers boarded round had its advantages. They became acquainted with the parents, and they knew the children in their homes; saw the encouragements, also the discouragements, and were better able to deal with the children in the school. We are pleased to see the effort being made at the present time to increase the interest of the teacher in the home-life of the child.

We find our most successful instructors today visiting their pupils in their homes, which enables them to better direct the course of study, and to limit it to the capabilities of the child. We also find the busy parent who has an interest in the child's welfare visiting the school, and by their presence aiding the teacher and encouraging the child to something better.

Our school boards prescribe a course of study which the teachers are expected to follow; but our more progressive instructors are realizing that it is not the best plan to treat all pupils just alike. One method may be good for one child, but very injurious for another, although he may be equally bright, and that is where the teacher that visits the pupil in his home has the advantage. If he is familiar with his home life, he is better qualified to direct his school work, and can obtain greater results in a given length of time, without the constant strain on the child of outside work.

The home and school should go hand in hand, and each will be better for the association, and the benefit to the child will be greatly increased. Give the mothers time to cultivate the helpful, happy, loving side of our boys and girls, and they will come to you loyal, true subjects, and not of the kind that are ready for mutiny at any moment.

Mothers must put much careful thought on the question of wise control and development of their children, for if badly governed in the home they will be badly behaved and troublesome in the school and among their companions. While we magnify the power of wise government, no home thrives best where surface rule is the constant theme and diet. Give the boys and girls a rest once in a while, with freedom to think and act for themselves, that they may not be mere subordinates, without independence of thought or action.

Every mother desires her child to become educated in all that is right and good, but her diligence must be more than doubled if the influence exercised at home be not recognized in the school.

The influence of the home will always be remembered. The influence of the school may be; if bad, is sure to be. Let us therefore labor together, that a greater good may be accomplished; that we may look into the future, feeling confident that that which is right, true, and noble, shall increase, that the world may become better.

JEANNETTE BLAIR.

THE LITTLE ROOM UPSTAIRS.

The snow is softly falling,
The distant hills are white,
King Winter spreads his mantle
On Mother Earth tonight.

And yet it might be summer, So safe from winter's snares Are Ida's blooming flowers, In the little room upstairs.

And swinging near the flowers, In a pretty little cage, Are two yellow feathered birdies, In sweetest song engaged.

In the calm, clear evening twilight
Sweet music fills the air,
From the grand old French accordion,
Ida plays for us upstairs.
J. H.
June 7, 1900.

THE INFLUENCE OF HOPE.

How changed would be our condition in this life if we had no hope. It is the one bright star that shines for every one. For some it is brighter than for others, it is true; still it shines there in the horizon of the future, inviting us on to effort. The cares and the disappointments of life are to a great extent relieved by hope for something better in the future. Hope is one of the attributes of our natures, and has a work to do in the development of other faculties pertaining to our usefulness.

Hope encourages youth, it supports manhood, and consoles the aged who are tottering upon the verge of the grave. It points the captive to a day when he shall be at liberty, and invites the banished sufferer to a season of his return to his native land. Hone invites us all to glad scenes in the future. It is the "star in the east" to every life, without which the links in the chain that connects society would snap, and all order would tumble into chaos. Shut out from hope, how dark-aye how blank would be our future! Our lives would be like the world without the sun! Despair would take possession of our minds, and we would have no incentive to enable us to become useful either to ourselves or to society.

Hope inspires us with a courage that enables us to meet the disappointments of life, and to bear up under its burdens. When disease has laid its hand upon us, and pain is racking our systems, hope whispers of a return to health. When misfortune darkens the present, hope hangs her light somewhere in the future and we endeavor to reach it, and emerge from the gloom that surrounds us. In every department of life, hope is our guiding star. It enters into families and gives light to each one. It cheers the father's heart and gives strength to his arms.

It gives the mothers joy, as it points to the possibilities in the future for her children.

Ah; how well I know the sweet influence of hope while I stood by the side of my stricken husband, knowing the "death angel," was hovering over him: that it would be the last time I would see him in life. With my heart almost breaking, hope came to my rescue, and as I whispered my last "good-bye" in his ear, and said, "We will meet again, darling, in that beautiful world where parting never comes," he raised his eyes to mine, full of love, and a sweet smile passed over his face as he bowed his head in answer. It is truly said. "Were it not for hope the heart would break." Finally in all of life's surging circumstances, hope is the anchor that holds to the better part of life, and at the end hope steps to our bedside and whispers lovingly of a bright immortality which is infinitely of more value than all earthly possessions.

PAULA.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

TO GENERAL CHURCH MISSIONARIES.

We wish every church missionary to have the Senior Quarterly to carry with him at all times in his work. We know, too, that all are not able financially to send for them at the proper time. But we want you to have one any way. So if you will drop me a card stating that you would like to have the Senior Quarterly (or other grade if you prefer) for your individual use, we will have it sent free up to June, 1901.

It will be remembered that this privilege is restricted to missionaries laboring under general church authorities and out in the field, and for them to carry with them at all times. Write to me and not to the Herald Office upon this matter. Do not hesitate to write if you wish the Quarterly.

In bonds,

T. A. HOUGAS, Gen. Supt.

TEACHER'S CLASS BOOKS.

God recognizes the need of records being kept, and this principle is recognized by all thoughtful men in all classes of business; and the success of all enterprises depends largely upon correct records being kept. No business would be satisfactory to a thoughtful person where there were no records to show the conditions of the business.

The nearer correct these records are, the more satisfactory, from the fact it shows to honest efforts the successes and failures, and where corrections need be made to avoid future failures, and how to continue, that reward may be sure. The honest seeker for everlasting life makes daily examination of the record made, and views with sadness the mistakes and short comings shown, and with gratitude seeks the Lord for help to make a more perfect record following, for the reason that it is known that the reward is in accord with the record we are daily making.

In our Sunday school work we are expected to teach and impress the importance of correct principles, and it is a correct principle that "every one of us shall give account of himself to God (Rom. 14:12), and "if we judge ourselves we should not be judged." (1 Cor. 11:31.) This brings us to the conclusion that every scholar should judge himself and give an account, each Sunday, to his teacher, upon which the record is made if the scholars understand how, if they do not, they should be taught, and aided in giving as nearly a correct record of work as is possible.

The simpler class books can be made to approximate perfectness in the record the better, but we should not study simplicity to the destruction of perfectness in the record to be made. This brings us to the question direct, Are the present class books what they should be; and if not, wherein can they be improved? The present class books provide that one credit shall be given for attendance. This is certainly not an unnecessary item. credit shall be given for punctuality. This is certainly worthy of notice. Three credits for deportment. Is not this a correct number to govern in recording deportment? We see the principle of God's judgment is that those who do not deport themselves so as to obtain the first or second glory is accorded the right to receive of the third, and is it not true that a more nearly correct record can be made to use three as the basis than any less number, and to use more would certainly complicate matters.

Then one credit is given for learning the Golden Text, and it is possible for all to learn and be profited by learning this. One credit for learning a Memory Verse, either as provided for in the lesson or as provided for by the teacher, and whenever a special work is required a record should be made as to whether it be done. Three credits for the lesson; and this is a basis upon which a more correct record can be made than to say it was right or wrong, wholly so, as the sectarian idea of God's judgment is, and give them a record of a perfect lesson, or assign them to nothingness.

The above plan provides for a very simple mode of recording, easy to be understood by both teacher and scholar, if interested in this work as they should be in all work they engage in as relating to this life, or the life to come. It is only those who do not view the importance of the record of life, and its being the basis of future reward, who do not consider the need of records for the Sunday school, or their record in their Sunday school being kept.

Uniformity of a system of records should be considered advisable, and of some importance, and not every school become a law unto itself. The class books as published will secure uniformity, and obtain as nearly a correct record of the work of the school, and every member therein, and it seems sufficiently simple to be kept in any school, and understood by all the scholars, unless it be the kindergarten class. And it is but following out a correct principle to accept of the provisions made by the General Association or executive officers of such association, of which each school is but a part, until such provisions are amended, or it can be shown that some principle of unrighteousness enters into an acceptance of these provisions. I have ascertained that those teachers who have studied to understand their duty in regard to keeping correct record in class books, and made effort to keep record accordingly a sufficient length of time to test their merits, value them much more than they had thought they would before looking into them understandingly. I have also ascertained that it is those scholars who need to be taught the value of making a correct record, and trying each day to improve upon record made, who are the most indifferent to the duty of aiding the teachers in making a correct record of the work done in the Sunday school.

Let us all seek more diligently to "learn our duty and do it," not being considered slothful, but wise servants.

Yours in Christ.

J. F. MINTUN.

OUR FIRST CHILDREN'S DAY.

"Shall we have a children's day?" was propounded some weeks ago to our school. All wanted one, so of course it was voted yes. A committee was appointed to make all arrangements: the branch voted that the children should have the day, and so the work was begun. Obstacles stood in the way. First, ours was only a small country school, then the members were somewhat scattered, and to meet often to practice was difficult; but we had decided to have a children's day. and all worked with a will. Under these conditions such obstacles could not prevent us. At the first committee meeting discussion brought out first, the motive; second, the result to be accomplished; third, the means by which to attain that result.

THE MOTIVE

was summed up as—love for Christ and the children; the result, the strength and development of the members, and the honor and glory of God; the means, doing all meekly and in harmony with the spirit of the work. Agreeably with this, it was arranged that the children's program should be illustrative of the life of Christ.

HOW PREPARED.

During the next week back numbers of Heralds, Hopes, and other papers were drawn from their dark recesses and searched for recitations bearing upon the life of Christ. These were all sent to one who had in charge their assignment, and so fast did they come in that we had to say, "It is enough." The parts were carefully assigned and learned; music was prepared, and all anxiously looked forward to the day.

THE WORK OF THE SCHOOL had not been in vain, for when one expressed the thought that if there were any desiring baptism, that day would be an appropriate time for it, two children earnestly requested that they be baptized. So baptism was to be a part of the program. At last when came with its beautiful clear sky, the children hurried with buoyant steps and cheerful faces to the place of worship, while other friends and neighbors also came. The schoolhouse (for that is where we met) had previously been cleaned and decorated with green things and flowers, and over the stand a motto hung from the ceiling with the words, "Love for Jesus."

THE DAY

At ten a. m. the regular session of Sunday school was held, and at eleven a short address was given by the district assistant superintendent from the words on the motto, after which our missionary in charge, Bro. H. Kemp, gave the address bearing upon the Sabbath school work. In the afternoon five were brought into the fold by baptism and confirmation, three of whom however were from a neighboring school. The evening session was all that could be wished for; the audience being large to overcrowding, many non-members being present. The children. small and large, seemed filled with the spirit of the work and performed their parts without hesitation, and from the peaceful, joyous influence which filled the house, we believe the Lord was pleased with the efforts. The day marks in our Sunday school. The pupils have come to a better understanding of what the school is really for, and the outsiders have begun to feel its influence for good, and respect it accordingly. The day forms a bright spot on memory's page for all present, and will remain especially with those who then received an adoption into the kingdom of heaven.

THE BEGINNING OF A NEW PERIOD

DISTRICT ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT.
From Fremont, Iowa, District Sunday school news-

LITTLE SIOUX.

Convention met at Persia, Iowa, November 30. Called to order by J. F. Mintun. Anne Stuart secretary pro tem. All present were considered members of convention. Officers reporting: J. F. Mintun, superintendent; Lenna Strand, secretary; Nellie Ballantyne treasurer; and Annie Stuart, librarian. Bill of secretary was allowed. Treasurer's report accepted as read, showing $7.42 on hand. Schools reporting: Logan, Union Center, Hope, Mondamin, Bigler's Grove, East Union Center, Missouri Valley, Little Sioux, Woodbine, Persia, and Sloan. Superintendent's reports read. Miscellaneous questions were discussed. Blackboard work on "Home Department," by district superintendent. Paper: "Benefits of Sunday school," by Nellie Hall. Short talks on benefits of Sunday school. Illustration of intermediate work in class by district superintendent. Question and discussion on credit system. Adjourned to Magnolia, Iowa.

COMMITTEE ON IMPROVEMENTS.

After about nine months' additional consideration, the committee appointed to consider and suggest improvements in connection with Sunday school work, report briefly as follows:—

1. The improvements suggested to last convention we still believe, if adopted, would be of advantage to the work of the association.

2. We urge a careful and prayerful consideration of each one, as appears in the published copy of our report as corrected.

lished copy of our report as corrected.

3. We especially urge a favorable consideration: (a) Of increasing the Sunday school Department in Saints' Herald. (b) To the improving of Zions' Hope, and since it is published in the interest of the Sunday school department of church work, we recommend that the General Convention ask the General Conference to place the publishing of Zion's Hope under control of General Sunday School Association.

In behalf of committee, J. F. MINTUN, Chairman.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Decatur Sunday school and Religio conventions meet at Lamoni, Iowa, January 31, 2:30 p. m., continuing till evening of February 1. This is the annual convention when we elect officers for the coming year and delegates to the General Convention. A good representation is desired, as important matters are to be considered. Programs will be sent each school and local as usual.

F. E. COCHRAN, J. P. ANDERSON, Supts.

Sunday school workers will meet in convention at Kewanee, Ilinois, February 8, at 10: 30 a.m. Election of officers and general association business. Let us have a good delegation present. F. A. RUSSELL, Supt.

Conference Minutes.

MOBILE.

Conference convened at Three Rivers, Mississippi, December 8. T. C. Kelley and D. E. Tucker chosen to preside; W. L. Booker secretary pro tem. Verbal reports from branches showed no changes. Ministry reporting: Elders W. L. Booker, D. E. Tucker baptized 3, John Mizell, and G. W. Sherman; Priests Reuben Mizell and James Falk; Teachers David Goff, D. W. Tillman, and Wiley Mizell. W. L. Booker, Bishop's agent, reported that the tent was somewhat damaged, and that no sale or other disposition of it has been made. T. C. Kelley, missionary in charge, reported on division of Mobile district, to the effect that in his judgment it would be a detriment rather than a help, and asked to be released, which was granted. Resolved that each branch secure its own blanks for reporting to district conference. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $64 92; received since $41. Paid out $45,13; balance on hand $60.75. Audited and found correct. Preaching by D. E. Tucker and T. C. Kelley. Adjourned to meet at Three Rivers, Mississippi, Saturday, March 2.

LITTLE SIOUX.

Conference met at Persia, Iowa, December I. G. M. Scott and J. A. Donaldson presiding, J. F. Mintun and Annie Stuart clerks. Reports of branches: Woodbine, Union Center, Mondamin, Persia, Magnolia, Missouri Valley, and Little Sioux. Report of secretary on work done on branch and district records read. Ministerial reports: High Priests J. M. Baker, G. M. Scott, and S. B. Kibler; Seventy J. F. Mintun, W. A. Smith, and D. R. Chambers: Elders S. H. McDonald, F. E. Cohrt, J. A. Donaldson, J. Seddon, G. H. Shearer, W. T. Fallon, D. A. Hutchings, C. F. Pratt, F. Hansen, W. D. Bullard, Arthur Baker, F. J. Seeley, and Thomas Thomas; Priests C. H. Belkham, Robert Chambers, and John Chapman; Teachers J. Atkinson, R. Kirkwood, and J. O. Booth; Deacons Aaron Sweet, J. W. Hirst, John Chambers, and T. Landangham. Bishop's agent's report: Financial report of secretary read and received, and a collection ordered taken to liquidate the account. An account with A. H. Rudd was read and allowed. Committee report on Missouri Valley branch was read and approved and committee discharged. Financial report of J. M. Baker of tent work read. Total amount of indebtedness of district $11.93. Total collections taken during conference $13.17. Resolved that immediate steps be taken under the direction of district presidency and Bishop's agent to secure a district tent, they to use the old district tent to the best of their judgment. The president and secretary of district were authorized to grant letter of removal to David Thomas. By separate motions the district president and secretary were authorized to issue teachers' licenses to J. O. Booth and David Goodman, and a deacon's license to James W. Hirst. Spiritual condition of branches was reported. Time for completion of work on district records was extended until next conference. Report of Sunday school convention read. One priesthood meeting, one prayer service, and three preaching services were held. Preaching by J. A. Donaldson, J. M. Baker, and J. F. Mintun. Adjourned to Magnolia, Iowa.

Miscellaneous Department.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

On December 31 I mailed a circular letter to each member whose post office address I had, but some of the addresses are known to be wrong, but were all that I could get. Possibly they may be forwarded to you. But the probabilities are that they will not be. So if you do not receive the letter by January 10, write me and give full correct address and I will mail you another. It is very important that I hear from every one and soon.

Any deaths that may have occurred should be reported to the secretary of the quorum. Please let me hear from you promply.

T. A. HOUGAS, Sec. and Treas.

PASTORAL.

The climate of eastern Michigan having militated against the health of Bro. C. Scott, and Bro. Lake having kindly consented to a transfer of field, I take this method of notifying the Saints of Decatur district that Bro. Scott will labor in said district for the ensuing portion of the conference year.

ing portion of the conference year.

J. W. WIGHT, Missionary in Charge.

Bro. George Montague having removed from Iowa to Oklahoma, will labor in this field until next General Conference, and will be at liberty to labor anywhere in the mission his services may be needed as his health and circumstances permit, and I hereby commend him to the care and confidence of the Saints. H. O. SMITH, President of Mission.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Kewanee district conference will convene February 9, at ten o'clock, at Kewanee, Illinois. District officers will be elected for ensuing year. Local officers will please bring or send their reports, that we may know who are working. J. W. ADAMS, Pres.

Conference of Florida district will convene with Pleasant View branch on Saturday, February 2, at ten o'clock. Bro. T. C. Kelley is to be with us. A full attendance is desired. Will branches send in reports on time?

W. J. BOOKER Pres.
S. D. ALLEN, Clerk.

Ohio conference will meet at Limerick,
February 2, at ten a. m. Branch reports will be made to the undersigned. Those from a distance wishing assistance from railroads will inform T. J. Beatty, Limerick, Ohio, in due time. Come to Jackson on Friday, the 1st, via Hocking Valley road, if practicable.

JAMES MOLER, Pres.

Nodaway conference will meet at Guilford, Missouri, February 2 and 3. Sunday school convention to meet at two o'clock on the first. E. S. FANNON, Pres.

Southern Wisconsin conference will be held at East Delavan, February 2 and 3. Branches and officials will please send reports to W. A. McDowell, Williams Bay, Wisconsin. Those coming on train from the west will be met at Delavan at one p. m.

west will be met at Delavan at one p. m. W. A. McDowell, Pres. J. O. Dutton, Sec.

By consent of Greenville and Lamoni branches the Decatur district conference will convene at Lamoni, Saturday February 2, at ten a. m. This is the time for election of district officers and delegates to General Conference. Branch presidents, please see that branch reports are in the hands of the secretary, B. M. Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa, in due time, also individual reports of labor and the condition of branches. Will the priesthood who have done labor outside of their respective branches please hand in written reports of same. All reports to be in writing.

F. M. WELD, Pres.

F. M. WELD, Pres. B. M. Anderson, Sec.

Fremont district conference will meet at Shenandoah, Iowa, February 2, ten a.m. Send reports to me at Shenandoah, that I can get them by January 30. Let all who can come, that the district may be truly represented in special business that will arise. Brethren, do not delay reporting, as I expect to make a summarized report from yours. CHARLES FRY, Sec.

Conference of Nauvoo district will meet at Rock Creek, Illinois, Saturday, February 2. The priesthood are requested to send reports to the secretary before conference; branch presidents, make separate report of other than branch work, if you have any. Election of district officers for ensuing year and appointment of delegates to General Conference. Send reports to J. W. Stobaugh, secretary, 2708 Chicago street, Ft. Madison, Iowa.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO MEMORIAL FUND TO JOSEPH AND HYRUM SMITH, THE MARTYRS.

Previously reported $34	1 77
LIST, OLE MADISON, BEDISON, MISSOUR AS FOLLOWS:—	₹I,
Jno. Breen, Missouri	50
Ole Madison, Missouri	25
Rasmus Lorenson, Missouri	25
E. S. Fannon, Missouri	$\frac{25}{25}$
	40
LIST, R. M. ELVIN, AS FOLLOWS:-
H. A. Hartshorn, Iowa	25
Sarah Sloan, Iowa	10
Jas. J. Post, Iowa	06
O. J. Bradley, Iowa	10
Olive and Martha Bailey, Iowa	25
William Murray, Iowa	05
J. L. Morgan, Iowa	25
D T. Williams, Iowa	50
Fergus Mayer, Iowa	50
Eliza Mayer, Iowa	50
Geo. W. Mayer, Iowa	50
Jos. A. Williams, Iowa	25
Jas. Wilkinson, Iowa	50
John A. and Rose Evans. Iowa	50
Henrietta Talbot, Iowa	. 50
Jas. W. Talbot, Iowa	25
John C. Talbot, Iowa	10
D. E. Daniels, Iowa	50
	00
John Riley, Indian Territory	25

 W. S. Pender, Missouri
 25

 C. J. Hunt, Iowa
 1 00

 Total
 $45 68

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

Jan. 5, 1901.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

There will be a two days' meeting at the Union branch, Indiana, February 2 and 3. We have arranged this meeting so as to have the presence of Bishop E. L. Kelley and missionary in charge, while they are in our district. Saints, please take notice and give us your presence.

M. R. SCOTT, Jr., Pres.

BORN.

ELVIN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, December 8, 1900, to Bro. Reuben C. and Sr. Nellie N. Eivin, a son. Blessed at home January 2, 1901; by grandfather R. M. Elvin and Bishop E. L. Kelley, and named Robert Meredith.

MARRIED.

LAUGHLIN—RICHESON.—At the home of the bride's parents, near State Center, Iowa, on the eve of January 1, 1901. Bro. Garrett G Laughlin and Sr. Bessie F. Richeson, Elder F. A. Russell officiating. The bride is an accomplished young woman, firm in the faith, and a zealous Sunday school worker. The groom, a prosperous young farmer, of sterling qualities, residing near Olivet, Iowa. Both these young folks are an honor to the church and their community. Only a few friends and relatives were present. Sr. Bessie thus leaves the lovely home of her childhood, and with the well wishes of all who know them, Bro. and Sr. Laughlin go to their home near Olivet, Iowa. May the blessings of heaven attend.

ntan.

MCPHERSON.—At Dunham, Alabama, November 29, 1900, Sr. Mary P. McPherson, who was born April 5, 1874, to Bro. John M. and Sr. Lizzie Patrick. She was baptized October 19, 1891, and was married to Bro. G. E. McPherson, May 18, 1899. She was highly respected by all who knew her. Leaves her husband and little Mamie Ruth of six months old, with a great many relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

In memory of Mary Patrick McPherson, who died at two a. m., November 29, 1900.

From our midst a dear one's taken, And our hearts with sorrow swell; From the tree of earth-life shake, She doth now in heaven dwell.

In the home her friends now miss her, And their hearts are sad and sore; But the dews of heaven kiss her, Over on that shining shore;

Down beside the shining river, Where sweet flowers ever bloom, She will walk with angels ever, Where there's not a shade of gloom.

She has crossed the mystic river, And her soul is now at rest; And in joy and peace forever, She will dwell among the blest.

She has gone away and left us,
And our hearts now ache with pain;
Of her smiles death hath bereft us,
But we hope to meet again.

Yes, again we hope to meet her, And again to clasp her hand; Yes, again we hope to greet her, Over in that happy land.

In the resurrection morning.
She will rise from out the tomb;
Glory then her face adorning,
With a never fading bloom.

T. C. KELLEY.

November 29, 1900.

TAMISIEA.—Sr. Cora Tamisiea died August 5, 1900, at South Omaha, Nebraska; was buried at Missouri Valley, Iowa, August 7. Funeral conducted by Joseph Seddon; sermon preached by W. A. Smith.

The Saints' Herald.

(Established 1860.)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price, $1 50 per year.

Subscription price, $1.50 per year.
Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."
Marriage, birth, and death notices: Marriages, $1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business managements.

For advertising rates apply to business manager.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of immediately, as reaccounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remit-Send all outliess letters and make all remitances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

If asked to state in a single word the prime cause of their sleeplessness, nine out of ten would say, "I was worried." What is worry? Anxious thought out of place; at times when it bears no fruit in definite plan and practical action. Worry is extremely complex, but its conspicuous elements are perplexity and indecision, coupled with dread of contingencies: for, if one can grasp the situation and decide what to do, does not worry vanish? The man who can settle overnight his exact plans for tomorrow, goes to sleep. Study the way in which worry operates, and you discover its elements. Its perplexity wanders over the field of vague possibility; its indecision moves from point to point, uncertain where to drive the first stake; while its apprehensiveness diverts the mind from even these flighty surveys by its suggestions of failure or disaster in whatever might be attempted. In this train of speculation, without beginning and without end, the brain is like an engine running under full head with the power transferred to the "idler." It is this kind of meditation that produces morbid mental activity and the nervous wakefulness that, long continued, becomes habitual insomnia.

Mental anxiety often leads to neglect of health, and a depressed physical condition in turn reacts upon the mind. Many persons when worried or grieved retire, nominally to rest, but actually to bury hot faces in smoth-ering pillows and weep hysterically until eye-lids are inflamed, and the whole body feverish and wretchedly uncomfortable. This is the worst thing that they could do, mentally or physically. "A good cry" is now and then quite a solid comfort, as Tom Hood has declared; but only under certain conditions, and those not tragic. Rather, it is an excess of tender emotion that thus finds wholesome relief. But when assailed by stern anxieties, beware of tears. If you feel them starting, drive them back with a smile. Instead of letting sleepless worry make you ill, take a soothing, refreshing bath, and attend to every hygienic and esthetic detail of the toilet; then clothe this physical perfection of daintiness in the daintiest linen and the most stylish and becoming outer garments. The effect is conscious dignity sustained by physical presence. In thus pausing to adorn the temple, you have done honor to the soul. To be well groomed and well dressed is one expression of that self-respect without which no character is strong. Add to the mental benefit the physical effect of the bath, and the conditions for restful sleep are largely attained. When mind and body are in a normal state, the giant worry seems to dwindle. And when, refusing to vanish alto-gether, it threatens you with a sleepless night, you can look it in the face and say, "I know just what you are, and the extent of your power to harass me: since you have nothing new to divulge at present, I will banish you and go to sleep." It is an audacious worry that hangs around after a philosophical dismissal.—From "The Moral Aspect of Insomnia," by Agnes H. Morton, in the January Chautauguan.

Doubleday, Page, and Co., the originators and publishers of the now very well known "Nature Series," have just added to it a volume on mushrooms. The series, it will be remembered, consists of Neltje Blanchard's "Birds That Hunt and Are Hunted," "Nature's Garden," and Dr. W. J. Holland's "Butterfly Book." The general features of the whole series are the accurate and beautiful colored illustrations, the clear and intelligent accompanying text, and the very moderate price at which the books are published. "The Mushroom Book," by Miss Nina L. Marshall, will have all of these features. There are thirty-two colored illustrations, and several score black and white plates from remarkable photographs. It is intended that the book shall appeal particularly to the unscientific reader, enabling him to identify the edible and poisonous varieties, and thus forming a sort of first book for his study. The author, Nina L Marshall, is a teacher of botany. In preparing this book she has also had the assistance of several well-known authorities on the subject. There can be no reason, then, why the "Mushroom Book," when published, should not immediately step into the unique place now held by other works in this series.

There are those to whom the dream is more than the reality. Inspired by visions are they instead of by well-assured facts. The great ones of the world belong to this class. The world calls them dreamers, and is in the end ruled by them. Mahomet, Napoleon, Washington, Gladstone, Bismarck, Lincoln all these were followers of their own aspirations and ambitions, guided by a foresight which looked to others, when the event ma-terialized, like foreknowledge.

The great man is simply the man who retains and tries to realize the generous dreams of his boyhood and youth. Most men and women are "quitters." They start in the race of life with enthusiasm and determination enough, but the effort of the start is too much for them, and they lag at the first milestone. It is the dreamer who keeps on, not physical because of greater mental or strength, but because of his unfading, un-changeable dream. The urging vision, fresh and inspiring, will not let him stop. And when life's race is done, his name alone, of all the starting contestants, is written on the pages of his time, and "the rest" are "no-where."—Ada C. Sweet, in Woman's Home Companion.

Madame Sarah Grand lately consented to talk on the Art of Happiness. Some of her aphorisms are worth keeping.

There are minor pleasures whose effect is accumulative, and which make up a happy

Even in choosing to be miserable we are happy, since there is happiness in every act of choice.

Amongst women the desire to work is not so common that it should be discouraged.

There is a great deal of difference between copy and an imitation. The misery children make for their parents is well known; the misery parents make for their children not so well.

The two great sources of happiness are health of body and strength of mind. In recipes for happiness goodness must always be the principal ingredient. When people begin to be critical they cease to be pleasant.

THE review of the month in the January World's Work sweeps over the whole field of activity in its straightforward and cheerful treatment of the most important contemporaneous events; political, sociological, educational, international, and literary-from New England to Alabama and California in our own land and from Egypt to the Arctic. Among the articles are: "Great Tasks of the New Century" which point out a dozenor more revolutionary undertakings which the great governments and the great corporations of the world have in hand, the completion of which will change the routes of travel and the direction of civilization.

Another notable article is "The Duty of Getting Rich," by Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts, who shows that the old doctrine of the depravity of riches is an economic and religious error. The World's Work takes the current of contemporaneous events and activities at its flood, and it is written in plain, direct English, without superfluous words... It drives straight towards the main point.

In the Critic for the month of January appears an article from the pen of an old time publisher, which is one of the most interesting things which that excellent magazine has presented for some time. Sir George M. Smith, of the London firm of Smith, Elder and Co., and lately knighted by the Queen, in an article entitled "In the Early Forties," deals most entertainingly with some of his early experiences in the publishing business, which brought him in contact with some of the most famous of English writers, among them being Dickens, Thackeray, and Charlotte Bronie. The personalities of the writers Mr. Smith speaks of are so peculiarly presented, that one is led to view these authors in a light somewhat unusual. We are told by the publishers of the Critic that the number of these articles will depend somewhat, if not entirely, upon the "whim" of the writer. We most sincerely hope that the "whim" will last for some time yet, as Mr. Smith certainly writes in a delightfully interesting manner about these famous persons.

Publication of the account of the Harriman expedition to Alaska, which Doubleday. Page & Co. have in hand, has been delayed until the opening of the new year, owing to the difficulty experienced in the printing of the many colored plates which are to accompany it. The volume promises, when finally given to the public, to be the finest example of book-making devoted to a work of scientific travel and exploration ever put forth in this country.

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Address, THE PATRIOT, Lamoni, Towa.

A postal card brings a sample copy.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032,34; April 1, 1900, $162,781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All etters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letter; to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

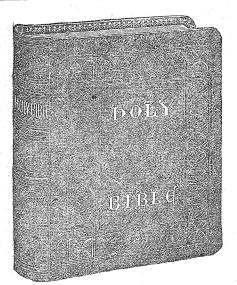

STOCK HOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eila D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

QUIT-TO-BAC

THREE BOXES POSITIVELY GUARANTEED to cure any form of tobacco habit or money cheerfully refunded. Sent postpaid on receipt of $1 50 U.S. stamps taken.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY,
Peoria, Ill., U.S. A.

GOSPEI	f L QUARTERL	IES.
P	ublished by 1	the General
$\mathbf{S}^{_{1}}$	unday School	Association.
	esigned for use chool work. I erly.		40
	enior Grade, per	r quarter	08
	er year, in adva		25
	ntermediate Gra
		, 1	05
	er year		15
	rimary Grade,		$\overline{05}$
	er year		15
-	or jear
DOOK C	OF MORMON.	Tamma tuma
	dition.	rarge type
	loth, leather ba	cks and cor-	# P'O
	010		1 50
	eal gr ain russia ,
109. F	lexible, gilt edg	es	k 00

NO. 415 GRAINED AMERICAN CALF, padded sides, round corners on covers, gold edges. Large quarto size, 101x121 inches, containing the Authorized Version Old and containing the Authorized Version Old and New Testaments; marginal references full-page maps in colors; history of the 8th of the Bible; forty-eight full-page illustrations; chronological tables; photo-views of scenes in Bible lands; coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; pronouncing dictionary of scripture proper names; apocrypha; marriage certificate, family record and temperance pledge in colors; chronological index; 4,000 questions and answers; concordance; Psalms in metre; twenty-five full-page Doréengravings; six full-page illustrations in colors, etc., etc. Price, $4.25. ors, etc., etc. Price, $4.25.

SAINTS' HYMNAL. Words and music. 108. Paper covers, each Per dozen	3	30 20
110. Cloth, limp Per dozen		35 75
111. Cloth and leather		50 00 25
114. Flexible, leather		50
THE INSTRUCTOR. A compendium of the faith and doctrines of the church by Elder G. T. Griffiths.
126. Cloth	1	75 00 50

NO. 420 AMERICAN MOROCCO, raised panel, full gold sides, back and edges, new pronouncing parallel Bible. References. Both versions Old and New Testaments in parallel columns line for line, upon each page. Large quarto. Size, 12½x10½ inches. Two Bibles in one volume. Every proper name is divided into syllables, and an accent mark is placed over the syllable upon which emphasis should rest. A new pronouncing dictionary of nearly 4.000 scriptural proper names; marriage certificate, family record and temperance pledge; four full-page maps in colors; twenty-five full-page Doré engravings; five full-page illustrations in colors; seripture illustrations; chronology, coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; concordance; Psalms in metre; the reviser's preface, etc. Price, $5 25.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK

of IOWA, LAMONI.

Solicits your Deposits and pays

4 1-2 % INTEREST. D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

Book of Mormon Maps.

Lecture size 5x8 feet on muslin for traveling ministry, $2 00. Home and office size 39x51 inches on paper, cloth back and varnished in colors, $1.50.

All maps sent by express, charges 30c. and upwards according to distance, to be paid at end of route. Send orders to

G. F. WESTON,

1-9-6t

Buchanan, Michigan.

HOMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in DeKalb county. Missouri, four miles from Amity, and five miles from Clarksdale; near line of Reck I-land railroad and switch station, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchaser. Terms reasonable.

Address,

J. O. SOUTHARD. Mgr.,
Amity, Missouri. or CHARLES P. FAUL, Clarksdale, Missouri.

IOWA.

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good photograph, and get 25 stamp photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 lign photo button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents each. Large 60 lign buttons 35 cents, and extra buttons from same picture 20 cents. Your photograph will be returned Send silver.

W. M. KECK. Photographer,
49-13t.

Lock Box 125, Joy, Illinois.

DR. E. S. SWEET, DENTIST.

Decoe Building,

WOODBINE,

${f KEOKUK}$ & ${f WESTERN}$ R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p.m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a.m., arrive at Leon 11: 45 a. m.

Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C. B. & Q. at Leon.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chi-cago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:09

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a.m. following morning

THE TWO RECORDS The Kook

LELE ETTO ETHOCETOO. THO DOOR of Mormon and the New Testament. Inspired Translation; large type, in one volume.
98. Leather back and covers	2	00
99. Seal grain russia	2	50
100. Imitation morocco, gilt edges,	3	50
101. Morocco, gilt edges	4	00
ARCHÆOLOGICAL COMMITTEE REPORT. Evidences in support of the Book of Mormon, with maps.		30
136. Paper		50
137. Cloth		υv
RULES OF ORDER AND DE-BATE.
161. Cloth		40

AINTS' -

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."-B, of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 16, 1901.

NO. 3.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH EDITOR. FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR. Joseph Luff D. W. Wight CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, JAN. 16, 1901.

APOSTATE-APOSTASY.

Apostasy means a departure from the faith. An apostate is one who has departed from the faith. apostatize is to leave the original faith, or church, to which one has given adherence and has heretofore been loyal. The editor of the HER-ALD having been called an apostate. has thought it would be of advantage to some who might take an interest in the subject, to make a brief statement in regard to this charge.

I was baptized by my father before his death in the fall of 1843, or spring of 1844, in the Mississippi river, at the foot of Main street, in Nauvoo, Illinois.

The faith of the church as published by Joseph Smith, the then president, prophet, and chief apostle of the church, was as follows:-

We believe in God the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost. We believe that men will be punished for their own sins and not for Adam's transgression.

We believe that through the atonement of Christ all mankind may be saved by obedience to the law and ordinances of the gospel.

We believe that these ordinances are 1st, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; 2d, Repentance; 3d, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; 4th, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. We believe that a man must be called of God by "prophecy, and by laying on of hands" by those who are in authority to preach the gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof.

We believe in the same organization that existed in the primitive church, viz : apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists,

We believe in the gift of tongues, prophecy, revelation, visions, healing, interpretation of tongues, etc.

We believe the Bible to be the word of God as far as it is translated correctly, we also be-lieve the Book of Mormon to be the word of God.

We believe all that God has revealed, all that he does now reveal and we believe that he will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

We believe in the literal gathering of Israel and in the restoration of the Ten Tribes. That Zion will be built upon this continent. That Christ will reign personally on the earth, and that the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisaic glory.
We claim the privilege of worshiping Almighty God according to the dictates of our conscience, and allow all men the same privilege, let them worship how, where, or what they may.

We believe in being subject to kings, presidents, rulers, and magistrates, in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the law.

We believe in being honest, true, chaste.

benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men; indeed, we may say that we follow the admonition of Paul, "We believe all things," we have endured many things, and hope to be able to endure all things. If there is any thing virtuous, lovely, or of good report or praise-worthy we seek after these things.

The foregoing statement of the faith of the church we copy from an article published in the Times and Seasons, the recognized organ of the church, for March 1, 1842, vol. 3, No. 9, pp. 706-710. It is presented to the readers of the church paper in the following preliminary statement:-

At the request of Mr. John Wentworth, editor, and proprietor of the "Chicago Demo-crat," I have written the following sketch of the rise, progress, persecution, and faith of the Latter Day Saints, of which I have the the Latter Day Saints, or which I have the honor, under God, of being the founder. Mr. Wentworth says that he wishes to furnish Mr. Bastow, a friend of his, who is writing the history of New Hampshire, with this document. As Mr. Bastow has taken the proper steps to obtain correct information, all that I shall ask at his hands is that he publish the account entire, ungarnished and without misrepresentation.

Then follows a brief history, closing with the statement of the faith, to which is signed the name Joseph Smith. This, or a similar document containing the same epitome of belief, was furnished by Joseph Smith to I. Daniel Rupp, of Pennsylvania, for his work "History of the Religious denominations of the United States," published in the year 1844.

I joined the church under this published statement of the articles of faith, thereby consenting to the formula at the time, and subsequently. after reaching maturer years, affirming my adherence and allegiance to the doctrines therein stated, and this affirmation I have made repeatedly for many years. I have not at any time refused credence to any of the items of faith therein set forth; nor do I now refuse to accept them. In what sense, then, am I apostate? apostate because I refuse to believe that Joseph Smith, the one who wrote, as he states above, that he had the "honor under God" of being the "founder" of the church of Latter Day Saints, deliberately stated to Mr. Wentworth, and through him to his patrons of the Chicago Democrat, and the public, through that paper, Mr.

Bastow's history of New Hampshire and Mr. Rupp's "History of Religious Denominations in the United States,' what was a misleading and false account of the faith of that church? Am I apostate because I refuse to accept statements of others born into the world and the church after I was, that the so-called revelation ordering or sanctioning a contrary doctrine to that revealed and published in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, given in 1831, sections 42 and 49, and the article on marriage, based thereon accepted and published in the book by the church in 1835, was given to and known by the prophet and revelator in 1831, at the very date that the revelations concerning the marriage relation establishing the one wife system were received and published in the councils of the church?

To accept such a statement would be to implicate the man who "under God" founded the church, in a system of deception, hypocrisy, double dealing and lying, absolutely at variance with all the gospel teaching from the Savior's disputation with the doctors to the last sermon preached by Joseph Smith, or any of his associates during his lifetime; completely incompatible with the declaration made at the close of the statement of the faith of the church, "If there is anything virtuous, lovely, or of good report, or praiseworthy we seek after these things.'

Am I apostate because I refuse to say that I know my father, the Seer, practiced secretly what was a direct infraction of the law of the land, what made him a criminal before the law and the courts if he should have been charged, arrested, and tried for it, when I never so much as heard of his having been guilty of such conduct until after his death, and of which I absolutely knew nothing! Am I apostate because I do not believe that my mother, whom the Lord called an "elect lady," was guilty of lying when she stated that her husband had no other woman to wife to her knowledge, that she never saw, nor heard read, nor burned the original of the so-called revelation on the marriage relation of which a purported copy was read by order of Pres. Brigham Young, in Salt Lake City, August 29, 1852, and that she never at any time consented to my father taking other women to be his wives? All this she affirmed from the time of my father's death until her own departure from life thirty-five years later. Am I apostate because I believe that she told the truth?

Am I apostate because I believe that my father and Uncle Hyrum, who were so wickedly slain more than half a century ago, told the truth when one stated that there was no such doctrine as a man having more than one wife living at the same time taught or practiced at Nauvoo, the other when he called polygamy a "cursed doctrine?"

Am I apostate because I refuse to believe that these two men lived two lives, one, honest and upright as a citizen of the state and a leading religious teacher should do; the other, a deceptive, secret life, saying one thing in public and another thing in private, professing a love for virtue in public, and practicing acknowledged immorality in private; living in professed honorable wedlock with my mother and secretly, deceptively dishonoring and violating his marriage vow with her by treating other women as his wives—am I apostate because I refuse to believe this?

At present writing I am able to say, I have kept, and am with my coworkers contending earnestly for, the faith once, yes twice delivered to the Saints; and please God, shall continue so to do; hence am not apostate; nor is my profession of belief apos-JOSEPH SMITH. tasy.

Son of the Seer.

LIBERALISM.

If the religion of the Latter Day Saints has ever been anything, it has been liberal. Investigation, study, research have been encouraged always, and the members have ever been told to use every available means to acquire knowledge, and to read and study on every worthy subject. Our religion is one of conscience, and the enlightened mind is the one most capable of appreciating the beauties and breadth of what is the doctrine of The leaders of the church. church have always advised an investigation of other faiths as well as our own, believing that our work is the better appreciated when contrasted with that of other churches. Each member has been made to feel that he is to be a judge for himself as regards what the church presents as doctrine, and no one is obliged to accept unquestioningly what is presented to him. On the other hand, each member is told to measure by the standard of the Bible all that is offered in a religious line. Hence it is that it is somewhat difficult to understand the position of the Catholic officials taken a brother from England, who forgot to sign his name to his letter: -

LIBERAL CATHOLICISM CONDEMNED.

PRIVATE JUDGMENT VERSUS OBEDIENCE TO AUTHORITY.

JOINT PASTORAL OF CARDINAL AND ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOPS.

Cardinal Vaugnn and all the English Catholic Bishops issue today, being the Feast of the Martyred St. Thomas of Canterbury, a joint pastoral letter on Liberal Catholicism. They state that among the blessings of the expiring century none have been more consolatory than the peaceful growth and expansion of the Catholic faith in England. But though the storms of persecution have blown over, other dangers of a more insidious character, such as various forms of rationalism and human pride at present confronted the Church in Eugland as elsewhere. For three hundred years no religious tribunal capable of teaching with unerring certainty, or of binding the conscience in the name of God, had been recognized by the Eaglish people. The result had been to substitute the principle of private judgment for the principle of obe-dience to religious authority, and to persuade the people that they were the ultimate judge of what was true and proper in conduct and religion. It had become a dominant principle in England that all power and authority in civic, political, and religious matters were ultimately vested in the people. Catholics need not, therefore, wonder if there was occasionally found among their own flock some whose loyalty to the Church was tainted by false principles; or if there were others who had come into the Church without having altogether shaken off the critical spirit of private judgment in which they had been brought up. Being wanting in filial docility and reverence, they freely disposed of doc-trine, practice, and discipline upon their own responsibility, and without the least reverence to the mind of the Church or to minis-This was to be Liberal indeed with the rights and property of another, with the sacred prerogatives of Christ and his Church. It was the exercise of liberality of this counterfeit sort that characterised what was known as the Liberal Catholic.

RESTRICTIONS OF RELIGION.

It was against Liberal Catholics that the rights and liberties of the Church had to be defended. The Catholic clergy and laity of England would always need to be strong in the spirit of St. Thomas of Canterbury, if they were always to resist successfully the restless encroachments of Liberalism upon the sphere of religion. It was, therefore, thought necessary to sound a note of warn-It could not be conceived for a moment that the fluctuating opinions and fashions of the hour, which flitted over the surface of the public mind like shadows over a landscape, could ever be used by the Church of God as a rule by which to fix the cardinal points of revealed truth, or to draw the lines Some there were of immutable dogma. whose pride chafed under the restrictions imposed by religion. Not content with the vast fields of profane science and speculation opened to them, and with the civil govern-ment of the world which was theirs, they itched to have their hand in the government of the Church and in her teaching; or, if this could not be they vainly strove to enforce their views by appeals to the Press and to public opinion. Among the views described in the Pastoral as errors and poisonous opinions are the idea that the constitution, as well as the teaching, of the Church ought to be brought into harmony with what was styled modern thought and the progress of the world; that the government of the Church should be largely shared by the laity in the following article from the faithful to correct abuses and scandals by Leeds, England, Mercury, sent us by the world rather than to the authorities of the Church; and that Catholics were free to read and discuss matters, however dangerous to faith or morals, if they felt inclined to do An obligation rested upon every one to think as the Church thought in matters of faith and doctrine in order to think aright, and, therefore, to yield a firm assent to whatever she presented for acceptance. To think as the Church thought, to be of one mind with her, to obey her voice was not a matter of duty in those cases only where the subject matter was one of divine revelation or connected therewith. It was an obligation also whenever the subject-matter of the Church's teaching fell within the range of her authority--and that range comprised all that was necessary for feeding, teaching, and governing the flock.

THE INFALLIBILITY OF THE CHURCH.

The Liberal Catholic appeared to be nervously apprehensive lest the Church should in some way commit herself and err. He doubted her wisdom, her patience, her ability in dealing with mankind, and he flattered himself that his own opinions were the outcome of a strong-minded, impartial, and philosophical spirit. It was from germs such as these that the most noxious Liberalism had infected the Catholic Church in other lands. The clergy must remember that unless converts believed that they had found, in the Catholic Church, the Divine Teacher, they must not be admitted into her pale, no matter how many of the Articles of Catholic faith they might assent to. They must believe in the authority and infallibility of the Divine Teacher in matters of faith and morals as an essential and fundamental condition for reception into the Church. the errors current in England was the belief that the Catholic Church of today was not the same as the primitive Church—that she had departed from the original doctrines of Christianity. Another error was that the Church possessed more authority at one time than at another-that she possessed a divine claim to obedience in the early centuries which she did not possess in the present day. Catholics, on the other hand, held that the Church as the Divine Teacher was identical with herself in every age. The Divine Teacher spoke through his chosen organs, the Pope and the Bishops, in union with Him. He spoke with the same wisdom, the same authority, the same infallibility, today as during the infancy of the Church, in the first three centuries of persecution, or in the subsequent centuries of general council. The Church was continuous and indefectible in her existence and constitution; so also in her doctrine. She had a progress and evolution of her own, but such development did not imply essential change.

It was a mistaken belief that the way to commend the Catholic religion to non-Catholics was to pare down supernatural doctrines of faith, and to hold out a hope and a prospect that the dogmas they objected to might, by degrees, be explained away or brought into conformity with their opinions. was a pernicious error to say that science and progress could read a new meaning into the creeds and definitions of faith, it was a no less pernicious and evolutionary error to assert that decrees emanating from the HolySee were an incumbrance on that field of science and an obstacle in that path of progress. Indiscriminate reading was perhaps the most insidious form under which the poison of rationalism and unbelief was injected into the soul. Without attracting attention, men and women, too, took up books or magazines that lay about, and, as it were, casually turned to the cleverly written and highly spiced articles against their faith which they found therein. Their minds had no tincture of philosophical or theological training-they possessed no antidote to the poisonous draught; but they read on without excuse or necessity, allured by fashion, curiosity, or a desire to taste of forbidden fruit. A common result eventually produced by indulgence of this sort was either distrust of the Church, doubts of revelation and of the existence of God himself, ending in secret or open disbelief, or the general loosening of the spiritual ties and bonds that held the religious structure of life together. Hence loss of the instincts of faith and a Liberal Catholicism, in which semi-rationalism had secured a permanent lodgment. To say that it was impossible to get away from the literature of the day was only to say that, in the choice of what to read and what to avoid, the exercise of a wise discretion and of a strong will were absolutely necessary. without necessity matter calculated to create or to sap faith was a sin against religion and the First Commandment. In conclusion, the Bishops declare that there is but one fitting attitude for a Catholic towards the Churchviz, that of unswerving loyalty.

The brother in submitting the clipping, has this to say:-

I forward you a cutting containing a synopsis of a letter of a pastoral nature from the heads of the Catholic Church in England.

The note of alarm sounded is significant, coming as it does at the close of a century whose achievements have been the fruit of the Reformation and the liberty of thought that ensued.

It is very, very pleasing to observe that the almost hysterical wail is produced because of the disposition to exercise independent thought is become more and more pronounced in the Roman Catholic Church.

But the appeal and complaint is a complete anachronism. The nations at large have basked in the light of liberty too long to give up so easily the laurels won in the fields of scientific research and adventurous progression in eduation, to bow in slavish submission to this fossilized relic of ages when darkness and superstition reigned supreme. As well invite us to discard the advantages of the 19th century mode of locomotion, the wondrous aids of modern electricity, for the crude methods employed to produce the results before the dawn of the Reformation Days. Too late. "We know the truth and the truth has made us free."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Mrs. A. C. Silvers, writing from Rockville, Missouri, under date of January 4, says:-

Very little preaching has been done here, and that some time ago, and the people would not come out to hear, but I feel that I may be able to do some good with tracts. My husband is now preaching at Fort Scott, Kansas. December 23 he baptized four adults at Collins, St. Clair county, Missouri, where he has done considerable preaching the past three years. I am striving to work in the interests of the cause of Christ.

Bro. F. C. Warnky, Schell City, Missouri, January 7:-

I came here last Friday. Am preaching every night. Interest is very good.

Elder J. F. Mintun, Little Sioux.

Iowa, January 9:-

I began services here last Sunday, and with increasing interest I have continued, and will continue a week or more. My health is some better, but I am still troubled with sleeplessness some, and when closely applied to my work, am troubled in my nerves, but I am being careful as I can do what seems necessary, and am feeling blessed. Saints at Moorhead expect to begin services again next Sunday, after several months' quarantine against public services there on account of smallpox. The smallpox has crippled our ministerial work somewhat in this district since the reunion,

H. A. McCoy writes from Perry, Iowa, January 12:-

Bro. J. W. Morgan is sick at the home of Bro. L. Finney near Earlham, Madison county. He is in a bad condition indeed, with lung trouble.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By a copy of the Bevier Appeal for January 4, handed us, we note that Bro. J. F. Tanner made a well-received address at a "Twentieth Century Welcome" entertainment at that place. The Appeal speaks highly of the brother's address.

By a number of the Lowry City (Missouri) Independent of a late date, we notice that that paper is now published by Bro. W. W. Kearney, formerly an employe of the Herald Office, and that he and his wife are associated as editors. It is a weekly, devoted to local interests. We wish Bro. Kearney success in his new enterprise.

Heman C. Smith, of the twelve, will hold a debate with D. H. Bays beginning February 4, at Omaha, Nebraska. There will be four propositions debated, four sessions to be devoted to each proposition. The ground covered will be as regards the authenticity and divinity of the Book of Mormon; whether or not the New Testament is the last of God's revelations to man; and whether the Christian Church or the Reorganized Church is identical in organization, etc., to the church of the New Testament.

Bro. C. R. Duncan sends a copy of a tract which he has written, and which was printed by Bro. Alma Han-It is entitled, "Latter Day Saints. Who are They?" It is a four page pamphlet, and succinctly sets forth some of the differences between us and the Utah people. We are always glad to receive such evidences that our men are alive to the interests of the work.

Bro. J. W. Wight, of the Twelve, has arranged and signed articles of debate with a Reverend Walker, a Christian minister of Lu Verne, Minnesota, the debate to take place in the near future. Lu Verne is a town of about twenty-four hundred inhabitants, and there is not a Latter Day Saint there. This will be a splendid opportunity to get our work before the people of that part of the country. Good will be done for the cause, we have no doubt.

The Religio-Literary societies will please take notice that hereafter all notices of convention should be sent to the Autumn Leaves, to Miss Louise Palfrey, of Macon, Missouri, in time for publishing in the Arena. All such notices sent to us will be forwarded to her if there is time for insertion in the Arena. All Religio business of this kind should be transacted through the columns of the Religio's department in the Autumn Leaves.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION .- NO. 3.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

The conflicting claims of the many aspirants who professed to be leaders of the church were being pushed in all quarters by those directly interested in them, creating much confusion and doubt in the minds of the Saints, and I was in great hopes that some elder or missionary would come to us direct from Nauvoo in order that we might meet them face to face. I thought in that way we could get the facts, and I was in hopes they would tell us they acknowledged little Joseph would be the prophet of the church. While in this condition of mind the glad news was brought to us that two elders direct from Nauvoo were in the neigborhood and would soon be at our house. I was all delighted and in expectation of hearing good news right from the city of the Saints. Soon the carriage came in sight, and while I waited, it drove up to the gate. I started to meet it. My brother Jason followed me. I had gone but a few steps toward the gate when I stopped, and the Spirit in great power rested on me, and those elders appeared to me as black as colored men, and I thought they were the most dreadful, wickedest men I had ever seen. Jason passed on to meet them; and as they were about to get out of the carriage. one of them remarked in an important tone of voice:-

"I have not come with a guess so, but with a know so."

The Holy Spirit still rested on me, and I could hardly restrain myself from speaking aloud, "You lie, and you know you lie." As they started for the house, my first thought was to run from them, but a feeling of confidence and reassurance came to me, and I said to myself, "No, I will not be a coward."

I had a desire to hear what they would say, and so I followed them into the house. My brother asked They did most of them questions. the talking. I do not remember their conversation, but their manner seemed to be light and frivolous all that afternoon. The next morning I saw that Jason looked troubled. As it seemed to me, they had an important manner about them, and so very consequential,—a great contrast to the humble, meek manner I had always observed in the ministers of the church before. To some statement they made (I do not remember what it was), Jason said. "That would be bigamy.'

"No," replied Elder Lyman Stoddard, "it would be polygamy."

I was startled at the word, and was much surprised, and the Holy Spirit rested upon me and said, "That is the word in the vision that you could not understand. Whoredom is polygamy to take away the reproach."

At first I did not know what polygamy meant, but I soon learned it was a plurality of wives, and then the vision was all plain to me. For me to believe in that horrible practice as a divine institution—I could easier believe that there is no God! Every fiber of my being revolted at the abominable crime attempted and fostered as a religious tenet, and I thanked God with my whole heart that I knew by the ministration of his angels and the Holy Ghost to me that it was not of God!

My brother opposed them and looked distressed in mind, and the other elder who was with Lyman Stoddard said: "If you had received your endowment, then you would understand all about it, and then I could explain all about it, but I can't do it now until you get your endowment."

Then the Spirit said to me: "That is murder in the secret chamber, and sister to the queen as you were taught in the vision.

All was plain to me now. The church had apostatized and gone into great and abominable wickedness, and was rejected of God. All of my fond hopes in relation to it were now blasted. Those men whom I had learned to love and esteem had become corrupt and were deceivers, and I felt to mourn over the condition of things, being much disappointed in my expectations and hopes.

Elders of the many factions that had arisen from the once united and beautiful church often called upon us, as missionaries of their respective organizations. Contention and bitterness towards each other seemed to be their general feelings and characteristics. An important, arrogant spirit possessed the zealous missionary of each respective faction to a great extent. I saw a complete change in the spirit and demeanor of the elders, and the once childlike simplicity had given way to a coarse, overbearing, dictatorial importance. Ι often thought of a saying I had heard, "General Jackson's overcoat would not make them a jacket," and when I see anyone feigning to appear what he is not, I yet think of the same crude expression.

The words Latter Day Saints and Mormons had now lost all their charms for me. Disappointment and shame often crimsoned my cheeks when I heard reference made concerning the church. Instead of God and the meek and lowly Lamb of Calvary's cross being the watchword and theme, it was a war of words about men and ceremonies, secret endowments, consisting of words, signs, and grips, instead of the endowment of the Holy Ghost and power from Goddisplayed through wisdom and holiness.

The whole aspect of things had changed! I did not know then that the body of the Saints in their scattered condition by thousands were over all the land feeling the same distress and shame that I did, refusing to follow either faction: but, like Elias of old, I felt that I was alone.

In the meantime I had a dream, in 1846, that gave me some comfort. I saw the people of the city of Nauvoo leave it and go west, and that I went after them to bring them back. This gave me hope. And then it began to be talked around that little Joseph would yet lead the church. This too. afforded some peace of mind, though clouds seemed to hover around me.

In 1848, the Rochester, New York, spirit rappings began to create much talk in the country. I became quite anxious to learn of its developments. It seemed to baffle all who investigated it, and astounded the most learned professors of the land. Many conjectures were had in regard to it, and some thought that both the house and Fox family were haunted by evil spirits, or by the spirit of some one that had been murdered in the house. A thousand stories were afloat concerning them. But it had the effect to confirm me in the truth of the Bible in relation to the oft-repeated statements found in it where Jesus cast out devils, and mention is made of familar spirits. (See Isaiah 8: 19, and the devils of Revelation 16: 13, 14.) It also confirmed me in the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith by reason of the light reflected when he sent me word that mesmerism and false spirits were means to deceive the people, and the Saints ought to have nothing to do with them.

In the latter part of the winter of 1849-50 I was stricken with typhoid fever, nigh unto death, but finally recovered slowly. The physician had given me strong medicine and deprived me of water to drink, and I suffered severely for it. Every joint in me seemed to hurt if I made a quick move of my body in the least, and I afterward resolved never to be deprived of water like that again by the order of a physician; that I would die

After I recovered, in the fall of 1850, I went up to live with my brother Silas. I found Silas was a firm believer in the theory that little Joseph would yet lead the church; that those and that many of the Saints in this country and Europe were standing still and had nothing to do with any of the factions and would unite with him. The Bible was then my companion. I began to read it with more interest than ever before. The complex composition and nature of its history were a source of trial to me. Was it possible that God walked and talked with man? Was man really made in the likeness of his maker? And did he have anything to do with such a wicked man as Cain the murderer, to even talk with him after he had killed his brother?

During the summer of 1851 I made up my mind that in the fall I would go into the pinery, in the northern part of the state and see if I could find an opening to make money faster than to work by the month for others; but in August I was taken sick while I was helping my brother in the hay field. At one time I had fallen from the hay loft into the barn and hurt one of my limbs, and while I was sick my limb began to pain dreadfully. I suffered excruciating pain most of the time for months. Finally I became so weak I could not turn in bed or help myself. My brother was very busy on the farm at the time, and most of my care was from my sisterin-law, Sarah Briggs, who was always very kind and attentive to see that everything was done for me that could be done. I asked my sister-in-law what the physician said about me getting well, but I quickly saw she evaded my question. Though suffering physically, my mind seemed strong and clear all the time. When it was possible to meditate upon my life and things that had happened with me, the uncertainty of all things mortal, I thought as far as was possible upon those things that were called divine and eternal. The things that are fleeting truly seemed wholly inadequate to the hungry, vigilant mind that thirsted after knowledge, and worldly things at best were very unsatisfactory. And if this life were the ultimatum of man's existence, I felt indeed that what we called the climax of divine wisdom was the extreme of folly.

But God is, and is possessed of almighty power, yet his wisdom is past finding out by mortal man unaided by this same merciful Creator. The fact that progress has been made by man is satisfactory evidence that ultimately, in the cycles of eternity, perfection will be reached, and that every soul who pants for happiness will be saved. Yes, all these comforting thoughts were all the solace I found during those dreary months of fall and winter. February was fast claimants to leadership and would-be fading away with its record into prophets were base impostors; that eternity, and I was waiting to hear polygamy was a blasphemous heresy; my loving sister-in-law tell me what the physician said of my earthly destiny. Three long days I urged her to tell me. I said to her, "If he says I am going to die, I think I ought to know it. If I am to be a poor, feeble cripple to linger a worthless life, I ought to know it."

She finally yielded, and after cautioning me not to take it to heart, replied, "The doctor says your physical system is all gone. There is nothing to build on, and you are liable to drop away at any moment. You may possibly linger a short time, but will never be able to feed or dress yourself again."

Upon receiving this sad answer, I involuntarily replied, "I will be up and dress myself in a week."

My sister-in-law went out into the other room. A quiet, serene sensation seemed to come over my mind, and the manifestation I had at my conversion, when the voice said to me, "You will embrace this doctrine, be baptized, and preach it," came to my mind in great force. I then told the Lord as follows: "If you want me to preach the gospel and will give me my health and the use of my limbs so I will not be lame, and will tell me anything, I will do it. I do not want you to tell somebody else and then he tell me. But I can't travel and preach and be lame; I ask for the use of my limbs or death."

When I repeated the above words the Spirit rested on me and said, "You will recover and be baptized, and for evidence to you that the one who baptizes you has authority from God, he will have the gift of prophecy and revelation to indicate your calling, and ordain you an elder the day you are baptized, and then you will preach for a time, and then be chosen into the High Council of the church." This manifestation was clear and unmistakable, and has ever since been indelibly impressed on my mind. My hand could easier forget to obey my mind than I could forget this glorious

And right here let me answer the query often presented to the thinking mind that reflects upon the subject of What is inspiration? inspiration. How does it operate upon the prophet? The apostle says,

Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.—2 Peter 1:21.

And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams. your young men shall see visions.—Joel 2: 28-32.

And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.—Genesis 37:5-11.

And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream.—Genesis 41:15-24.

And Joseph said unto Pharach, . . . God hath showed Pharach what he is about to do.-Verse 25

And immediately I was in the Spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven.-Revelation 4:2.

Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. - Daniel 2:19.

If I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.— Jesus; Matthew 12:28.

Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace.—Acts 18:9.

And it was so, that, when he had turned his back to go from Samuel, God gave him another heart: and all those signs came to pass that day... And the Spirit of God came upon him, and he prophesied among them.—1 Samuel 10:9, 10.

He took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.—Acts 21:11. (See also 1 Corinthians, chapters 12 and 14)

These passages show the effect of receiving the Holy Ghost. Sometimes they were translated by it; at other times they saw open visions and talked with the angel of the Lord; at other times they discerned spirits and the thoughts of men, healed the sick, cast out devils, and spoke in tongues and interpreted. In fact, it is the power by which God made the world and all things in it.

In my experience, inspiration gives open visions. Sometimes I am not aware that it is a vision, but think, until it has passed, that it is but a natural view of things. At other times I know it is the Holy Spirit resting on me at the time. Sometimes it is manifest in bringing things to our remembrance; at others in healing the sick, casting out devils, and giving comfort and joy unspeakable. It also helps us to be resigned to conditions and circumstances which we cannot control, assuring us that to those who love the Lord.

O that I could persuade all my readers, in the language of the beloved disciple, who leaned on the bosom of his dear Lord, that a high moral character and spiritual development are required in order to attain unto those heavenly treasures.

all things will work together for good

He that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he [God] is righteous. He that committeth sin is of the Devil; for the Devil sinneth from the beginning.

This cannot be attained except by keeping his commandments.

In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the Devil: whoseever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.—1 John 3: 7-10.

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me. . . If a man love me, he will keep my words. He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings.—John 14: 21, 23, 24.

The Psalmist says:-

Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect unto all thy commandments.—119: 6.

Jesus in keeping with this says:-

For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.—Luke 9:26.

But my readers may say, What are the commandments? The Pharisees of this age would answer by turning your attention to the Decalogue, and telling you to "believe in Christ." "be sanctified through grace," and such language, and leave you just as ignorant of the commanded gospel duties enjoined as when you asked the question. But the man of God must answer:-

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.-Acts 2:38.

I have been thus particular in presenting the above texts, First, To show that Jesus taught the gospel, and that it is the power of God unto salvation. Secondly, That Peter and Paul each preached the same gospel. Third, That any man or an angel from heaven that should preach any other gospel should be cursed. Fourth, Faith is the first principle of the gospel; repentance is the second; baptism the third for the remission of sins. And the reception of the Holy Ghost is promised to as many as believe, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

But to return. How could I, after hearing these glorious principles, help being enraptured with them? Through sad experience and suffering I had indeed learned that all things earthly and clothed in mortality are transitory, and if there is anything that is enduring it must come direct from the Creator.

For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.—John 1:17.
For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world. . . . As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eat-eth me, even he shall live by me.—John 6:33,57.

Or, as the ancient apostle said,

For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.-Rom. 8:14.

To be led by the Spirit of God is to receive revelation from God.

These grand and beautiful principles were weighed in my mind and became a constant source of comfort to me during the long night that the church passed through from 1844 until 1851. I also read the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants during this time.

Sometime during the winter of 1850 my brother Silas received letters from home and Jason informing him of a visit from Elders William Smith and Joseph Wood; that they lived at Palestine, near what is now called Amboy, Lee county, Illinois, and were preaching the law of lineage, holding that it was the right of William's nephew, Joseph, to take the lead of the church, but in the meantime, God had revealed to William Smith that it was his duty to preach the gospel and tell the scattered Latter Day Saints that he represented the rightful heir until he should take his father's place; that the gifts of the Holy Spirit were following those who obeyed the gospel.

My brother Silas believed this report in part; that is, that the gifts might follow the believer, and that little Joseph (as he was then called) would be called to take his father's place in the church; but he was prejudiced against William Smith on account of some acquaintance he had with his connection with the church before the martyrdom of his brother Joseph, and he doubted that God had inspired William to move in any such manner to preach the gospel or represent the legal heir to the presidency of the church; or that he had any such right to so represent him by virtue of being a son of the patriarch or brother of the Prophet Joseph. Neither had I forgotten the account in Joseph's history concerning the trouble William had caused him and the family.

Silas went down home on a visit and I did the chores while he was gone, but when he came back he was no better satisfied that William Smith was just what he seemed to be, or that he was a leader of the church by God's appointment, than before; and early in the spring of 1852, as soon as I was able, I went home, where I heard many stories about William Smith and Wood. I saw letters in Smith's own handwriting claiming the right of the presidency of the church, and denouncing the right of his nephew to the presidency, and if he ever attained to any authority in the church it would be by its being conferred upon him by William or his successors.

I also attended the conference held June 12 and 13 near Beloit, Wisconsin, and there, the evening before conference opened, met, for the first time in my life, Elder Z. H. Gurley; and while I do not recall much that was said during the conference, yet I do distinctly remember the words that Elder Gurley said to Jason, which were as follows:-

"When I first saw your revelation I did not believe it, for I could not believe that God would indorse William Smith as his servant, and your revelation did acknowledge him as a serant of God; neither did I believe that little Joseph had any rights to the presidency because he was a son of the martyr. And I opposed Bro. Powell holding meetings in our branch, but afterwards my little child Julia received the gift of tongues, and the interpretation declared it was his right by lineage, and also by blessing. And then it was all plain to me, and after looking up the Book of Covenants I saw the law governing the whole matter, and thought it strange we had not seen it before, and I was ready to join in with you, and I thought it best to call a conference, so I wrote to you about it."

(To be continued.)

ONE DOLLAR.

Kind reader, I do not propose to philosophize upon this medium of commerce, or with my imagination attempt to follow all its annual meanderings, or to picture all its exchanges and the results.

Having selected this caption as the preacher does his text, that it may prove opportune to the subject, I inform all that the undersigned has a small job of unfinished business left over from the last century; that is, the donations thus far received in behalf of Graceland College are inadequate to meet the deficit.

Sometime since I stated that when a sufficient amount was received I would desist from article writing asking aid for this church institution of learning.

In behalf of the college I herewith return unfeigned thanks for kind and substantial remembrance, and to those who have not yet contributed, would say: It is not yet too late for us to place your name with those who desire to stand in unity and harmony with the spirit, genius, and voice of the church in sustaining Graceland.

The following gave the inspiration for my caption to this paper:

Inclosed you will find one dollar for college expenses. I hope you will excuse me for intruding upon your time and patience so much; but I want to enforce the point I have l came from K—to A—. I was on the road all one day and night, and part of another day and night. I refused to go to a hotel or buy lunch, except for one meal. The thought came to me that I could save a dollar that way for Graceland. I did so, and now send it to you.

This is from one of our most faithful missionaries, and it is fair to state that while he is a friend to Graceland and to education, he does not look with favor upon our method of soliciting help from the membership of the church.

So far I have made our appeal in a general way to one and all, leaving the answer to the conscience of those who read our requests, and up to date I have not been able to muster up courage to make a personal appeal to our rich or well to do brethren of the church, and for what I have done in behalf of Graceland have not suffered any compunction, keck, or qualm of conscience, for I am a firm believer in the ancient word of promise:-

Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.—Ps. 50: 5

As Graceland is a church institution, its success will depend for support upon those who help in the Lord's work by deeds of sacrifice. The time will again come when the "book of the covenant" will be read and the people will respond, "All that the Lord hath said will we do, and be obedient." What a happy church community we will be when all are obedient unto God! The brother of the Lord wrote:-

If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?-James 2:15, 16.

While you make application of the foregoing scripture, please to remember that we your servants are only seeking to fulfill our duty in carrying out your will, in caring for and operating Graceland College in accord with its creation.

We have reason to believe that the income from scholarship will be in advance of what we expected, and the increase of scholars is a matter of encouragement.

Now in closing this first appeal in the new century, shall we have to be satisfied with your bidding, Be faithful, servants, or will you come to our help with some of the all needful, that we may accomplish the unfinished business to your satisfaction?

Still on deck, ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Box 224, LAMONT, IOWA.

ZIZANIA.-NO. I. BY R. M. ELVIN.

The English word for the above is tares, and I conceived that a compilation and a few thoughts on the same might prove both interesting and useful. The Savior said, as recorded in the Inspired Translation:

Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man who sowed good seed in his field; but while he slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way. But when the blade sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. And the servants said unto him, Wilt thou that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest, and in the time of harvest, I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the wheat into my barn; and the tares are bound in bundles to be burned.—Matt. 13: 22-29.

The Lord employed objects of nature and the affairs of daily life from which to construct his parables, and vet the above was not understood by his disciples, and the religious teachers from that time till the present have entertained views antagonistic. I do not attempt to untwist the gnarled rope and get all the kinks out, but perhaps may help some gospel pilgrim to a better understanding of the question.

Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house. And his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field. He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man. The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but he tares are the children of the wicked. The enemy that sowed them is the devil. The harvest is the end of the world, or the destruction of the wicked. The reapers are the angels, or the messengers sent of heaven. As, therefore, the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world, or the destruction of the wicked. For in that day, before the Son of Man shall come, he shall send forth his angels and messengers of heaven. And they shall gather out of his kingdom all things which offend, and them which do iniquity, and shall cast them out among the wicked; and there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. For the world shall be burned with fire. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun, in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.-Matt. 13: 35-45, I. T.

Let me try to simplify the answers and instructions of the immaculate Teacher by a succinct statement thereof:—

1. Christ sowed the good seed.

2. The humanity of earth is the field in which the good seed is sown.

3. The good seed are those who have obeyed the gospel, and are called the children of the kingdom, as represented to man by the Son of God.

4. The tares are the wicked, or the people of the world; those that take pleasure in the amusements, foibles, and worldly sins; or, as stated by inspiration:—

Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry witch-craft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.—Gal. 5:19-21.

5. The Devil sowed the tares; for he is the chief of all those who give—

Heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared as with a hot iron.—1 Tim. 4:1, 2, I. T.

The character of the arch-deceiver is presented by the Lord as follows:—

Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.—John 8:44.

A fit gentleman to sow tares! Peter seems to have thought that to be his business:—

Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour.—1 Peter 5:8.

Of old the Devil was so engaged. (See Job 1:7.)

6. The wheat and tares will be separated at the time of the harvest, or end of the world; that is when the present reign of evil shall be displaced by the introduction of the universal reign of peace.

For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.—Hab. 2:14.

At the same time will be fulfilled the following promise:—

For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind.—Isa. 65:17.

John very accurately describes the time and condition of the division of the wheat and the tares:—

And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful. And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son. But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.—Rev. 21:1-8.

When the above scene takes place there will be no more commingling of the wheat and tares.

7. The holy angels of God,—those ministers from the throne of light that do the Father's bidding and bring his revelations to man,—are the reapers; and their helpers in this great work are the men divinely called of God, ordained to the holy priesthood, inspirationally guided, and laboring as the sent of heaven.

And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.—Rev. 18:4.

God's method of dealing with his children has always been by his choosing from their number those who are to act as his duly authorized ministers, who by the direction of angels, or under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, declare the will of God to the people. Hence the Master said:—

Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you.—John 15:16.

His parting words were:-

As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you —John 20:21.

Latter Day Saints will experience no difficulty in understanding the foregoing, or the following:—

All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—D. C. 119: 8.

The wheat is to be gathered first, afterward the tares are bound in bundles and are burned. All Saints should prepare for the gathering; leave the world, and in peace dwell together. Of this the heraldic cry was made:—

Gather my Saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.—Ps. 50: 5.

A way of escape is provided for us if we will avail ourselves of the provision:—

Behold now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after today cometh the burning: this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, Tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon.—D. C. 64:5.

Those who neglect tithing and the gathering have no promise to escape the burning.

8. After Christ had explained the separation of the wheat and the tares, he proceeded to explain relative to his people, "for in that day," there is to be a change; for instead of the Saints being called out of Babylon, there shall be gathered out of the kingdom (church) "all things which offend, and them which do iniquity." In writing of the church, Paul said:—

That he [Christ] might sanctify and cleanse it [the church] with the washing of water by the word, that he [Christ] might present it [the church] to himself a giorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it [the church] should be holy and without blemish.—Eph. 5: 26, 27.

The separation of the righteous and wicked is not a debatable question; we are not left in the dark; for it is written for our instruction:—

Even in the day of the coming of the Son of Man, and until that hour, there will be foolish virgins among the wise, and at that hour cometh an entire separation of the righteous and the wicked; and in that day will I send mine angels, to pluck out the wicked, and cast them into unquenchable fire.—D. C. 63: 13.

Having critically examined the reply of Christ to his disciples in regard to the parable of the tares, I now introduce the explanation of William Smith, LL. D. He says on this topic:

Tares.—There can be little doubt that the zizania of the parable (Matt. 13:25) denote the weed called "darnel" (lolium temulentum), . . . the grains of which produce vomiting and purging, convulsions, and even death. . . The darnel before it comes into ear, is very similar in appearance to wheat; hence the command that the zizania should be left to the harvest, lest while men plucked up the tares "they should root up also the wheat with them." Dr. Stanley, however, speaks of women and children picking up from the wheat in the corn-fields of Samaria the tall green stalks, still called by the Arabs zuwan. "These stalks," he continues, "if sown designedly throughout the fields, would be inseparable from the wheat, from which, even when growing naturally and by chance, they when growing naturally and by chance, they are at first sight hardly distinguishable." See also Thomson's "The Land and the Book," p. 420: "The grain is just in the proper stage to illustrate the parable. In those parts where the grain has headed out, the tares have done the same, and then a child cannot mistake them for wheat or barley; but where both are less developed, the closest scrutiny will often fail to detect them. Even the farmers, who in this country generally weed their fields, do not attempt to separate the one from the other." The graingrowers in Palestine believe that the zuwan is merely a degenerate wheat: that in wet seasons the wheat turns to tares. Thomson asserts that this is their fixed opinion. It is curious to observe the retention of the fallacy through many ages. "Wheat and zunin," says Lightfoot (on Matt. 13:25), quoting from the Talmud, "are not 13:25), quoting from the Talmud, "are not seeds of different kinds." . . . The Roman writers appear to have entertained a similar opinion with respect to some of the cereals; thus Pliny, borrowing probably from Theo-phrastus, asserts that "barley will degener-ate into the oat." The notion that the zizania of the parable are merely diseased or degenerate wheat has been defended by P. Brederod, and strangely adopted by Trench who, (Notes on the Parables, p. 91, 4th ed.) regards the distinction of the two plants to 'a falsely assumed fact." If the zizania of the parable denote the lolium temulentum, and there cannot be any reasonable doubt about it, the plants are certainly distinct .-Bible Dictionary, p. 684.

It is quite evident that Mr. Smith risked no opinion upon the spiritual meaning of the parable; but satisfied himself with the identification of the plant.

In the revelation on priesthood, given December 6, 1832, is the following upon the question:—

But, behold, in the last days, even now, while the Lord is beginning to bring forth the word, and the blade is springing up and is yet tender, behold, verily I say unto you, The angels are crying unto the Lord day and night, who are ready and waiting to be sent forth to reap down the fields; but the Lord saith unto them, Pluck not up the tares while the blade is yet tender (for verily your faith is weak), lest you destroy the wheat also; therefore let the wheat and the tares grow together until the harvest is fully ripe; then ye shall first gather out the wheat from among the tares, and after the gathering of the wheat, behold, and lo, the tares are bound in bundles, and the field remaineth to be burned.—D. C. 84:2.

By this it is clearly seen that the duty of the priesthood of the church is to gather the wheat. The Lord in his own wisdom will see to it that the tares will receive justice according to their works; but we should rest satisfied to let both wheat and tares grow till the harvest time is fully come, and our only anxiety should be to improve the condition of the wheat. Let us seek to cultivate the following graces:—

But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law. And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.—Gal. 5: 22-25.

Professor Melancthon W. Jacobus gives the following views on the parable of the tares in his "Critical and Explanatory Notes:"—

The word implies that he proposed it, as one would a riddle. It had a deeply spiritual sense. This parable is intended to exhibit the nature of the visible church, the mixture of the members, and the reason of it, and why it must so be till the end.

A man which sowed good seed. By this is represented "the Son of Man" (vs. 37). This title is that most frequently used by our Lord to designate himself, and never given him in the New Testament by any other, except in one instance (Acts 7:56), where Stephen seems to have seen him in his glorified humanity. The title was already given him in the Oid Testament (Dan. 7:13), and he claims it as the Second Adam, in which capacity he loved to be recognized. The title by which he was popularly named, "the Son of David" His field. This represents the region

His field. This represents the region within which the gospel is properly preached—that is, the world (vs. 38). It is Christ's field for his work of redemption.

The good seed, "are the children of the kingdom"—the true membership—such as really belong to the kingdom, in distinction from those who are but nominally such. In the last parable, the good seed was the truth; but here, in the progress of the sentiment, the seed is regarded as having entered into the person and having become identical with him.

The field is called the world (vs. 38), because God has ordained to gather his children out of all nations, and because the great preachof all nations, and because the great preaching commission is "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

The Lord may be said to sow this field, because "of his own will begat he us with the word of truth," and we are born, "not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." And, as in this field, all these things of the parable occur, so the visible church seems to be described as co-extensive with the world: not confined to Jews, nor brought, as yet, to the strict dimensions of the church The disciples were not prepared to expect this mixture of good and evil-wheat and tares—in the church. Hence Christ warns them beforehand, so that they might not be offended, or think that God's promises had failed, and that they might know how to behave themselves when the mystery of iniquity should begin manifestly to work. What a trial was to come to the faith of the twelve, to find a Judas in their small circle.

While men stept. This means not so much to censure the neglect of any, as though it were on this account mainly that such mischief was done; but it points to the fact, that this unholy mixture is brought about, in the night as it were, at a time when men cannot see the mischief-maker or his deeds, but can only tell that it is done from the result. We cannot always detect Satan's movements nor expect to see his works in human hearts, and hence we may be more diffident of our skill in discerning between the precious and the vile Tures. The children of the wicked one (vs. 38). Such as belong to Satan and are of him. These are the seed of his sowing, as distinguished from the true membership. These are the false professors that must be expected in the visible church.

The enemy is the Devil (vs. 39), the wicked one, as the being, of all, the most emphatically, absolutely, essentially, and supremely evil, and the source and sower of it (John 8: 44). Satan sows these seeds, not as though he could create evil beings, but only spoil the good. Therefore, Augustine speaks of the origin of evil as not a generation, but a degeneration—as having not an efficient but a deficient cause. Satan is here set forth as the enemy of the Son of Man. These tares are rather a bastard wheat, says Trench. The wild grapes instead of the good (Isa. 5: 2). The mischief here spoken of is well known in the East and elsewhere. Malicious persons sow some bad seed among the grain, that will grow up and choke it. It is not detected at first, or even when it first springs up; and afterward, it is not easy to distinguish the two. The wicked are among the righteous in the church, like tares among the wheat in the same field, because they are of most pernicious influence among professors, and it is impossible, by the strictest discipline, to make a perfect separation of them on earth. This is the point of the parable. Sinners are called the children of the wicked one, because they bear his likeness, and the works of their father they will do.

do.

The blade—the stalk. It is with the fruits of piety in the Christian life, that a false professor contrasts. There must be holiness in the church, to show the unholiness in the false membership; and hence, when the church is degenerate, false religion does not so easily appear; the true and false are confounded—discipline is neglected, and the church itself is disgraced.

church itself is disgraced.

Whence then bath it tares? This is the surprise of many, and the world affect to wonder at this, and it is a fit topic for earnest inquiry

Gather them up. These mischiefs are the direct work of Satan—"an enemy hath done this." It is no part of the church system, or of its design to harbor bad members. It does not excuse the false professor or the gainsayer. It only points for an explanation to that agency of all evil—the Devil. But the zeal of many is at once to rid the church of all imperfection, so that it shall be without spot or wrinkle or blemish, or any such thing. This is often an Eliaszeal, as in Luke 9:54. Some, like Jehu, call upon others to see their "zeal for the Lord." Some can see no church where they find not perfect purity. But Paul recognized the church of Corinth, though corrupt, because he found there the Christian doctrine with the sacraments, by which the church is to be known.

Lest, etc. Such a work of rooting out, with such an unqualified determination, is perilous in itself. and often suspicious in the spirit of it. Our Lord cautions against such an enterprise. There is danger of rooting up the wheat with the tares, because of our inability to distinguish as perfectly as the case would demand. And a spirit of zealous extermination that undertakes such a work of rooting up and putting out all that seem to them evil, "may be rather a war of the tares against the wheat, than of the wheat against the tares."—Trench.

(Continued.)

IDENTITY OF MAN IN THE RESUR-RECTION.

Inasmuch as man was created of the earth, he is adapted to it; and we shall therefore always expect him, when he has an existence upon it, to retain the same relation to it in which he was created -the body to possess the same chemical elements. God saw everything that he had made. and, behold, it was very good"-could not have been improved upon. Therefore his works are "without repentance." And for the same reasons, we may expect no change whatever in man's organic structure, or the function of those organs. It is a law in physiology that each organ has its specific function, and each function its special organ. Where there is no organ, there is no function; and where there is no function, there is no organ. If there were no ear, where were the hearing? and if no hearing, where were the ear? To demonstrate this, exclude the light from the eye, and see how soon it will perish. We have an example of this in those eyeless fish in the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky.

The body is nourished, replenished, and perpetuated by food taken into the stomach and converted into chyle, blood, and flesh and bone in regular order. This is God's ordained plan, both for time and eternity. "For whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever." It has truly been said by an inspired writer, that "blood is the life of all flesh." It contains the material for making every organ of the body, and without it man would cease to exist. He is specially noted for his grand system of blood circulation; which has for its use, the veins, arteries, capillaries, heart, and lungs.

This man—the crowning work of God's creation, with which he was so well pleased that he pronounced him "very good"—was fitted to dwell in the immediate presence of his Creator in Eden. And we nowhere find that God ever expressed displeasure with the workmanship of his own hand. But upon the contrary, we have the words, "I change not," God "repents not," and "the gifts and callings of God are without repentance."

Now apply the principle, "Where there is no function, there is no organ," and without blood, were it possible, we should have a body without its symmetrical proportions and vital organs—a lungless, heartless, miserable deformity indeed!

It is taught in all the sacred books, that there shall be a resurrection of the body—the same body that dies.

I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God.—Job 19: 26.

We are now brought to face a statement found in Paul's writings, which upon a superficial examination may seem to conflict with the theory that we are advocating. It is as follows:—

Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.
—1 Cor. 15:50.

To use the first part of this verse without the latter, which is explanatory, makes it openly contradict Job's statement, that, "in my flesh shall I see God." The grammatical construction of the sentence, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God," just as effectually debars flesh from inheriting the kingdom of God as it does blood; and also does the fact that flesh is equally as corrupt. Paul evidently spoke of flesh and blood, as they now exist—in their corrupt state. Hear his explanation in the following utterances:—

Neither doth corruption inherit incorrup-

And this mortal must put on immortality. For this corruptible must put on incorruption.

It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body.

(Please note as we proceed, that spiritual and immortal bodies are one and the same.) The office work of the Spirit is to quicken and purify—make spiritual (see Eph. 2:1; 1 Cor. 2:15). So those who are "quickened" by it in this life are "spiritual," and will be "quickened" by it in the resurrection (if faithful), which will constitute them "spiritual bodies."

But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.—Rom. 8:11.

Now see how plain are the teachings of Alma upon this subject; and how perfect the harmony:—

Now, behold I have spoken unto you concerning the death of the mortal body, and also concerning the resurrection of the mortal body. I say unto you, that this mortal body is raised to an immortal body; that is, from death; even from the first death, unto life, that they can die no more; their spirits uniting with their bodies, never to be divided; thus the whole becoming spiritual and immortal.—Alma 8:11.

At this juncture let me impress upon your mind the fact that it is this mortal body that is to be resurrected to a state or condition of immortality; and the only change that is provided for in it, is the elimination of that which corrupts—foreign substances disease germs, and the correction of any condition of it that was caused by that which corrupts. The blood proper, is pure as the dews of heaven. And when those impurities which contaminate it are swept from the earth, it will then be the elixir-vital of the flesh of immortal and spiritual bodies.

It is a fact, that ever since the fall of man (at which time the earth was cursed) his environments have been corrupting, and will continue to so be, till his final redemption in the resurrection, when the earth shall have undergone a like change unto his, thereby restoring it to its pristine purity, and fitting it for the everlasting abode of man. Then shall the meek "inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." "And they shall build houses, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them." Herein can we identify man as he existed in Eden.

Now, kind reader, if you are not fully satisfied with the correctness of the position of the writer upon this subject, we will go a little further, and examine the physiology of man in his resurrected state in a catechetical way, and see how it will make servative theologians, adopt the theory of "limited" or "conditional" immortality, to which we have altractive in these columns. Just now there is a discussion in the London Spectator as to the relative attractiveness of hell and of annihilayour position appear. I will ask the questions, and you give the answers to the same, substituting for blood that thing which you think will take the place of it:—

Ques.—What are the veins for?

Ans.——. Q.—Why their peculiar construction with valves?

A. ——. Q.—What are the capillaries for?

Q.—What is the office work of the heart?

Q.—Of the lungs?

Now should anyone be disposed to make the claim that the body of Christ "the forerunner" was resurrected bloodless, we should demand the proof for such claim. Whatever part of blood that came from his body (after it was stilled in death, which evidently was not great) could have as reasonably been restored in the resurrection as could the water that came out with the blood. And any argument based upon the narration of the circumstance here referred to will have equal force against the water being restored. So if it were possible to make it prove anything at all in favor of the bloodless theory, it would only prove too much. "That which proves too much proves nothing."

Now with due respect for those who may entertain a different view from mine upon this subject, I close my argument.

J. A. UPTON.

Linville, Oregon.

Selected Articles.

IS HELL BETTER THAN ANNIHILA-TION?

The ancient doctrine of everlasting punishment in hell, which historic Christianity, almost alone among the great religions of the world, has officially held from the days of Athanasius to the present time, has by a certain school been rejected in late years. Dean Farrar and other "Universalists," in or out of the Universalist Church, frankly assert that they believe in "eternal hope"; while the poet Bailey, author of the once worldfamous "Festus," taught that even Satan and the aboriginal inhabitants of Sheol would be saved, despite their present recalcitrant state. Another school, far less widely known, and for the most part made up of conservative theologians, adopt the theory of 'limited' or 'conditional' immortality, to which we have already referred in these columns. Just now there is a discussion in the London Spectator as to the relative attion for those who may have no hopes of dwelling in the Elysian abodes—a discussion first started by the recent publication of "The Life and Letters of T. H. Huxley." On Huxley's tomb are engraved the following lines, said to have been written by his wife:—

And if there be no meeting past the grave, If all is darkness, silence, yet 'tis rest. Be not afraid, ye waiting hearts that weep, For God still "giveth his beloved sleep." And if an endless sleep he wills—so best.

Huxley himself, as the Spectator points out, preferred "hell (in moderation)" to utter extinction. In commenting on this preference, Mr. F. C. S. Schiller, of the University of Oxford, lately of Cornell, a psychologist of some repute, calls attention to the fact that Huxley's case very forcibly brings out how much we still have to learn concerning men's real feelings toward the prospect of a future life. He writes (in the Spectator, November 24):—

"Psychologically, of course, such a sentiment appears at first sight a complete paradox. Yet I have no doubt that in Huxley's case it was entirely genuine, and that an appreciable number of persons actually entertain it. On the other hand, I should think, judging by what one hears, that a very considerable number of persons do not want to go on living, and even have a strong emotional horror of the prospect of a future life. They would, consequently, welcome any assurance that exempted them from this doom. This variety of sentiment appears to be very common among the old and It exists weary and unenergetic. quite apart from religious beliefs and scientific convictions, and often indeed runs counter to them. Similarly, a large proportion of sincere Christians regard the prospect of 'heaven' without the slightest enthusiasm, and even with secret aversion. I suspect that what the generality of men would really like would be a (somewhat improved) continuation of their earthly existence. It would be very interesting, therefore, to determine in what proportions these various sentiments actually occur in cultivated persons of the day, and such an inquiry could not fail to throw much light on the emotional foundations of belief and on the strange inefficaciousness all the world over of the traditional doctrines concerning 'the things beyond death.' For whatever these doctrines are, the actual conduct of men is pretty much the same everywhere, and pays but little heed to any eschatology. Can the reason be that all the religions have failed to reach a complete understanding of human feeling on the subject, and so to get a real grip on human motives? The point seems of exact investigation. deserving

When, recently, a statistical inquiry into men's actual sentiments with regard to a future life was suggested as an appropriate matter for the Society of Psychical Research to undertake, the late Professor Sidgwick held, I believe, that such inquiry would be useless, on the ground that every rational being must prefer heaven to annihilation, and annihilation to hell. Huxley's avowal is sufficient to dispose of this contention, and shows that either men are not rational, or that the subtleties and profundities of human psychology cannot be adequately explored by the narrow categories of an abstract logic.'

Still another writer in the Spectator calls attention to the following curious lines in Thomas Cooper's poem, the "Purgatory of Suicides," written in 1843, in Stafford jail:—

Oh! I could brook
The dungeon, though eterne!—the Priests' own hell,

Ay, or a thousand hells, in thought, unshook,

Rather than Nothingness! and yet the knell,
I fear, is near that sounds—To consciousness farewell! (Book III, stanza 24.
—Literary Digest, Jan. 5, 1901.

Letter Department.

RAYMOND, Idaho, Jan. 2.

Editors Herald:-Having been appointed to labor in Wyoming and Idaho, to begin work the first of November, I commenced in the Thomas Fork valley, Idaho, and labored against many obstacles. For a while it seemed my efforts would prove fruitless; but after a while some became interested. and I believe the time is not far distant when some will accept the truth. Have labored some in Cokeville, Wyoming; preached four sermons there, and the interest and attendance was generally good. I also labored some in the Bear Lake country. Some are interested there, but there is also much opposition-not of that bold and open kind which gives a man a chance to defend himself and the cause he represents, but of that underhand kind which closes the houses of worship against us; or if the houses are not closed against us, the people are warned not to attend the meetings of the Josephites. So taken altogether, it is rather a hard proposition we have to meet.

A few days ago I tried to obtain the Mormon meeting house in Montepelier, Idaho, but was refused on the grounds that in order to do effectual preaching for our side of the question we would have to, or we would at any rate, call in question the acts of the leaders of their church, and they did not care to give us a chance to do that, for it might cause some of their young people to be deceived. I asked the Bishop if he was not there to look after the interests of the members of the ward, and if they had the truth why was he afraid to let me preach in the house to his congregation, when he could so easily expose all error that might be preached to his people. I told him that I thought it would be far better for the members of his ward to hear what he termed error or false doctrine while they were under his care so that he could expose the false doctrine which they, the Mormon people, claim we teach, and by thus exposing it they would be effectually warned, so would not be in so great danger of being deceived when they should go out in the world where they would perhaps not have anyone to expose and warn them against the error. I then told him that was the way the Josephites did, and that we as a church had ruled that all our church buildings were free to everybody to preach their religious views or doctrines in. when not in use by us. And not only were our houses of worship open to every religious denomination, but our members were advised to attend religious services held in our houses of worship by those not of our faith, Mormons included, and by so doing we all had a chance to judge for ourselves. And as our elders always reserved the right to reply to anything presented which we as a church do not indorse, we did not consider there was any more danger of any of our members being deceived than if they had not attended such services. But my little talk had no visible effect on the bishop; at least not enough to cause him to open the door of his meetinghouse to the Josephite elders.

But, dear Saints, do not think for a moment that there are no good people in the Utah church, for I know there are some as good people in that church as are to be found anywhere; and if we do our duty as God directs, the honest ones will come to a knowledge of the truth and be gathered into the true fold of Christ in the Lord's own way and in his own due time. Our blessed Father in heaven is verifying his promise to his servants, for I can truly say that I have enjoyed more of the Spirit of the divine Master, and have had greater liberty in preaching the gospel this year than ever before.

I will ask the Saints to remember me in prayer to our Father in heaven, that I may have wisdom, courage, and strength given me from above, that I may be able to do a good work for the divine Master in these valleys of the mountains, and be an instrument in his hands of leading some precious souls into the fold of Christ.

Yours in the cause of truth,
A. J. LAYLAND.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., Jan. 4.

Editors Herald.—Of late I have been laboring at Spickards. Preached eight times there, and left Bro. Walter Smith to stay a few days and organize a Religio if possible, and then to Kingston, Far West, and so on, to attend the two days' meeting at Wakenda branch, January 26 and 27. Brother Cushman is to labor with Walter for awhile.

I found the few Saints near Spickards struggling through the trials of life. I was led by the Spirit to talk to them in a way that caused some comment, and some thought somebody had been telling me something. I must say that no one told me anything, but was constrained by the Spirit of my calling to speak as I did.

Two young men, one a schoolmaster, who disturbed my meetings, were arrested, and are to appear before the justice court on Saturday, twenty persons to appear against them. Poor, foolish boys!

On my arrival at this place I found the little "boy preacher," Bro. Swen Swenson, returned to his mission field, God bless the boy. He's a rattler of a preacher. Bro. Cushman is with us, feeling very well.

Yours ever.

J. C. Foss.

SPY HILL, Assn., N. W. T., Dec. 29. Editors Herald:-I have finished my work here for the present, and expect to leave the last day of the month, with the intention of returning in the spring to follow up my work to better advantage, hoping to find that the seed has taken a deep root. My meetings have been appreciated by the people generally, and I am sure good has been done. I was correct, when in my last I stated that the Methodist preacher would do me no other favor than notify Bro. Selby Carter of my arrival at Millwood. He has never attended one of my services, and when pressed for reasons by other people made several lame excuses.

One has been baptized, and others are very near and most likely to obey upon my return. There are nine Saints here to hold the fort. They will meet every Sunday this winter for the study of the Quarterly, and when I return I hope to organize a school, and with the few additions looked for a good branch will be established.

On Christmas day the nine of us had as meeting, the sweet Spirit, known only to Latter Day Saints, being with us to bless, calling Bro. Selby Carter a priest, and Bro. John Carter a teacher. I ordained them in the same meeting. I go to Carberry for a day or so, and will there decide as to my next point of labor. Weather cold and stormy generally, though there are some excellent days, clear and bright: but, remember, mercury registers all the way from twenty to fifty below zero on these nice days.

Yours in the faith,

FRED'K GREGORY.

Later, January 3.-Am now in Moosomin, remaining over night in public house, intending to take train to Carberry in morning. Had a cold drive of thirty miles today, the thermometer registering thirty-two below zero early this a. m. Yesterday morning 44, and on January 1, 36.

CRANBERRY ISLES, Maine, Dec. 30. Dear Herald:-The work in Maine is looking good everywhere. Encourages one! The calls from quite a number of places, "Come and preach for us;" so it does not look as if the work in Maine was dead. In every way there is more work than ten men can do. Hundreds of good people waiting for the gospel, and some have had the privilege of hearing it, too, this last summer by myself and Bro. Davison, Rich, Ames, Blanchard, and others. We have worked to open up Maine and see what it is. I find it is a large field, and just as good people as there are anywhere. I cannot see why there will not be quite a good number gathered next year, where I have labored.

I have opened the following places: South Etna, three places in Sangerville, one in Bangor, and here. Came here December 12, and commenced work the 13th. To start with, they closed the church on me, and so we had to resort to a schoolhouse near by. We started, and the Lord did bless with his Spirit. A friend gave us the use of his organ, and with Sister Stanley as organist, we had some very nice music and singing. thanks to all. Preached fifteen times with good liberty, and a nice crowd out. Some will accept soon if looked after.

We do not want to forget Bro. and Sr. Steele, our home friends; they did all they could to make our stay pleasant, and they succeeded. Kind friends will be remembered by me. Any one going by these named places, please call and see the people and encourage them. In bonds,

S. G. CUNNINGHAM.

WATER VALLEY, Ky., Dec. 29. Editors Herald:-We are glad to receive the Herald and learn the profitable news which can always be found in its pages.

We have moved here and left the Saints near Fulton to battle alone; however, we expect to go there to meeting occasionally. We disliked to move from our old place of abode, but chose to leave rather than prove dishonest to our convictions. We are now about five miles from our former home, and pear six miles from the regular place of preaching. We are among a clever people, though they have nothing in religion that is in our faith. One lady near us said she would read anything; would like to read the Book of Mormon; but that she was a Methodist, and never would be anything else while she lived; however, for a person to be a Mormon made no difference with her.

Most of the people enjoy chewing tobacco, joking, and drinking better than things that are profitable. They are not a proud, haughty, stuck up, people. If they would turn their attention toward the scripture, they would soon be ready for the kingdom. I have reference mainly to the pride of the people. They are more free from the vain pride of the world, flesh, or the devil than many Saints I know. If there is anything in this world in the form of a man I pity and feel ashamed of, it is that poor, unstable, wavering creature who is trying to serve God and keep up with the Devil, or with his followers. I don't care how much they know. nor how much faith they have, if I understand the law of the Lord, it only makes it the harder on them. I have seen those called Saints whom I would not have known to be such had I not been told. They would do without the necessaries of life to keep up with the children of the prince of this world in dress and would have enough unnecessary attachments stuck to one of their dresses to pay the tithe on all they possessed. And with the gold bands on their fingers, and watch chains of gold, and fine plumes in their hats, with quite a lot of other feathers stuck in their headwear, and say, "if," "if," "if I just knew it was any harm, I would not wear these things." You poor inconsistent Saint, are you worthy to wear the name? The Bible speaks just as plainly on these subjects as it does on faith and repentance; so do the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. But like the sectarian world, you try to put a private interpretation on these commands, so that you can look as pretty as some

Be not deceived; God is not mocked. That poor, dilapidated Saint who will turn up a glass or bottle to his lips, and pour down his throat the strong drink, has not much of the Spirit of the Lord in him, and what he has will take its flight soon as the poison goes into the temple.

Saints, take heed unto the words of the Lord, and strive to build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness, by paying tithing and freewill offering with what money you are now spending for vain, foolish, and unprofitable things of the world. Not every one who says Lord, and wears the name Saint, will abide the day of his coming, or stand when he appeareth. Praying for God's kingdom to prevail, I am,

Your brother,

J. W. WILLIAMS.

PLYMOUTH, Massachusetts.

Dear Saints:-I thought it my duty to write and perhaps encourage some one on the way. I feel particularly encouraged tonight in the cause. I desire to hold fast to it. I had an experience the other night in regard to attending prayer meetings which I hope I shall never forget. I was somewhat tired and did not feel just like going to meeting, and it was quite late before I could get my work done. I tried hard to find a suitable excuse to stay at home, not exactly because I did not want to meet with the Saints, but I suppose it was the evil power trying to prevent me from having such a pleasant time as he knew I would have if I went. But I made up my mind at last I would go even if I had to walk. So I went, and there were words spoken to me from the Lord that so encouraged me to go on that I tremble now to think, Suppose I had stayed at home? We had a glorious meeting, one never to be forgotten. My father spoke to me in prophecy and said the Lord was pleased with my efforts, even in the Religio. Dear Saints, you don't know how those few words strengthened me. Just what I needed, and the Lord knew it. Papa did not know how hard it was for me to get there that night. So I can say, Never let anything hinder us from attending our prayer meetings, because we do not know what we may miss. I have had good meetings, excellent ones, but those few words strengthened me more than I can tell you. I love the cause. I love the Religio, and thank God for the privilege of attending. When I first came to work where I am now, I could not attend the Sunday morning prayer meetings; but I can now, and I feel grateful to the Lord for it because it was an answer to prayer. I desire to serve him and repay him in part anyway for what he has done for me. Hoping this will encourage and strengthen some Saint along the way of attending prayer meetings, also all the meetings of the Saints, I will close with love and best wishes for all of God's Saints. Your sister in the faith of our Lord and Savior, HATTIE GENEVA NICKERSON.

MAYSVILLE, Ark., Jan. 6.

Dear Herald:-I read of the successful efforts put forth by the elders in different parts, and I rejoice. May the Lord continue to bless all the laborers. Since last writing I have not been idle nor lonesome; too much to do; calls from every direction for men to explain the angel's message.

I was at the district conference at Blendsville in October. On Sunday, the last day of conference, while prayer service was in session, who should I see step in but Bro. I. N. White. Just a few minutes before he came I had received a telegram to come at once to Miami, Indian Territory, to preach a funeral discourse, so I just had to go without speaking a word to Brother White. However, I felt well and encouraged on meeting, shaking his hand, and noting his cheerful face.

Bro. W. E. Hayden and myself left the prayer meeting reluctantly to perform duty; went over to Baxter Springs, Kansas, on train; from there twenty miles by hack. Arrived in Miami at ten o'clock Sunday night, and were on hand Monday at ten to preach the funeral of Mr. Tom Peck, a friend of mine, and a noble-spirited young man. Funeral in Christian church. Said to be between four and five hundred present, including five preachers. O how they did squirm! The good Lord blessed me with his Holy Spirit to tell of his justice in rewarding according to work, and of the beauty and reliability of the resurrection from the dead.

We held ten meetings, and baptized old Bro. Peck and wife and their granddaughter, Nettie Dixon. Bro. Peck at once commenced to build a neat little church, which will be completed soon. It will then be dedicated and the deed turned over to Bishop Kelley. I have held some grand meetings during the year. Held two meetings in the courthouse in Cherokee Nation, Bro. Hayden assisting in one. Good-sized crowds and good interest. I went back alone and held the second meeting. Stopped with a family of full-blooded Lamanites, good people. Lots of full-bloods attended my meetings, and some of them are interested. A very influential Cherokee asked me to come back and hold another meeting, promising to get the schoolhouse in another settlement to hold meetings for the benefit of others who wanted to hear. I am surely going back in the near future.

Had a fine time at Cherokee City, Arkansas; just closed last week. Lots of Holiness folks. I had the opportunity of showing up their false-faced holiness, and presenting the gospel as the means of furnishing us with Bible holiness, or righteousness. I was marvelously blessed. No Saints at this place. Never treated better. The best liveryman in town came to me and said, "When you come again, drive into my barn. I will care for your team." Some put small change in my hand, others saying, "Come to my place. I will care for you and team while you preach for us." A leading Baptist lady of the place said, "Bro. Simmons, I have believed all of these years that you certainly were a devil; but after hearing you talk I have changed my mind." She said after hearing me she could not sleep. She told her husband I had been misrepresented and she believed I was a servant of God. I believe when I go there again I will hold one of the best meetings of my life. I have never seen so many people worked up in one place as there.

From Cherokee City I went to a schoolhouse three miles southeast of Southwest City, Missouri, but in Arkansas, and commenced meetings. Large crowds; some interest. Have preached six sermons. Will continue according to interest. I shall do all possible to look after those places where the interest is the best. Saints, be patient. I must look after those folks who want to hear before I can respond to your calls. I am not running over much country, but I am trying to work closely.

I met four Utah elders near Rogers, Arkansas. They were canvassing from house to house. Two of them came to Maysville. We let them have our place of worship. They preached two sermons, O how dry! No Spirit of God about it. I followed them and exposed their claim, to the surprise and satisfaction of many. A better feeling among the people is the result. I kept them three nights, and I must say if I should come across men as ignorant represeting the reorganization, I would be ashamed of them. Poor fellows, I feel more like praying for them.

May our heavenly Father bless all of his workers everywhere, is my prayer.

S. W. SIMMONS.

WILKESPORT. Jan. 1.

Editor Herald: - Thinking a few lines might help some brother or sister in the struggle for truth, I will add my mite in defense of the truthfulness of this marvelous work and a wonder-the little stone cut out of the mountain. I know this work is of God, for his Spirit has borne witness with my spirit that it is true. I have seen his power displayed in behalf of my two sisters. Last spring one had a cancer, and the doctors said nothing short of an operation could do her any good. The Saints in this branch meet every first Sunday in the month for prayer, testimony, and sacrament meeting. The Spirit was present with us. It rested on me in the gift of prophecy, and told her if she would renew her covenant, be more faithful and humble, come out from the world, and be separate and believe in his promises, she would be healed. She obeyed his commands, sent for the elders, and today she is a living witness of the power of God in her be-

My other sister had a growth in her neck, which bothered her very much, and through administration she was healed, and bears her testimony to the truth of the gospel that the signs follow those that believe. O, as Saints we ought to be more thankful that God in his mercy has restored the gospel to earth, that the angel which John saw has truly flown through the midst of heaven!

Saints, let us strive to come up higher, be more careful in our daily walk and conversation, and thus help and be the means of helping others to see that we are what we profess to be, Saints of God, and we will have the Spirit to be with us when we meet to worship him; for if we do his will we shall know of the doctrine. If the Saints would strive to be more humble and love one another as they should, and be more faithful in paying tithing. God would bless them more. Let us all arise and do our duty; pay our tithing, and prove God if he will not open the windows of heaven and pour out blessings we have no room to receive. This I know to be true, for I have proved his blessings to us in the past. God has said this is a day of tithing and sacrifice for his people. Let us then be up and doing, and seek to build up the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all things shall be added unto us.

The Saints are all well in Olive branch and trying to do their duty. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and her redemption, and that we may all soon come to a unity of the faith and be numbered with the pure and the good in the kingdom of God, I remain, Your good in the Kinguom --sister in the gospel of Christ, LILLIE GAW.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 7.

Editors Herald:-I look forward to the weekly visit of the Herald with eagerness, and to read its contents is like a good meal. I cannot understand how any family of Saints can get along without the church papers and books, neither can I understand how they can be so cold and indifferent that they will not meet with the Saints whenever possible. Yet on the other hand, when we contemplate the worldly pleasures and allurements that surround us on every side, we cannot help but think if one is not depending on God, but on the arm of flesh, it is very easy to drift away, and then the Spirit leaves them, to some degree, so that they are easily led.

The work here in Chicago is progressing finely. There seems to be a bond of love and unity prevailing. Sunday was union Sunday, and we had the privilege of worshiping with the Saints on the south side. The meeting was one we shall remember long, as prior to the services there were three baptized into the fold who were near and dear to us, being nieces and grandchildren of Bro. George Horton, of Independence, Missouri. We were also made to rejoice when at their confirmation the Holy Spirit promised them blessings if they were faithful. The Saints were made to rejoice because the Lord spoke to us through a dear sister in prophecy. We were made to feel as we ofttimes sing, > Sweet the time, exceeding sweet, When the Saints together meet.

Truly, for me it is hard to part from the company of the Saints and come out to be in contact with the world and the wickedness that surrounds us. I live out some distance from the hall, so I am not always able to meet with the Saints, but I cannot help but be there in spirit if not in body. I have attended, and do whenever I can, a Congregationalist mission near our home. Have been treated very kindly by all, while they know that I am a Latter Day Saint. I am always very prompt at showing the difference between us and the Utah people, and last Thursday eve while there the young man who leads the meeting came and spoke to me. In our conversation I referred to our people, and he remarked that he was from Grinnell, Iowa, and knew Bro. Roth, also his sister went to college with Bro. Roth's son. He seemed pleased to meet me and I gave him our Epitome. By the way, he is attending the Congregational seminary, learning to be a minister of the gospel. I think he said his name was Mitchel. I am in hopes I may be able to show him the one true way while he is trying to teach me. We study the Bible in our home meeting. That makes me think: There was one lady asked him a question. It was this: What does it mean in the Bible where it says that the Devil will be chained a thousand years? He said he could not answer her question, but thought if we would prepare ourselves, we would be ready when that time came. I spoke up and said that this was prophecy unfulfilled, yet to come, after Christ should come to reign here with his people. I think I shall try to have some preaching out here, as the Utah men have been going the rounds visiting from house to house. One called here. We had quite a talk. He found out how I stood. I gave him a tract on polygamy, also read out of the Doctrine and Covenants on the marriage question. His name was Allen, from Hyrum, Utah. He said that the Hedrickites had told the Utah branch that they could come to Independence and build the temple. I told him that peace must reign in Zion, and it could not possibly reign there if they were not keeping the laws of the land, for if we keep the law of God we have no need to break the laws of the land. Well, he finally said that time would tell who were in the right. I said, "Certainly; this is the Lord's work; he will see it through."

I am looking forward to the land of Zion, even praying that I may be worthy an inheritance there, also for the advancement of this glorious work.

Your sister in Christ,
MRS. EUGENE HORTON.

MYRTLE POINT, Oregon, Jan. 3. Editors Herald:-It is now some three months since I arrived at Myrtle Point. I have become quite webb-footed, and moss is beginning to grow on my back, so you see I am an Oregonian. There are only a few Latter Day Saints here. We have a very nice Sunday school which Elder Crumley organized before leaving for other parts. We meet at the house of Bro. Giles, who has been so kind to throw open his doors to us. We have no preaching now, as Elders Harris and Crumley are preaching at other places. They are thought very much of here and God is blessing them in their work. The Saints here are trying to live their religion and help one another that this great work may roll on. Your sister in the faith,

SR. CHARLES CRUMLEY.

CHEROKEE, Iowa, Jan. 8.

Editors Herald:-The work is onward in these parts, notwithstanding the additions to the church are few. The fact that many of the Saints are becoming more fully acquainted with their duties and making a reasonable effort to live nearer to God is indeed an encouraging sign. When we succeed in so educating each and every member of the church that they will be willing to do all within their power for the purification and development of self and, therefore, willing and desirous of making every needful sacrifice for the spread of the truth and the salvation of souls, our work will move forward with greater rapidity and God will be honored as he should be, and we will receive and enjoy the favor and blessings of God to a greater extent than we now do. It is a blessed thing to see brethren and sisters dwell together in peace while they unitedly and in love and confidence perseveringly press forward for the redemption of Zion and the good of all.

This latter-day work is surely the work of Christ, and will prove a blessing and the means of salvation to all those who accept it and conform to its requirements. In contemplating upon the greatness and power of our work it seems to the writer that it is indeed a "marvelous work and a wonder," its foundations are so durable, and each and all of its parts are so strong and so beautifully adjusted, that it is self-evident that its Author was and is divine. At times we may become discouraged with our own weakness and the fallibility of mankind and the prejudice manifest by some against our work and its representatives; yet we are pleased to know that there is nothing in the work itself to be ashamed of or to cause anyone to be discouraged. The work and its foundation are impregnable.

However, to be benefited by its completeness and strength it is not only necessary that we should be acquainted with all its parts and familiar with every proper means of defense, but that each and all should be completely separated from sin in all its phases and be in possession of the Holy Spirit which will qualify us for our part in the work and make us indeed colaborers with God.

Permit me to say that I have read the three volumes of Church History and I like their style very much. They should be in the home of every Saint. And while it is true that some things occurred that cause regret, yet to know them only the better enables us to guard ourselves against making the same or similar mistakes. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. The beauty, perfection, and strength should be attributed to God, while the weakness and failures visible should be considered as representing the fallibility of mortal man.

To fully and properly reduce the precepts of the gospel to practice is to demonstrate to our own satisfaction the cleansing, sanctifying, elevating, and life-giving powers found therein, and to be furnished with the best possible proof of the wisdom of God and the power of Christ to save to the uttermost all those who come to God by him.

It is a privilege indeed to be permitted to preach the glorious gospel of the Son of God.

A holy presence near me stood,
And whispered low and sweet,
Such pleasant thoughts, in words so good,
I thought to worship at her feet.

Her countenance was sweet and fair; Her robe, of spotless white; With flowing curls of golden hair, And eyes of sparkling light.

Her graces were so charming, too,
She filled my mind with light;
She seemed a being strange and new,
Inspiring love for right.

All darkness from me seemed to flee;
New courage then I took;
Her holy presence seemed to me,
Virtue in every look.

Within a halo of glory,
This presence seemed to stand;
As with a grasp firm and holy,
She held me by the hand,

While her gentle voice inspired
Within my longing soul
All the good that could be desired
For body or for soul.

She lights up the path of duty,
And helps me do the right;
O, she helps me see the beauty
Of wasking in the light.

Should you wish to know this maiden, And with her beauty cope, Why, she is no real maiden, But the principle of hope.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

LADD, Ill., Jan. 8.

Editors Herald:-Allow me to tell of some more good things the Lord has done for us in this part of the field, and how he has caused us to rejoice in knowing we are not overlooked by him. We have with us Brn. Wildermuth and Hackett, who have done much good in the short time they have been here. I believe Bro. Wildermuth is the only living member whose name appears on the first charter of the Reorganized Church. He has been in this work for a long time and we believe he understands it thoroughly. We have learned to leve Bro. Hackett for his excellent counsel and advice. They have told us many good tidings, have added to our number, and have given us much cause for rejoicing. I believe the angels of heaven rejoiced with us last Sunday. Bro. Hackett baptized two sisters, and on Monday night the brethren ordained Bro. Leon Snow to the office of priest, Bro. John Lamb as teacher, and Bro. Bert Walker as deacon; and our present priest, Bro. T. F. Turner, was called to the office of an elder. For all this we ought to rejoice, and praise God for his kindness and interest shown us.

Dear Saints, we ask you to remember us in your prayers, that we may be faithful to the end and be worthy of such blessings. We are but few, and have not had the privileges that some have, for we have been without an elder, teacher, or deacon for the greater part of the last year. Our teacher moved last spring, and an elder has been out of our midst for a long time; but the Lord has been with us, and helped us so we could hold fast; and now he has caused us to start out in another vessel in full equipment. We hope and pray that he will bless others as he has us, and he will if we are faithful; and in the end there shall be such a rejoicing that no man can begin to measure. May God's richest blessings rest upon his people is our prayer in the name of Christ.

LEON SNOW.

REDFIELD, Iowa, Jan. 7.

Editors Saints' Herald:—By suggestion of Elder J. W. Morgan and concurrence of Elder C. E. Butterworth, presidents of the Des Moines and Galland's Grove districts, respectively, I have been holding meetings in a schoolhouse two miles from St. Charles for the last three weeks. Congregations range from thirty to sixty. By request, visited with eight families. Spoke twice on Book of Mormon. Some said the second effort was the best sermon preached there, and have started to read the book. They took up a collection at their own suggestion at the close of my farewell sermon.

Bro C. J. Peters helped me at the start, but went home for Christmas. Bro. H. Mc-Coy came to assist, and I left him "pounding away," as I had to go home and the people wanted meetings continued.

Will go to Linden in a few days and then to Herndon and Jamaica, where Bro. Butterworth has requested me to labor.

JOSEPH CARLSON.

TUNNEL HILL, Ill., Jan. 11.

Editors Herald:-I was greatly pleased with our late Herald in its enlarged form which will afford more space and better opportunities for the Saints to contribute to its columns. At the top of each page it is designated, Saints' Herald, and every Saint has a right to be heard through its pages, and it should be in the homes of every family in the church. Every one can do something for its support, either by writing or reading; and if you cannot read it you can send $1.50 to Bro. John Smith, Lamoni, Iowa, and he will send it to you for one year and you can easily find some one who can read it for you, and in this way you will not only receive benefit yourself, but you will be able to benefit others. I remember that I received light in reading the Herald when it was furnished me by another brother, before I subscribed for it myself, and as Jesus says, "we speak that we do know." Everyone should do what he can to enlarge its subscription and thus broaden its circulation as far and as wide as possible. Whether in a branch organization or in a scattered condition, if you will read it, it will be a means of great satisfaction as you read of the progress of this "marvelous work and a wonder," not only in our own land, but in far off Australia and other islands of the sea as well.

While all should make an effort to secure the papers and books of the church I would not discourage the idea of reading other papers and books also; for we are told in Doctrine and Covenants 85: 36, "seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom." "Seek learning even by study, and also by faith." The above is a good example for both ministry and laity.

The nineteenth century with its great developments, in which the gospel and kingdom of God was restored to the earth is now a thing of the past, and the great twentieth century is before us, with many prophecies of the scriptures unfulfilled, which fulfillment many true Latter Day Saints are anxiously hoping and longing to realize in their natural lifetime, and these promises of God not yet realized in their fulfillment should inspire all to work diligently for the advancement of the latter-day work.

F. M. SLOVER.

LADD, Ill., Jan. 8.

Editors Herald:—It is with a heart full of gratitude to our heavenly Father that I pen these lines. Bro. E. M. Wildermuth and myself are holding meetings at present in this place. And while the majority of the people are willing to let us have everything our own way by staying away from our meetings, yet a few are honest enough to listen, and on Sunday last I had the pleasure of leading two repentant ones into the waters of baptism. Others are near and we trust they, too, will decide the great question and accept truth.

Last evening was the regular business meeting of the branch, and by vote of the Saints and in harmony with the calling received. Bro. Leon Snow was ordained a priest, Bro. John Lamb a teacher, and Bro. O. B. Walker a deacon. The Spirit of God was present and we rejoiced, for these brethren are all young married men, and if faithful will be a great help and support to the work here. Our prayer is that they may be humble, prayerful, and careful, and always speak gently, act kindly, overcome self, give no place to the Devil, and by a godly walk and a pure conversation win souls to Christ and gain and retain the confidence of those over whom they are placed as helpers.

May God speed the truth. I rejoice in this work, and each day it grows brighter and dearer to me. Kindly make mention of us in your prayers that we may have wisdom and a true love for all.

Your colaborer,

J. T. HACKETT.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Jan. 7. Editors Herald:-The springs here are noted as a health and pleasure resort. Many people from all over the world make yearly visits to this place; therefore, we think it a very important place for church work. For some time past several of our people have lived here, but the work was not commenced until Bro. C. R. Duncan and I began preaching last spring. We commenced services in private houses, and later in the summer held meetings in the tent. A branch of the church was organized a year and a half ago, twenty miles east, but most of the members having moved here, the headquarters was changed to this place, to be known as Colorado Springs branch. We have rented Union Labor hall, where we hold Sunday school and preaching every Sunday, and a prayer meeting each week, and on Friday evenings we meet and study the Book of Mormon. There are about twenty-five members here, and nearly all of them are alive to

We would be glad to have more of our people locate here, and pleased to have the traveling ministry give us a call as they pass. If they could let us know when they are coming we could have it announced in the city papers. My permanent address is 504 East Willamette, Colorado Springs, Colorado. Hoping that our heavenly Father will prosper his work everywhere, I remain your brother in Christ.

J. F. CURTIS.

GLENWOOD, Iowa, Jan. 5.

Dear Readers:—I have been a member of this church some eighteen years now. There has never been a time that I wanted to go with anything else. I am young in the work yet, and I know there is lots for me to learn of the blessed work. We have a nice branch here, and a lovely little Sunday school which is well attended every Sunday. Bro. Gurrie Walling is our minister, and we always find him at his post. There are a few of the preachers who call on us often, Brn. I. M. Smith and Charles Fry, and we are always glad to have them or others with us at any time.

Many of the young Herald readers may know me under the name of Miss Celia Richards, but my name is now Mrs. J. E. Cheyney. Was married November 29, 1900, by Bro. G. Walling at my own home. My husband is not a member of any church, but I feel that he will come in with me some day. He attends church with me every Sunday, and studies the work, and I explain to him what I know, and I can only pray for him and ask God to show him the true way.

Now, dear reader, my chief object in writing to you is to ask the prayers of the Saints, for my dear old Grandma Walling. Many of you know her as a faithful Latter Day Saint. Since coming home from our camp meeting at Tabor, Iowa, she has been afflicted in body and is compelled to sit in a chair day and night, and finds no relief. I ask you all to pray for her, that she may be made well, and have the use of her feet and body once more. We know that her days are nearly numbered, but we feel if it be God's will she may be with us many years yet, and enjoy life in her old age. She is eighty-three years old.

I am a reader of all the church works, and always glad to read letters from the young, and to know they have an interest in the work. I am as ever,

Your sister in the one faith, Mrs. J. E. Cheyney.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Talk health. The dreary, never-changing tale
Of fatal maladies is worn and stale.
You cannot charm, nor interest, nor please,
By harping on that chord, disease.
Say you are well, or, all is well with you,
And God will hear your words and make them true."

HYGIENE.

In studying the subject of hygiene, I find it embraces more than we shall be able to discuss in one paper. "The New National Encyclopedia" tells us that "Hygiene refers to the influence of ways of living upon the preservation of health, and includes the effects of climate, dress, food, sleep, drainage, exercise, ventilation, fire, physical culture, bathing, and in general sanitary science. Its consideration preceded that of medicine. Greece and Rome legislated largely upon the subject. Even Egypt has left traces of well arranged ventilation, and Moses carefully legislated for the health of his nation,"

I would not dare to write upon this subject relying upon my own knowledge, but give that which has become a knowledge to us through the mediumship of others who have studied hygiene, and can prove their views by practical demonstrations. To me the very first principle, as part of the plan of hygiene, is expressed in two little words, "fresh air."

In this short paper we shall only endeavor to discuss that part of hygiene which refers to fresh air, with particular reference to ventilation; and in order to appreciate the necessity of correct ventilation and its effects, as applied to the human body, let us go back and carefully consider the principles which give life to and animate the air which we breathe.

"The New Hygiene," a splendid little book, edited by James W. Wilson, tells us that "The vilalizing element in the air is the oxygen gas, of which it contains twenty-one parts, the other element being nitrogen gas, which is merely a dilutant [diluent] designed to carry and mix with the oxygen, so that we do not get too much of it at one time. There is also a trace of a third gas, called carbonic acid gas, which to animal life is a deadly poison, but which in pure air is found in such small quantities, from three to six parts in ten thousand, as to be harmless,—

THE PULMONARY ORGANS AND THEIR OFFICE.

"The lungs are two in number, located on each side of the chest. They are connected with the nostrils and mouth by the bronchial tubes, windpipe, and throat. The inlet into the windpipe from the throat is by a little trap door just back of the root of the tongue, called the epiglottis. The windpipe divides into two parts just about opposite of the breast bone, and sends a branch called the bronchis to each lung, where it is divided up into numerous branches, much like the trunk and branches of a tree, substituting-to carry out the analogy-the little air cells of the lungs, with which each little bronchial twig connects, for the leaves of the tree. The delicate little air bags are so small that the lungs of an average sized man contain almost six hundred million. Yet, tiny as they are, each of these little cells has its air tube. through which it is inflated; and stranger still, is covered with a network of the finest blood vessels, called capillaries, through which a constant circulation goes on."

Truly, in the words of Holy Writ, "We are fearfully and wonderfully made;" and how wonderfully intelligent and skillful must be the designer and workman who could design and build such a marvelous piece of mechanism.

"Through the nostrils and the glottis, and down the windpipe into the lungs, is pumped the fresh air loaded with oxygen. This is distributed into the millions of little air chambers, each surrounded by its network of blood vessels. Here the little red corpuscles, which are so numerous in the blood, seem to have such a powerful affinity for the oxygen that it is coaxed away willy nilly through the very thin membranes which separate the fluid from the air, and made a prisoner. At the same time these intelligent little particles eject through the same membrane, into the air, now relieved of its oxygen, the carbonic acid gas. The lungs again contract, forcing the air, now loaded with this gas in place of the oxygen, back through the nostrils into the open air. The imprisoned oxygen in the meanwhile is carried to the heart, and by that wonderful pump sent to the deepest recesses of the body, through the arteries, where it is put to work in millions of little stoves, so to say, and made to contribute to the animal heat of the body, by burning up waste carbon. The ashes of this combustion, the carbonic acid, are gathered up by the blood, darkening its color, and carried through the veins to the heart, where it is again pumped through the lungs, to be again decarbonized and oxygenized.

"It may seem strange, considering the length of time both men and animals have been breathing in oxygen and throwing off carbonic acid gas, that the air has not become poisonous to animal life. It would doubtless be so had not the all-wise Creator arranged that while all animal life absorbs oxygen and throws off carbonic acid gas, with plants it is just the reverse. All forms of plant life absorb carbon and throw off oxygen. The winds and constant motion of the air, where it has full course, again mix the gases in right proportions, and so the equilibrium is maintained.

"The heart, which is a strong muscular bag, pumps the blood through the lungs, as it goes round and round through the circulation, at the rate of eight hundred quarts per hour. During this time the blood spreads out over and over again through the delicate capillaries surrounding the little air cells in the lungs, gets rid of nearly thirty quarts of carbonic acid gas, and absorbs over thirty quarts of oxygen.

"On this interchange of elements constantly going on our lives depend. While life continues night and day, that tireless pump, the heart, keeps sending a steady stream of dark, venous blood into the lungs to be purified and changed into red, arterial blood, by losing its carbonic acid, and gaining oxygen, which in turn is carried to every part of the body, renewing, vitalizing, and imparting its own new, vigorous life. Night and day, also, the lungs must do their part by pumping in fresh revivifying oxygen, and pumping out the waste and poisonous used up matter extracted from venous blood."

With these facts before us, you can readily see the necessity of good ventilation. The injurious effects upon the body of breathing over and over again the devitalized oxygen, should be carefully looked after, by letting in plenty of fresh air in our apartments, without incurring draughts. Our children would feel brighter and better in disposition if ventilation was scientifically studied, and applied more in our homes, schools, churches, and all public buildings. One writer upon being interrogated as to whether he objected to night air, has said, "Yes, sir, I object decidedly to night air, but it is the night air which is shut in with one in a tight sleepingroom."

For myself I know that when I fail to ventilate my bedroom at night I feel droopy and heavy the next day. It is not only necessary that we keep our homes fresh and sweet, but we should try to take a certain amount of outdoor exercise.

As Daughters of Zion, let us study more fully all the principles of hygiene, and try and apply them in our lives. In filling nature's laws we fulfill God's laws. And may God help us in the studying of his laws, and as the little hymn says, "Practice what we know."

BERTHA SMITH.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Dora Matthews writes: "I have an affliction in my body, which the doctors say is incurable. My faith is strong in God, and I feel it my duty to appeal to the Prayer Union in my behalf."

PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

Opening hymn, Saints' Harp 171. Prayer, Scripture reading, Proverbs chapter 16. Discussion of select reading in Home Column. Roll call. Business. Closing hymn, Saints' Harp 475. Dismissal prayer.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to"Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

TRUE OBJECT OF SUNDAY SCHOOL AND RELIGIO.

A brother recently said in effect, that he thought the Sunday school the most important meeting of the church, because it takes the little child and teaches it the truth, the way of light, and continues that teaching through youth and on through maturity, making the life of Christ ever more near and dear to us. It has a place for every one all the time, from the little one in the infant class to the great-grandfather, it may be, in the Bible class.

And that shows much of its

REAL OBJECT,

to teach the best of books, the Bible, to instill into our minds the gospel plan, to show us better methods of study, and to prepare us the better to teach others the way of life, be it as member, Sunday school teacher, or preacher, and so to enable us to live better lives and by living higher lives lead others upward towards the light. It should make us better members, more like the perfect one, and prepare us better for our Father's work than we would prepare ourselves alone.

THE RELIGIO

is also an organization for spiritual and intellectual development, a society to organize our efforts for good. It is to provide social pleasure within the church home, within the family circle of the church, the family of God. It is also to prepare us for efficient service in the cause of Christ. At present it is making a special study of the Book of Mormon and such archæological data as will help to establish the earlier civilizations of this continent, and the truth of the latterday work—a truly lofty aim.

It is

A STRANGE FACT,

but nevertheless true, that as a rule few are inclined to give much thought to the best books, first of which there stands the Bible. It seems strange but it is true, that the majority are intending some day to read the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, but it is "some day." The Religio and Sunday school aim to make that day today and so prepare us even now for that change which comes no man knows when. And this seems to be the true object of these branches of church work, to teach us first how to study aright, how then to lead a better, nobler life, and so how to teach others both by precept and example; to raise up workers better prepared for the church work; and above all, to prepare us so when that great day does come, and come it will, be it sooner or later, when our Father sends his angels down to bid us now, "Come home," we may go to enter the paradise of God, and when that still greater day shall come, when great and small stand forth for judgment, that voice divine may say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into thy celestial rest." Let them prepare us for service here on earth, and then by our knowledge of his law, for service in the world beyond. S. A. Burgess.

For Dow City, Iowa, Reunion, 1900,

PERSEVERANCE.

Though perseverance deals not so much with the great things of life as with the small, nothing great is ever accomplished without it. As an anchor holds the ship against adverse winds and waves, so perseverance holds a man to the accomplishment of a fixed purpose against all opposition. Great things are not done in a day, but are the culminations of series of actions, each of which may be unimportant in itself, but which when combined bring about great results. The World's Fair did not constitute the world's progress during four centuries; but exhibited the many successive steps, which when looked upon in the aggregate, showed the great stride the world had made. In every line of work it is the

STEADY PERSISTENT EFFORTS

that bring the ends desired. Any faltering, or leaving the work, will be apt to accomplish nothing but failure; but continuous struggling against all opposition will be likely to bring success, though not always apparent till long after. Time alone often proves the success or failure of a work.

THE PRESENT CONDITION of the Sunday school work in our district, to a great extent, is attributable to the perseverance of its earliest officers. Years of struggling effort were required to convert the church to the necessity and advantages of the Sunday school, and but for persevering workers in those earlier days, the majority of our children might yet have been growing up with a meager knowledge of the gospel. As it is, some of those who developed the word have stepped out in the performance of greater duties, and others who have entered the work more recently have been and are being fitted for more responsible positions. Thus we see the first fruits of patient persevering labor; but the full influence of the Sunday school will not be seen until those who have been members have grown up and have taken their places in the various positions among men. Then may we expect to see more men and women who will be shining lights, and who by their earnest, persevering work, will influence the world for good. Patience is an essential quality of perseverance.

THE RESULT

is often not seen until long after the work is begun, or perhaps finished. The Suez Canal required ten years of labor, but the results of that labor were not felt until long after, and now it can be seen that it has helped shape the history of nations. The results of a work are not to be estimated by its apparent insignificance or importance. Think of the small beginnings of Christianity and the latter-day work, and of their great influence in the world.

ANY WORK

based upon right principles cannot fail to have a good result, and all such labor may be safely left to the future, and if the results are not seen, in faith the work may be continued, and sometime in the unseen future, perhaps after the worker has passed on to a higher life, the results will surely come. Let every good work continue then, and he who knows the end from the beginning will not fail to give a just reward.

CHARLEY FRY.

In Sunday school newspaper.

AN EXPLANATION.

So far as the committee has been heard from, the first report of the committee on Sunday school improvements expresses their views with reference to the improvements of the work being done, or that should be done by the church in behalf of the Sunday school department.

We wish it understood that what we recommend in our report is in the abstract, the adopting of the recommendations being the business of the convention, and the executing of that adopted being the business of the executives, the executive committee, or whomsoever the convention may commit the work to be done by special legislation.

Only two subjects in this first report do we invite favorable consideration of at the coming convention, the latter subject, however, divided under two heads: 1. The improving of the Hope; 2. The placing of its publication under control of the General Sunday School Association, since it is being published in the interests of the Sunday school department of church work. This subject should be treated under these two heads. The only question to be decided by the convention in considering the first recommendation of our report on this subject is, Does the Hope, to meet present and future demands, need improving? If the convention decides that it does, then, unless the latter clause is adopted, the point gained is to show to the Board of Publication what we as an association believe should be done to make the Hope satisfy present demands; and through our executive, or some one specially appointed by the convention, this action should be reported to the Board of Publication,—it being the mind of the committee, so far as heard from, that this matter be left with the executives, -and they to suggest such improvements as they may ascertain by diligent inquiry and observation should and can be carried into execution; and these improvements be made as rapidly as possible, it being an authoritative stimulus to both the executives and Board of Publication concerning what we may, as an association having charge of this department of church work, believe should be done with the Hope in the interests of the Sunday schools.

If, however, the latter recommendation is adopted by the convention, and the General Conference accedes to the request, then the Hope with its future is in the hands of the executive committee, as I understand it, and the passage of the first recommendation will but stimulate them to what the association desires of its future. For one I do not believe the Hope is all it should be as a Sunday school paper, and I am not able to say why it is not, or with whom the fault may neither does the committee wish it understand that we make that a part of our report by recommending that it be placed under the control of the Sunday School Association; but we believe the improvements and changes that from the demands of the present or future may be necessary to be made to answer its sphere of action as a Sunday school paper more satisfactorily, may be more easily and more properly made under the control of those who have the Sunday school interests specially in charge. The need of more space in the Herald is, it seems to the committee, very apparent. And this is the only point the committee reports: and when this subject is considered it should be considered to answer this one question, Does the present demands of the Sunday school work indicate that we need more space to represent its interests as a part of church work? If this is decided affirmativaly it work? If this is decided affirmatively, it will be upon the basis that we have faith it can be obtained in some way, and occupied beneficially to the church. But the question of how to obtain and occupy should not be considered until we conclude we need more space. Then the whole matter can be left to the executive committee to secure the space upon the best terms possible, and then to arrange to occupy as fully, and as wisely as God may open the way; and I believe, if we act with the proper spirit, and decide we need more space, that God will open the way that all else will be supplied.

Having labored in purview of the duties to which we were appointed, and having come to the conclusions contained in the report, we, in the interests of the Sunday schools of the church, send it forth, and whether our recommendations are affirmed or negated, that is the business of the convention.

I am yours, sincerely and hopefully, without any personal interests to enhance, J. F. MINTUN.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

By order of the district superintendent, Bro. D. R. Chambers, the Pottawattamie district Sunday school association will convene at Crescent, Iowa, Friday, February 22, at 10:30 a.m. Let all schools send delegates, as this meeting calls for election of officers for the year 1901.

JENNIE SCOTT, Sec.

Convention of Northern Nebraska district will be held at the Saints' chapel, No. 1818 North Twenty-first street, Omaha, January 26, two p. m. It is requested that each school will send a complete report, if it is impossible to be represented by delegates. Forward reports to Bro. James Huff, No. 1818 North Twenty-first street, Omaha.

ALICE C. SCHWARTZ, Supt.

The Sunday school association of the Kirtland district will convene February 25, at Cleveland, Ohio. General Superintendent T. A. Hougas will be present and a good and profitable time is anticipated. All come prepared to take part.

RICHARD BALDWIN, Supt. DORA MCFARLAND, Sec.

The convention of Northeastern Illinois district Sunday school association will convene at Sandwich, Illinois, February 1. Would like to have a good representation of the schools in the district as the officers are to be elected. Secretaries, please send reports to me, at Norway, Illinois.

MAMIE WILLIAMSON, Dist. Sec.

Conference Minutes.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA.

The above conference met at Tulare, October 6. J. M. Putney chairman, A. H. Smith assistant, L. A. Gould secretary pro tem. Officers reporting: High Priests J. M. Putney and J. B. Carmichael; Elders Joseph Flory and H. L. Holt; Priests D. L. Allen and C. W. Deuel. Branches report-San Jose 77, Lone 81, Santa Cruz 66. San Jose Was chosen as the place for holding next conference the second Friday of March, 1901. Preaching by Brn. A. H. Smith, J. M. Putney, E. S. Burton, and Joseph Burton. Ministerial report of Elder A. M. Chase was read at the Sunday morning preaching service.

Miscellaneous Department.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL PASSENGER ASSO-CIATION.

Notice is hereby given to the general ministry and all concerned that the newly organized Trans-Continental Passenger Association has been furnished a copy of the minutes of the late General Conference containing lists of all missionaries and church officials laboring under general appointment, together with full instructions tending to facilitate prompt and regular issuance of clergy credentials.

All laboring under general appointment have been indorsed. Lists of names, addresses, and territory of missionaries in charge, have also been furnished.

The same general method of issuing permits in operation with other associations has been provided for, under which local ministers will be referred to their respective missionaries in charge for indorsement.

"The Trans-Continental Clergy Certificate is good only upon roads parties thereto, named below, for tickets between points west of and including Cheyenne, Wyoming; Colorado common points; Trinidad, Colorado; Albuquerque, New Mexico, and El Paso, Texas. . . . Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe; Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Colorado Chicago, Rock Island, and Facine, and Southern; Colorado Midland; Denver and Rio Grande; Florence and Cripple Creek; Midland Terminal; Pecos System; Rio Grande Southern; Rio Grande Western; Santa Fe Pacific; Santa Fe, Prescott, and Phoenix; San Francisco and San Joaquin Valley: Silverton Railroad: Silverton Northern; Southern California; Southern Pacific (Pacific System); Union Pacific."

Applications, remittances, etc., should be addressed to James Charlton, chairman, 503 Ernest and Cranmer building, Denver, Colorado. Application blanks may be obtained from local agents, or from Chairman Charl-R. S. SALYARDS, Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, Jan 14.

GENERAL CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

Since the notice by the Church Recorder in Heralds and Ensigns last June there has been more than usual promptness in forwarding the reports of branches soon after the district conferences. The result is that nearly all of the branches in the United States and Canada are on the general records according to their latest reports.

And many branch and district clerks have been prompt and efficient in answering inquiries for corrections of names of persons and places and of dates of birth, baptism, and ordination, also of marriages, deaths, and other particulars. But others have not attended to the matters inquired about, therefore corrections cannot be made in those records where uncertainty exists upon these points of difference.

Wherefore, again appeal is made to those who have deferred attention or have been careless in the matter. We need help in order that a perfect agreement may be had between branch records, district records, and general records, and that when they do agree they may be right and correct as to names, places, and dates.

We have now to say that, excepting in that the branches of Western Wales have re-ported up to August, 1900, there has been no change in the situation outlined in the "Recorder's Notice" last June, as to the branches in England and Wales. But it would be a great favor to us and to the church in general if there came to us complete corrections of the branches in the Birmingham, Manchester, and Sheffield districts up to January 1, 1901, also from Wales. Possibly some reports may be on the way now.

Brn. J. F. Burton and J. W. Peterson have written about the situation in the Society Islands, the latter assisting Bro. Pohemeti to some degree. He writes that prospects are favorable that full corrections will appear by and by.

Probably reports from Australia and Honolulu are now coming over the sea and will arrive in time.

Most of the branches in Canada have been well reported, and the district clerks are also faithful. The same may be said of nearly all the districts and branches in the United States, even though very many dif-ferences or errors are found to exist. But, by care and patience these are overcome in time. However, many small branches have not been reported and they need attention by the district officers, that they may make out reports of gains and losses for the records. Where branches have not been reported for some time their books should be examined and an effort be made to learn of the deaths of members, that such may be recorded more promptly than has been the case sometimes.

Concerning the United States: By my table of districts and their conference times, I find that the reports of Central California for April and October have not arrived, the last received being for October, 1899.

Of other October reports the only ones now lacking are those from Kewanee, Spring River, Kirtland, and Northern Michigan, the latter being kept by the district clerk for correction before sending in.

The September reports of the New York district have not come.

There are lacking, but expected, the reports from Eastern Maine, Oklahoma, and Northeast Texas and Choctaw, all for cember.

Although the Virginia district has held at least two conferences, there have no branch reports been sent in by the officers. If they will now attend to this matter it will be well.

There are also branches in no organized districts that should send us full accounts of gains and losses, such as Ingleside, Martin's gains and losses, such as Ingleside, Martin's Creek, Shady Grove, and Drew county in Arkansas; Evergreen, Elkhorn, Olive, and Pine Cliffs in Nebraska; Amanda, Ohio; Scranton, Pennsylvania; Bottineau and Star of Hope, North Dakota; Marshall, Salem, and Pleasant Valley, South Dakota; Louisville, Kentucky; South Pittsburg, Tennessee; Rockwalnut, Virginia; Gilman, Spokane, Lake Park, Roslyn, Seattle, and Castle Rock, Washington; Hope and Condon, Oregon. Especial attention should be paid to reporting the deaths that have occurred, inquiry ing the deaths that have occurred, inquiry being made as to scattering members, and their residence if living.

In closing will say that on the present edition of branch report forms is printed a copy of Sections 173 and 174 of the "Bock of Rules," pertaining to "Church Records" and "Branch Reports," so that all branch officers may be informed as to the use and disposal of said reports of branches. This, with the printed instructions of the Church Recorder, should make it easy for any one to fill out reports properly and to know what to do with them afterwards.

We will be glad to aid any in perfecting their accounts as well as our own, and will be thankful for assistance to this purpose, because we believe that the Lord wishes order in these things, as in all others.

Respectfully submitted to all throughout the church who should be concerned and in-

H. A. STEBBINS. terested. General Church Recorder.

LAMONI, Iowa, Jan. 10, 1901.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

TWENTIETH CENTURY GREETING.

To Saints of Little Sioux District:-While the world is lauding the advancement of science, arts, and man's genius, and we stand in wonder of what another century may bring, and Dr. Herron is launching a new apostolic church, we as Saints must be aware that all these, with the "Lo here! and, lo, there!" portend the world's crisis. The M. E. church is calling for millions of dollars and souls for Christ. We call only for advanced spirituality, which will give us favor with God, and this will give us power to "leaven the lump" and "salt the earth." Show us your faith by your works. A good index, though it may have exceptions, is that when you love the Lord you love the souls of men and desire their salvation. This is only accomplished by the gospel. Obedience to the gospel saves. How shall the world hear without a preacher? How can they preach without their families being sustained? without a preacher? How can they preach without their families being sustained? Again, the poor need your fulfilling of the law. "Pure and undefiled religion," is to visit (with physical and spiritual means) the widow and fatherless in their affliction. "He that circle to the received by the the Lord." that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord." "Behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, . . . with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me."—D. C. 42:8. "Remember . . . the poor and needy, the sick and the afflicted, for he that doeth not these things, the same is not my disciple."—Ibid. 52:9. So you see how imperative these commands, and the proper channels for their support are tithe and offering funds. By doing this we hope to see "modern secret orders" and worldly means relegated to the past, as we are told in the "Book of Mormon" that God does not work through them. But now let us make the first year of our "new century" the "banner year;" "begin early, work late;" no longer "rob God," but work in harmony with our prayers for "God's increase," spiritually and temporally. Nineteen hundred was $500 below 1899, partially due, no doubt, to our physical inability to personally see you, and "put you in remembrance;" but get truly converted. Don't pray to be seen as others see you, but as God sees you. Get rid of that miserly, mean, stingy, Ananias feeling, and see how your love for all that's good will increase. Doing this, you will not be "forgetful hearers but doers of the word." We have an efficient assistant in each branch, so there is no excuse. Our address is found below. We ask your continued prayers, that if it please the Lord we may soon be liberated to go out and labor in the cause we love above all else. Thankful above measure for the prayerful support and words of encourage-Thankful above measure for the ment hitherto given, I am, humbly engaged in the work of spiritual advancement with ALMA M. FYRANDO. you, Magnolia, Iowa.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Galland's Grove district conference will convene at Deloit, Iowa, Saturday, February 16, at 8:30 a.m. This is the most important conference of the year; a full report and a good representation is desired.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH, C. J. HUNT, Presidents.

Conference of Eastern Colorado district will meet at Denver, corner Twenty-second and Araphahoe streets, February 16, at ten a. m. Send delegate credentials and reports to J. B. Roush 2942 California street, Denver, Colorado. We hope brethren going east about that time will note date of conference and meet with us. Bro. Alexander H. Smith will please take notice.

JOHN B. ROUSH, Pres. A. E. TABOR, Sec.

Conference of Northeastern Illinois district will convene at Sandwich, February 2. Branch clerks will please have their reports made up to and including January 15.

HENRY SOUTHWICK, Pres.

Conference of Clinton district will convene at Coal Hill chapel, near El Dorado Springs, Missouri, on Saturday, February 2. Prayer service from 8:30 till 9:45 a.m.; business session at ten a.m.

T R. WHITE, Pres. VINA H. GOFF, Clerk.

Des Moines district conference will convene at Des Moines, Iowa, Saturday February 9, at ten a. m. Reports sent by mail should be addressed H. A. McCoy, Des Moines, Iowa, care G. W. Johnson, Youngerman Block.

H. A. McCoy, Sec.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The past orders for the third volume of Church History are being filled as rapidly as possible, and when these are completed the book will be advertised for sale. Persons willing to wait may forward their orders.

JOHN SMITH, Mgr.

NOTICES.

The Religio association of northeastern Illinois district will meet in the church at Sandwich, Illinois, Friday, February 1, at two p. m., for business.

ADAM J. KECK, Vice Pres.

DIED.

WALBERRY. — Sr. Sarah Walberry was born September 5, 1848, in Sandusky county, Ohio; baptized September, 1894. Her faith was grounded deep in the promises of the Savior, and her life was a sweet memento of Christian graces. She died in hope of a glorious resurrection, December 29, 1900, at her home in Steuben county, Indiana, aged 52 years, 3 months, and 22 days. Funeral from the Methodist church in Otsego township; sermon by Elder S. W. L. Scott. She was laid to rest in North Otsego cemetery beside her daughter, Cora Bell, who preceded her across the river sixteen years.

HERZING —Naoma Romacks was born in Hardin county, Ohio, August 7, 1831; died near Fanning, Kansas, December 28, 1900, aged 67 years, 4 months, and 21 days. She was married to Charles Herzing in November, 1857, who departed this life March, 1888. She was the mother of nine children, seven of whom are now living to mourn. For thirty-six years she has been a member of the church. Funeral sermon at Fanning, by Elder M. T. Short, and her remains laid to rest in the village cemetery a little way east of the hamlet. Elder W. Gurwell, the branch president, was in charge.

WALKER—Leo Burgess Walker, son of Mr. Marion and Sr. Carrie Walker, wes born May 12, 1900; died December 18, 1900, aged 1 months and 6 days. Funeral services by Elder W. M. Self.

LENTS.—At Fontanelle, Iowa, December 20, 1900, Sr. Cordel'a, wife of Bro. G W. Lents. She was born September 17, 1848, at Big Rock, Illinois; came to Fontanelle, Iowa, with her parents. Was married to G. W. Lents in the year 1868. By this marriage they had eleven children; all are living to mourn the loss of mother. She was baptized in the year 1885, and has since lived a consistent Christian life, for she loved the latterday work. Interment in Fontanelle cemetery. Services held in the Christian church, the sermon by Elder S. Butler.

DUNCAN.—Juliette, wife of Charles Madison Duncan, of Millersburg, Illinois, died at the home of her son, William A. Duncan, of Hebron, Nebraska, December 31, 1900, aged 68 years, 10 months, 10 days. Her body was brought to Millersburg for interment. Funeral service at the Saints' chapel conducted by Elder William E. La Rue. A large assembly of friends and relatives were in attendance. Sr. Duncan united with the church August 14, 1870, and remained true to her covenant until death. May her rest be sweet and her peace glorious.

JENKINS.—At Cleveland, Iowa, Saturday afternoon, January 5, 1901, caused by dust explosion in mine, William Arthur Jenkins. He was the son of Sr. D. T. Williams, and stepson of Bro. D. T. Williams. Was born November 1, 1877, and married March 15, 1900, to Miss Hannah Peaters, and he leaves wife and infant son. The wife and mother was living at Keb, and not able to be present at funeral, or even see her husband. Funeral services conducted by Elders E. B. Morgan, J. R. Evans, and E. L. Kelley; a very large assembly being present at the church in Lucas.

WILLIAMS—Albert Roy, son of Bro. and Sr. William Williams, of Cleveland, Iowa. The little sufferer was born March 22, 1900; blessed by Elders T. W. Williams and E. B. Morgan in May, and died January 5, 1901. He was buried at same time as William Jenkins; the strong and weak moving together, but from diverse causes, being laid before the people. The Lord remember the afflicted FERRY.—Elizabeth Jane Ferry died while on a visit to her daughter, Sr. Lentell. at Independence, Missouri, December 30, 1900. Sister Ferry was born in England, January, 1830: was baptized May 10, 1875, at Brierbluff, Illinois. She was the first one to open her house for the preaching of the gospel in Rich Hill, Missouri; was faithful to the end, and rests in the paradise of God. Her remains were buried by the side of her husband in Rich Hill cemetery, January 3, 1901; funeral exercises in charge of Elder F. M. Sharrock, sermon by Elder F. C. Warnky.

CHRISTENSEN.—Mary Caroline Christensen was born October 11, 1877, in Denmark: came to America with her parents July 21, 1880, taking residence in Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1882. On May 20, 1896, our sister was united in marriage to Bro. J. P. Christensen, and united with the church January 1, 1896, Elder T. W. Williams officiating on both occasions. She departed this life, Monday, December 24, 1900, after an illness of more than one and a haif years. A husband, three children, father, mother, and four sisters remain to mourn, with the many friends who during illness and death manifested a love for Sister Mary that only a life of true worth can bring. She was faithful unto death, fought a good fight, and unto her we are assured a crown of life is given by a loving Father, who knew her hopes, her fears, her triumph in meeting the enemy—death. Loving hands offered floral tributes in profusion; a large assembly publicly mourned as well, funeral services being from the Saints' chapel, Wednesday, December 26, at Council Bluffs, Elder D. R. Chambers preaching the sermon, Bro. J. S. Strain assisting.

We could not bid thee Merry Christmas, sister; Thy departing made us late, But angels we comed thee with greeting, To their home in a better state.

Thou canst welcome thy Redeemer, And commemorate his birth, In his kingdom, on The eve that God's will By angels sent to earth.

Thy home, dear sister, Jesus told Us, his departing would prepare; May thy life while thou wast With us, help that we Thy home may share.

So farewell we bid thee, sister,
With love we leave
Thee, although sad,
Yet Jesus promised us if faithful,
To make our nearts and greeting glad.

A. E. Maddson.

BENNER.—Bro. Lewis Benner was born in Fremont county, Iowa, July 27, 1882; united with the church September, 1890; died January 4, 1901. Funeral services held at the Harris schoolhouse, west of Whiting four miles. Funeral sermon by Elder D. A. Hutchings, of Little Sioux, Iowa.

Hutchings, of Little Sioux, Iowa.

GREEN—Ila Ruth, infant daughter of Elder George F. and Sr. Ester Ann Green, of Appledore, Ontario, died December 20, 1900, after a brief illness. Funeral services were in charge of Elder J. H.Tyrrell, of Chatham. Her little earthly tabernacle was interred in Louisville cemetery to await the morn of the first resurrection.

JOY.—At Strawberry Point, Iowa, December 28, 1900, after a few days' illness, Sr. Mary Joy. She was born in Vermont, July 30, 1824. Married Solomon Joy, February 19, 1844, the union being blessed with ten children, four of whom survive. "Mother Joy," with her worthy husband, raised several other children. In 1854 or 1855 they moved to Strawberry Point, where they have since resided. For over sixty years she was an untiring worker in the Methodist Church. July 9, 1900, she accepted this restored gospel, being baptized by Elder J. R. Sutton, and to say she was faithful but faintly expresses her love for the work. She leaves an aged husband, four children, eleven grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren to mourn. Funeral at the house; sermon by Elder J. R. Sutton, assisted by Rev. Hestwood. In a letter written a day or so before the fatal illness she said to a sister in the faith: "I feel very weak, although exceedingly well for me. My feet almost touch the cold stream, but Jesus seems so near, I long to go, but I seem to be needed, so am content." In the same trusting spirit she passed to be with the Savior she had so faithfully served.

McGalliard.—Near Troy, Kansas, January 4, 1901. Isaac Morris, son of Sr. Sarah A. McGalliard, aged eleven days. Blessed by Elder M. T. Short.

The Saints' Herald.

(Established 1860.)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price, $1 50 per year. Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."

"Matriage, birth, and death notices: Marriages, $1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business manager.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as re-ceipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

JORDAN. - On January 2, 1901, at Carberry, Manttoba, Sr. Mary Jane, wife of Bro. James More Jordan, aged 34 years, 9 months, 7 days, was led by the angel of death across the dark waters to enjoy the sweet rest beyond, promised the faithful in Christ. An affectionate husband mourns the loss of a loving wife and companion, while three small children lose a kind mother. Sr. Jordan was baptized in Riverview, Ontario, a few years ago, and her life has since been that of a true Saint, full of life and energy. Services in the Presbyterian church by Rev. Mr. Carswell.

BELLVILLE. — At St. Joseph, Missouri, January 10, 1901, Carl K., the sweet, beautiful child of Bro. and Sister William Bellville, aged 6 months and 14 days. Gone, but not forgotten. For of such is the kingdom of heaven. Services in charge of Bro. William Lewis, sermon by Bro. W. C. Cather.

GRIFFITH -Sr. Harriet A. Griffith passed away at Marshalltown, Iowa, on December 18, 1900, at the age of 64 years. Sr. Griffith was faithful to the work in life, though isolated. She was a niece of Sr. S. G. Steele, of Chicago, who was acquainted with the martyr.

JUDKINS.-December 19, 1900, Hugh Berly Judkins, son of Mr. Thomas and Sr. C. C. Judkins. Was not a member of any church, but was a friend to the true gospel. He promised God if he would spare him he would live a better life. He leaves a wife, one child, father, mother, three brothers, and two sis ters to mourn.

Thinking men are realizing more and more the value of Newman's Doctrine of Develop-ment as the answer to the accusation of change of doctrinal life within the Catholic Church. The complex system of scientific theology which a modern student has to face is far different from the straightforward sim-plicity of the Gospel truths. Protestant writers say there have been "cyclic changes" and "evolutionary modifications." It is not so. Catholic dogma is but the outgrowth of the germinal ideas of the Gospel. There has the germinal ideas of the Gospel. There has been no change, nor any evolution in its strict sense, but only a development. The original deposit has not been added to, but the truths have been coordinated. There is a very sharp criticism in the Catholic World Magazine for December on Levi Leonard Paine's Evolution of Trinitarianism, a work that is attracting considerable attention nowadays. Speaking of the theory of evolution, it says:-

"Scientific (?) theologians may have it if they choose, and believe in it; but what can it give them? Certainly not the consistent, essential unity which comes from true development, and which Catholic theology alone enjoys, but rather divisions and dissensions of the most discouraging character, risings of sects on sects, establishments and restablishments of churches, discord, even despair. Worse still: under such an illusory method of reasoning Christianity is easily reducible to a cold, heartless, spiritless moral code at best, with no more to recommend itself to the spiritual needs of man's soul than the ancient schools of philosophy, with no more claim to the supernatural than the most ordinary speculative science. Then if men will cling to such a theory, all that we can say is: Very well; adopt your theory, and what have you? Results bewildering and disheartening. Believe, if you will, that the primal body of Christian doctrine has been subject for nineteen centuries to cyclic change, reaction and revolution, that the un-recognizable entanglement of theology in Protestantism is the legitimate outcome of the evolution of historical Christianity. And to our reader we say: Is it any wonder that these men are dissatisfied? any wonder that they are lost in a labyrinthal scheme which can show nor beginning nor end, and whence they would gladly be liberated? Is this Christianity? Has Christ's work come to

THE RIPE CONDITIONS FOR "WRITING."

Writing is a peculiar process: a matter of habit, varied by temperament, and it appears that the more obstacles oppose a vivid flow of written thought, the better the literary result. Whoever knew of an author who threw off great periods with a desk in spick and span, apple-pie order, like they have them in government offices—pens glistening like steel, carefully wiped and laid in order, blotters spotless, pencils sharpened with a machine and depressing in their uniform and military precision and spear-like pointedness. When the pink pencil is brought forth the writing is not apt to be fervidly bright. course, each writer has his own fancy, but the rule appears to prevail that a little of the real comfort of writing is coordinate with an array of artistic confusion that indicates work and abhors an exhibit of gilded, carved inkstands, silver mounted blotters, embossed and embroidered inkwipers, gold pens and a jeweled calendar. All very pretty, perhaps picturesque, just right for a picture, but the great thoughts do not usually bubble from such fountains, according to the confidential testimony of a number of our distinguished contributors.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in "The National Magazine for January.

THE HOUSE WE KEEP.

Professor Eilen H. Richards, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has arranged to supply The Delineator with six articles in relation to various problems of housekeeping. The first article appears in the February number and is devoted to "The House We Keep," touching in a general way on the details of house arrangements. Just one sentence will illustrate the line of her thought. She says "The educated woman of the twentieth century will plan her kitchen before she settles upon her parlor."

The editor of the Biblical World, in the January number, has presented his readers some ideas on "Ministerial Virility," in which he takes some common sense positions. After telling to some extent what virility is, and what it is not, he says:-

"Nor is ministerial virility the same thing as pulpit oratory. To tell the truth, oratory is a rare and dangerous gift. It not only exposes its possessor to some of the most subtle temptations to which successful men can be exposed, but its results are too often ephemeral. . . . The church is something more than a perennial theological lyceum. Sensible instruction on the teaching of Jesus is worth all sorts of oratory. We venture to say that, taking the country over, the most successful churches are more likely to have been built up by poor speakers than by good speakers."

Unlike a good many critics, the writer, after pointing out something that he thinks is lacking in many of the churches, he does not leave the matter without giving a remedy, and he does it in the way of a suggestion :-

"Let every pastor see that there is organized in his church a young men's league for Bible study. It takes but little effort to make such a league a success, and any suc-cess it attains is sure to be permanent, for it rests not upon excitement, but, if properly taught, upon a genuine interest in the teaching of the Scriptures."

"In the World of Graft," by Josiah Flynt, will appear in the February number of McClure's Magazine. In this article the author, who has won fame as a personal explorer of the underworld, discusses Chicago and its municipal government from the view point of the law-breakers themselves
Professor Ira Remsen, LL D, will contribute to McClure's Magazine for February an account of some "Unsolved Problems of Chemistry," in which he treats of those curious and puzzling phenomena that baffle all the efforts of science to explain them.

The Optimist, "the only magazine published in Iowa," has reached our desk for the month of January, and we find it filled with a number of good things in the literary line. The Optimist is making a place for itself in the magazine world, and is rapidly extending its

The Journal of Applied Microscopy, as published by Bausch and Lomb, of Rochester, New York, is usually filled with good things for the microscopist, and those interested in that line of study will find it worth the time to investigate the merits of that Journal.

ADDRESSES.

Joseph Arber, 47 Monkfort Road, Pitsmoor, Sheffield, England

J. A. Grant, Glover, Bay County, Michi-

W. S. Macrae, Saltillo, Faulkner county, Arkansas.

James Craig, Glen Easton, West Virginia. S. D. Goostree, Iuka, Illinois (permanent address).

Arthur Allen, mission address, church corner of Glasgow and Dickson streets, St. Louis, Missouri.

U. W. Greene, 19 Sherlock Place, Brooklyn, New York.

John B. Roush, 2942 California St., Denver, Colorado.

Alma C. Barmore, 352 Lippincott Street,

Toronto, Ontario, care of T. C. Hattey. L. R. Devore, Holden, Missouri. W. E. Peak, Galien, Michigan.

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Ad-THE PATRIOT, Lamoni, dress, Iowa.

A postal card brings a sample copy.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162,781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All atters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

STOCK HOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eila D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

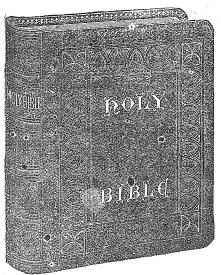

QUIT-TO-BAC.

THREE BOXES POSITIVELY GUARANTEED to cure any form of tobacco habit or money cheerfully refunded. Sent postpaid on receipt of $150 U.S. stamps taken.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY,

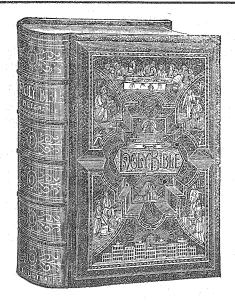

Peoria, Ill., U.S. A.

GOSPEL QUARTERLIES. Published by the General Sunday School Association. Designed for use in Sabbath school work. Issued quarterly. 73. Senior Grade, per quarter ... Per year, in advance..... Intermediate Grade, per quar-05 ter Per year..... 15 75. Primary Grade, per quarter... Per year.... BOOK OF MORMON. Large type edition. 92. Cloth, leather backs and corners...... 1 50 Seal grain russia, gilt edges. 2 00 109. Flexible, gilt edges..... 4 00

NO. 415 GRAINED AMERICAN CALF, padded sides, round corners on covers, gold edges. Large quarto size, 10½x12½ inches, containing the Authorized Version Old and New Testaments; marginal references; fullpage maps in colors; history of the books of the Bible; forty-eight full-page illustrations; chronological tables; photo-views of scenes in Bible lands; coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; pronouncing dictionary of scripture proper names; apocrypha; marriage certificate, family record and temperance pledge in colors; chronological index; 4,000 questions and answers; concordance; Psalms in metre; twenty-five full-page Doré engravings; six full-page illustrations in colors, etc., etc. Price, $4.25.

SAIN	TS' HYMNAL. V	Words	and
	music.
108.	Paper covers, each	1		30
	Per dozen		3	20
110.	Cloth, limp			35
	Per dozen		3	75
111.	Cloth and leather.			50
	Full leather			00
	Gilt edges			25
114.	Flexible, leather		1	50
THE	INSTRUCTOR	A. com	oendium of the faitl trines of the churc
	G. T. Griffiths.
126	Cloth			75
127	Leather		1
128	Flexible		1
2.450	T 10/21/210 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0

NO. 420 AMERICAN MOROCCO, raised panel, full gold sides, back and edges, new pronouncing parallel Bible. References. Both versions Old and New Testaments in parallel columns line for line, upon each page. Large quarto. Size, 12½x10½ inches. Two Bibles in one volume. Every proper name is divided into syllables, and an accent mark is placed over the cyllable upon which mark is placed over the syllable upon which emphasis should rest. A new pronouncing dictionary of nearly 4,000 scriptural proper names; marriage certificate, family record and temperance pledge; four full-page maps in colors; twenty-five full-page Doré engravings; five full-page illustrations in colors; scripture illustrations; chronology, coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; concordance; Psalms in metre; the reviser's preface, Price, $5 25.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI. - IOWA. Solicits your Deposits and pays

> 4 1-2 % INTEREST. D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

Book of Mormon Maps.

Lecture size 5x8 feet on muslin for traveling ministry, $2 00. Home and office size 33x51 inches on paper, cloth back and varnished in colors, $1.50.

All map sent by express, charges 30c. and upwards according to distance, to be paid at end of route. Send orders to

G. F. WESTON, 1-9-6t Buchanan, Michigan.

HOMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in DeKalb county, Missouri, four miles from Amity, and five miles from Clarksdale; near line of R ck I-land railroad and switch station, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchaser. Terms reasonable. Address, J. O. SOUTHARD, Mgr., Amity, Missouri, or CHAIKLES P. FAUL, Clarksdale, Missouri,

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good photograph, and get 25 stamp photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 lign photo button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents each. Large 60 lign buttons 35 cents, and extra buttons from same picture 20 cents. Your photograph will be returned Send silver.

W. M. KECK. Photographer, 49-13t

Lock Box 125, Joy, Illinois.

DR. E. S. SWEET. DENTIST. Decoe Building.

WOODBINE, IOWA.

South Side Barber Shop.

Having purchased the Black Bros. Barber Shop we will be pleased to see all old customers and many new ones.

IOWA STEAM LAUNDRY leaves Tuesday evening and returns Friday morning. SHOOK & KLINE. morning.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p. m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a. m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a.m.

Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C. B. & Q. at Leon.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chi-cago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning

THE TWO RECORDS. The Book of Mormon and the New Testament. Inspired Translain one tion; large type, volume.

Leather back and covers..... 2 00 99. Seal grain russia...... 2 50

100. Imitation morocco, gilt edges, 3 50 101. Morocco, gilt edges..... 4 00

E SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B, of M., page 116,

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 23, 1901.

NO. 4.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR. Joseph Luff D. W. Wight CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, JAN. 23, 1901.

"IS IT RIGHT?"

Whatever immediate results may be, all conduct should be based upon convictions of right. There should be no compromise with evil that present good may accrue. A wrong action cannot produce right results. A right action cannot be productive of wrong results.

It frequently happens that apparent good comes from questionable conduct, giving rise to the belief that the end justifies the means. The thought is a deceptive one. No matter how bright the prospect, no matter how glittering the inducement, no one can afford to sacrifice integrity. Even though such sacrifice might bring temporary triumph, there will remain a canker spot in the character, which, if not destroyed, will bring distress and ultimate defeat.

No difference what profession in life we may choose to follow, or what the conditions by which we are surrounded may be, all conduct, whether of a social, religious, or business nature, should be regulated in harmony with the simple rule, Is it right? We may be told that society is such, that business methods are such, that one cannot conform to so rigid a rule without financial or social loss. Then, if that be the case, it would be better to sacrifice convenience, better to sacrifice wealth, popularity, friends, better even to sacrifice life, than to descend to the present degenerate condition of the world by a surrender of integrity, that priceless jewel which is the rightful heritage of every one who has a proper estimate of what God intended man should be.

The man who places a price upon integrity must suffer untold loss, because he barters that which is indestructible and true, for that which possess no inherent moral worth, and hence is constantly subject to decay. True character cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. They have nothing in common. Their natures are different. Were the world made of

of a principle of right than a single dollar. Until men learn to love the truth for the truth's sake, they cannot exist otherwise than in conditions of distress and discontent, because nothing but truth possesses inherently the qualities of permanent rest and peace.

Right doing brings satisfaction, happiness, and rest, the only thing that will in the complete sense of all those terms imply. What a monument of grandeur is the man who steadily adheres to his convictions of right, and who in the face of scorn, taunt, and ridicule, calmly pursues the pathway of duty. Slander may throw her cruel darts with deadly intent, but he will not heed them, though they cause pain. Good men will love, while bad men will fear, and in a sense respect, such a man; but he will permit neither the smiles of approval from would-be friends, nor the bitter hatred of enemies, to divert him from his steady pursuit of the right. If perchance he makes a mistake, he will be as prompt and fearless in retracing his steps and correcting the mistake when it is discovered, as he was in maintaining that which he at first conceived to be right.

It needs but little observation, however, to determine the fact that the world is far below the beautiful ideal of the law of right in motive and in fact. Selections of professions in life are based almost exclusively upon the consideration, Will it pay? not, How much good can I do? Self-aggrandizement, in some way or other, is usually the first thought, and all through, the chief consideration.

Selfishness, manifested in a thousand different ways, is the prevailing trait of character at the present time, much as we might wish it otherwise. The world is honeycombed with false motives, corrupt desires, and improper incentives; and even in many quarters where apparent good exists, it is only a hypocritical righteousness that is even worse for the deceptive gloss that tries to conceal its true character.

We do not wish to contend that the accumulation of wealth, or the acquisition of social or political honor, are in themselves wrong. Such may come in legitimate ways, but should Their atnot be sought primarily. tainment should ever be strictly subtheir use devoted unselfishly to the best interests of the human race.

It may be urged that our present environments, and imperfect condition, prevent us from exercising correct judgment in matters of right and wrong. In many instances this is too sadly true, but the fact itself only emphasizes the necessity of alertness in this direction. As true development can only result where activity is manifest, so our ability to make proper discriminations will come as a result of continued, earnest effort to learn and do the right.

We should not hope to attain such great excellence as will shine out from a truly righteous life without great and unceasing effort. It cannot be expected that men will be able to cease making mistakes all at once. For the man, however, who suffers simply from an error in judgment, there is hope, if he have a disposition to correct his mistakes when they are discovered; but for the individual who knowingly continues to violate principles of right there is no hope but in a change of disposition. Besides this, the one who manifests a desire to do right by reaching upward to the good. and exerting all the present capacities of the soul, is entitled to divine assist-

Self effort, in conjunction with higher agencies, constitutes the law of progress. An earnest desire for right begets effort to do; the effort brings assistance, and the forces thus combined bring progress, correct mistakes, and lift the yearning soul into clearer light, higher conditions, and continued advancement; the goal of which is a perfect life and consequent perfect environments, peace and rest with God.

We are frequently met with the thought that if we do the best we can we are justified in the eyes of God. We are willing to concede that if one is really doing the best he can, he is in a progressive condition, and to that extent acceptable with God. making mistakes is not doing right, and many a soul is lulled into fancied security by this soothing siren song. Doing the best we can means the supreme exertion of every fiber of the soul's being in the effort to rise above our present conditions. It means a constant, active, vigilant effort to occupy higher spheres of life until gold it would be no nearer the value | servient to questions of right, and | the victory over wrong has been completely won. If in this sense we are doing the best we can it is well, but we can quite easily deceive ourselves upon this point.

So far as our environments are concerned, we cannot reasonably expect better ones until in spirit we can rise above the ones which surround us now. Even if we were permitted to occupy above our level, we should not enjoy the experience, as, not being capacitated to appreciate the higher condition, its glory would be darkness to us.

High above us, however, though the reward of a righteous life may be, it is not beyond our grasp; and glorious it is to realize that in the gospel is open the means of development, and under the educative influences of the Spirit of truth the soul may increase in knowledge, wisdom, and purity of life, until it shall be able to reap the fruition of perfect right doing.

May God speed the day when right shall be the only rule of conduct; when the gospel of life and peace shall be universally acknowledged among the earth's inhabitants. Such a condition is worth thinking about, it is worth hoping for, worth living for; and even in the seeking there will come a proportionate degree of real pleasure, a foretaste of the final realization.

"POLYGAMY IN UTAH."

We have before stated in the columns of the HERALD our belief that the doctrine of polygamy was still practiced in Utah, despite the efforts of the United States officials to stamp it out. It is believed in by the Brighamites as a divine doctrine, and it is surely practiced by many of their leading men. Some time in the month of December there appeared in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat an editorial on the proposed amendment to the federal constitution providing for the prohibition of polygamy in the United States. In this editorial the statement was made that the practice of polygamy had been abandoned by the people in Utah. This editorial elicited from a reader of the Globe-Democrat in Utah a reply in the form of a letter, and in it the writer, S. E. Wishard, makes some statements which may be news to some of our readers, so we present the letter herewith. The writer makes one mistake when he attributes the "revelation" on polygamy to the prophet Joseph Smith. But that arises from the fact that everywhere it is taught by the Utah people, and Mr. Wishard is probably not aware that there is a body of religious people who are believers in the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, and in the teachings of Joseph Smith, who do not believe in polygamy, and who earnestly deny that Joseph Smith ever presented such a document as the purported revelation sanctioning and commanding obedience to the doctrine of polygamy. It has yet to be proven that that document ever saw the light until 1852, when Brigham Young was in full command of the church governmental reins.

Here is the letter as it appeared in the Globe:

Salt Lake City, Utah, December 24.—In your issue of December 11 appears an editorial opposing the proposed amendment to the federal constitution providing for the prohibition of polygamy in the United States. You make several statements concerning polygamy in Utah to which I ask the privilege of replying. You say "polygamy has been given up by the Mormon Church." In reply let me say that every one of the apostles, with a single exception, is living in polygamy. The president of the church, who is called "the mouthpiece of God." "the prophet, seer and revelator," is living in open and flagrant polygamy. He recently buried the only legitimate wife he had, but has five or six unlawful wives. His first and second counselors are both living in open polygamy. These men are George Q Cannon and Joseph F. Smith. B. H. Roberts is still living with three wives, and when in Washington he swore he would never give them up. He has kept his promise. Angus M. Cannon, president of the Salt Lake Stake (which means church), is living in polygamy. (which means churon), is fiving in polygamy. Scores of Bishops are in polygamy. Careful statistics were gathered on this subject, and it was found that there were 2,000 polygamists in Utah. The southern tier of counties in Idaho is in the same condition. Polygamy is practiced in Wyoming, Nevada, New Meyico and Arizona, and is being New Mexico and Arizona, and is being thoroughly rooted in old Mexico.

You say that "public sentiment even among the older Mormons is against it."

Let me say that in nearly eleven years of constant travel in Utah and Idaho, and in daily contact and conference with Mormons, I have never found among the older people a single man whose "sentiments were against polygamy"—not one. They are bound to believe in it and ap-For their prophet, Joseph Smith, said in his revelation on the subject of polygamy: "Behold! I reveal unto you a new and everlasting covenant (referring to the covenant of polygamy), and if ye abide not that covenant then are ye damned: for no one can regret [reject?] this covenant and be permitted to enter into my glory." That revelation, with its damnation for giving up the doctrine, has never been repealed. On the other hand, it is enforced by the example of the leaders of the church continuing in polygamy. President Woodruff's manifesto of 1890 was not an abandonment of polygamy, but was issued as a suspension of polygamy for a time. But that suspension did not suspend. It was sulvant suspension did not suspend. It was only a political maneuver in order to secure statehood. There was no suspension of the crime against our civilization, but only an attempted concealment of polygamy.

You say, further: "The offense if it be committed, can be dealt with adequately by the present legal machinery." That is a grave mistake, and one familiar with conditions in Utah would see at once that our legal machinery is so clogged and hindered legal machinery is so clogged and hindered that we can't suppress it. Look at the conditions. We have a Mormon Governor, a Mormon Secretary of State, a Mormon Treas-urer, a Mormon Auditor, a Mormon Superintendent of Public Instruction. Last year every Prosecuting Attorney but one was a And the Prosecuting Attorney can stay every prosecution if he chooses.

The information brought against Roberts in Davis county, with evidence abundant of his guilt, never went beyond the lands [hands?] of the attorney. He gave as a reason for refus-ing to prosecute that "there was no sentiment in the county demanding the prosecution of the case."

An information brought against Lorenzo Snow, the president of the church, was not brought to an issue because "it could not be certainly known which was his legal wife."
The case against Angus M. Cannon, the president of the stake, was brought to an issue. But that gentleman never came into His lawyer came and pleaded guilty, and the members of the Mormon Church paid the nominal fine. He was neither humiliated nor disgraced, but honored by his brethren paying his fine. He is still living in the same relations with polygamous wives as before he was fined. These facts, repeated on every hand, prove what I have said, that there is no "sentiment among the older Mormons against polygamy.'

B. H. Roberts was tried for polygamy in Salt Lake county. The plea of defense was that he was living with only one wife in that county, though he had two more in Davis county. He was adjudged guilty, but the fine was only nominal, and he went home to his polygamous wives and has not been mo-Apostle Grant was tried and fined for polygamy, but the fine did not mean anything. President of the constitutional convention, Apostle John Henry Smith, signed the constitution which prohibits polygamy, and went home to his polygamous wives. B.
H. Roberts voted for the clause that "forever prohibits polygamy," signed the constitution and went home to his polygamous wives.

With such a condition of things, and no "sentiment among the Mormous againt polygamy," it is idle to talk polygamy.

"sentiment among the Mormons againt polygamy," it is idle to talk about polygamy being "dealt with adequately by the present legal machinery." There is no law against polygamy in Idaho. It is as independent of law as slavery was in Missouri before the proclamation of President. Lincoln was issued. And if our politicians in the east oppose and prevent the only measures which can deal adequately with this social cancer, they may prepare for sorer evils than our nation has already passed through—which nation has already passed through—which may God avert. Yours respectfully,

S. E. WISHARD,

TROUBLE IN CONGREGATIONAL CIRCLES.

A clipping has been sent us by a brother in Massachusetts, taken from the Brockton Times, which gives an account of Swedish Congregational Church at Campbello, Massachusetts, which is torn by strife. It seems that the minister, or pastor, Rev. August Pohl, has taken so decided a stand against secret societies, that the church at last decided, by a vote of 104 to 10, to exclude from membership all those who failed to withdraw their membership in secret societies. Rev. Pohl had offered his resignation as pastor unless such action were taken. As a result of the action some of the oldest and most prominent members of the church were excluded from membership, and much feeling was manifested by their withdrawal. The officials stood firm, and members of the church must either give up their memberships in secret societies or be denied the privilege of church members.

Besides this stand taken in regard to secret societies, the Swedish Congregational Church decided to withdraw from the Congregational conference. This action was taken because of a sermon delivered on January 14, 1900, by Rev. Hudson of the Congregational conference, on the subject, "Is there a personal Devil?" The Swedish Congregational Church objected to the ideas of the Rev. Hudson, and threatened to withdraw from the conference if the matter was not The effect of the withlooked into. drawal will be to make the Swedish Congregation Society an independent body, and marks a disruption in the ranks of Congregationalism. As additional grounds for such withdrawal it was stated that "Pastor Pohl and some of his flock were of the opinion that some of the ministers of today were practically infidels, and that personal constructions and beliefs were held by divines regarding some of the Scripture, whereas as true ministers of the gospel they should take the Scriptures as they are and not adopt personal opinions regarding the gospel."

Such as the above indicate that all is not so peaceful in religious circles of the world as might be expected.

CHRISTIANITY'S WORK IN FIGURES.

Some lover of statistics has been estimating what Christianity costs the world each year, and in a number of the daily press there appeared in the early part of this month figures representing what has been spent annually to spread the gospel. estimated that there are 26,000,000 Christians in the United States, and 500,000,000 in the world, and, as expressed by one writer in the daily press, "the cause which could not furnish whereon to lay the Savior's head has come to an annual expenditure of $1,000,000,000 and more." The same writer is responsible for the statement that Christianity has made greater increase in both membership and expenditure in the century just ended than was made between the beginning of that century and the day of Pentecost.

That our readers who may not have seen the estimates of the press may gain an idea of what is being expended by the churches of today, we reproduce the following table:—

CHURCHES OF THE WORLD.

If there be added together (1) the reported amounts raised last year by all Christian bodies in all countries of the world; (2) the amounts received for Christian literature, for hospitals, orphanages, and education under church control; (3) the amount spent on foreign missions contributed by native Christians on mission fields; (4) the amount expended for new churches and religious institutions; (5) and an allowance of 10 per cent be made for Christian work not reported, the sum is as follows:—

United States, maintenance of all churches $137.563,200
Education and literature 32,728,000
Hospitals and orphanages
Transportant and orphanages Improvements, repairs, and foreign missions
Misce laneous 45,466,100 England, voluntary contributions, Church of England, voluntary contributions, Church of England 37,822,170 Revenues, Queen Anne's bounty, Church of Revenues, Queen Anne's bounty, Church of England 28,772,785
Maintenance free churches of England 25,832 500
Maintenance Catholic churches of England, 11 411,282
Education and literature
Hospitals and orphanages
Improvements, repairs, and foreign misgions
Scotland, all religious purposes
Ireland and Wales, all r ligious purposes 11,051,400
Western and northern Europe, Roman Catholic western and northern Europe, Protestant 67 290,400
Other Christian purposes
Russia and Siberia
Greek Church under Patriarch of Constantinople 5,625,000
Australian Federation, all church purposes 6,900,000
Pacific I-lands and Madascar
South Africa, all Christian purposes 2.500,000
Canada, all Christian purposes
Mexico and Central American South America, all Christian purposes
West Indies, all Christian purposes 325,000
Foreign missions not before mentioned 2.900,000 Contributions of native Christians, mission fields
Receipts of Roman Catholic orders 21.489.000
Roman Catholic missions 9,400,000
Christian literature not included above 8.040.000
Christian education not included above 22,400,000
Orphanages not included above
Sunday schools, lesson papers, and libraries. 6 200,500
Improvements and repairs, and Horaries. 6 200,000
Improvements and repairs
Percentage for non-reporting
Young People's societies, conventions, etc 12 500.000
Miscellaneous 10,000,000
Annual armonditure Christian shurshes

Here is a list of expenditures in various cities of the United States, but does not include amounts of money given for Christian literature, for hospital, orphanage, education, or other efforts:—

	100
New York		$8,991,915
Philadelphia		4,771,700
Chicago		2,690,200
Boston
Pittsburg
Baltimore
St. Louis
Cincinnati
St Paul and Minneapolis
Washington		712,100
Cleveland		673,100
Detroit
Buffalo
R chester
Providence
Louisville		365,300
Indianapolis
San Francisco
Milwankee

Such figures as the above are astounding, and are potent factors in giving us to understand what a stupendous work is yet before us. In the Chinese empire there is an estimated population of 400,000,000, and a late census of the Sultan's domains reveals the fact that there are 176,500,000 Mussulmans in the world, divided as is shown by the following comment on the Sultan's census:—

MILLIONS OF MUSSULMANS.

The results of the recent census are of chief interest. This count shows that 18,000,000 of the faith are directly under his control. In contiguous states and territories of Asia, including Persia, Afghanistan, Beloochistan, India, Russian Turkestan, and China, their numbers are estimated at 99,000,000. Africa, which has made great accessions to the Mohammedan religion, is credited with 36,500,000 converts. In other countries of the world it is estimated that there are 23,000,000 followers of the prophet.

These millions of the one faith, however, are divided into two sections. The vast majority of the followers of Mohammed are Sunnis. The minority are Shiahs, who hold more or less aloof from the Sunnis. As Caliph of Islam, the Sultan has control of the Sunnis, but not directly of the Shiahs.

In India, under the political rule of the British, and in the native states of that country, are 60,000,000 Mohammedans, most of whom are Sunnis. The Afghans and the Turcomans also are adherents of the calipa.

Mohammedans in China are accredited principally to Kashgaria, Mongolia, Yunnan, and Kansuh. The caliph estimates their numbers at 20,000,000 for the whole empire. It was on the strength of these numbers that the head of the faith recently expressed his belief that if called upon to do so, he might intercede and command a peace in China such as the allied powers had been unable to do.

There is food for thought in this array of figures.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. M. T. Short writes from Fanning, Kansas, January 16:—

I leave here for Atchison this p. m. Have spoken to good houses eighteen times this month, and year. Am feeling all right, and wish to push ahead.

M. W. and M. J. Squires write from Hearne, Texas, January 13:—

We will care for, in our humble home, any of the traveling ministry and Saints who may call on us.

Bro. J. L. Rust, writing from Gladstone, Illinois, January 18, says:—
If any of the elders can visit this place and make an opening I will do all I can to help.

Bro. O. J. Haun, under date of January 17, writes from Carsonville, Michigan:—

We are having blessed good meetings here, with good interest. I baptized six Sunday. Our Father is standing by his own. I ask for an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may remain a faithful servant.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. W. M. Self writes from Wilber, Nebraska, telling of the Sunday school convention held there the latter part of December, and says that all were blessed and encouraged for the work of the ensuing year. He thinks the Sunday school is a monument for great good.

In the Moundsville (West Virginia) daily Herald for December 27, 1900, kindly sent us, we notice that Bro. O. J. Tary, of Wheeling, has a two column article explaining the difference between the Reorganized Church and the Utah or Brighamite Church. He clearly shows that there is a vast difference. He also quotes the decision of Judge Philips to show that the Reorganized Church is the one in true succession. The readers of the Moundsville Herald surely have no excuse now for confounding the two sects.

President Joseph Smith has been confined to his home the past two weeks with neuralgia, hence unable to be in attendance upon office duties. Though yet suffering, he is improving steadily, and it is hoped he will shortly be in normal condition again.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION .-- NO. 4.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

I was much pleased with the spirit and conversation of Elder Gurley. I do not remember much of the preaching during the conference, but remember that my brother Silas preached from the text, "Let patience have her perfect work," and exhorted the people not to "faint in well doing." The resolutions that were passed during the conference I thought were grand, believing they would prevent the people from being misled by impostors claiming to be prophets. For the benefit of my readers I will here insert them, for they were really the first landmarks I had seen that would be a shield to the Saints against the impostors who were claiming leadership to the church.

Resolved, that this conference regard the pretensions of Brigham Young, James J. Strang, James Colin Brewster, and William Smith and Joseph Wood's joint claim to the leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as an assumption of power, in violation of the law of God, and consequently we disclaim all connection and fellowship with them.

Resolved, that the successor of Joseph Smith, Junior, as the Presiding High Priest in the Melchisedec Priesthood, must of necessity be the seed of Joseph Smith, Junior, in fulfillment of the law and promises of God.

Resolved, that, as the office of First President of the Church grows out of the authority of the Presiding High Priest, in the high priesthood, no person can legally lay claim to the office of First President of the Church without a previous ordination to the Presidency of the High Priesthood.

Resolved, that we recognize the validity of all legal ordinations in this church, and will fellowship all such as have thus been ordained while acting within the purview of such authority.

Resolved, that we believe that the Church of Christ, organized on the sixth day of April, A. D., 1830, exists as on that day wherever six or more saints are organized according to the pattern in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

Resolved, that the whole law of the Church of Jesus Christ is contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

Resolved, that, in the opinion of this conference, there is no stake to which the Saints on this continent are commanded to gather at the present time, but that the Saints on all other lands are commanded to gather to this land preparatory to the reëstablishment of the church in Zion, when the scattered Saints on this land will also be commanded to gather and return to Zion, and to their inheritances, in fulfillment of the promises of God; and it is the duty of the Saints to turn their hearts and their faces towards Zion and supplicate the Lord God for such deliverance.

Resolved, that we will, to the extent of our ability and means, communicate to all the scattered Saints the sentiments contained in the foregoing resolutions.

Resolved, that this conference believe it the duty of the elders of the church, who have been legally ordained, to cry repentance and remission of sins to this generation, through chedience to the gospel as revealed in the record of the Jews, the Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and not to faint in the discharge of duty.

After which, in pursuance to the eighth resolution, it was motioned, seconded, and carried unanimously, that a committee of three be appointed to write a pamphlet, based upon the foregoing resolutions, entitled, A Word of Consolation to the Scattered Saints. Whereupon, Elders Jason W. Briggs, Zonos H. Gurley, and John Harrington were appointed said committee.

Shortly after the conference closed, one day my brother Jason asked me why I had not been baptized. I answered that I did not want to join the church. He replied, "I thought you would during conference." He then took pains to tell me of his experience with William Smith, and of his attending a meeting held at Palestine in which Smith made extravagant claims. and taught things so adverse to anything he had ever received before, that upon returning home, the more he thought of them the more he became dissatisfied with the way things were going. He also received letters from other branches indicating trouble. Being in doubt, he finally concluded to fast and pray for light, and as he did so he became more and more dissatisfied with the movement under William Smith. He continued thus seeking for three weeks, when he received the following revelation, a copy of which I now have in my possession. It is as follows: -

While pondering in my heart the situation of the church, on the 18th day of November, 1851, on the prairie about three miles northwest of Beloit, Wisconsin, the Spirit of the Lord came upon me and the vision of truth opened to my mind. And the Spirit of the Lord said unto me: Verily, verily, saith the Lord, even Jesus Christ, unto my servant W. Briggs concerning the church: Jason Behold, I have not east off my people, neither have I changed in regard to Zion. verily, my people shall be redeemed and my law shall be kept.

I am God and not man; and who is he that shall turn me from my purpose, or destroy whom I would preserve? Wolves have en-Wolves have entered into the flock, and who shall deliver them? Where is he who giveth his life for the flock? Behold, I will judge those who call themselves shepherds, and have preyed upon the flock of my pasture.

And because you have asked me in faith, concerning William Smith, this is the answer of the Lord thy God concerning him: I the Lord have permitted him to represent the rightful heir to the presidency of the high priesthood of my church, by reason of the faith and prayers of his father and brothers, Hyrum and Joseph Smith, which came before me in his behalf, and to regard that law of lineage by which the high priesthood is transmitted in all generations, when arranged into quorums, and the keys which were taught him by my servant Joseph was of me that I might prove him therewith. And for this reason have I poured out the Spirit through his ministration, according to the integrity of those who receive them. But as Esau despised his birthright, so has

William Smith despised my law and forfeited that which pertained to him as an apostle and high priest in my church. And his spokesman, Joseph Wood, shall fall with him, for they are rejected of me.

They shall be degraded in their lives, and shall die without regard, for they have wholly forsaken my law, and given them-selves to all manner of uncleanness; and prostituted my law, and the keys of power intrusted to them, to the lusts of the flesh. And have run greedily in the ways of adulterers. Therefore let the elders whom I have ordained by the hand of my servant Joseph, and by the hand of those ordained by him, despise not this authority nor faint in the discharge of duty, which is to preach my gospel, as revealed in the record of the Jews, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and the Book of Mormon, and cry repentance and remission of sins through obedience to the gospel. And I will sustain them and give them my Spirit.

And in mine own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and will bring one forth; and he shall be mighty and strong; and he shall preside over the high priest-hood of my church. And then shall the quo-rums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be reinhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph.

After many days shall all these things be accomplished, saith the Spirit. Behold, that which ye received as my celestial law is not of me, but is the doctrine of Baalim. And I command you to renounce it, and proclaim against it. And I will give you power that none shall be able to withstand your words, if you rely on me. For the Spirit shall attend you And the Spirit said unto me, Write, write, write the revelation, and send it unto the Saints at Palestine, and at Voree, and at Waukesha, and to all places where this doctrine is taught as my law. And whosoever will humble themselves before me, and ask of me, shall receive of my Spirit a testi-mony that these words are of me. Even so,

He also showed me a letter written by William Smith in which I saw the cause for disgust in the minds of the members of the church. I do not give the details for the reason these matters are not of any special importance to this history. I was not a member of the church, and it is enough for me to say that I never had any confidence in the claim of these men to be leaders of the church. As I was going down to Palestine in a few days, I promised to send for said letters if I found any of the members of the church there who would like to see them and would not destroy them.

Two or three days before I started I met Elder David Powell, and after some little conversation, he said:-

"Brother Edmund, you ought to be baptized before you start to Illinois, and I am coming over tomorrow to baptize you."

I told him he need not come, for I would not be baptized. He did not come, and I went down to Palestine. Here I became personally acquainted with William Smith, Elder W. W. Blair, Edwin Cadwell, Alva Smith, and others, and while attending one of Smith's meetings he took pains to refer in a very severe manner to those who had formerly been associated with him. Upon his sitting down, I involuntarily, and without premeditation or thought,—in fact, I was not conscious of any intention of speaking,—arose, acknowledged my faith in the gospel for the first time in my life in public, and made some remarks. suggesting that charity should be extended towards those who may have stepped aside and got in the dark, for it might not be altogether as bad as had been reported, and harshness toward them might hinder them from coming back. I knew the harsh remarks Smith had uttered against those he referred to were not deserved or just, and I knew he knew it; hence I was careful to clothe my thoughts in such language that none but Elder Smith would know I meant a rebuke to him.

When I sat down, he arose and in a very scathing manner denounced those whom he termed apostates, and then turned to me and spoke of me as only a dirty little boy needing a mother's doting care.

A Mr. John Neal from Wisconsin was present. He arose and made some remarks, regretting the harsh words used towards me, and expressed the hope that I would vet be a lamb in the church. Elder Cadwell made some remarks, and said he did not see any cause for such feelings being manifest. Elder Blair was also present, but I do not think he made any remarks touching the matter. I did not, however, feel disturbed in my feelings over the matter, but regretted very much that I was not a member of the church when he called me an outsider and a little Gentile.

I was working for a Mr. Alva Smith at the time, and I told him all about some letters that had been written by William Smith; the result of which was he sent for the letters, and when they came he showed them to Elders Blair, Cadwell, Jotham Barret, and others, and I had the pleasure of seeing these good, honest brethren withdraw from William Smith's faction, for my sympathy was very much drawn out towards them from the first time I had made their acquaintance, and I was sorry they were doomed to disappointment.

During the summer I had the hardest trial of my life concerning the gospel. My acquaintance with the condition of the church and the unfavorable impression Elder Smith made on me (and he was a brother of the founder of the church) all conduced to make my life fretful. The manifestations I had received establishing the truth of the gospel, and that Jesus was the Christ, the Way, Life, and Light of the world, and of every man that came into the world, appeared most mysterious. Taking a retrospect of my life, as to how little I had enjoyed and knew, and with but little prospect before me, or any of the world as to spiritual things, it seemed that all were doomed to deception. And the expression of Jesus | ing the beautiful gospel of the Son of | cometh. Shall he find faith on the earth?" was impressed on my mind as never before. The cruel denial of Peter when he cursed and swore, and said, "I know not the man," though he had before said, Though all men forsake thee, yet I will not, seemed indeed to stamp upon all mortality the uncertainty of their testimony.

The awful murder of Abel by his brother so soon after Almighty God had said, Everything is good, very good, now weighed on my mind with tenfold more horror than I ever realized before; followed by thoughts of the long train of crime, debauchery, and carnage, until the horrible deluge came by the fiat of God and swept off the face of the whole earth the race of Adam and every living creature; not the old, hardened, crimsoned wretch only, but the young man and the beautiful maider and children with innocence enstamped upon their countenances. And then the fate of Lot, who was counted righteous, and was led out of the city of Sodom by the hand of an angel of God who told him where there was a place of safety, and that the Lord could do nothing till he was gone; and then all the sweet, innocent babes of Sodom were burned up. These, with hundreds of other like things which were unreasonable to me, it seemed that professors of religion, everywhere winked at, and accepted the worst of characters as model men sent of God as his prophets and ministers of salvation.

But Mr. Smith, who was not accused of anything half so bad as the Bible says those ancient men admitted they had done, was declared a deceiver, was hated, despised, and finally suffered death at the hands of cruel men. And his taking off was hailed with delight by religious professors, while nonprofessors everywhere denounced it as an outrage of religious persecution. All night long I would lie awake and think of these things, and often in tears would exclaim, "Why can't I sleep like others, and put all these thoughts from me?" I often conversed with Elder Cadwell and his wife about the things of the church. He always stood for the church as it was in his early experience in it. His wife was much disaffected in her mind, and always portrayed the dark side of the picture about all religion.

Bro. Blair was disappointed and said but little about religion. Alva Smith was always firm in the faith of the gospel, but disgusted with things as they were going. The many factions of the church would send their missionaries through the land exhibiting their folly everywhere instead of preaching the gospel; and like all sectarian churches, they were not preachcreeds. Often I was led to pray and felt comforted, and yet to me church matters seemed in a doubtful condition, without much hope of speedy help.

Are all things possible with God? Yes, I finally answered, in this manner: In accordance with law. That he can do things finite beings cannot, because they know not the law by which they are done; that he works by law in the heavens and in the earth. He cannot lie, because he is a God of truth. He cannot change, because he is perfect and possesses all power; should he change he would not be God. Everything he does is in keeping with law. The artist can paint a picture of the rose or blade of grass and tint it with every hue, but he cannot make either a rose or a spear of grass, because he does not know the law by which they are made. Ah yes, he can with brush and chisel produce the landscape and statue, but why not make a living being and a world? Simply because he has not learned the law of creation and of life by which they are made. If these things are so, will God through Jesus Christ save a single fallen creature except by law? The logical answer is, He will not. What is that law of life? All Christendom answers. The doctrine of Christ; or, in other words, The gospel of Christ. We read as follows:-

And they were astonished at his doctrine. Mark 1: 22.

Whosoever . . . abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God [or in other words, the gospel, which is synonymous].-2

John 9.

And Jesus went about all Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom.-Matt.

For it [the gospel] is the power of God unto salvation.—Rom. 1:16.

He who does not receive and obev the doctrine or gospel of Christ cannot be saved, because it is the law by which salvation is attained, "the perfect law of liberty." No wonder, then, that God could do nothing until Lot had gone out of the city, for it is a law of God's, being that the righteous shall not be destroyed with the wicked. No, my dear reader, God could do nothing inconsistent with law. God could not save a sinner except he repent of his sins and obey the law of redemption of the righteous, any more than Esau could repent though he sought the blessing with

This train of thought led me to fully realize how necessary it is for all men to comply with law in order that they may be in harmony with God, who governs by law, and that what we call miracle is a miracle only to the finite being, because he does not understand the fixed conditions or laws by which it is done. To God or of Nazareth, "when the Son of man God, but were preaching men and his angels it is no miracle, for they know the principle by which these things are done. Again, miracles are daily occurrences; in fact, to us all things in nature, around, above, and beneath, are miracles, for we cannot understand the law by which they are made; we do not know the principle (or law) by which the fragrant rose, the spear of grass, the sturdy oak, and the maple, ash, and butternut all grow side by side in the forest, and yet they each are different and unlike each other. All have the same soil, atmosphere, sunshine, or night, with the same gentle dew or rain, yet they are essentially different. Yes, the creature, man, with one accord exclaims, Miracles and mystery are all around us! and it is true, so far as the finite is concerned. But to the infinite there is no miracle.

These things occupied my mind daily and created in me a real desire to comply with the divine law in order that I might approximate nearer to the Infinite One who is the source of all this wonderful mystery in what we call nature.

Baptism is the first example we learn of Christ to fulfill the law of righteousness, and he said, "Follow me." Can I do so without following him down into the waters of baptism? I had prayed from my childhood to know the straight and narrow way, and endeavored to repent of all my sins and weaknesses, and, O that I might have help to do right, was my constant desire. I sought earnestly to know what I ought to do, when one day late in July or early in August, 1852, I was impressed with the thought, If I should meet Elder Powell I would have him baptize me. I was away from home, but upon my return home, to my surprise I met Elder Powell in front of the house. I had but just said aloud to myself, "If I should meet him I would be baptized;" but as I saw him coming, my heart failed me, and my first thought was to turn and run from him. But we had met and I had to do the best I could, so bravely saluted him with,

"How do you do, Elder Powell?" but O, with what crushing weight his response came when he said,-

'I have come down to baptize you.

Are you ready?"

I quickly answered, "No, sir; I do not propose to join the Latter Day Saints' Church."

"I have come down on purpose to baptize you, and I hope you will be ready before I leave."

I replied, "You have come on a fruitless errand."

We were standing in front of our own door. I then invited him in and we had no further conversation that afternoon. He visited with mother and brother Edwin a short time, and then went to a neighbor's, Mr. Jotham Barret. Immediately upon his leaving our house I was taken with a severe pain in my head, and a violent fever prostrated me, and while I lay on the bed, my promise, made but one short hour before occurred to me, and I felt that God had withdrawn his protection from me for not obeying the sacred ordinance of baptism, which had been given as an example by Jesus Christ the Master, and was ordained by his command for the remission of sins. I could think of no sins I had ever committed, and the question came, Why be baptized for sin when I could think of none I ever did. I felt indeed the chastening of the Almighty was on me, and the act of baptism did look to me to be the most humiliating thing I could do. In fact, I resolved in my heart I could not, but I would suffer the chastisement of God rather than go down into the water and be baptized. And again the question came to me with great force, Do you not want to do right? I answered in the agony of my soul, Yes, but I cannot.

The door to my room was shut, but at that moment I saw in vision Elder Powell come into the front room, and soon after he came in and said to my mother, "Where is Edmund?" informed him that I was on the bed, sick. At that he came through the room, opened my door, came to my bedside, and just drew his hand across my forehead and said, "Your head aches," and stepped out of my room. All the pain, distress, and burning fever left me instantly. A calm, serene sensation took the place of all the distress of mind and body I had just passed through, and I felt a peaceful contentment of spirit with a desire to arise and go out and hear the conversation going on in the other room. After a little, Elder Powell bade us good afternoon and went up to one of our neighbors to stay over night. After he left, again the subject of religion occupied my thoughts; the course of life I had lived; my experience; the manifestations I had received; how I would be baptized and preach the gospel, and for evidence to me, the man who baptized me should have the gift of prophecy, indicate my calling, and ordain me an elder the day I was baptized, and afterwards I should be ordained into the High Council; and I thought, Now is the opportunity to prove this manifestation, whether or not it is of God. That I had just been healed in a remarkable manner, I knew. And that happy, calm, serene sensation that had been with me so often was again manifested. I thought, It must be the Holy Spirit that is leading me. for it certainly gives real comfort and joy. But O, the wretched condition of the church! The trials of God's people in all ages came before me, and the besetting sin of many was the gross, revolting crime of polygamy. Shame and ignominy seemed to blacken the whole religious world with apostasy and backsliding from the commandment of God. The Reorganization at this time was only in branches, anticipating the coming of its prospective president, and quorum association, and its numbers were few. Elder Powell represented them.

(To be continued.)

ZIZANIA,-NO. 2.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

Let both grow together. The tares are to be separated from the wheat, but the householder's servants here are not the ones to do it with exactness, nor is this the time for it to be perfectly done. We cannot expect the church to be wholly rid of false members for the present. Those who lay this to the blame of the church, that it has tares among the wheat, do not know their own hearts, or others'. Discipline is appointed in the church, and woe to those officers who neglect it, and are careless of the flock, or of its purity. But we are to beware of destroying a weak brother, or of indulging an arrogant, Pharisalc zeal, or pretending, finally, to set-tle all these differences. There are false pro-fessors, but "what is the chaff to the wheat?" Observe: Evil and good are to grow together, to increase and develop side by side, and intermixed, until the end of time. The good is not to choke the evil, but Satan is still to have his work and wages on earth.

The harvest represents the end of the world (see vs. 39); because at the last all results are gathered up—men are judged, fruits are brought to light, and a final disposal is made of the good and the bad.

of the good and the bad.

The reapers are the angels (vs. 39). They are appointed to this office. Christ is represented as coming to judgment and "all the holy angels with him" (Matt. 25).

To burn them. Tares are burned, so as to destroy most effectually the mischievous seed.

Like this, in the end of the world, will be the gathering and effectual destroying of the wicked, beyond the possibility of their propagating evil any longer.

Gather ye together, etc., or as in vs. 41, gather out of his kingdom. This will be the proper purifying process, removing every evil thing from the church (see Zeph. 1: 3) to "a furnace of fire" (vs. 42). "Whose end is to be burned" of fire" (vs. 42). "Whose end is to be burned" (Heb. 6: 8). Utterly burned with fire (2 Sam. 23: 6, 7). This expresses the common idea in the scripture of eternal burning, as the valley of Hinnom (Mark 9: 43-48). This casting into a furnace, which is here the image of hell, was a punishment in use among the Chaldeans (Jer. 29: 22; Dan. 3: 6).
Wailing, etc. (vs. 42). The article here, usually in this phrase in the New Testament, gives a definite and emphatic sense. The wailing, so peculiar and deserved. These are expressions of rage and impatience (Acts 7:

Gather the wheat into my barn. The righteous, in the jugdment, shall be admitted and welcomed to the joy of their Lord; shall shine forth, as distinct from the rest, "as the sun in the kingdom of their Father" (vs. 43), as if transfigured before the universe. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament" (Dan. 12: 3), the children of light and of the day. God permits the evil and the good to dwell together thus, at present, in order to show his forbearance, and to exercise the circumspection and patience of his people, as well as to show the need of a final judgment day, and to make his children look and pray for his coming kingdom, as prophesied of (Isa. 52: 1), with no more uncircumcised or unclean (Zech. 14: 21), no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord—his people all righteous (Isa. 60: 21). (Compare Isa. 35:8; Joel 3:17; Ezek. 37: 2i-27; Zeph. 3:13.) From this we are encouraged to persuade sinners to repentance, because the longsuffering of our God is salvation and not slackness. It shows his willingness to save. And the goodness of God should lead sinners to repentance.

OBSERVE, this parable teaches us how possible it is for false professors to enter the church. Nothing else can be expected. Nothing else is pretended. This is not to be charged against the church. The self-deceived and deceivers will all be made known at the last. And for the present, how necessary that we examine ourselves, since membership is no guaranty for our new nature. Christ is the final judge. Let all understand: "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear (vs. 43). There are things here that require spiritual discernment, and the parable is worthy to be personally applied by each. In these two parables they had heard of the difficulties and drawbacks which belong to the kingdom.—Notes on the Gospels, pp. 147-150.

By a careful perusal of the foreing it will be seen that the Reverend Jacobus adroitly avoids committing himself to any radical view upon this subject; however, his remarks are suggestive, and may prove as an incentive to the acquiring of additional light and knowledge.
Christ is, without the shadow of a doubt, the personification to us of all that is pure, true, good, right, virtuous, lovable, or desirable; for the Scriptures teach:—

Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 2:5.

And still plainer:-

For even hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps.—1 Peter 2: 21.

That disciple whom the Lord loved, taught:—

He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.—1 John 2: 6.

What is true of Christ, as our ensample in righteousness, is equally true of the Devil as the personification of all unrighteousness, whether in or out of the church. Christ is the head of the church:—

And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church.—Eph. 1:22.

Again:

But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ.—Eph. 4:15.

By implication we are led to believe that Satan is also the head of a church; for the word of the Lord to us is:—

Contend against no church, save it be the church of the Devil.—D. C. 16:4.

And the Devil shall have power over his own dominion.—D. C. 1:6.

The work, power, and authority of the Devil is but little understood among the people of the world. Hopeful that the following may prove helpful to some one seeking gospel light, I quote:—

And it came to pass that I saw among the nations of the Gentiles the foundation of a great church. And the angel said unto me, Behold the foundation of a church, which is most abominable above all other churches, which slayeth the saints of God, yea, and tortureth them and bindeth them down, and yoketh them with a yoke of iron, and bringeth them down into captivity. And it came to pass that I beheld this great and abominable church; and I saw the devil that he was the foundation of it.—1 Nephi 3:33,34.

The reader will perceive that the Devil is the foundation of the abominable church, and we are to contend against no church, but that of the Devil. It must be clear to all that his satanic majesty, with a church to aid him, will accomplish the sowing of tares in all parts of the world, among all peoples; none are so good but that they may fall into the ways of evil. The church may not wholly escape the contamination that Satan employs against the great plan of redemption. Perhaps the disciples were surprised to find one of their number to be so vile as to betray their Lord; and some make strange that a church, living under the divine light, as enjoyed in apostolic times, should depart from God and the plan of salvation; but let the mistakes of those ancient people be a standing admonition to us; for the word of the Lord to the church was:-

Purge ye out the iniquity which is among you.—D. C. 43:3.

Some may say they were those in the incipiency of the church, but let us not take unto ourselves unwarranted unction to our souls, for we have been advised:—

And now I show unto you a mystery, a thing which is had in secret chambers, to bring to pass even your destruction, in process of time, and ye knew it not, but now I tell it unto you, and ye are blessed, not because of your iniquity, neither your hearts of unbelief, for verily some of you are guilty before me; but I will be merciful unto your weakness.—D. C. 38: 4.

Well-informed Saints are aware what a sweeping and direful fulfillment this prophecy had, for immediately after the assassination of the Prophet and Patriarch, the chief men of the church entered into a shameful and wholesale planting of tares. And its subtle influence for evil will long be felt. Here is another ray of light upon the subject:—

Hearken and hear, O ye my people, saith the Lord and your God, ye whom I delight to bless with the greatest blessings; ye that hear me: and ye that hear me not will I curse, that have professed my name, with the heaviest of all cursings.—D. C. 41:1.

There can be no misunderstanding of this language; it applies directly to the membership of the church, and the Lord defines in this same revelation who the faithful and the unfaithful disciples are:—

He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you—D. C. 41:2.

No one need be in a quandary as to whether he is an acceptable disciple of Christ.

The reader will observe that Mr. Jacobus uses the expression in regard to the tares that they are "the children of the wicked one." He gave the text as it stands in King James' Bible. The word "one" is supplied, Those who are represented as tares are only the children of the Devil upon their own volition. Some seek to escape the responsibility of their own wrongdoing by the flimsy excuse, "I cannot help doing as I do, for I am just as God made me; and if I commit sin, he is to blame." dreds and thousands try to screen themselves with such subversive philosophy. The word of inspiration as to the individual and personal agency and responsibility is:-

No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammen.— Matt. 6:24.

These are the words of the Son of God, and he made no mistake in teaching. Let us hear him once more:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.—John 8:34.

The perspicuity of this is such that none need be in error whether they be of the world or of the church. Whoever commits sin, little or much, are just to that degree the servants or slaves to sin, and that evidently was Paul's understanding:—

Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?—Rom. 6:16.

Sin is the transgression of law, and "the wages of sin is death." Satan was, early in the world's history, maneuvering to subvert the great mission of Christ, and to enthrall our race, robbing us of our heaven appointed rights. Whoever is deprived of their agency should neither be rewarded nor punished:—

And I, the Lord God, spake unto Moses, ying, That Satan whom thou hast comsaying, manded in the name of mine Only Begotten, is the same which was from the beginning; and he came before me, saying, Behold I, send me, I will be thy Son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore, give me thine honor. But behold, my beloved Son, which was my beloved and chosen from the beginning, said unto me; Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever. Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him; and also that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten I caused that he should be cast down, and he became Satan; yea, even the devil, the father of all lies, to deceive, and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice. And now, the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field, which I, the Lord God, had made. And Satan put it into the heart of the serpent, for he had drawn away many after him; and he sought also to beguile Eve, for he knew not the mind of God; wherefore, he sought to destroy the world. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden. And he spake by the mouth of the serpent. And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; but of the fruit of the tree which thou beholdest in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die; for God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.—Gen. 3: 1-10, I. T.

Here we learn the design and purpose of Satan; his ambition and object were to obtain glory and power at the expense and degradation of the whole human family. Man by his creation or nature is not the child of the Devil, but can become such by the surrender of his birthright and blessing, and vielding to the inveiglements of sin. And this is the only means or agency by which the Devil can sow The opinion of Augustine, that tares are degenerate wheat, is in a sense correct; for by the fall there evidently came a change in the condition of our foreparents, and we inherit that changed condition as soon as we are able to understand right from wrong, good from evil; hence the instruction of Christ: -

For the Son of Man is come to save that which was lost, and to call sinners to repentance; but these little ones have no need of repentance, and I will save them —Matt. 18: 11, I. T.

The mission of Christ was, firstly, to save that which was lost; that is:—

For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive —1 Cor. 15: 22; namely, to counteract the consequences of the fall, and to place the race on interceding terms with their Creator, that they might accomplish the injunction:—

Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.— 2 Peter 1: 10, 11.

Secondly.—The calling of sinners to repentance is the basic object of the gospel; for Christ taught after his resurrection and before his ascension:—

Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.—Luke 24: 44-46, I. T.

Thirdly.—He saves little children without any act of obedience upon their part, for the reason that they do not possess the power to discriminate between sin and righteousness, and the Lord said of them:—

Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.—Matt. 19: 14, I. T.

The work of Christ for the redemption of the race is manifested in the following:—

For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.—Luke 19: 10, I. T.

In our normal state, during infancy and early youth, we are neither wheat nor tares; but in the formative period, when we receive the communications of our seniors, we develop such habits and actions that are characteristic of either wheat or tares. We become wheat by accepting the principles of the doctrine of Christ:—

For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.—Gal. 3: 27.

This is the method by which we became the children of God, and upon the condition of abiding faithful to our covenant in Christ, we may stand with him "of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named" (Eph. 3: 15). And the Bible reason for this is:—

For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.—1 Cor. 12: 13.

And when the union is thus formed, a church composed of individuals, to them the Lord says:—

Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things. Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness; even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit. And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren and before the Lord.—D. C. 59: 2.

This is very wholesome instruction, and full of comfort to those who desire to be as wheat in the kingdom of God. All who keep themselves unspotted from the vices of the world, and with fidelity in the keeping of the commandments of God, can have hope of realizing the promise:—

To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.—Rev. 3:21.

God fully understood that the church militant would be composed of human beings, who are heirs to trial. temptation, and sin; and that within the pale of the church was to be the conflict with those ills; hence the provision in confessing, and in overcoming. A misstep or a mistake upon the part of a professor is not irrefragable proof that he is a full-fledged tare. I do not wish to be understood by this statement as an apologist for folly, evil, or crime done by any church member; for I believe in the discipline of church folk; it is essential to a moral and spiritual growth:-

Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?—2 Cor. 13:5.

Here is self-discipline, a very necessary duty for those who desire to attain unto the relationship stated in the following passage:—

The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.—Rom 8:16, 17.

Not only is self labor a necessity, but a watchcare over the membership is likewise of God provided, and officers duly appointed for that duty:—

A man that is a heretic, after the first and second admonition, reject.—Titus 3:10.

This manifestly provides for a discipline of the communicants. Mr. H. W. Morris says:—

Vegetation has its admonitions as well as comfortable assurance. The zizania, translated "tares" in our Lord's parable, was a species of bastard wheat, that, in the first stages of its growth, bore a very close resemblance to genuine wheat; hence the servants never discovered, or even suspected its existence, until the ear was formed and the fruit brought forth. Up to that point both had passed for wheat. So often among men: outwardly there may appear little or no difference between the righteous and the wicked; side by side they may move in the world and stand in the church, and all things may seem to come to both alike. But between the two, as with the tares and wheat, there is an essential and germinal difference, which the eye of omniscience, at the harvest time of souls, will not fail to detect .- Work Days of God, p. 349.

There is a possibility of the cunning, sinister, or hypocritical person masking under the cloak of religion, and passing for a good churchman. Jesus evidently so understood when he said:

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind; which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away. So shall it be at the end of the world.—Matt. 13: 47-49.

We may expect that this parable will be fulfilled. One point I wish to make, and that is this: Some seem to be constitutionally prone to evil, others inherit a disposition to wrongdoing, and perhaps there exists extenuating circumstances over which they had no control, producing said mental or physical condition, causing an occasional lapse from the path of duty. Again, there is a wide difference in our religious education, so that we view the actions of people variously; so that what one would excuse, another would roundly condemn.

The great apostasy in the church of latter days has subjected us to severe animadversion that is unjust as well as untrue. Every case of turpitude upon the part of any member of this church is punishable, as I will now show by the law governing the church:—

The priests' duty is to . . . visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and to attend to all family duties. . . The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with, and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking.—D. C. 17: 10, 11.

This is from the organic law of the church, and under its provision, and the spirit thereof, there is little room for tares to flourish. The law against evil doing and crime reads:—

And now, behold, I speak unto the church. Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come. And again, I say, Thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die. Thou shalt not steal; and he that stealeth and will not repent, shall be cast out. Thou shalt not lie; he that lieth and will not repent, shall be cast out. Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repents not, he shall be cast out. Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall be cast out; but he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart, and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive; but if he doeth it again, he shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out. Thou shalt not speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm. Thou knowest my laws concerning these things are given in my scriptures; he that sinneth and repenteth not, shall be cast out.—D. C. 42: 6, 7.

Concluded next week.

THE CREATION.

I do not desire to build any private interpretation on the Holy Scriptures (a very small fragment of all the words of God to all nations), but write things as I see them in my own reason. According to both the inspired translation and other versions from Jewish writings, the earth was in its first stage "without form, and void," with no life of any kind.

And I caused darkness to come up upon the face of the deep —Gen. 1:4, I. T.

Then light was caused to come, and, divided from the darkness, was called day, and this was done by the word of his power, during the first day, era, epoch, age, or whatever measured period of time it may be. It says, however, "and the evening and the morning were the first day." If this is a fact, the earth received its light three days before either the sun, moon, or stars were made. Still one day remained before the creation of the sun, in which the earth brought "forth grass, herb yielding seed; and the tree yielding fruit," etc. surely (in the third dispensation) was a lonely and silent earth. The vegetable kingdom was instituted before either the sun shone or any rain came:

For I, the Lord God, created all things of which I have spoken, spiritually, before they were naturally upon the face of the earth; for I, the Lord God, had not caused it to rain upon the face of the earth. And I, the Lord God, had created all the children of men [in heaven], and not yet... flesh upon the earth, neither in the water, neither in the air.—Gen. 2: 5, 6, I. T.

We see by this and verse 11 that these were spiritual in the day of their creation. I understand that until the end of the second period the "deep" completely covered or enveloped the land to an enormous depth, and during that time the great waters were divided and the blue canopy or vault of space called heaven put between them. It remains to decide where are the waters above the heavens; surely they are more than the vapory clouds that surround this orbit this side of the firmament; there must be vast seas beyond.

Geologists show that at the beginning of the first day, called the Azoic period, the earth had no formation and was a vast ball of heated vapor and gases, which in a long process of cooling separated the solids from the liquids, which caused a vast ocean. In the second or Primary period, the rocks cooled enough to allow the first sign of marine life. This time they divide into five parts - called the Huronian, Cambrian, Silurian, Devonian, and Carboniferous: first the shell fish, then seaweed, coral and marsh plants, and creatures like half fish and tadpole. On the third day or Secondary period, which has the Triassic, Jurassic, and Cretaceous parts of development, reptiles and lizards appear as half birds and also half fish; either wings or scales or fins, and both that lived either in water or land, and probably hot at that.

During the fourth and fifth day, called the Tertiary period, it is probable that the sun began to shine through the mists, if as they say the sun sustains all life. There must have been terrible conflicts of nature during this time, if we can judge anything by the beds of sandstone, clay, gravel, peat, and other drift Along the end of this period, or on the sixth day, the Lord God created everything on a gigantic scale, when the mastodon shook the wonderful forests that made our coal fields later, and fowls like a stork or ostrich stood at least fifty feet high, and turtles would cover a good acre of ground. The sea was full of monsters, including a kind of whale, as also was the earth; but they are now extinct, and their bones and fossil are their testimony of life. Adam and his people were also of powerful and large physique, and I have no doubt of corresponding intelligence and knowledge, Where is the man today that could give a name to every living creature and retain it in memory? Adam had dominion of all the life of this earth, which I believe was larger than at this time, as the glacial age came after the flood hiding and sinking vast expanses of dry land. I do not hold to the idea that either the antediluvians or the builders of the tower of a baby mind in a giant frame, but that they understood more of the laws that ruled the planetary system and natural laws, and were far more acquainted with their creator than all the modern world combined.

Look once at our social condition, even with all its inventions; did you ever conceive of a worse state of society, its sickness and wretchedness, its endless wars and strife? Even the animals are filled with vicious and ravenous, abnormal natures; and today a conflict against peace and perfection is waging in all creation. A thousand years will redeem or restore and bring back those conditions that first existed in the morning of creation, together with its former glory, when everything was good and finished. (Gen. 2:1, 2, I. T.) The command came before the fall to replenish the earth and subdue it. No wonder the sons of God were joyful to know that the earth was being especially prepared for them, to change their condition to the glory of the Lord and his work; "to bring to pass the immortality, and eternal life of These early people knew the harp and organ, and there were also artificers of brass and iron. (Gen. 5:31, 32, I. T.) They had a book and could read and write. (Gen. 6:5, 6, I. T.) They had gold and precious stones. (Gen. 2:14, I. T.) Many sons and daughters were born to Adam before Cain. Many of these children loved Satan more than God, and that is why Cain and Abel have prominence, for Eve thought Cain would not reject the word of the Lord to repent and be baptized into the early church covenant. Cain became perdition, while Abel walked in holiness before the Lord. (See Gen. 5th, I. T.) These few things give us a better understanding of the early day, and show that God is no respecter of persons, and his course is one eternal round, the same yesterday, today, and forever.

CHICAGO, Illinois.

A. W. GORBUTT.

DON'TS FOR YOUNG ELDERS.

Don't think you are going to have greater success than your predecessors. Don't be discouraged if you should not have as much.

Don't think to startle the world with your first efforts. Don't be dejected if you find that your audience cannot see even so much in your sermon as you thought there was. Don't think think too much about yourself any way.

Don't think because some aged lady or young girl praises your effort that you are the embodiment of intellectuality.

vians or the builders of the tower of Don't think because nobody pats Babel were a set of numskulls, with you on the shoulder the effort was worthless. One does not know much good is done by even a few words in what might be called by some a weak effort.

Don't try to "ape" some favorite. Monkeys make poor preachers.

Don't try to make people believe the church belongs to you; you are a member of the church.

Don't think because you are young the Lord cannot speak through you great and eternal truths.

Don't ridicule the manner or language of older toilers who have not enjoyed the advantages that you have.

Don't feel timid because some older elder with a heavy voice is present. If he is a true man you will have his prayer. If he is not, then don't care.

Don't try to teach the folks where you are stopping how to bring up children.

Don't hear half that is said or done in the family and don't tell half of what you do hear.

Don't be a judge to decide a contention between man and wife on either side.

Don't be a garbage cart for people to dump the accumulated culch of the branch or neighborhood into, for some other dealer may want to exchange wares and you might wish yourself out of a dirty business.

Don't appoint yourself on a committee to gather up slime, for you do not need to have any for your own use and the Devil has enough agents in that business to keep him going already.

Don't think that you are preaching the gospel when you are only insulting the members of other churches. Don't think that it is persecution for Christ's sake when you become unpopular and close up openings when you thus do preach.

Don't make an appointment without putting forth every reasonable effort to fill it. Don't let saint or sinner lose confidence in you or you word.

Don't fail to constantly study the books. You cannot teach what you don't know.

Don't scold children, kick the dog, or flirt with the girls.

Don't forget that the enemy of souls is always on the alert, and that man alone is no match for him.

Don't neglect to pray.

E X PERIENCE

For those who love odd things in Needlework designs, Moldavian Embroidery appearing for the first time in the February Delineator, will prove of interest. Moldavian Embroidery is very simple in its character. It depends for its full beauty upon the stitches being of exact length. The designs are few and limited by Grecian tendencies. The Delineator shows this embroidery in colors. It is worthy of study by those of our readers who are skillful with the needle.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR DISPENSA-TION

The last dispensation of the gospel was opened with one of the greatest floods of light that ever proceeded from God through any seer since the world began. The century just closed has witnessed this wondrous display of God's power; in the short space of some twenty two years by Angelic ministration, by vision, and by the voice of revelation with Urim, the choice Seer of the posterity of him who was sold into Egypt was enabled to locate, translate, and publish to the world the writings on the stick of Joseph which is now in the hand of Ephraim. The authority to officiate in the ordinances of the holy priest-hood after the order of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. was conferred on him by divine command. Glory covered him, and by its holy influence he received knowledge and power to show the order of the priesthood, and the revelations that were sealed containing the law to the church. The world hated him and sought occasion against him; but with the assistance of false and designing men failed in their desires, and confessed that the law of the land which has a penalty affixed for what lawyers term wrong doing could not reach him, and some were found willing to break both the laws of God and man by sending his spirit on its journey to mingle with those under the altar of Jehovah. It is a sad confession his enemies made that the law of the land could not reach him, but powder and ball

I am not a man worshiper, but do admire his courage and purity of life; greater love can no man have than to lay down his life for the brethren. This much abused and misunderstood man did this. The time will come when those who slew him and persecuted him will honor him.

There are those who claim to love his memory, and yet will charge him with breaking his marriage vow, with violating the divine law that was hid in the earth on Cumorah hill and brought to light through him, and again repeated twice to the church by the voice of revelation to him, and further charge that a revelation introduced eight years after his death was written by him directly in opposition to words that were given through him on three different occasions, Oh consistency, thou art indeed a jewel! All those must stand with him at the bar of God, and the secret thoughts of their hearts shall be made manifest and they be rewarded according to their desires and works.

It is my humble opinion that the most feasible way to overcome the evil that traitors and the world charge him with, is to live according to the message given to him. The time has arrived when people, some at least, find no fault with our doctrine, but they say, "we cannot stand old Joe Smith." I do not believe that the church as a whole does remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, not only to say, but do according to what is written therein.

I call to mind a simple dream I had some years ago. According to the dream I was going forward to take part in a conflict with the world. I was alone, and going over a very rough country, without arms, but trusted in faith as a weapon. Soon I could hear what seemed to be the roar of heavy artillery, and I set my face grimly, thinking the fighting was desperate. Soon I could see the lines afar off, and there was the army of the Lord, armed with faith and righteousness, but only the garments of a few were white. I saw a spirit that desired place, and had an anxiety for more revelation, a willingness to be in harmony if others would make all the concessions necessary to unity, a desire to be heard rather than to hear others, a treating lightly of the former commandments. The discipline was not good; a poor example by the line officers and still poorer by the privates. The chief captain was looking to his superior in heaven, Jesus Christ, but no great advance could be made, because the hearts of the army were set too much on the things of the world.

I awoke, and I disclaim all responsibility for what comes over me while asleep. I have, however, the courage to relate the dream and bear the criticism it may provoke. As for myself, I expect to overcome the world by cultivating good desires, and doing what the Master asks at my hand. I do believe wisdom is the better part of valor, and shall seek for it. I am willing to lay down my life for my friends if occasion should require, and do believe that what God suffers we ought to be willing to suffer. I believe in the spirit of forbearance and kindness. I believe that men should be desirous of being led by the Spirit of God, and that all desires for position or preference should not find place in the heart. I believe that the Spirit of God will show men their weakness; and that we are all heirs thereto, some in one way and some in another. Let us overcome.

As for myself, God alone must invite me to come further up the line. It shall never be said truthfully that I had aspiring motives, and my actions shall be so closely guarded as to prove my words.

Yours for truth,

GEO. DALEY. 1424 K street, Sacramento, Jan. 11.

Selected Articles.

HAECKEL'S SOLUTION OF THE "RID-DLE OF THE UNIVERSE."

At the opening of a new century, especially one succeeding the nineteenth, called "the wonderful century" by leading thinkers, it is natural to "take stock" and ask what philosophy has to say at this juncture about the deepest and highest problems engaging in human mind. "What stage in the attainment of truth have we actually arrived at? What progress have we really made during its [the closing century's course toward that immeasurably distant goal—the solution of the riddle of the universe?"

These questions are put by Prof. Ernst Haeckel and elaborately answered in his latest work (just rendered into English), "Die Welträthsel," or "The Riddle of the inverse." Professor Haeckel is Germany's greatest biologist, and he believes that specialists should interest themselves in the philosophy of nature as well as in the mere facts and observed uniformities. He had long contemplated writing a complete "system of monistic philosophy," but advancing age and failing strength render that impossi-ble. The present work marks the close of his studies and final conclusions in philosophy and moral science. He writes from the view point, not of an agnostic, but of a monist. He rejects materialism as emphatically as he does supernatural religion. At the very outset of his book he states his position thus:-

"All the different philosophical tendencies may, from the point of view of modern science, be ranged in two antagonistic groups; they represent either a dualistic or a monistic interpretation of the cosmos. The former is usually bound up with teleological and idealistic dogmas, the latter with mechanical and realistic theories. Dualism, in the widest sense, breaks up the universe into two entirely distinct substances—the material word and an immaterial God, who is represented to be its creator, sustainer, and ruler. Monism, on the contrary, recognizes one sole substance in the universe, which is at once God and nature; body and spirit (or matter and energy) it holds to be inseparable. The extramundane God of dualism leads necessarily to theism; the intramundane God of the monist to pantheism."

In many other places Haeckel repeats the formula of the "unity of God and nature," but without defining his meaning very clearly. Religion, apart from its ethical side, he regards as superstition. Special creation, the personality of God, divine control or guidance of the universe, immortality, and the freedom of the will he declares to have been "shattered" by modern science and the discovery of "the great eternal iron laws" throughout the universe.

Professor Haeckel first discusses the evolution of the human body and the nature of the vital functions. Then he enters upon a consideration of the soul-its nature, "embryology," and phylogeny. On the strength of the data in these chapters he dismisses the belief in immortality, summarizing his arguments against it as follows:-

"The physiological argument shows that the human soul is not an independent, immaterial substance, but. like the soul of all the higher animals, merely a collective title for the sumtotal of man's cerebral functions; and these are just as much determined by physical and chemical processes as any of the other vital functions, and just as amenable to the law of substance.

"The histological argument is based on the extremely complicated microscopic structure of the brain; it shows us the true 'elementary organs of the soul' in ganglionic cells.

"The experimental argument proves that the various functions of the soul are bound up with certain special parts of the brain, and cannot be exercised unless these are in a normal condition. If the areas are destroyed, their function is extinguished; and this is especially applicable to the organs of thought, the four central instruments of mental activity.

"The pathological argment is the complement of the physiological. When certain parts of the brain (the centers of sight, hearing, etc.) are destroyed by sickness, their activity disappears; in this way nature herself makes the decisive physiological experiment.

"The ontogenetic argument puts be fore us the facts of the development of the soul in the individual. We see how the child-soul gradually unfolds its various powers; the youth presents them in full bloom, the mature man shows their ripe fruit; in old age we see the gradual decay of the psychic powers, corresponding to the senile degeneration of the brain.

"The phylogenetic argument derives its strength from paleontology and the comparative anatomy and physiology of the brain. Cooperating with and completing each other these sciences prove to the hilt that the human brain (and consequently its function, the soul) has been evolved step by step from that of the mammal, and, still further back, from that of the lower vertebrate.'

In short, immortality, concludes Haeckel, is a dogma in hopeless contradiction with the most solid truths of empirical science. The loss of the belief in an immortal soul, he asserts, would be a positive gain, not a misfortune, to humanity. Similarly with regard to worship, revelation, and the churches. Monism. however, has its religion, and it finds in nature the only true revelation:-

"The modern man, who has science and art—and therefore 'religion' needs no special church, no narrow, enclosed portions of space. through the length and breadth of free nature, wherever he turns his gaze, to the whole universe or to any single part of it, he finds indeed the grim 'struggle for life,' but by its side are ever the good, the true, and the beautiful; his church is commensurate with the whole of glorious nature. Still, there will always be men of special temperament who will desire to have decorated temples or churches as places of devotion to which they may withdraw. Just as the Catholics had to relinquish a number of churches to the Reformation in the sixteenth century, so a still larger number will pass over to 'free societies' of monists in the coming years."

Haeckel's point of view and method have been sufficiently indicated to permit hastening on (omitting a resume of his treatment of Christianity) to his final summary and closing words. The great law of the cosmos, he says, is the law of substance, the constancy of matter and force. This law rules out all the postulates of theology and metaphysics and assigns mechanical causes to phenomena. There has been no "creation," but evolution, and everything has conformed to a single law. But do we know anything of the nature of the substance of the cosmos, of the cause of the observed uniformities? No, answers Haeckel. The one riddle of the universe that now remains, the "problem of substance," has not been solved and, in fact, monism has given up the attempt at solving it. Says Haeckel: "We grant at once that the innermost character of nature is just as little understood by us as it was by Anaximander and Empedocles twentyfour hundred years ago, by Spinoza and Newton two hundred years ago, and by Kant and Goethe one hundred years ago. We must even grant that this essence or substance becomes more mysterious and enigmatic the deeper we penetrate into the knowledge of its attributes. . . . We do not know the 'thing-in-itself' that lies behind the knowable phenomena. But why trouble about this enigmatic 'thing-in-itself' when we have no means of investigating it, when we do not even clearly know whether it exists or not? . .

"From the gloomy problem of substance we have evolved the clear law of substance."

In a chapter on monistic ethics

Haeckel answers the question how the loss of "anthropomorphic" conceptions of the cause of all things will affect men's lives and conduct. Morality, he says, is independent of any belief in the supernatural. based on human experience, on scientific comprehension of social coexistence. The love of others is as natural as self-love. No one can prosper and be serene and happy unless everybody around him is equally happy:-

"The golden rule says: 'Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you." From this highest precept of Christianity it follows of itself that we have just as sacred duties toward ourselves as we have toward our fellows. . . . (1) Both these concurrent impulses are natural laws, of equal importance and necessity for the preservation of the family and the society; egoism secures the self-preservation of the individual, altruism that of the species, which is made up of the chain of perishable individuals. (2) The social duties which are imposed by the social structure of the associated individuals, and by means of which it assures its preservation, are merely higher evolutionary stages of the social instincts, which we find in all higher social animals (as habits which have become hereditary). (3) In the case of civilized men all ethics, theoretical or practical, being a science of rules, is connected with his view of the world at large, and consequently with his religion.

Professor Haeckel's religion, he explains further, consists in the cult of goodness, truth, and moral beauty, and the last word of the nineteenth century, in his judgment, to humanity is that in monistic religion and ethics there is "ample compensation for the anthropinistic ideas of 'God, freedom, and immortality' which we have lost."

PREHISTORIC MAN IN IOWA.

Prof. Clement L. Webster, formerly a government archæologist, has found the remains of a race of "ape men" or "missing links" in Iowa, and he says he doubts not but that the prehistoric Americans which he found buried along the Cedar River are still lower than the Neanderthal man hitherto recognized as the lowest discovered type of man. Prof. Webster made his first discovery on the Cedar river near Floyd, Iowa, where he discovered a group of three ancient mounds, the largest of which was found to contain the remains of five human bodies, the bones, even to those of the fingers and toes, being for the most part in a good state of preservation. That the bodies had been carefully buried there was evident from the nature of the mound. A deep saucer-like excavation had been made, the bottom of this was paved with a concrete like mass, and then the bodies were placed there in an upright position. The skeleton of one of the men found was about six feet tall, and showed that the man must have been even superior in strength to a gorilla, a veritable giant. On the west side of the Little Cedar river, about one and a half miles below Chickasaw, Iowa, Prof. Webster found another group of mounds, ten in number. A number of skeletons were found in these mounds. and in every instance the skull showed that the person must have been of a very low mental order, the forehead slanting straight back and being almost level with the top of the head, while behind the eyebrows there were depressions in which the owners could have carried a hickory nut without dropping it. Prof. Webster has compared the skulls of these prehistoric Iowa men with the skull of the famous Neanderthal man, and there is no question but that the Iowa discovery has taken us the nearest yet to the "missing link."—Iowa State Register, December 1.

Letter Department.

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan 11.

Editors Herald:-The work is onward in this part of the Lord's vineyard though it is far short of the condition that we would desire for it. We find it a warfare that calls into use all of our best faculties, and then we are helpless unless the Spirit comes to our assistance. The writer has been located here in Oakland since last October, and has presided over this branch as well as the district. In the discharge of duty we have met some grand, true Saints of God, who have anticipated my every want in a temporal sense, and have done all they could to raise the condition of the branch, spiritually, to a higher plane. May God abundantly bless them!

We are doing what we can, holding services in private houses, and feel satisfied if we only have a few for audiences. We held a series of eleven services in a private house in West Berkeley, where Bro. Chase had opened the way, and had the pleasure, on Thanksgiving day, of baptizing three in the waters of the bay. Several others were seemingly pleased with the gospel message, and we trust that they may some day see the necessity for obedience. Several of the local brethren (Saxe, Anthony, Price, etc.) did some preaching at this place prior to my effort, and I consider that I was reaping the results of their efforts. However, to God be all the glory.

Our little church is all paid for as the result of an entertainment made possible by the efforts of Sr. Lottie Price in securing the talent. The Saints all responded nobly in every way possible, especially in buying and disposing of tickets, and the result was a net return for our efforts of forty-six dol-the church at Sixteenth and Magnolia streets five families of Saints have moved into the "regions round about," so as to get the full benefits of the meetings. We will be glad to find houses for five more.

We are having "the gathering" on a

Several of the local brethren are doing splendidly, filling appointments on each Sunday, and the Lord is blessing them in the telling of the gospel restored. The Spirit is also being given in administration, a notable instance being the case of Bro. Jos. Peat, our branch priest, who was bedfast and who was relieved instantly. A week before in dream he saw himself in bed under the hand of affliction, and saw one of the elders come in and administer to him, and heard the words that he spoke in confirming the ancinting. His dream was fulfilled to the least detail.

The bishop's agent for this branch started the new year by receiving ninety dollars in tithing on the first Sunday. How grand it would be, and how the work of God would prosper, if every Saint would but keep the temporal law and how can we expect to be saved except we honor the whole law? Latter day revelation says that if we keep not the temporal law we shall lift up our eyes in hell, being in torment. (D. and C. 101:2.) What a small sacrifice it is, too, when we compare it with the sacrifice of those who leave not only temporal prosperity but home and loved ones!

May God give us all faith to fulfill the object of our creation, and do all that we are called to do. Your colaborer in Christ,

F. B. BLAIR.

1244 Adeline street.

FULTON, Iowa, Jan. 14.

Editors Herald:-I read with pleasure the piece written by Bro. Williams, and I wish that every minister of Christ would heed the counsel, so that none would speak disrespectfully of his brother elder in the field.

Brn. Hand and Sutton were here before Christmas, and the two spoke three times. The weather was bad at the time, and since then Elder L. E. Hills came and spoke six times. We had good weather, full moon, and good, attentive audiences. Of course the turnout was small at first, but increased, and I think good will result. All our brethren seem to be enjoying a good degree of the Spirit in their preaching. May God keep them humble, so their preaching may not be in vain!

Our numbers are not as large as they were some time in the past; some are sick; some have gone over the river; others have moved away, and still others are careless; some have obeyed the gospel, but have not the work at heart, while there are those who do all they can to further the work of God, helping with their means, and by living their religion in the best possible way. Such are an honor to the cause of Christ, and when the elders go forth to tell the gospel story. and know that there are those who are an honor in the church, it cheers them, and buoys them up, so they can go on rejoicing.

I have been thinking of late how we could live in Zion if we do not live out of Zion as small scale here in Oakland. Since building we ought to live. Again, how could we enjoy ourselves in Zion, knowing that we did not lay up one cent, either by tithing or by any other sacrifice for the building up of Zion. Let us, therefore, live pure lives, energetic in the Master's service, not slothful in business, not slothful in the ministry, esteeming each other better than ourselves, not speaking evil of our brother; be he elder or lay member, that we do unto others as we would that others do unto us. Let us follow our Master in all things, and thereby gain eternal life!

The older I get the more I love this work. The Saints in this district did well in tithes and offerings, but there's still room for improvement; so let us see that we bring all our tithes and offerings into the storehouse of our God, this year, 1901.

Your brother,

JOHN HEIDE.

P. S.—I just got a letter today asking who the Bishop's agent was in his district. Will inform those who do not know that John Heide will receipt for all money sent him as tithes and offerings.

J. H.

WEST POINT, Mo., Jan. 9.

Editor Herald:—Our conference held with the Pomona branch was good. A feeling of harmony seemed to prevail throughout the entire session. The officers of the district manifested a determination to bring about the needed renewal of diligence and faith.

Since my appointment to this district, I have undergone many experiences, encouraging and otherwise. The field of the Master is white now for the harvest, and there are many calls for help on every hand. No doubt Bro. C. J. Spurlock will be glad to hear that I have baptized Martin Tucker, at Stony Point, Missouri. With hopes Zionward, and love for all,

Norwood, Missouri, January 10. Editors Herald:—We came here two years ago from Cedar Rapids, and are very lone-some, as there are no Saints nearer than eight miles, at Mountain Grove. We miss the meetings very much. The people here seem to be indifferent as to hearing the truth. The country is very rough, and for one to get a start he must have some capital to begin with. This is a fine grazing country, as we have fine grass and plenty of water. Timber is also plenty.

We have no other preacher here than the beloved Herald. We do not see how any of the Saints can get along without it.

God bless all the Saints. Remember us at the throne of grace. Your sister, MINNIE LEMBURG.

LAMONI, Iowa, January 13.

Editors Herald:—I will try to write a few lines in regard to Brother Briggs' writings in the Herald. I can bear my testimony to the vision he saw. I was in Nauvoo in 1846 and saw and felt in reality the very thing he described, and I thank God he helped me out of the mist, and I can see the true light of the gospel. May the Lord bless all the honest in heart, is my prayer.

ANN M. GOODWIN.

GUY, Oklahoma, Jan. 11.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I went by rail to Geary, sixty-five miles southeast.
Preached a week on the street there, having good interest. I was assisted by Bro. James Yates, a priest. From there to the reunion near Hennessey, in August, and preached on the way home.

September 1 I began a debate twenty-five miles southeast with a Christian preacher, to continue a week, but the second evening he quit. The large schoolhouse at Butte was well filled first night; crowded the second. Much interest was manifested. I scattered numerous tracts and sold one Book of Mormon. Have over a dozen copies of the Voice of Warning, which I loan, giving me great Found a young Christian assistance. preacher twelve miles southeast. After much preaching and giving out tracts and Voice of Warning, I got him to advocating the truth, assisting me very much. This caused private houses to be opened for preaching.

December 24, he and family (wife and three children) and two parts of other families, came to our home, and he was baptized; much of God's Spirit was present in confirmation meeting on Christmas day. Others who came with him expressed a desire to be baptized soon. He will be ordained soon if faithful, as stated in confirmation, and will be a great help, as he is a good reasoner. We hope that a branch will be raised up in his neighborhood,

For the pebble has dropped in the water, And the waves circle round with the shock.

I began a series of discourses on the latter-day dispensation at a brother's house near home, our schoolhouse being three miles away, and the roads bad. I got a neighbor who had ridiculed our faith, having attended some few meetings, to attend one night; next day he came to see if I would not come and preach in his house, as he wanted to get his kinsmen to hear. I went there, and soon he was teaching his neighbors baptism and laying on of hands, and wanted me to preach a week on the Book of Mormon.

Having received notice that an Advent preacher was ready to begin a debate January 1, I got Bro. James Yates (priest) and Bro. Squires (teacher) to go to this neighborhood and preach, and I went near twenty miles on New Year's Day to meet the Advent minister. My wife stopped at Bro. Moore's, four miles this side, who had recently come from Missouri, buying a fine farm for $1,000. After much trouble in cutting ice, with the help of Bro. Moore and other neighbors, I got over the river and to the Advent's house by dark. The preacher had failed to come, so after talking until near midnight I retired. Up early, and after preaching until ten o'clock, I started four miles north to visit one interested in my former preaching there. Went a mile, found a Baptist brother working by the roadside. Preached to him until noon. This brother's name is Collison, and he is reading the Millennial Dawn; he is an intelligent and earnest man, of whom I have great hopes. Urged me to stop with him, and to visit him. Left him tracts and hurried on. Will take him Voice of Warning when I return there. Went a mile further, where two Adventist families lived. Was received very kindly, and got away from them at sundown. Got back to Bro. Moore's, unable to talk or sit up. Took my wife next morning early to the Adventist's house to help me talk. Next morning the woman was ready for baptism, but the man still halted, and she is waiting for him. Have hopes of them. Got home, and have attended meeting at the neighbors, Brn. Yates and Scott preaching. I preached there also, and think there is good prospect for the man and his wife. Another neighbor says he is fully convinced and will be baptized soon. The Baptist brethren are terribly stirred up five miles east, where several of us have been preaching. Sent a challenge to get our best man, they wanted no scrub, and debate them. They have sent for Bro. Tony, I hear, who once belonged to the Saints, to advocate their cause. The brethren have requested me to represent them. We want to go tomorrow to Bro. Hughes' settlement, the one lately baptized twelve miles east. Have another letter from Adventist minister, notifying me to be ready to begin debate January 24, in the evening, three miles north of Richmond. I to affirm the first day sabbath; he the seventh day. King James' Bible the only evidence allowed. He will debate no other way.

As ever your colaborer in the gospel,
D. S. CRAWLEY.

CENTRAL CITY, Mo., Jan. 10.

Dear Herald:—Bro. Baker and I are holding protracted meetings here with good interest. A Methodist minister preached one night on his regular appointment, his subject being, The kingdom. He said it was a spiritual building, and told the people to seek it, but failed to tell them how. He did not talk long, however. Bro. Baker asked the people if they would remain after the minister dismissed; he would like to talk a short time. The minister told him to go ahead, which he did, and ably showed the kingdom of Christ to be a literal institution. The brother had no more to say.

The people here are much interested and we think good will be done. My prayer is for the welfare of Zion. Let us strive to push this great work along and try to come up higher!

Your unworthy servant,

S. D. LONE.

OXFORD, Washington.

Editors Herald:—My wife and I are the only Saints here. A good elder would stand a good chance here, if he is not afraid of the woods. There are several towns here that have never heard a Latter Day Saint elder preach: Montesano, Aberdeen, Hoquiam, and Humptulips. It seems as though these places are dodged. There are surely some who would accept the gospel if they had a chance.

We have Sunday school and meetings every Sunday, composed of Saints, Baptists, Methodists, Salvations, and Christians.

We want to help to purchase the land of Zion. PROCTOR BROWN.

FAIRBURY, Neb., Jan. 14.

Dear Herald Readers:- I left Sioux City, Iowa, on the fourth of January for Omaha, Nebraska, and stopped over Sunday, the sixth, to worship with the Saints of that place. I was starved for such a meeting as we had, for I had been to but two meetings with those of like precious faith for six months. First we had an excellent Sunday school, then sacrament meeting. And what a feast to all, and especially to me! The very words of cheer and encouragement that I needed and was longing for were given. How grand and glorious to serve a divine Father that knows all about our struggles; yes, knows us altogether, and knows that past blessings do not suffice for our present needs! How my very being was filled with the Spirit while the promised blessings were being repeated to me that had been given through others, almost word for word. May God help us all to be wise virgins, keeping not only oil in our vessels but keep them trimmed and burning.

I also enjoyed a good visit with Sr. Isaac Sylvester, with whom I stayed. Also met Srs Jones, Josephine Wood, and Sr. Hollenbeck and her dear old mother, all of whom I shall not forget for the words of comfort and cheer received from them.

Your sister in the gospel covenant,

MRS. M. A. CHRISTY.

MANCHESTER, Texas, Jan. 15.

Editors Herald:—We have counted another milepost of time! Another year with all of its sorrows and joys has passed. What we have done has gone on the pages of time so far as last year is concerned. Can we all say "well done"? Saints, let us live each year so that the record will be pure and white. As each year passes there is one happy thought to me, and that is, I am one year nearer to the glorious day when my Savior will come to give me a crown of righteousness if I will continue faithful.

I have done all I could to build up the kingdom of God on earth. I have tried to treat my fellowman aright. I do not want to say anything about my fellowman that I would not like to have him say about me. I do not want to leave a scar on anyone's heart. O, brothers, we want to be able in the great judgment day to stand before God and proclaim that we have done all we could to make men and women pure, grand, and good. We will have to give account of every idle word spoken.

The gospel is progressing some in this country, quite a demand for preaching. I cannot fill more than half the calls I have, but I am thankful to the Lord that he has greatly blessed me with the spirit of my calling. I never preached in a vicinity last year but what the people were interested, and I have had the pleasure of leading quite a number of good men and women into the waters of baptism. If all the people in northeastern Texas who believe the gospel, would be baptized, hundreds would come into the church this year.

Bro. J. D. Erwin and wife paid us a visit in December. They remained over holidays and the brother did some good gospel work. I have just returned from a forty mile trip east with Bro. J. D., where we labored for the Master's cause. May God bless him and wife to do a great work.

The Saints at Douglass and vicinity are trying to build a church. It is to be twenty-six by forty-eight feet. May God bless them in their efforts.

We have some noble Saints in this country who are striving to be ready when their Savior comes. May God bless his work this year.

Your brother,

E. A. ERWIN.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Jan. 17.

Editors Herald:—I commenced meeting here the tenth, and spoke each evening, and twice on Sunday in the Christian church, the use of which was granted Bro. C. P. Faul for us to speak in for at least four weeks. Bro. Charley furnishes fire and light. To advertise the meetings, after he got consent of the house, he would go to a house and ask, "Can you tell me where the key to the church is?" "Why, the church isn't locked." And so he would strike out for another place, and so on until the news was well circulated that J. C. Foss was to hold a series of meetings in the Christian church.

So far I have preached eight times, to very interesting congregations. One man at the close of the sermon I preached on church organization thought I unchristianized the world, and so he told me he'd not come again. I told him it was his privilege to stay away if he chose to. But I could not see from the Bible standpoint how a person could be a Christian and not obey the gospel of Christ.

A minister asked me to raise the dead and then he could believe. I called for a man to cut the preacher's head off and I would stick it on. But the preacher said no! He wouldn't consent to anything of the kind, so I could not convince him that I had the gospel. Poor fellow, he got out of the house, after we had quite a discussion on his so-called call and claims to preach and baptize, I told him he could not baptize me, for he himself had not as yet been baptized into the kingdom of God, hence he had no right to baptize others.

My little boy preacher, Swen Swenson, came in last night from Cameron, and will preach tonight, and thereby rest me a little, for I've had a cold for a month and I find myself quite hoarse.

I have had the best of liberty in addressing the people at this place. A good Baptist man told me he was filling himself full.

I called on Sister Caroline Eller, who cannot get out to the meetings. She belonged to the old church; her name then was Pitt. She lived in the Prophet's family so she says, and knows all the Smith boys, "and they were good men, too," she said. I said: "Mother, as you lived in the Prophet's family, will you please tell me if you know of Joseph Smith preaching or practicing polygamy." She answered very quickly: "No, Bro. Foss, the prophet was a very fine man." But she added: "After Joseph was shot.

they taught it in public, and things went on in a very much different way than it did when Joseph led the church."

We are having fine weather to hold meetings. This is the place where Bro. T. W. Chatburn was prevented from preaching in the church; but the Saints have so lived that they are finding grace and favor in the eyes of the people. Come on, T. W., and help us.

Yours very truly, J. C. Foss.

NEVADA, Mo., Jan. 19.

Dear Herald:—I have much pleasure in reading the news from different parts of the field, and as I am pushing the work here quite successfully, maybe a word from here will be alright. This is an excellent field for labor and but few laborers constantly at work. At Rich Hill, where I stopped two days, we have quite a large branch, presided over very ably by Elder F. M. Sharrock. The branch is composed largely of such Saints as cannot easily be moved by any opposition from any source, and of course they are getting along well. The officers all are trying to learn their duty and magnify their calling.

From there I went to Schell City, by request of missionary in charge. Found a few good sheep, bleating for a shepherd to come and feed them. Sister J. R. Helm we found very sick. We administered, and God was good to her and made the administration effectual. We preached six times and good was accomplished. We made our home with Mr. J. R. Helm. Though not a member, yet he rejoices in the truth, and we felt that it would not be long until he will not only be in the fold but also a useful instrument in the hands of God to assist in building up the kingdom of God. We were also favorably impressed with others who are very near the kingdom. While there we were called to Harwood to administer to a lonely sister, Lina Gee. She was very poorly. May God comfort her.

We gave the parting hand to the Saints and friends at Schell City very reluctantly. We had learned to love each other. Arrangements had been perfected to hold a protracted meeting at Veve. We passed through Walker, and changed cars there and stayed all night and preached for the Saints in their commodious hall. Had large and very attentive congregation. Could not get away without promising to return when done at Veve. We were made sad and glad while there.

Veve is not a town but a farming country, and it happened that the roads (according to our judgment) were so muddy that they were impassable, and the nights dark; but to our great surprise our congregations came from far and near, both old and young, and best of all, God by his Spirit came also, and love and joy reigned supreme. The Saints were built up and many outsiders were brought nearer to God's kingdom; we have there a wise and faithful man in charge, Elder Lowe. Many pressing invitations for us to return, which we accepted and promised to do when time would permit. Our temporal condition was not forgotten by them. There are some ten or fifteen young men and women there who no doubt will soon unite with us.

From there we returned to Walker, as per arrangement. Found everything in readiness: preached three nights, some almost persuaded, then made a trip into the country. Bro. Silvers had come, and he went with me. We rode in an open buggy, and it being cold I became unfit for preaching, so left him to fill the two more appointments I had there. Bro. Leaper, who is in charge and a faithful man, thought it best for me to go home. I came here yesterday, and feel that with good care I may get over my trouble in a few days. I have some very pressing appointments which I would very much dislike to miss. I will try to preach here tomorrow morning and evening, and I pray God to relieve me of what I think is the grip.

Yours in bonds,

F. C. WARNKY.

FARNAM, Neb., Jan. 17.

Saints' Herald:—How welcome are your visits here! You so often tell us things which we have been wanting to know! How often some little word is more valuable than the writer had expected it to be! When I first heard this gospel, and was satisfied it was true, I thought it grand, but thought I was not good enough to unite with such a people—I would wait till I was more perfect. Then I read where a brother said if he had waited to come into the church perfect, he should never have come at all.

The Saints here seem united and satisfied. I think them a grand people. Brn. Johnson and Keller, of Eustis, come and preach for us occasionally, which we enjoy very much. Bro. Payne, our missionary, comes sometimes. We think he is doing a good work, as he travels with team, which enables him to visit many places which he could not if he traveled by train, and the people are mostly poor in this field.

We were visited by drouth, chintz bugs, and grasshoppers last year, but are hoping for a change. There are some here who I know think we are right but cannot bear being classed with us. I am sorry for those who cannot take their own part. I really think some are ignorant in regard to the church, and some are willingly so, I think.

Our Sunday school Christmas entertainment was a grand success.

I have great reasons to believe God is yet with his people and blesses them as in time past, according to their faith and works. I am always sorry for the isolated who cannot have the company of Saints. We ask the prayers of all Saints, that we may overcome and be with the redeemed when they return and come to Zion. Your sister.

MRS. MINERVA JOHNSON.

MIAMI, Indian Ty., Jan. 18.

Dear Herald:—In the past two months I have been laboring in Indian Territory. I find a very ripe field. We have had some of the most wonderful meetings I ever held. I have had unusually large crowds to talk to and many interested listeners to listen to what the preacher has to say. The Spirit has backed up every sermon to a marked degree. We are now holding forth in the opera building, to large crowds. There is a fine interest. Several very much interested. Yesterday by request of Professor Brewer, of the public schools, I called on him and had a nice visit with him, talking on the restored gospel. He had heard me preach two sermons on the future state of man that opened his eyes to the justice of God. He told me he was preparing himself to lecture on infidelity.

The churches have fought us hard here, closed all their houses against us; but the backbone of prejudice is broken now. Bro. Peck has built a church here, now all done but plastering, but will cost, when completed, about five hundred dollars,—the first church in Indian Territory. The Spring River district has three new churches, being built this winter.

Last week the churches held union prayer meetings! O how devoted they get when Latter Day Saint elders come and commence meetings. This is one time they failed to keep the people away.

The Spirit of God is working with the people, and the other power begins to work. There are some flying reports about a challenge for debate. I have not seen it yet.

Yours in the conflict,

F. C. KECK.

TALLYHO, W. Va., Jan. 19.

Editors Herald:—Eider Goodrich was here and preached several sermons, some at my house, some at Tallyho schoolhouse, and some at Bro. Balser Lutz's house. Since he left the people are making inquiry when he will be back. They were interested in his sermons. I think if he could come again he might save many souls. Many would like to have him return. Your sister, MRS. SUSAN PARVIS.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"There is never a life of perfect rest,
And not every cloud has a silver crest;
But there is a power, unseen and true,
That out of the struggle is leading you.
In patience and faith to the Father cling,
For you are the subject and God is King,"

READING FOR DAUGHTERS OF ZION.
(Prepared for February meetings.)
ENVIRONMENT.

This subject opens out so broadly before us that it is with many a misgiving we essay the task of entering upon it. But because of its broadness we are the more impressed with its importance, and for this reason we undertake it. And just here allow us a few direct personal words with our local organizations. During the past month we have been encouraged by you as never before in the history of our organization. Letters and papers have come to us showing most conclusively that at last, after a long period of waiting, we are in direct personal touch with you. You perhaps may not understand all which this means of encouragement to us, but we believe you are fully alive to what it means to each one of you.

It is not by numbers, neither by force of intellect, that we are destined to see the cause we have espoused prevail; but by prayer and faithfulness-by humility of spirit and diligence in keeping the commandments of God. We are firm believers in the Book of Mormon. Let us consider briefly the history of the two thousand young men, descendants of the Lamanites who had been converted under the preaching of Ammon and his brethren. Their fathers had sworn never, not even to defend their own or the lives of their wives or children, would they take up arms or shed blood. But these young men were their sons and had not taken this oath. The Nephites were sorely distressed by the Lamanites, who were taking their cities and murdering their women and children. In this time of distress these two thousand young men armed themselves and went forth to battle in defense of their liberty and homes, and by their valor and the wonderful manner in which God preserved them, they strengthened the Nephites so greatly that they prevailed over their enemies, the Lamanites, and retook their cities from them.

"And they were all young men, and they were exceeding valiant for courage, and also for strength and activity; but behold, this was not all: they were men who were true at all times in whatsoever thing they were entrusted; yea they were men of truth and soberness, for they had been taught to keep the commandments of God, and to walk uprightly before him."—Alma 24:56

"Now they never had fought, yet they did not fear death: and they did think more upon the liberty of their fathers, than they did upon their lives; yea, they had been taught by their mothers, that if they did not doubt, that God would deliver them. And they rehearsed unto me the words of their mothers, saying we do not doubt our mothers knew it.—Alma 26:52,53.

Mothers, what an object lesson is here placed before us. These young men were warriors by inheritance. For this reason it is not wonderful that the use of arms and physical courage was natural to them. These they inherited. Not so however with faith and obedience. They came of a rebellious and disobedient race, but (from their very infancy doubtless) they had been taught to keep the commandments of God and to walk uprightly before him, and we are led to infer that this teaching came principally from their mothers. In addition to this they had been taught to exercise faith in God.

Let the home be founded according to the law of God, and in the home let supreme affection for God and for each other exist. To this let the law of obedience to all rightful authority be enforced, and little will be found lacking to make the environment of the child born into that home perfect. It is the fundamental principles which need most to engage our attention. If these are adhered to, all others will adjust themselves around these as the secondary planets around the primary. It is because of our neglect of these that all our failures come. Because of this neglect that the world is today in the awful condition in which we see it.

One thought let every parent take home to his or her heart. It is this: You are responsible to God for teaching your child to keep his commandments and walk uprightly before him. No amount of reasoning, no sophistry can change this appointment of his. You may justifiably make use of every help the world and the church offer you to the furtherance of this purpose, but no matter how many the helps, you stand as the principal, the most important, and comparatively speaking the only responsible party. The Church, the Sabbath School, the Religio, are aids much to be desired and appreciated; but compared with yours, their responsibility is small indeed. Now it is possible for one to understand and feel the full measure of his or her responsibility, and yet be in doubt or even to a great extent in ignorance of the best way of meeting that responsibility. Our first resource in a case like this is God: "If any lack wisdom, let him ask of God." Our second is found: "In a multitude of counsel there is safety." The course which today will secure a ready obedience, perhaps, will fail tomorrow in producing the same result. If this be so, other legitimate means must be employed, for obedient to all just authority your child must be or he is walking in the highway to disgrace and ruin.

Obedience, Faith, and Industry seem to us virtues which include all others, and the thought comes, Can we better utilize the time between this and our coming General Conference than in discussing these environments of childhood? Let us bear in mind that the parent who would teach his child obedience must himself be an example of obedience. How much this thought embraces. "Love one another:" "bear ve one another's burdens;" be kindly affectioned one towards another:" and we might go on adding commandment after commandment unto which the Christian is expected to yield obedience. We deem these sufficient, however, for our object; which is to show the vast scope of the word obedient to the soldier enlisted for life in the Lord's army. Now taking this subject of "obedience" as one of the absolutely essential environments of childhood, will it not be a good plan for our local presidents to appoint different members to prepare papers upon its different phases, -such as "The necessity of obedience," "The character of obedience," "The scope of obedience," "The best means of obtaining obedience," etc., etc.? Give the entire time of each session to the reading and discussion of these papers, after which they should be sent to us for the purpose of preparing a symposium. Then take up "faith" in the same manner for the next meeting, and "Habits of industry" for the following one.

Should our local presidents or Advisory Board have any objection to this plan, or have a better one to propose, we will be pleased to hear from all or any of them. Let it be distinctly understood that these questions are being discussed as the necessary environments of the child who is to be brought up as the Lord has required his people to bring up their children. If objections are not made to this plan, we will take for granted that it meets your approval, and govern ourselves accordingly. We acknowledge receipt of excellent papers on hygiene and the marriage covenant, which will appear at a later date.

EUSTIS, Nebraska.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—It has been sometime since I have written to you; not because I have no interest in the work you are doing, but because I am not qualified for such work. Still I feel that I should do what little I can, as that is all the Lord asks of us. I have just finished reading "Pattie" to the children, and we were deeply interested in her, and I feel it would be a great pleasure to talk with her. Oh, how great were her trials, and how great her blessings! I feel at times as though my trials are very hard, but in reading the life of Pattie, I can see my blessings are great.

I have six children living, and if I can guide them in the ways of truth, I shall feel happy. May God bless every effort that is being made to place good reading before the children. I desire the prayers of God's people that I may be worthy of a home in Zion. Ever praying that the gospel may soon be preached to all nations, I remain your sister in the one faith,

E. A. PAYNE.

IF WE KNEW.

Could we but draw the curtains
That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it better, *
Purer than we judge we should;
We should love each other better
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the good and bad within,
Often we should love the sinner
All the while we loathe the sin;
Could we know the powers working
To o'erthrow integrity,
We should judge each other's errors
With more patient charity.

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain;—
Would the grim, external roughness
Seem, I wonder, just the same?
Should we help, where now we hinder,
Should we pity where we blame?

Ah, we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force;
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source.
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grain of good—
Oh, we'd love each other better
If we only understood.—Sel.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Julia Schnabel, of Brush Lake, Dakota, asks the faith and prayers of the Prayer Union in her behalf, that if it be the Lord's will she may be restored to health.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

RETROSPECTIVE AND PROSPECTIVE.

We are now fairly started upon the work of a new quarter, a new year, and last but not least, upon a new century. What has been the degree of our success in the year or years just passed? Has it been all that we would have liked? Have we done as well as we could? Or can we now look back and see where we could have done much more and better had we but done so? Of course, we can all see wherein we have made mistakes, and not from any neglect upon our parts. We can see where we could have accomplished much had we known what the outcome of certain things would be. Such mistakes are to be regretted, but they do not bring the remorse that does and should come to every one who neglects a known duty. No one with the true love of the work of God in his heart can look upon the neglected duties of the past and not feel deeply moved thereby. Nor can he fail to profit by reflecting upon these things.

Of little things is the whole of a successful life made up. He who passes by opportunity to do a minor but important thing for a greater, will usually find himself unfitted for the greater thing when the opportunity for doing it is presented. The foreman in a workshop must be able to operate any and all the different machines or lines of work under his direction, or he is not a competent and valuable foreman. The manager of a business concern must be familiar with the details of every department of business under his charge, and able to work in any of them, or he is not competent to judge of the amount or quality of work done therein. And the degree of success of the concern will, in a large degree, be measured by the degree of competency of the manager. All these things may be observed by anyone who will look around him.

Of little things, yes very little things, is the whole of a successful Sunday school made up. And the school in which the details are neglected, is the one which will fail to a greater or less degree to accomplish the end for which it is conducted. It will become uninteresting and unprofitable just to the degree that the little things are neglected.

The supplies are not ordered in time, and there is a lesson or two missed, and a general feeling of something lacking is felt. The books are left in the seats, or perhaps on the floor, from Sunday to Sunday, and a feeling that no one has much interest in the work is the result. The house is found locked, or the fire not built at the hour for services, and the people are disgusted and wait the next time till they are sure that things will be ready, -a tardy school as a result. The superintendent or some teacher comes unprepared, the scholars follow the example. The chorister does not have his songs selected and has to take some worn-out songs on the spur of the instant, and the music becomes a drag instead of the soul-inspiring influence that it should be. There is no account kept of the library books. and they are soon scattered and worn out, and very little attention ever paid to them. The pastor comes in when the school is about out, and shows his watch to the superintendent, and a chill is thrown over the whole work, school, superintendent and all. And instead of supporting the spirituality of the school as he should, he makes them feel that they are only in the way. No special days are observed, and the children have to go to the world for their amusements. Some of the officers or teachers miss a day now and then, because they are "so" tired or sick, and the scholars, true to human nature, follow example, and soon the school is dismissed "because of cold weather."

These are true conditions, every one of which we have seen somewhere. But they are not really pleasant to think about. However, it is necessary to meet the unpleasant things at times to remove them. It is well for us to examine and see if some one of these defects is not working in our own school. You have read the list, but read it again. Mark each one that fits your school and profit by the hint.

Then let us look upon the sunny side for awhile. Let us find the school (and we have them, many of them) whose officers and teachers are punctual, prayerful, studious. and have the interest of the school at heart, and work as a unit to make it what it should be; whose librarian has the books in perfect order and distributes them judiciously; whose janitor keeps the room neat and tidy, and always ready; whose chorister makes the song service a real love feast; where the pastor takes part in the school as in every other service of the church, and says a happy "Amen" to every effort for good; a school that observes the special days, makes the children feel that there is some real joy connected with this work of salvation, interests the people of the world, and draws them into the work; and, last but by no means least, the school that teaches the true Christ in its every service, and inspires the children with a desire to take upon them his name; yes, let us find such a school, and then thank God for the good work he is enabling his humble servants to do.

The year just closed has been a profitable one to the Sunday school work. We have a noble band of both young and old people who have found that it lies within their power to do a splendid work, and they are earnestly trying to do that work. And that God is blessing them in their humble efforts is evidenced by the change that we can see coming over the generation of today. Compare their knowledge, their likes and their dislikes, with those of the children of a generation ago, and you will see what is indeed gratifying. The editor can well remember (and he is yet scarcely a middle-aged man) when the boy or girl that was a church member, or the young man that ever so much as thought of going into the ministry was hard to find. In one branch, a generation ago, but three out of a dozen or more young men and boys ever became interested in the work. A year ago the superintendent in the school, in the same branch, said there was not a child of parents living in the branch that was of proper age that did not belong to the church. These children have made the start in the way and at the time that God designed they should. Before the powers of the evil one have been brought to bear too heavily upon them, they have been strengthened and fortified for such an event. God saw the wisdom in this, and commanded parents to teach their children, and to influence them to come to Christ while they were yet very young. This the Sunday school is helping the parents to do. We hope and fully expect to see, if we are spared long enough, this army of little folks "carrying the standard bravely," fighting the battles even better than we are fighting them now, taking up the work where we in our declining years have laid it down, and pushing it on to glory. The children of today will be the church of tomorrow.

The General Sunday School Association closes the century with almost one decade of its history complete. It has had some obstacles to overcome, some difficult problems to solve. The evil one has laid some snares to try to interrupt the progress of truth, and has not always failed. But despite the fact that it started with numbers small and without the approval of many of the Saints, and that it has met with some very difficult problems, the solution of which was not easily or quickly accomplished, it has passed all these critical periods in good condition, and is now prepared to make a steady, permanent, and desirable growth. It has won the hearty support of all live, earnest supporters of the work, and is harnessing them into service either as teachers or officers, and giving them opportunity to spend their strength in the service of the Lord. And before us at the present time is a series of lessons based upon the teachings of our blessed Savior. It now remains for us to try to teach as he taught, in plainness to plain people, the simple facts concerning the kingdom he had come to establish.

What will the next ten years bring about for the Association and the work?

THOUGHTS FOR TEACHERS. THE LAST THOUGHT.

The last thought before you dismiss school is often the one that will linger longest in the minds of the scholars. Save for this point in the exercises your best thought. Put it in your best words. Tell it with your best manner. Illustrate it with your richest and clearest simile. Part with it at the end of your day's effort with your most fervent prayer for the Spirit's guidance—guidance for you in the saying and for the thought in its goings.—Mississippi Sunday School Worker.

BLACKBOARD AND OBJECT LESSON.

The blackboard and object lessons that were advertised in the Saints' Herald and Zion's Ensign will be ready for mailing by February 1. There are twenty designs in all, and a charge of fifty cents is made for them, to defray the expense of the material used and getting them made and mailed.

Those who have sent me their orders will now please send me fifty cents, and the twenty designs will be forwarded to you, postage prepaid.

I have made a number of extra copies, so that I am prepared to fill more orders than I have yet received.

Those who desire to take advantage of this opportunity will please send in their orders at once to the undersigned, at No. 258 North Troy street, Chicago, Illinois.

Thanking all who have responded, and hoping to hear from many more, I remain, your colaborer,

F. M. PITT.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Fremont district Sunday school will meet in convention at Shenandoah, Iowa, January 31, at 7:30 p.m. Special business the election of officers for the coming year and the election of delegates to the General Convention. Other important business to come up. Let every worker who is interested in the Sunday school be present.

EMMA HOUGAS, Supt.

Galland's Grove district Sunday school will convene at Deloit, Iowa, February 15, at ten a. m. Printed programs will be distributed announcing the business and topics for the Sunday school; also sessions of Religio, which meets at call of presidency. Local secretaries will please address reports to William McKim, Deloit, as district secretary is not at home. Local officers, we earnestly hope for your reports.

R. WIGHT, Supt.

F. B. SHUMATE, Sec.

The Sunday school association of Clinton district will convene at Coal Hill chapel, six miles east of Eldorado Springs, Friday, February 1, at ten a. m. Superintendents of schools will see that reports of officers, teachers, and schools are sent in.

MINA KEARNEY, Supt. WARREN MCELWAIN, Sec.

Eastern Colorado district Sunday school will convene with Denver, Colorado, branch, at ten a. m., February 15. at Twenty-second and Arapahoe streets. Please send reports to 2809 Welton street.

L. A. SCHMUTZ, Supt. J. F. CURTIS, Clerk.

Northeast Kansas will meet in convention at Netawaka, March 1, 1901, at 10:30 a.m. Let all Sunday school workers try to be present, and the officers come prepared to report, that we may have a profitable time.

HARRY THOMAS, Supt.

Sunday school convention of Nauvoo district will convene Friday, February 1, at Rock Creek, Illinois, at 10:30 a.m. All reports are requested before Thursday. Address them to 1001 Maple street, Burlington, Iowa, to the secretary.

GEO P. LAMBERT, Supt. MARJORIE WRIGHT, Sec.

All those whose eyes have been turned toward the Orient by the recent Chinese trouble will find much of interest in an illustrated article entitled "Home and Social Life of the Japanese" which will appear in the February number of the Woman's Home Companion. The author is Onoto Watanna, the clever Japanese writer, with whose stories the readers of that magazine are well acquainted.

Conference Minutes.

FAR WEST.

Conference met in St. Joseph, Missouri, December 15 and 16. I. N White and T. T. Hinderks in the chair, C. P. Faul and A. Leaverton secretaries. Bishop's agent reported; On hand last report $265 32; received since $188 25; paid out $322; on hand $131.57. Audited and found correct. Branch reports: Stewartsville 156; gain 4. German Stewartsville 79; gain 2. Wakenda 60; gain 1. St. Joseph 475; gain 6. Pleasant Grove 86. DeKalb 51. Kingston 96; gain 5. Edgerton Junction 48; gain 9. Elders T. T. Hinderks baptized 4. S. F. Cushman, D. E. Powell, J. C. baptized 4, S. F. Cushman, D. E. Powell, J. C. Foss, J. W. Roberts, M. Shaw, J. H. Snider, H. B. Taddicken, A. St. Lewis, A. W. Head baptized 6, B. J. Dice, Alma Booker baptized 1, William Lewis, M. T. Short; Priests F. T. Dobie baptized 2 C. F. Householder, B. R. Constance, J. N. York baptized 4, R. S. Parker, Robert Garlich, W. W. Smith baptized 4. Charles N. Gentry was ordained a priest and J. H. Howard a teacher. Election of officers: T. T. Hinderks president, J. S. Constance vice president, C. P. Faul and A. Leaverton secretaries. C. P. Faul was sustained as Bishop's agent. Preaching by M. T. Short, W. W. Smith, and I. N. White. Adjourned to meet at St. Joseph, March 16 Adjourned to meet at St. Joseph, March 16

ST. LOUIS.

Conference convened in St. Louis, Missouri, Conference convened in St. Louis, Missouri, January 5. Elder Arthur Allen president; J. G. Smith secretary; reports were read from Elders A. Allen, N. N. Cooke, W. O. Thomas; Priests J. Christensen, J. G. Cole, and T. J. Elliott; Teachers J. J. Billinsky and F. Wiley. Branch reports: St. Louis 452; 2 baptized, 5 received, 5 removed, 4 died. Whearso 60; 1 baptized, 1 died. Bishop's agent's report: Balance on hand September 29 $104 37; received since $233.50; total $237.87; naidout $265. balance due the church: $337 87; paid out $265; balance due the church; December 31 $72 87. Bishop's agent's annual report: Balance on hand December 31, 1899 $404 82; received since $668 05; total$1,072 87; paid out $1,000; balance due the church, December 31, 1900 $72 87. John G. Smith, agent. Reports audited and found correct. Election of officers to serve for a term of six months: Arthur Allen, district president; Henry Roberts, vice president; John G. Smith, secretary; Arthur Allen, treasurer. A petition was received from twenty-nine members of Cheltenham mission, asking that they be reorganized as a branch. On motion and vote it was carried unanimously that their request be granted. Sunday, January 6, preaching morning and evening by Eider o, preacting morning and evening by Edder Arthur Allen. Sacrament, prayer, and testimony meeting in the afternoon. Adjourned to meet in St. Louis, Missouri, on Saturday evening, March 23, at seven o'clock.

SPRING RIVER.

Conference was held in Saints' church, Blendsville, Missouri, October 5 to 7. E. A. Davis in the chair, W. S. Macrae assistant secretary. Ministry reporting by letter: Of the Seventy E. A. Davis and F. C. Keck; Elders R. H. Davis, J. L. Lancaster, C. K. Ryan, S. D. Love baptized 8, T. S. Hayton baptized 3, J. T. Riley, Noah Karahoo, W. H. Pruit baptized 4, and J. W. Thorpe; Priests H. J. Thurman, D. S. Palmer, and W. E. Haden baptized 5; Teachers M. S. Frick and George M. Rhonemus. Oral reports: E. Haden baptized 5; Teachers M. S. Frick and George M. Rhonemus. Oral reports: Elders W. S. Taylor, J. M. Richards, W. S. Doty, S. W. Simmons, J. A. Graves, E. E. Bradley, Z. Decker, and W. S. Macrae; Teachers A. P. Free, J. L. Garner, and L. H. McCall. Branch reports: Lamanite (first report) 19. Fairland, 46. Columbus, 60; baptized 3. Maysville, 82. Blendsville, 146; baptized 11. Weir City, 98; baptized 5. Traverse, 49; baptized 4. Webb City, 174. District treasurer's audited report showed balance on hand $45 68. It was ordered that balance on hand $45 08. It was ordered that next district reunion be held at Berry's Ferry, Indian Territory, beginning Friday before full moon in August, 1901; and J. T. Riley, Noah Karahoo, and W. B. Hillen were appointed a committee of arrangements; and W. S. Magazzo, O. P. Sutherland and M. S. W. S. Macrae, O. P. Sutherland, and M. S. Frick a committee to provide for a cooperative boarding house. Petition of Blendsville branch granted and Bro. Max Steffins ordained a deacon. As provided for by Far West district, Priest W. E. Haden (mis-sionary) was ordained an elder. The Bishop's agent's audited report showed the sum of $56 25 due him. The blank forms adopted by last General Conference for missionary reports were adopted for ministry reports to Spring River district conferences, and the secretary authorized to procure necessary supply. The district treasurer was authorized to pay for a tent lost at last reunion, and also to pay expense for repairing the big tent. Apostle I. N. White arrived in time to preach the closing sermon of conference. Adjourned to Webb City, Missouri, on Friday before full moon in March, 1901. T. S. Hayton secretary of district.

Miscellaneous Department.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The past orders for the third volume of Church History are being filled as rapidly as possible, and when these are completed the book will be advertised for sale. Persons willing to wait may forward their orders.

WANTED.

A practical binder. A brother preferred. JOHN SMITH, Mgr.

COMMITTEE ON ARCHÆOLOGY.

The committee on American Archæology hereby request aid from all who may have matter pertaining to the subject. Will the students of Zion's Religio-Literary send in whatever they may have accumulated during the past years of study they have given the Book of Mormon? Anything touching geog-raphy, location of lands or cities, in fact anything that may be helpful towards perfecting the work of the committee.

Send to No. 5 Montgomery avenue, Somerville, Massachusetts.

On behalf of the committee, F. M. SHEEHY.

RELIGIO NOTICES.

Des Moines district Religio association will meet in convention in Des Moines at the Saints' chapel, corner of Sixteenth and Des Moines streets, February 7, at 2:30 p.m. Let the Religio workers be on hand, and all who are interested in this department of church work; and those who are not interested, come and get interested. Please send reports of the locals to secretary one week prior to convention. Address: Rhode Iowa, box 187. MATTIE HUGHES, Sec. Rhodes, Iowa, box 187.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL PASSENGER ASSO-CIATION.

Notice is hereby given to the general ministry and all concerned that the newly organized Trans-Continental Passenger Association has been furnished a copy of the minutes of the late General Conference containing lists of all missionaries and church officials laboring under general appointment, together with full instructions tending to facilitate prompt and regular issuance of clergy credentials,

All laboring under general appointment have been indorsed. Lists of names, addresses, and territory of missionaries in charge, have also been furnished.

The same general method of issuing permits in operation with other associations has been provided for, under which local ministers will be referred to their respective missionaries in charge for indorsement.

"The Trans-Continental Clergy Certificate rne Trans-Continental Ciergy Certificate is good only upon roads parties thereto, named below, for tickets between points west of and including Cheyenne, Wyoming; Colorado common points; Trinidad, Colorado; Albuquerque, New Mexico, and El Paso, Texas. . . . Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe; Chiange Book Island, and Pasifica Colorado. Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Colorado and Southern; Colorado Midland; Denver and Rio Grande; Florence and Cripple Creek; Midland Terminal; Pecos System; Rio Grande Southern; Rio Grande Western; Santa Fe Pacific; Santa Fe, Prescott, and Phœnix; San Francisco and San Joaquin Valley; Silverton Railroad; Silverton Northern; Southern California; Southern Pacific (Pacific System); Union Pacific." Applications, remittances, etc., should be addressed to James Charlton, chairman, 503 Ernest and Cranmer building, Denver, Colorado. Application blanks may be obtained from local agents, or from Chairman Charlton. R. S. SALYARDS, LAMONI, Iowa, Jan 14.

PASTORAL.

To Whom it May Concern: - Notice is hereby given that Bro I. P. Baggerly having been released from the Southwestern mission and recommended to me by Bro. H. O. Smith, in charge of that mission, is hereby appointed to labor in the Decatur district for the ensuing portion of the conference year. J. W. Wight, Missionary in Charge.

Church Secretary.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of Northern California district will be held in Sacramento, March 8, 9, and 10. Will presidents of branches send reports to E. S. Chase, Irvington. We hope to enjoy the presence of Pres. A. H. Smith, Bishop G. H. Hilliard, and Elder J. F. Burforce of the district. Come and bring the Spirit of the Lord with you.

F. B. BLAIR, Pres.

Conference of Eastern Iowa district will meet at Fulton, February 23, at ten a. m. Monday there will be a priesthood meeting. Bring or send reports so we can have a full report. Trains will be met on Friday at Maquoketa. If any come on any other day, notify J. B. Heide, Fulton, Iowa. C. E. HAND, Pres.

Philadelphia district will convene February 2 and 3 at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. District officers will be elected for ensuing term. Local officers will please bring or send their reports, that we may know who are working. E. B. HULL, Sec.

Texas Central district conference will meet with Philadelphia branch, February 23 and 24, at ten, o'clock. Sunday school association will meet at same place the 22d at ten o'clock. Let there be a full delegation present. We expect our missionary in charge to meet with us. We want to have a profitable time.
There will be conveyances at Marlin and Reagan on the Texas Central railroad to the branch. Write Bro. W. G. Sikes at Reagan, and Bro. F. B. Spicer, Jun., at Harlansville, Texas. E. W. Nunley, Pres.

The Saints' Herald.

(Established 1860.)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price. $1 50 per year.
Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."

"Marriage, birth, and death notices: Marriages, $1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business mana-

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Engine also

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

MARRIED.

HALL - EVANS - At the home of the bride's parents, near Bevier, Missouri, on the eve of January 1, 1901, Gilbert Hall and

Sister Mary A. Evans. Also, RAU-EVANS.—At the home of the bride's parents, near Bevier, Missouri, on the eve of January 9, 1901, Patrick Rau to Sr. Lizzie Evans, Eider F. T. Mussell officiating at both weddings. Both brides are accomplished and well loved young ladies. The grooms are prosperous and energetic. It is truly hoped that they may have knowledge of the sweets of life, but the bitter may they never RODGER.—Janie Lenora Rodger is dead. She ended this life at the home of her parents, Glaud H. and Nancy Rodger, at El Toro, California, after three years of illness. Nora was born at Blythedale, Missouri, June 13, 1886, and while yet in childhood was 13, 1886, and while yet in childhood was blessed by Elder H. A. Stebbins. She died December 21, 1900. The funeral was from the home, conducted by Elder D. A. Anderson.

"Go to thy rest, fair child!
Go to thy dreamless bed,
While yet so gentle, undefiled,
With blessings on thy head."

LOVELL —Near Davis City, Iowa, January 12, 1901, Nora, wife of Willard Lovell, aged 25 years, 10 months, 18 days. Husband, one child, mother, and two brothers mourn. A few days before her death she told her husband that if she lived till warm weather she would be baptized. The day before she died, at her request, was administered to, and seemed to brighten in spirit and hope. Just before her departure she asked her husband to sing and play "Jesus lover of my soul," and had him repeat it, saying, "Don't that sound good." Funeral sermon at Greenville church by Elder James McDiffit.

BROOKS.-Bro. Chauncey L. Brooks, of Arlington, Iowa, died the morning of January 14, 1901. He was 83 years of age. A loving husband, a kind parent, and a good Latter Day Saint. By his request Elder L. E. Hills preached the funeral sermon in the Christian church of Arlington, the M. E. choir furnishing the music. Text: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints."—Ps. 116:15.

SIMMONS.—Near Cameron, Missouri, January 8, 1901, Bro. Samuel Simmons, while sitting in his chair, suddenly fell over and expired. A kind husband, loving father, and faithful friend: a man of sterling worth, who was ever ready to help others, even at his own disadvantage; one whose daily life was a living epistle—who practiced the golden rule—has thus been called to another sphere. Wife, two daughters, one son, and other relatives are left to mourn. Deceased was 62 years, 3 months, and 12 days old, at time of death. Sermon by Elder Swen Swenson, assisted by Benjamin Dice.

HOLLAND.—At her home, near Clearwater, Nebraska, Sr. Ella Holland passed peacefully away on January 1, 1901. She was born in Cheshire, England, in 1837; was baptized in 1879, at Fall River, Massachusetts. She leaves a husband (John Holland), one son, and two daughters, and a host of friends to mourn her departure. She was a faithful wife, a kind and loving mother, and a true Latter Day Saint. Sermon by Elder Levi Gamet, of Inman.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY SAWS.

Were only one side actually wrong No quarrel would endure for very long.

Refusing praise is wish for double praise. Our hopes, though false, may lead us pleasant ways.

Some persons fraught with wickedness would Be far less dangerous had they no good.

Good fortune, not the evil, is the test. In love the one first cured is cured the best.

True worth consists in doing modestly What could be done so all the world might

We can forgive so long as we can love. Skill to conceal skill is all skill above.

Strive not to make conditions; better far To use the opportunities that are.

Our virtues oft are vices in disguise. For other men most easily were wise.

Our finest actions would produce less pride Could everyone the motives see, inside.

Weak persons lack the power to be sincere. Through hope we promise; but we pay through fear.

The ones who bore us we forgive-not so Those luckless people, whom we bore-ah no!

Pride would not owe, and self-love would not pay.

There's many a cure for love-none cures alway. -Edwin L. Sabin.

The Saturday Evening Post is the oldest journal in America, having appeared regularly every week for the past 173 years, except for the short period when Philadelphia was in the hands of the British Army. magazine was founded in 1728 and was edited and published by Benjamin Franklin, in whose day it was known as the Pennsylvania Gazette. In 1765 the publication passed into other hands, but its name continued until 1821 when it was changed to the Saturday Evening Post. The magazine was purchased in 1897 by the Curtis Publishing Company. It now has a paid circulation of more than 300,000 copies weekly.

The immediate publication is announced by Doubleday, Page & Co. of an anonymous but very remarkable book entitled "An Eng-lish Woman's Love Letters." These letters were written by a young English woman to her lover, and reveal a tenderness and passion, a play of humor and sportive fancy, a vivid power and a beauty of expression which raise them to the level of literature. were published a few weeks ago in London, by John Murray, where their unusual quali-ties attracted immediate attention. Great curiosity exists as to the identity of their author, but there is little doubt that she came of a distinguished family, and inherited ability of an extraordinary kind. Her letters form what might be called a complete novel. Interference of members of his family caused some estrangement with her lover, and most of the letters were not re-received by him until after her death. Nevertheless, they tell their own tale of love and hope, then of parting and pain, finally of death, for the heart of the writer broke under the weight of separation from the man she adored. "Now, I can no longer hold to-gether; but it is my body, not my love, that has failed," are the last words she penned. The writer was only twenty-one, and the preface states that no blame attached to either her or her lover for their separation, but that "they were equally the victim of circumstances." What with its tragedy of a broken heart, "An English Woman's Love Letters" promises to attract as much attention in this country as in England, particularly if the identity of the author is ever revealed.

"Sometimes plants fail to do well because they are not given air enough," writes Eben E* Rexford, in the January Ladies' Home Journal. "Plants breathe, just as human beings do, and unless they can have a sufficient amount of pure oxygen to answer the deamount of pure oxygen to answer the demands of their nature they will not grow, because they cannot grow. Make it a rule to admit pure, fresh air every pleasant day into the rooms in which your plants are growing. Very often plants fail to grow because they are small, young specimens which have been planted in large pots. Small plants are injured greatly by this treatment—indeed, they are often killed by it, because their few young, tender roots are not able to appropriate the nutriment contained in a large amount of earth, and, as a natural consequence, the tender plants are overfed. They cannot digest all the food forced upon them, and vegetable dyspepsia results. Use small pots for small plants, and shift, from time to time, to larger sizes as the old pots are filled with roots."

It is easier to preach a good sermon from the pulpit than to lead a good life in the

A most interesting article, written by Cyrus C. Adams, for the January number of The World's Work reviews what has been ac-complished in the field of exploration during the century just closed, and notes the important tasks yet left for explorers.

Mt. St. Elias has been badly shaken by an earthquake. It is said that the mountain was considerably torn up. The shock was so severe that a mass of ice, acres in extent, broke loose from the top of the mountain, and went crashing down the sides carrying everthing with it.

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Address, THE PATRIOT, Lamoni,

A postal card brings a sample copy.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898, Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162,781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All atters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

STOCK HOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eila D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

JIT-TO-BAC Q L

THREE BOXES POSITIVELY GUARANTEED to cure any form of tobacco habit or money cheerfully refunded. Sent postpaid on receipt of $1.50. U.S. stamps taken. Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY,
Peoria, Ill., U.S. A.

GOSPEL QUARTERLIES. Published by the General Sunday School Association. Designed for use in Sabbath school work. Issued quar-	afi
terly. 73. Senior Grade, per quarter Per year, in advance		08 28
74. Intermediate Grade, per quarter		05
75. Primary Grade, per quarter Per year		15 05 15
BOOK OF MORMON. Large type edition.
92. Cloth, leather backs and cor-
93. Seal grain russia, gilt edges 109. Flexible, gilt edges	2	00

NO. 415 GRAINED AMERICAN CALF. padded sides, round corners on covers, gold edges. Large quarto size, 10½x12½ inches, containing the Authorized Version Old and New Testaments; marginal references; full-page maps in colors; history of the books of the Bible; forty-eight full-page illustrations; chronological tables; photo-views of scenes in Bible lands; coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; pronouncing dictionary of scripture proper names; apocrypha; marriage certificate, family record and temperance pledge in colors; chronological index; 4,000 questions and answers: concordance: padded sides, round corners on covers, gold 4,000 questions and answers; concordance; Psaims in metre; twenty-five full-page Dors engravings; six full-page illustrations in colors, etc., etc. Price, $4.25.

SAINTS' H	YMNAL.	Words	and
music.
108. Paper	covers, ea	ch			30
Per	dozen			3	20
110. Cloth,	limn				35
Por	dozen
111. Cloth				e	50
				4
112. Full le
113. Gilt e
114. Flexib	le, leather			1	50
THE INSTR	UCTOR.	A com	non-
TIII IIVOII		A. COM	ben.
dium	of the fai	ith and	aoc-
trines	of the chu	rch by H	lder
	Griffiths.
126. Cloth					75
127. Leathe	er			1	00
128. Flexib	le			1
	-0			4	00

NO. 420 AMERICAN MOROCCO, raised panel, full gold sides, back and edges, new pronouncing parallel Bible. References. Both versions Old and New Testaments in parallel columns line for line, upon each page. Large quarto. Size, 12\frac{1}{2} mark is placed over the syllable upon which emphasis should rest. A new pronouncing dictionary of nearly 4.000 scriptural proper names; marriage certificate, family record and temperance pledge; four full-page maps in colors; twenty-five full-page Doré engravings; five full-page illustrations in colors; scripture illustrations; chronology, coins, weights, and measures of the Bible; concordance; Psalms in metre; the reviser's preface, etc. Price, $5 25.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI.

IOWA.

Solicits your Deposits and pays

4 1-2 % INTEREST. D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

Book of Mormon Maps.

Lecture size 5x8 feet on muslin for traveling ministry, $2 00. Home and office size 33x51 inches on paper, cloth back and varnished in colors. $1.50.

All maps sent by express, charges 30c. and upwards according to distance, to be paid at end of route. Send orders to

G. F. WESTON,

1-9-6t

Buchanan, Michigan.

HOMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in DeKalb county. Missouri, form miles from Amity, and five miles from Clarksdale; near line of Rock I-land railroad and switch station, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchaser. Terms reasonable. Address,

Address,

Amity, Missouri, or CHARLES P. F. VIL,

48 13t

Ciarasdale, Missouri.

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good photograph, and get 25 stamp photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 lign photo button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents each. Large 60 lign buttons 35 cents, and extra buttons from same picture 20 cents. Your photograph will be returned Send silver.

W. M. KECK. Photographer, 49-13t

DR. E. S. SWEET. DENTIST. Decoe Building,

WOODBINE,

IOWA.

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on investment.

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Iowa.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p m.

South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a.m., arrive
at Leon 11:45 a.m.

Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C. B. & Q. at Leon.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chi-cago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:01

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning

THE	TWO RECOR.	DS.	The :	Book
	of Mormon an	d the	New	Tes:
	tament. In:	spired	Tra	nsla
	tion; large	type,	in	one
	volume.
98.	. Leather back	and co	overs
. 00	0 1 .

99. Seal grain russia............ 2 50 100. Imitation morocco, gilt edges, 3 50 101. Morocco, gilt edges..... 4 00

SAINTS' HERALI

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."-B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 30, 1901.

NO. 5.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH EDITOR. FRED'R MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR. Joseph Luff D. W. Wight CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, JAN. 30, 1901.

"THE QUEEN IS DEAD. LONG LIVE THE KING."

This is the legend of the monarchy. Queen Victoria, who has for over sixty-three years ruled as the sovereign of the British Empire, is dead, aged almost eighty-two years. Her son. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, aged sixty, is her successor and is now King of England. So is the legend again extended in its significance.

It is but meet that the HERALD should note the death of Queen Victoria, as the departure from life's activities of a noble woman, wife, and mother, and a sovereign of whom the world's rulers may well speak in praise, as one who has not only had the longest reign of any of the sovereigns of England but has made the best ruler the nation ever had. Her reign has extended over the most eventful period known to the historian of modern times.

If there is anything that could reconcile the idea of monarchical rule to a republican mind it might be found in the fact of the rule of such a monarch as Victoria has been. And while we, as one of the people in whose land the people are sovereign, are not impressed with the "divine right of kings to rule," we join in the expressions of condolence and sympathy now so universally extended by all nations and peoples to the subjects of the Empire now mourning for their monarch dead; and cheerfully accord the tribute of commendation so richly due to woman, wife, mother, and Queen in the person of the "Good Queen Victoria.

It is to be hoped that the English nation will have no more cause for regret in the accession of Prince Albert to the throne and his rule as king than it has had during the long reign of the woman whom the nation now mourns; and that in the trying emergencies now facing the newly made king, he may be able and willing to exercise the wise and conciliatory foresight for which his royal queen mother has been noted.

King Albert Edward will be installed as the Defender of the Faith. and expected to be the friend of the Protestant, and yet Pope Leo XIII. sends the solemn condolence of the chief prelate of the Catholic Faith to this newly created Defender and Guardian of the Protestant Faith. The character of Pope Leo guarantees the sincerity of this message; and if his Excellency can do this, we as good citizens of the American Republic may in equal sincerity join in the message of sympathy which the President has sent his majesty, the now reigning King of England.

ANOTHER MURDERER GONE.

PETALUMA, December 7.—Robert Lomax, the man who led the Illinois raiders in 1844, when Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet, was killed, is dead. Lomax organized the raiders at a town called Warsaw and then marched to the county seat of Hancock county. Smith, with his followers, were found in the center of the town near the courthouse and a hard fight followed. Smith was killed as he was standing by a well was killed as he was standing by a well. The Mormous fled and were driven from Nauvoo. Lomax seldom talked of the affair. His body will be sent east for burial.

The only remarkable things in the above slip which is going the rounds of the press and is sent us by a brother in the far West, are that anyone who was connected with that cowardly murder in 1844, should be found willing to acknowledge it even at death; and the ignorance of the men furnishing the items. It is a matter of history that the two men Joseph and Hyrum Smith, with two companions, John Taylor and Willard Richards, were in a room in the county jail, for safety from personal violence by an agreement with Gov. Thomas Ford, then chief magistrate of Illinois, that they should be protected and be permitted a fair trial before the courts which was all that the two men asked. There was no assembly of the Mormons in the town and no fight there. The body of Joseph Smith was set up against the curb of the well in the jail yard and a volley of a few guns fired at it by the mob, as the final act of the outrage.

At the time this was being done the Governor was at Nauvoo eighteen miles from Carthage, with his aids and officers, making an address to the Mormon people who had been called together to hear him.

of that band engaged in the unlawful and unholy work, the reckoning of justice for him and his work lies with the courts on the other side.

TRITE BUT TRUE.

The Atlantic Monthly for February, 1901, contains an article under the title of "Confession of a Minister's Wife," from which we quote a few sentences tritely applicable to present conditions of religious teachers.

There are three types of ministers; conformist, who resolutely stuffs his ears against the siren of progress. He is in this transition period the only man who can be happy in the clerical profession.

The middle of the road minister. He has tasted of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, but he wants to stay comfortably in his garden of Eden. He adopts the worldly policy, "Have no opinions until you are on the safe side of the dollar question.'

The third type is the-minister of profound insight and open vision. He is loyal to his deepest convictions, and gives the truth without reservation. pouses unpopular reforms; his dress is that of men among men; he is never seen in pubor men among men; he is never seen in public places with a limp-covered Bible under his arm. His manner is unostentatious, his language simple and direct, his eloquence that of genuine purpose. Business men respect him. Men and women say to him: "I never before knew what it is to be a Christian. You have made the religious life. Christian. You have made the religious life practical and genuine." Yet, strange to say, things do not go well in the parish. Some old lady misses the traditional phraseology; the deacons fear the influence of practical teaching on the young; factional prejudices are roused; pews are given up; the salary is cut down; heresy trials threaten. At last this honest man cries out in bitterness, "With a great price obtained I this liberty!" and sometimes, in loneliness of heart, he exclaims, "My God, hast thou forsaken me?" Let the advocates of an open pulpit and an open college maugurate a bread-and-butter fund for the maintenance of untrammeled preachers and professors.

It is pertinent to ask which of these types fits our own classes, and is there in the truths of the gospel a field in which the honest man may search at will free and untrammeled.

A HAPPY trait of human nature is that which prompts its owner to look always on the bright side of life and seek for a silver lining somewhere about even the blackest cloud. Happy he whose soul ever refuses to be chilled by gloomy aspect; happy he whose natural brightness of spirit enables him always to see the smiling If Mr. Lomax was there and a leader | face of Providence through thickest mist of adversity; happy he who sees in everyone, everything, some good.

Such a one is moved by the spirit of charity,—that charity of which the Apostle Paul delighted to speak,—the animus of the true follower of the lowly and even-spirited Christ. Such are the ones who carry through life the sweetness of a gentle character. Such never become soured by the winds of adversity.

In the degree that we possess such a disposition, to that degree are we in a position to be most thoroughly purified by the fires of trial. Meekness accompanies or is a part of such a character.

Happy would humanity be if in the heart of everyone there existed the spirit of optimism so beautiful in the following lines of Whittier:—

The Night is mother of the Day,
The Winter of the Spring,
And ever upon old Decay
The greenest mosses cling.
Behind the cloud the staright lurks,
Through showers the sunbeams fall;
For God, who loveth all his works,
Has left his Hope with all.

"WHERE FROM, PLEASE?"

In another column is an article from the pen of Bro. R. Etzenhouser. under the caption of "Where from, Please?" to which we wish to call attention. Very often we receive clippings taken from some of the daily and weekly press, and there will be nothing to indicate from what paper it is taken. Often, too, the date is omitted when it would be better to have the date. As Bro. Etzenhouser has stated, in important articles and clippings that are of great interest to our people, and especially to the ministry, the name of the paper and the date of the issue should be given if it is practicable to give them. The same applies to quoting from books, especially when one is using the quotation in an argumentative way, or using it to strengthen some position taken. We have for some time desired to call the attention of the Saints to this matter, and now that the occasion presents itself to help some one else out we improve the opportunity. We wish to ask those who send us clippings to carefully note the name of the paper or periodical from which they are taken, and the date of the same. If a quotation from a book, do as Bro. Etzenhouser suggests, and give not only the author's name, but give the page, and from the title page give the edition, and the date of publication if possi-

We have on file now many extracts and clippings which would be of greater value to us if we knew from where they were taken, and the date of publication.

Saints who have clippings which are of value in the way of historical and other matters, anything that is of interest to the church generally, we wish would feel free to send the same to us, for even if they are not given space in the HERALD, notes are made on them to indicate the publication from which they are taken, and filed, with the intention of preserving them in such shape that they will be accessible for future reference.

We carefully file all that comes to our hands written in regard to the "Mormons," "Mormonism," or the Latter Day Saints, and we also keep for future reference all that comes to us on archæology and kindred subjects. But things that would be of great value to us for keeping are often lessened in value when we do not know from where they come. So we urge upon the Saints the necessity of noting carefully from where all clippings are taken which are forwarded to us, and indicating the same.

A SISTER, who, over the signature of "A Latter Day Saint," lately criticised a letter by Bro. Peter Anderson, now laboring in Utah, in apology writes as follows:—

I received a letter from Bro. Anderson, and I find I have done him a grievous wrong in my criticism of his letter. And as the 'past is with the eternal past,' all I can do is to call back my cruel words and confess to him. They were 'unkind, unjust, and uncalled for;' although I thought I felt justified of God when I wrote it. But such is the weakness of poor humanity. Now I ask Bro. Anderson to forgive me for every unkind word or thought I had of him, and I pray God to forgive me, and keep me from ever doing such a thing again. Bro. Anderson's letter to me bespeaks of the spirit of a true 'Latter Day Saint,' as well as of being a gentleman. He said nothing harsh or unkind in his letter to me. And now I ask again, Bro. Anderson, forgive as you hope to be forgiven by the 'Great Judge' of all who knows our every weakness. This is all I can do. Hoping it will be satisfactory to all, I am as ever, Your sister and

"A LATTER DAY SAINT."

CORRECTIONS,

In Herald No. 1, present year, page 12, bottom of third column, the letter from Clarksdale, Missouri, should have been signed, F. T. Dobie, instead of F. T. Dalsie.

On page 33 of HERALD for January 9, 1901, middle column, in letter from Bro. S. Tomlinson, lines 13-15 should read, "In all I have held six services," etc., not sixty, as appeared in print.

Bro. W. D. McKnight, real estate agent, of Blackwell, Kay county, Oklahoma, sends us a copy of the Sun, of that town, of date January 17. From it we quote:—

Oklahoma has over 900 miles of main-track railway. Only four counties in the territory are without railroads and two of these have lines touching their borders.

There are still 5.733.385 acres of vacant government land in Oklahoma subject to homestead entry.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. N. C. Enge, under date of December 31, wrote from Enge, Norway, to Bishop Kelley:—

As the roads have become impassable almost, I have concluded to make this a center of operation with a working radius of twenty-five miles, and expect to make a thorough canvass of the same by the 3d or 4th of February. I have succeeded in causing three school-teachers (men) to think seriously, by letting them read, one by one, the only copy of the Voice of Warning I have in Danish. I held service in this house Christmas. Every meeting held at my birthplace will tell. People who first turned up their noses are beginning to look straight ahead. Hope by next spring they will condescend to look down.

While I have not baptized any, yet the field looks favorable. I have distributed tracts according to the promptings of the spirit, and believe that a favorable impression has been made. To the Lord is the nonor due

I wish to say to the Scandinavian Saints that all their relatives will be visited according to agreement, but it will cost kroner to get there, so I must go slowly. When spring opens up will begin more active operations.

My health has been excellent so far. Father was very low for several weeks, and I was summoned home. All except myself thought he would die. I was prompted to anoint his stomach and pray for him. To the astonishment of all he walks about the room without his staff, and is much better than he has been these many years. I expect my sister to fall in line with the Saints sometime.

I have only held twenty-one public services. Please forward letter to my wife, as I do not know whether she is at Liberty yet or not. I have written seventeen letters to her, but on the 12th of November she had only received one, so she is probably pretty blue.

Bro. J. M. Stubbart, under date of January 22, writes from Dedham, Iowa:—

I am having good liberty and fair opportunities to preach the word. My work has been nearly entirely in new places where they knew little or nothing of the work. The Lord has truly been opening up the way before me.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, writing from Nebraska City, Nebraska, January 24, says:—

The outlook for gospel work in these parts is brighter at present. I sincerely hope that it may continue so. The sects are putting forth a united effort to convert the city and have been at it for some two months.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In the fore part of last week Bishop Kelley received telegram from Bro. E. A. Blakeslee that he was on his way to join Bro. Hilliard at Los Angeles, California, from where they would make a tour in the interests of the Bishopric and the church.

Bishop Kelley left on last Friday for Indiana, to be gone about a week or ten days. He expected to attend the conference at Byrneville.

President Smith was able to resume his office duties again the latter part of last week.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION.—NO. 5.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUORUM OF THE TWELVE.

In that sleepless night I thought of these things, and debated in my mind upon the chances before me. I saw that according to the Bible and Book of Mormon, but few who had made a religious profession ran the course through, and received the crown at The Book of the end of the race. Covenants showed clearly to me that the church as an organization was rejected of God, and clouds like a pall hung over all religious efforts among mortals of this earth. Fanaticism and excitement, accompanied with confusion and a lack of understanding of the doctrine of Christ, I could see could not be the religion of Christ or have emanated from the God of the That Jesus Christ, ere he universe. answered the question.

When shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

said:-

Take heed that no man deceive you.... For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.—Matt. 24: 3, 4, 24.

Restlessness, sorrow, and disappointment finally took possession of my mind, as I concluded that it was too hard a task for me to undertake to be a Christian, and I wished that I might sleep like others and not be bothered any more over the subject. I got up, tired, unhappy, and lonely; helped do the chores; sat down to the table without an appetite; was sick at heart and stomach, and could not eat; arose from the table, and took my hat for a walk, not thinking where I should go, but went up to Mr. Barret's. As I opened the gate, Elder Powell, who stood by the house putting on his overcoat, or linen duster, in readiness to start on his journey, said, calling me by name, "Good morning."

Involuntarily I replied, "I want you to baptize me."

Soon as I had made this request all that fear, distress of mind, and discontent left me, and I felt glad, and had perfect peace in my mind, and all that burden that had depressed me so long left me and I felt free and happy; yes, my dear reader, I can truly say I never knew what freedom was before, and it has continued so until this day, and from that glad hour I commenced life anew.

Elder David Powell in answer said, "Well, we were about to start on our mission, but as I came here on purpose to baptize you, we will stop and attend to it, and not go until tomorrow." As we walked down to the river he said, "I was in Galena, desiring to go down the river, but the boat shoved off just as I got to the wharf and we had to stav over night in the city, and that night, in a dream, I saw you and the place where I baptized you, so I have come all this distance [one hundred miles] to baptize you." As we came to the river he said, "This is not the place," and following up the stream, as he led the way, we came to an open, clear place, free from brush or grass, and he exclaimed, "Here is the place."

I was baptized, feeling the solemn obligation I had taken upon me to follow my Master all the days of my life. Elder John Harrington, Mr. Barrett, and my brother Edwin accompanied us. As we went home a calmness reigned in my heart. I was confirmed by Elders David Powell and John Harrington, after which Elder Powell said, "Brother Edmund, it is manifest to me that it is your calling to be an elder in the church, and if you will allow me, I will now ordain you an elder."

der. I answered. "I can't preach."

Bro. Barrett then arose and prophesied unto me: "Thus saith the Lord, It is my will you should be ordained an elder in my church, and it is your calling to preach my gospel in this land, and you shall also cross the briny deep and in foreign lands declare my gospel in power, for your calling is to the world and not at home, for the world is your home. Amen."

Elder Powell then pressed his question, "Will you allow us to ordain you"

I replied, "I desire to do right, but I cannot preach now."

He said, "The Lord will prepare vou for that." And he and Elder J. Harrington ordained me on the day I was baptized, and thus was fulfilled the promise made to me when my life was despaired of; and when I was ordained in 1860 into the High Council, then was fulfilled another part of the revelation; and I declare in words of truth and soberness that no human being knew of these promises to me, for I had not mentioned them to a single soul on earth, and until the time I was ordained into the quorum in which I now stand I did not know it was called a High Council, though I had often talked of the calling of the Twelve, and read the revelation defining their true position in contrast with the assumption they made under B. Young in the apostasy.

But oh! I had just begun to learn.
My lessons came thick and fast. For a little time I felt perfect contentment. I had obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine taught in the Scriptures. I enjoyed my seasons of prayer and the written word as I searched the sacred pages for a little season, but soon I was depressed when at prayer with a feeling of fear. At times it would seem as though some person stood behind me, and I would have such fear come over me that I would cease praying and shudder. Sometimes I would make sure there was no one in my room, and then lock the door and try to pray, but the same fear would come over me, and it seemed so real that some one stood over me that for nearly two years I could pray only as I prayed in my heart and in my desires. In this time I would often feel a power rest on me that caused darkness and doubt concerning prayer or the object of prayer. The idea that God enthroned in heaven was listening to my simple prayer; or that I could change his purpose toward me if I did pray; or that he would notice me, or listen to my prayer; or that he should listen to the prayers of all living and answer them, seemed absurb to my mind.

With these thoughts and constant fear that hovered over me I feared to go to my closet to pray, until one day I came into the house (I was stopping with Elder Samuel Powers at the time) and took up the Book of Mormon, opened it, and read the follow-"Every spirit that leadeth to pray is of God, but every spirit that leadeth not to pray is of the Devil." At the reading of this passage the Holy Spirit rested on me in great power, and so suddenly that it shocked my whole being, and it said, "The spirit that has troubled you so long on the subject of prayer is the Devil. Inexpressible joy and surprise filled my heart, and I then knew there was an evil spirit in the world as I never knew before, and also that the state-ment in the Book of Mormon was penned by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, and from that glad hour I have not doubted the efficacy of prayer. And then I was led to answer these questions that had troubled me in the following manner:-

God hears and answers prayer by the Spirit; which Spirit is one person of the Godhead, is always present and alike in all places, and permeates everything. The Spirit is an intelligent substance, almighty in its control, and can influence all worlds, and animate and inanimate things; things in the starry heavens, and of men on The gifts or fruits of the Spirit are extended to all, beckoning them to come and partake of the waters of life freely, without money or price, and be saved. When the child of God places himself in the attitude worthy to receive a blessing, said gifts are his to enjoy; they are Say not in thy heart, Who shall ascend say not in thy heart, who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above:) or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.) But what saith it? The word [power of God] is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith which we preach. Boy 10.6 8 of faith, which we preach.-Rom. 10: 6-8.

With this answer before me, I can always pray and not faint. God can and does answer the prayer of faith.

It is with much reluctance I write or continue the theme of my experience. I have been blessed many times with the assurance and love of God in this great work of his. I have learned indeed that man is frail, unreliable, and cannot be depended on. The Psalmist puts it in this language:

As for man, his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more. But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children; to such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them.—Ps. 103: 15-18.

In the summer of 1855 I again made up my mind I would not engage in or say a word upon the subject of religion until the church was again fully established with its quorums and with young Joseph as its president. But again I was taken sick, first with a pain in one of my eyes, from which I suffered dreadfully for three weeks. In the meantime Elder Samuel Powers sent for me by his brother John, and I went to his home and he and his wife took care of me until I was nearly well, or at least until my eye ceased paining me, and then my other eye was afflicted in the same way, only more severely which lasted for three more long weeks. My other eye pained me in the most excruciating manner. I was fully prostrated. It took weeks for me to again get around, and when I did recover, Bro. Powers urged me to go with him to conference that was to be held in Zarahemla, Wisconsin. offered to take me there and back and it should be no cost to me. I finally concluded to go with him and attend the conference. The distance was forty miles, and as we reached the place, we found that the meeting had begun and they were singing the first hymn as we stepped into the house. All were strangers to me except Elder Gurley, my brother Jason, and Elder Powers. After praying, and singing again, the meeting was opened for the Saints to occupy in testimony and prayer or as they might be led, and the first one who arose spoke in tongues. After a few sentences had been spoken I understood every word as it was uttered as plainly as though it had been in my own language, every word being accompanied with a feeling of exceeding joy, such as I had never experienced before.

nor can I convey by pen the certainty that what was being said was from God. as I then realized: and then what was also remarkable, another got up and interpreted the tongue in our own language. The interpretation was that the church was of God, and that the Lord would hold the reins in his own hands, and in due time Joseph, the son of Joseph, the martyr, would be called to take his father's place in the presidency of the church, and exhorting the Saints to diligence and faithfulness. This manifestation was not given in excitement nor under enthusiasm, but in a mild, straightforward manner, and was the first speech made at the conference. A few other brief, dispassionate remarks were made by three others, after which the president stated that a commandment from God had been given some time before, that two men should be chosen into the quorum of twelve, at this conference, and he also remarked that in choosing the first seven of said quorum a revelation had been given to the church directing the conference to appoint a committee to select those to occupy places in the quorum. It was then ruled that a committee should be appointed now to select the two to fill vacancies caused by apostasy. Accordingly three men were appointed said committee, and as they arose to retire from the room the Spirit said to me. "Elder Powers and a stranger sitting across the room from you will be chosen into the quorum of the twelve." I rejected this manifestation in my own heart so far as the stranger was concerned, from the fact that his appearance was not prepossessing to my mind. But true to the manifestation I had received, the two were chosen.

I returned home with Elder Powers. and during the fall my mother purchased a place in Zarahemla, afterward called Blanchardville, and in the spring I went home to live with My mother had not joined in with the Reorganization. This summer I attended meeting quite often, and it was the first time I had lived in a branch of the church since a child. often had a great desire to speak in meeting, but natural timidity and bashfulness would overcome me, and I would feel sorry and condemned.

One evening mother gave a retrospect of her life, relating many experiences, and said, "I have not thought I would live more than sixty years, and now I am living on borrowed time." (This was in June, and she was sixty years old the 6th of May just previous.) I was very sad as she talked of dying and when she said, "I do not know but I am as well prepared as I shall ever be. I have Tongue cannot describe, | done the best I knew how, and do not | Also related many instances of her know as I would do better if I had my life to live over. I believe in the gospel as restored by the angel to Bro. Joseph, the choice seer; but now the church is so distracted I do not know who is right. Bro. Henry Deam believes all ought to be baptized and begin the work anew just as it began at first, as the church has been rejected with their dead. And really I do not see any harm it could do if all were rebaptized and commenced anew.'

That was Bro. Deam's position after he was cut off from the church. He also claimed that the church could choose three high priests, and they, being ordained by the direction of a General Conference, would be legal, and the Lord would sanction it. repudiated the law of lineage entirely, and denounced the position and claim that Bro. Joseph would ever take his father's place in the presidency of the church. In fact, at this time I sometimes thought from his conversation that he was becoming skeptical in relation to the latter-day work. I often met him that summer. He was a good neighbor and was generally liked by all his acquaintances, and respected, but his assumption to be a leader and head of the church spoiled my confidence in him as a minister, though otherwise I liked him as a His wife and children were quiet, unassuming, and really a fine family. But he had led off nearly or quite half of the branch at one time after him; his brother-in-law, John Cunningham, once of the Twelve, was cut off from the church with him for apostasy, and there was much discussion in the branch over the division caused by Brother Deam's strange move in church matters, and my mother was much disquieted and disheartened in relation to the church; but had no confidence in any of the various factions that had arisen since the martyrdom of the Prophet Joseph

When William B. Smith first came to our place in 1850 presenting the law of lineage and little Joseph's right to the presidency of the church. mother accepted it as in the right direction, but soon as prosperity seemed to crown his effort, his strange and extravagant claims displeased her and she denounced him as an impos-At this conversation she was tor. cheerful, yet believed the time near at hand when she would leave this stage of action. We sat up late that night, and I was very sad while she told us of her childhood days. She remembered the war of 1812 and saw many of the soldiers, her father being a soldier in the Revolutionary War; that Austin Briggs, my grandfather, was in the same war, and after peace was declared he was a sheriff in the state of New York for many years.

early life, and things concerning George Washington, Jefferson, and Benjamin Franklin that impressed her in her girlhood days. treachery of Aaron Burr and Benedict Arnold. She compared Benedict Arnold to Judas who betrayed the Savior, and dwelt upon the persecution of the church in the beginning of the Christian era, how that thousands of the early Saints were put to death. The first three hundred years there were ten universal persecutions, and in the dark ages since intervened millions were put to death in the crusades because of religious intolerance; and as soon as the renewal of the true church again commenced, persecution began first in New York, then in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois, until Joseph Smith the prophet and his brother were killed by an infuriated mob fired by religious intolerance. I went to bed very sad that night. Mother's talk was very interesting, yet in many respects very sad.

The next morning I got up quite early (it was Sunday) and went over to Elder David Powell's. He was feeling dejected over the condition of the church. The Saints of the branch were becoming cold and indifferent. Little difficulties had estranged some of them against each other, and prayer meetings were being held very seldom. The Deam faction also had not all subsided; in fact, Bro. Powell was much distressed in mind and discouraged over the prospect that Joseph would ere long come and take his place as promised through many manifestations of the Holy Spirit to the Saints. I felt specially clear in mind and hopeful all the time Bro. Powell was talking of his disappointment and sorrow over the distraction of the church, not in Zarahemla only, but all over the world. Ever since the rejection of the church in Nauvoo all was darkness and confusion; a few were led off by Brigham Young to the American desert. Do not be startled at this expression, "a few were led off." The facts are, but a few of the Saints followed Brigham They were too well ac-Young. quainted with the spirit of the church in Joseph's day to follow the intolerant rule of Brigham Young; and most that did follow him of the old church came back, or went to the gold fields of the Western States, and many that followed their pernicious ways have been converted since his introduction of polygamy, August 29, 1852. And many who went after Strang did not even land their goods in Vorce, but scattered into the country in Wisconsin, and many followed other false shepherds. Thousands scattered over all the world, and had, like the disciples of old, "gone a fishing," disappointed, and their confidence lost in man and God, it almost seemed to us.

though we believed all the scattered Saints who ever had felt one spark of the Holy Spirit upon their conversion in the latter day work, yet had a lingering hope that the church would again arise and put on her beautiful garments. Just how it would be brought about none seemed to know. Bitterness and ill feeling were more or less manifest between the many contending factions that broke from the church.

I went home from Bro. Powell's about nine o'clock. My mind was very much exercised over our conversation, as it had taken a very wide range over church matters. revelation of November 18, 1851, was considered. The promise made in it that the seed of Joseph should yet lead the church, and the many evidences that the Saints had received attesting its truthfulness, and yet the lethargy of the Saints in the work there, were perplexing to us. I was sad, and yet renewed hope and gladness that God would certainly revive his work seemed to impress my mind very clearly.

As I reached home I was very much surprised to find my mother sick in bed with a very high fever, and the first words she said were, "Edmund, I am going to die, and I want you to promise me not to send for a physician, for I want to die a natural death without any assistance from a doctor. Neither do I want you to send for any of the elders of the church to administer to me, for I am going to die, and they can't help me any way, and I want to die for my time has come."

Her conversation of the previous evening came to my mind, that she was living on borrowed time and always thought she would die when she was sixty years old.

I urged her to allow me to send for the elders to administer to her, but she steadfastly refused. For three days I made the matter a constant subject of prayer, as I was very much concerned about her, and watched over her all the time. I also secured a lady to come and help take care of her. On Wednesday afternoon mother called me to the bedside and said, "Edmund, you may send for the elders if you want to."

I replied, "Mother, do you want to get well?"

Her reply was, "Yes."

As soon as mother said yes, I seemed to know that she would certainly recover, and I went with a perfectly contented mind after Elder Reuben Newkirk. Several of the Saints came with him, and after prayer he anointed and laid his hands on her, and earnestly prayed again for her, and prophesied, "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Thou shalt fully recover and be noted for faith in Zarahemla."

In a few moments her fever left her. and she seemed to be entirely well in two or three hours. We all slept nicely that night, and in the morning mother got the breakfast, and was perfectly well and cheerful. I remained home until about four o'clock in the afternoon. I had promised to help Bro. Zenos H. Gurley that week, but mother's sickness kept me home. But now I was anxious to go to his help, and just as I stepped from the door and bade mother good bye, a quick, sharp pain took me in the head, but I walked on nearly a mile. the pain growing worse and so severe that I became weak and faint, and sat down for a little time wondering what it meant. My suffering was so unnatural that I thought it meant something; and perhaps I ought not to have left home. So I retraced my steps. As I did so, the severe pain grew less and less, and just as I stepped into the door it all left me as suddenly as it came. And mother, who was sitting in her chair where I had left her, immediately addressed me and said, "Edmund, I do not see why we can't all go and be rebaptized. and that will stop all this contention on that subject; it certainly won't do any harm.'

I inquired, "Has anyone been here?"
Mother answered, "Yes, Bro. Deam has been here, and he said, 'I heard that prayers were made for you last evening, so I also prayed for you, and I wish to administer to you also,' and he laid his hands on me and prayed for me, and he has just gone home."

Then the Spirit rested on me in power and directed me to rebuke the Devil and Satan in the name of Jesus Christ and command him to depart from the house.

But I had never officiated in my office as a minister, and I was too fearful to obey the command of God to me by his Holy Spirit.

ZIZANIA.—NO. 3.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

The ministration of the church in carrying out the foregoing laws are these:—

And again, every person who belongeth to this Church of Christ shall observe to keep all the commandments and covenants of the church. And it shall come to pass, that if any persons among you shall kill, they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proven according to the laws of the land. And if any man or woman shall commit adultery, he or she shall be tried before two elders of the church or more, and every word shall be established against him or her by two witnesses of the church, and not of the enemy; but if there are more than two witnesses it is better; but he or she shall be condemned by the mouth of two witnesses, and the elders shall isy the case before the church and the church shall lift up their hands against him or her, that they may be dealt with according to the law of God. And if it can be, it is necessary that the bishop is present also. And thus ye shall do in all cases which shall come before you. And if a man or woman shall rob, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. And if he or she shall steal, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. And if he or she shall lie, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. If he or she do any manner of iniquity, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law, even that of God.—D. C. 42: 21, 22.

None who neglect duty are exempt from the requirements of the law:—

And a commandment I give unto them, that he that observeth not his prayers before the Lord in the season thereof, let him be had in remembrance before the judge of my people.—D. C. 68: 4.

Unfaithfulness upon the part of ministers shall be sufficient cause for depriving them of their office:—

Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand.—D. C. 104:44.

From least to greatest, all are amenable to the rules of the church:—

There is not any person belonging to the church, who is exempt from this council of the church.—D. C. 104: 36.

I am of the opinion that from the authority cited, all must admit that our disciplinary provisions are ample, and of a high moral character, nothing to indicate the nourishing or sheltering of anything that would tend toward tares or evil of any kind. There prevails a sympathetic spirit of humanitarianism, bordering very nigh upon unqualified universalism, which will hardly brook the doctrine of condign punishment. This question of tares forces this issue of the punishment of the wicked.

Zion's watchmen can only afford to stand within the bulwarks that God hath furnished; our safeguards are ample and sufficient, while we remain intrenched behind what the three text-books of the church teach. The final end of the tares (the wicked) will be that they shall be burned:—

For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.—Mal. 4:1.

This was the testimony of the last prophet under the dispensation of the "schoolmaster." And that prophetapostle that testified so truthfully and faithfully of the divine character of Christ, taught:—

But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.—2 Peter 3:7.

Please note the definitions of the word "perdition" by Mr. Webster:—

The utter loss of the soul, or of final happinese in a future state; future misery or eternal death. The impenitent sinner is condemned to final perdition. "If we reject the truth, we seal our own perdition.—J. M. Mason."

While John was on the Isle of Patmos God unrolled the panorama of the future of mankind to his understanding, down to the time of the end, which he depicts as follows:—

But the fearful and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and soreerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.—Rev. 21:8.

We are commanded to remember the Book of Mormon, and I now turn to that sacred record:—

O my brethren, hearken unto my word; arouse the faculties of your soul; shake yourselves, that ye may awake from the slumber of death; and loose yourselves from the pains of hell, that ye may not become angels to the devil, to be cast into that lake of fire and brimstone, which is the second death.—Jacob 2: 11.

O that the same zeal of the Lord, as rested upon the Prophet Jacob, would rest upon the thousands of Israel today. Jesus taught the twelve apostles upon this continent:—

And he that endureth not unto the end, the same is he that is also hewn down and cast into the fire, from whence they can no more return, because of the justice of the Father; and this is the word which he hath given unto the children of men.—Book of Nephi 12: 4.

We are also commanded to give heed to the "church articles." They teach us:—

And the earth shall pass away so as by fire; and the wicked shall go away into unquenchable fire; and their end no man knoweth, on earth, nor ever shall know, until they come before me in judgment.—D. C. 43: 7.

Again:

I, the Lord, am angry with the wicked; I am holding my Spirit from the inhabitants of the earth. I have sworn in my wrath and decreed wars upon the face of the earth, and the wicked shall slay the wicked, and fear shall come upon every man, and the saints also shall hardly escape; nevertheless, I, the Lord, am with them, and will come down in heaven from the presence of my Father, and consume the wicked with unquenchable fire.—D. C. 63: 9.

On account of the inordinacy of the so-called orthodoxy in thundering "hell fire" against nonprofessors, there has come a reaction in the mind of the people in regard to God's promised punishment of the wicked, and the greatest danger now to be apprehended is that the other extreme prevails, and the truth be translucent in its presentation, and thus those peculiar tendencies in the human heart, calculated to produce tares be encouraged. My orison shall constantly be that the "golden mean" shall be the platform upon which the messengers of truth may stand. The incorrigible may read their doom in the following:-

And this is the gospel, the glad tidings which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us, that he came into the world, even Jesus to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness; that through him all might be saved, whom the Father had put into his power, and made by him; who glorifies the Father, and saves all the works of his hands, except those sons of perdition, who deny the Son after the Father hath revealed him; wherefore he saves all except them; they shall go away into everlasting punishment, which is endless punishment, which is eternal punishment, to reign with the Devil and his angels in eternity, where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched, which is their torment, and the end thereof, neither the place thereof, nor their torment, no man knows; neither was it revealed, neither is, neither will be revealed unto man, except to them who are made partakers thereof.—D. C. 76: 4.

The punishment provided for the wicked in this threefold bond of testimony given by divine revelation, I can accept and teach, but the dogma of annihilation has no place in my understanding of the divine economy. In our examination of that which constitutes tares we should remember the following:—

The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?—Jer. 17:9.

Here is another lesson from nature:—

In the wheat field is to be found, sometimes, another instructive phenomenon. I refer to a species of blasting, which farmers term bunt, but botanists ustilago faetida, on account of the putrid and intolerable odor it exhales. This evil confines its ravages to the grain. Externally, the infected ear exhibits no sign of disease, no rusty appearance or stunted growth; on the contrary, it seems full as plump and green as the sound ears. Stealthily and secretly is the process of corruption accomplished; and not till the harvest is reaped, and the wheat is brought to the threshing-floor, is the discovery made, by the odor and color, that the produce is unfit for the Master's use. Under this mask of health and soundness there is found nothing but black and feetid powder, nauseous and of-fensive. And such is the latent infection of sin. Men may appear fair and sound on the field of life—may pass through the world in robes of unspotted reputation, and even be adorned with the verdant blades of envied fame—but whose hearts, when laid open in the presence of God, will be found, like fee id wheat, wholly corrupt, offensive in his sight, and a stench in his nostrils.—Work Days of God, p. 350.

We undoubtedly have within our fold those whose love of money, fame, or position, has benumbed their sensibilities of the mutual union and fellow-feeling that should exist among those who fraternize under the gospel covenant. Thus we see more of the worldly, than of the spiritual side of their nature, and thus the parable of the wheat and tares is ever before us. Rev. H. B. Hackett, D.D., who made a personal visit to the Holy Land, describes the tares he saw in the ancient fields:—

In passing through the fertile country of the ancient Philistines, on the south of Palestine, I asked the guide, one day, a native Syrian, if he knew of a plant which was apt to make its appearance among the wheat, and which resembled it so much that it could hardly be distinguished from it. He replied that it was very common, and that he would soon show me a specimen of it. Soon after this he pointed out to me some of this grass, growing near our path; and afterwards, having once seen it, I found it in almost every field where I searched for it.

Except that the stalk was not so high, it appeared otherwise precisely like wheat, just as the ears begin to show themselves, and the kernels are swelling out into shape. The seed of tares, if intermixed with wheat, renders the bread made of such flour injurious to those who eat it. This is the plant to which the Savior referred in the parable, as the tares which sprang up among the wheat, and which the owner, because it was so much like the genuine wheat, directed his servants to suffer to remain until the harvest, "lest while they gathered up the tares, they should root up also the wheat with them." (Matthew 13: 24, sq.) I collected some specimens of this deceitful weed, and have found, on showing them to friends, that they have mistaken them quite invariably for some species of grain, such as wheat or barley.—A Tour Through The Holy Land, p. 138.

I hope the reader will find much pleasure in considering the compilation upon the beautiful lesson of the wheat and the tares.

Verily I say unto you, That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, cannot be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore, they must remain filthy still.—D. C. 85: 8.

It must be clear to every Saint, that if we escape the peculiar habits and practices that would constitute such a character as that symbolized by the tare, we will have to crucify the lusts and desires of the flesh that would antagonize the prescribed rules of the gospel, that is, after our faith has resulted in obedience, and we are enrolled as members of the body of Christ:—

And we will go on unto perfection if God permit.—Heb. 6: 3, I. T.

This going on is stated to be as follows:—

And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.—2 Peter 1: 5-8.

After our enlistment in the army of the Lord, we then have to go on by patience and grace, and learn every duty required of us by the terms or condition of our covenant. If we would receive the full fruition of the gospel, we will have to keep inviolate, the law in its entirety, and in so doing we must not adopt the per fas et nefas [through right and wrong] policy.

And they who are not sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom. For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, cannot abide a celestial glory.—D C. 85: 5.

"Sanctified," in the above, means separated from the ways and doings of the world unto a work of righteousness and a life of holiness. Those who shall thus do, shall be permitted to see God. O, glorious promise!

And if your eye be single to my glory, your whole bodies shall be filled with light, and there shall be no darkness in you, and that body which is filled with light comprehendeth all things. Therefore, sanctify yourselves that your minds become single to God, and the days will come that you shall see him; for he will unveil his face unto you, and it shall be in his own time, and in his own way, and according to his own will.—D.C. 85: 18.

Like a beacon on a high mountain, of old, this tocsin was given:—

Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.—Amos

What awe attends this solemn warning, and what shall the meeting be? If wheat, we will in the ecstasy of our soul bid farewell to every heartache, tear, and trial.

Come quickly: Amen, Even so, come, Lord Jesus.—Rev. 22: 20.

But O, if we should prove to be a tare, our hopes would be blasted, and our joy turned to wormwood; the bitterness of soul, and poignancy of disappointment, perhaps no mortal can conceive, or pen portray, but this will be the agonizing invocation:—

And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?—Rev. 6:16, 17.

Without doubt the fearful sufferings of Israel at the time of their scattering from their beloved city as indicated by the Master, prefigured to some extent what the overthrow of the wicked shall be:—

Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us. And if these things are done in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry tree?—Luke 23:30, 31, I. T.

The "green tree" and the "wheat" represent the same class of people, those that have set to their seal that God is true, and his plan of redemption perfect. The "dry tree" and the "tares" are those that shall not enter into rest, and the coming of the Lord will bring to them grief and not peace.

Yea, the Lord, even Jesus, whose coming is not until after there cometh a falling away, by the working of Satan with all power, and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.—2 Thess. 2: 9-12, I. T.

All wickedness will be overcome either by righteousness or chains of confinement in the prison house. No covenant of mortal with Satan shall prevent the demands of eternal justice, although the wicked may in their blindness and self-deception boast:—

Because ye have said, We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us; for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves.—Isa. 28: 15.

The answer of the Lord to the vaunting of the wicked, has the ringing notes of omnipotence:—

Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteou ness to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place. And your covenant with death shall be disanulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it.—Isa. 28:17, 18.

I might multiply the volume of proof from the revelations of God upon the distinction between the wheat and the tares, the righteous and the unrighteous; but will rest the question by extracts from the latest communication by inspiration, showing the importance of purity upon the part of those who enter, or would attempt to enter the "house of the Lord," that all who go in will have to be clean in both body and spirit. The prophet states:—

I had, however, only time to catch a hasty glimpse of all that is so briefly described, when a sort of metallic, ringing sound from the left hand door, and a kind of flashing light diverted my attention, and I looked across to the other side, but saw nothing.

I had hardly time to renew my survey of the walls and ceiling, when I was fairly star-tled by a repetition of the sound already referred to, this time at the door on the right, through which I had come; I turned in my seat, and saw a man standing at the doorway facing it as if to come in, and in the doorway itself, two crossed swords, much like the old fashioned broad swords, only a trifle broader; the hilts rested against the door-jams, one at either side, about two and a half feet from the floor, and the swords crossed each other, edge down, with their points resting against the opposite door jam, about the height of a man's shoulder from the floor. The hilts were plain, the guards like the common sabre guard, the handle part of dark material; the blades polished till they shone like silver, with a golden tinge. As the man stood for a moment, the swords shook a little, as if held in the hand of a person nervous from excitement, and from them as they shivered, a pale, shimmering yellow light seemed to flash, or flow. . . .

A sudden loud clashing of the swords in the doorway just behind me, together with a vivid flashing of the strange light caused me to turn my eyes again in that direction; a man was standing outside the doorway, with his teeth shut tightly together, his hands clenched, and eyes blazing with fury and disappointment; before him were the crossed swords, quivering as if instinct with life, and endowed with emotion; the polished blades had changed their hue from the silvery, golden tinged glitter to the color of a golden flame, while the light that scintillated from them flashed over and filled the room to the remotest corner, flooding seat and pillar, pulpit and altar, niche and statuette, picture and scroll, with its terrible brilliancy. The man turned away, the swords were with-drawn, but in an instant he came towards the door quickly, and was almost in the room with his right foot touching the threshold, when with a crash that sent the blood surging through my veins with the shock, the swords fell before him, sending a flood of flame and light over the room again; he turned again away, and stepping back a few paces, he started toward the door the third time with determination, despair and fierce rage pictured in his face; and again those terrible swords, now white and glowing like molten goid, fell before him, striking fire from their clashing crossing, shaking the building with the fierceness and suddenness of their fall, and filling the doorway from top to bottom and from side to side with their quivering, eager motion, putting before the enraged and desperate man seeking an entrance, a wall of flaming swords and seeming fire. I shall never forget the fearful expression of baffled desire and helpless rage depicted in the face of the man thus barred

I saw some enter whom in my waking every day hours I knew were deemed not meet for a membership with the faithful and I saw some rejected who are deemed most worthv.

Well may we believe that the "Flaming swords that turn every way to guard the way of the Tree of Life," still stand as prescient sentinels at the open doors of the Temple of Eternal Peace, and dispute with the fierceness of awakened wrath the entrance of human or devilish design and work.—Life of Joseph the Prophet, pp. 733-737.

Many times with continuous and inspiring interest have I read this beautiful vision, and I trust that it shall prove equally as interesting to you, and especially those who do not possess a copy thereof. Surely the complete separation of the wheat and the tares are very vividly presented! We may deceive each other, but it is utterly impracticable for us to pass through the "pearly gate," if there are flaws in our characters. Honesty will prove to be the best policy and will never fail.

As a fitting conclusion to this paper, I invite you to consider the vision of the Prophet Nephi:—

And it came to pass that the Spirit said unto me, Look! and I looked and beheld a tree; and it was like unto the tree which my father had seen, and the beauty thereof was far beyond, yea, exceeding of all beauty; and the whiteness thereof did exceed the whiteness of the driven snow. . . And it came to pass that I beheld that the rod of iron which my father had seen, was the word of God, which led to the fountain of living waters, or to the tree of life: which waters are a representation of the love of God; and I also beheld that the tree of life was a representation of the love of God—1 Nephi 3: 11, 17.

Praying for all those who have the misfortune of getting into "byways," that they may see light in God's light, and find help to escape the second death, and upon those that love the truth and are walking in the narrow path, I implore the royal benison of our heavenly Father.

THE END.

SUBMISSION.

In view of the fact of man's will power, submission to God's revealed saving method against all opposed thereto, must be the result of choice, by the exercise of that will power. This claim is made valid, I think, in the recognition of a Satanic power in opposition to the divine power, added proof thereto being found in Christ's declaration:—

No man can serve two masters.-Matt. 6: 24.

The necessity, therefore, of a decision of character to accept the one and reject the other is made apparent.

One of the most stimulating promises to man, in his search for God, is a fullness of righteousness to those searching for the same. (Matt. 6:5.) But in order for one or many to enjoy the blessedness of a fullness of right eousness, the love prompting obedience to the method of adoption must intensify as the years go by, necessitating a corresponding abhorrence of all that is unrighteous. Hence our spiritual warfare making manifest the necessity for acquiring a proficiency, with a view to self-abnegation, evinced, in a practical demonstration of having subjugated the flesh, by bringing forth the fruits of the Spirit. (Gal. 5:19-26), thus evincing a Godimposed spiritual rectitude.

For gospel precepts and examples in the claim of having reached the spiritual realm must be inseparable, with the blessed assurance that—

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus.—Rom. 8:1.

Whether by one or many, submission to God, without mental reservation, must lead to a oneness with God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit; who, though three in individuality, are one in power and design. Hence Christ's injunction to his disciples to be one, cannot be void of significance. No; it is a solemn, God-revealed truth. And whatever may tend to lessen that truth, or its imperativeness, must interfere with the needed spiritual growth proportionate to the credence given to the advocacy of any creed or dogma to that end. But as the most beautiful piece of mechanism may be defaced, and its symmetry obliterated by the most unskillful and thought. less, so may any doctrine or law of God, however plainly set forth, be, as it were, shorn of its imperativeness by the senseless methods of evasion and paraphrasing, so prevalent among men, attributable to the blighting effects of a universal apostasy, made palatable in some instances, because of present advantage. And the only preventive to being inveigled in such gentile meshes is a constant remembrance that God only guarantees wisdom or knowledge up to, or so far as revealed: more or less than this must be fruitful of evil. The prohibition to add to or detract from the word of God ought to afford the needed evidence that that word is mandatory and restrictive.

As if to meet an exigency at the very inception of the latter-day work, the stimulating sound is heard of God having spoken to his servants, in their weakness, after the manner of their language, which collides with the popular teaching, that those of the priesthood, or those assuming to teach in the name of the Lord, were the only competent ones to interpret the word of the Lord, and this by reason of their culture, which interpretations the masses were to accept without questioning. Hence we see that a submission to such a dictum has brought about a confusion and much distrust among the masses, as to constitute a modern Babylon.

Following the declaration as above referred to, the promise is made, that because of God having thus spoken, they (his servants) might understand; then we read:—

And inasmuch as they erred it might be made known; and inasmuch as they sought wisdom they might be instructed; and inasmuch as they sinned they might be chastened, that they might repent.—D. C. 1:5.

All of which is suggestive of the thought of a system of adjudication that all concerned may understand, and understanding, they might, as necessity may demand, practically observe, and the whole body be the recipients of God's favor because of a ready submission to his revealed will, which demonstrates the fact, as clear as the sun in its noonday splendor, that the inspiring effects of Christ's revealed gospel is only enjoyed as its precepts are practically observed. The necessity for this is seen in the fact that Christ's body or church progresses in the spiritual realm as its several or many members live more and act in each other's confidence and affections, hence a lack of this confidence, etc., means retrogression rather than a spiritual growth.

Then, too, the above is compatible with the thought that in all governments (especially the divine) there must be a point at which controversy, misunderstanding, etc., must cease; because of an authoritative adjudication. If this should be found impracticable, there must either be a defect in given and accepted law, or a failure to properly advocate or enforce the same.

But as a preventive to such a conclusion relative to God's revealed laws, we read that in the inception of the latter-day work, the elders were commanded to assemble "together to agree upon my [God's] word, and by the prayer of faith" they were to receive Christ's law, that they thereby might know how to govern Christ's church, "and have all things right before" God. On the concession as to this injunction to agree upon Christ's word is imperative, the agreeing upon Christ's word is possible; if not, then God is unjust in imposing this agreement upon the elders. Therefore, any kind of theorizing to increase an impression as to the impossibility of arriving at and continuing in a state of oneness, productive of gospel unity, were fallacious, and well calculated to deceive.

Beside all this, the injunction, "Ye [the elders] shall see that my [Christ's] law is kept," is quite conspicuous. (D. C. 41:1, 2.) And as if to prevent friction attributable to a misunderstanding as to what sphere or work is imposed upon the officials of the church, we are taught that all are to teach according to the office to which they are appointed (D. C. 38:5); then, as a help to comprehend the above, we learn that every elder, priest, teacher, and deacon is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him (D. C. 17:12); which as I believe, affords a basis for belief that a necessity should exist for all contemplated ordinations, hence there can be no justification for acts for which there exists no necessity. Then, too, adaptability for a contemplated ordination should not be over-looked, otherwise officials being officials being appointed according to the gifts and callings would be without significance. Then, too, ordinations are to be by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains. And because the Lord has condescended to speak to his servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, I learn that all are powerful to act in their appointed spheres, which leads me to the conclusion that ordinations are more likely to be legitimate and proper when brought about by those who by diligence are approved of God to act in a legally appointed position. than if effected by the method of common consent, by and through which a competent official may be deposed and an incompetent one elevated, and important ordinations effected by a majority vote of a ten year old boy. No possible benefit accrues to minors in the exercise of the right to vote, but it may be a means of much confusion, leading to strife, etc.

But does not the Book of Covenants teach that all things are to be done by common consent? Yes; but there is something goes before that; here it Neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by the common consent in the church, by the prayer of faith.—D. C. 27: 4.

Just so. And one among the all things to be done is the preventive to anything being appointed to any in the church contrary to the church covenants, hence church covenants are imperative upon all members. Can we therefore think that God would give another imperative method to lessen the imperativeness of church covenants? The writer has not so learned Christ. Further:—

And thou shalt assist to settle all these things, according to the covenants of the church. D. C. 27:5.

And ye shall remember the church articles and covenants to keep them.—D. C. 32: 3.
And they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them.—D. C. 42:5.

And is not accounted worthy by the voice of the church, according to the laws and covenants of the church.—D. C. 51:1.

In the light radiating from the above, it is made apparent that the object of common consent is to obtain a needed agreement as to the imperativeness of the church articles and covenants. That though there are many individualities, there may be a oneness of purpose attributable to gospel unity.

And he that repenteth not of his sins, and confesseth them not, then ye shall bring him before the church, and do with him as the scriptures saith unto you, either by commandment, or by revelation. And this ye shall do that God might be glorified, not because ye forgive not, having not compassion, but that ye may be justified in the eyes of the law, that ye may not offend him who is your Lawgiver.—D. C. 64:2.

The above needs no comment; there is nothing in it ambiguous or meaningless, but another proof in favor of the imperativeness of God's law. And whether by sheer negligence or by an evading method, the above is neglected it were transgression in the sight of God. It therefore cannot follow that parliamentarianism, as understood in the common acceptation of the term, according to modern phraseology, and the verity of God's law are identical.

Though the adoption of the former, for agreeing on measures to carry out the purposes of God, as reflected in his divine law, may be permissible, but to subvert those laws, never.

As one among other evidences that all are alike amenable to given and accepted law, provision is made to try the president, if in transgression; and the decision of the authorized tribunal in his case, is to be the end of controversy, and all this because none are exempt from the law of God, and "that all things may be done in order and solemnity" before God "according to truth and righteousness." (D. C. 104:37.)

Then from Doctrine and Covenants 68:3, we learn that "no bishop, or high priest," is to be "tried or condemned for crime, save it be before the first presidency;" but the outcome is to be according to the covenants and commandments of the church. So no evidence appears here in favor of special rights, class legislation, or the centralization of power for unholy purposes. So far from this, that all are alike amenable to given and accepted law. Therefore, the right of citizenship, or being elevated to positions of trust does not guarantee the right of changing, modifying, or dispensing with any given or accepted law.

And that there may be no clash be-tween general and local officials, paragraph 43 of section 104, Doctrine and Covenants, defines the duties under general law of each.

And for the general good of the body, and that no one member may deceive another, the Lord gave a pattern in all things, from which we learn that the obeying of God's ordinances, is a necessity; and further, that fruits of praise are only acceptable to God when brought forth according to the revelation and truths that God has given. Let us then by study render ourselves familiar with the pattern, that we neither watch for iniquity nor hold the guilty guiltless: but always desiring to aspire to a God-imposed gospel equilibrium, or in the language of Paul, let our moderation be known among men. Paragraph 7, section 46, Doctrine and Covenants, is very instructive touch. ing spiritual gifts, informing us that "the bishop of the church, and unto such as God shall appoint" "to watch over the church," and to the "elders of the church, are to have it given unto them [conditionally, of course] to discern all these gifts," "lest there be any professing and yet not be of God." This enables us to understand what elders are to see that Christ's law is kept. All are to teach and act according to the office in which they are appointed, hence the necessity for studying the commandments and promises (D. C. 1:7), that we neither stop short of nor transcend our imposed duty, thus constantly striving to do right because it is right to do right, as an evidence of a submission to God without mental reservation.

The necessity for activity in imposed duty is seen in the fact that by such activity we may prove ourselves watchmen on Zion's walls, that perchance we may be able to sound a needed warning of approaching dangers, with probable consequence, if inveigled therein. No vast amount of sagacity is needed to point to a danger when visible; but never ceasing gospel diligence may, when evinced according to the gifts and callings of God unto us, prevent danger. And if despite this diligence, danger comes to the surface, the manifest former diligence will rather help than hinder the requisite procedure to adjust it.

The application of God's method to meet and adjust difficulty which may confront us, requires no vast amount of human sagacity, the infinite God having spoken and revealed the But in the manifestation of a desire to evade, palliate, or condone a wrong; stifle or hinder a law-imposed inquiry, with a view to-in a legitimate manner—obtain the law-required amount of evidence, to either vindicate the innocent, punish the guilty, and foster the fair fame of the church, may require such a proficiency on the line of deception, sharp practice, etc., which those reproving the world of sin, etc., never should dream of, much less practice, because of the dread consequence to ensue in the event of the church being divided against itself. Christ's injunction (Matt. 5:48) to his disciples:—

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect, must be of some significance, which cannot be brushed away with a pish or a pshaw. Not that I would claim that thereby Christ intended to raise their anticipation to absolute perfection in this probation; but believe there are degrees of perfection, and that therefore they were to be perfect in their spheres as God was perfect in his; and that a practicable demonstration of this degree of perfection was an absolute preparatory work, in order to prepare to participate in God's absolute perfection. Hence the dogmatic assertion as to the impossibility of reaching perfection in any sense this side of the resurrection is unwarranted by the law of God, and if persisted in must tend to encourage inactivity rather than stimulating to a gospel-imposed activity. On the hypothesis that God's law is perfect, perfection must be reached by a practical observance of a perfect law. It therefore follows as a logical sequence, that if failing to practically observe the duties and obligations imposed by a perfect law, we are jeopardizing our prospects for reaching and enjoying the blessed effects of absolute perfection. If otherwise, the advocacy of a perfect law were the veriest twaddle - nothing to it.

I do not therefore understand that when any of the integral parts of the church are practically observing the injunction of a perfect law, are erring; but error consists in a failure to carry out these injunctions, whether by priest or people.

Every developed event attributable to our official acts contributes to the stability and extension of the Redeemer's kingdom among men or otherwise, and the events must be met as they are disposed of or adjusted, as given and accepted law impose, leaving sentimentalism, intrigue, sharp practice, etc., to those staggering under the deadly effects of a universal apostasy.

The whole superstructure of Christ's church is based on principle; principle must therefore be our polar star.

JAMES CAFFALL.

WHERE FROM, PLEASE?

Whether man is from Eden, according to Bible story, or from the farther remote origin assigned in the Darwinian theory, is yet an open question to some. How nice it would be to have it satisfactorily settled to all. While that is yet quite distant, some things very useful in our work can be furnished so we can tell where they are from and when they originated. Throughout our books and papers to quite an extent there is a serious lack in this regard.

Not long since in the HERALD there was an article of merit in some ways, strong and logical, chapter and verse were given to all quotations from the Bible (which could have been found with concordance), but of the history used not a single reference was given as to where it might be found.

Anything of sufficient merit to be used should be located. It is not enough to say Marsh said thus and so, or Mosheim said as follows; edition, volume, page, and paragraph should be given. For instance, in archæology, Priest has often been quoted, "The but seldom which edition. Christian System," by A. Campbell, has often been quoted by our writers and debaters; of it there are several editions, and which edition has been quoted from has very seldom been given, and often not even page, but something like this: Christian System, or, A. Campbell in C. S. Our ministry constantly on the move and the younger and rising ones especially should be thought of considerately in this connection, so that all placed before them be of the largest possible use to them.

In the case of daily papers it is often very desirable to know the issue as well as that it was the Chicago Tribune, or New York World. Anyone spending some weeks in special work along these lines as I have just done would perhaps be surprised at the room as well as need for improvement in this. Some of our later books came in for a large share.

Will all our writers please consider this. I hope they will and that much improvement will result. Where from, please, in definite terms, so matter can be found by anyone.

> For improvement, R. ETZENHOUSER.

IN GOOD FAITH.

None will question but what all those who subscribed for the lifting of the Graceland College debt did so in good faith, and some have already proved their faith by the paying in full the amount subscribed. It is to be supposed that all have the full intention of meeting their obligation, however, it has come to my ear that some are both ready and willing to pay whenever they are called upon. Now to all such permit me to say: While you are thus waiting, the interest upon the debt is growing apace with each departing day, and thus increasing and augmenting the responsibility of the church, that in some way will have to be met, and the longer this debt is allowed to run, the more cash will it take to wipe it out; whereas, if you who have subscribed, and are both willing and ready to do your part, would promptly remit to Bishop E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa, you would be accomplishing a greater and a better work than if you wait until the money is called for. This is made plain in that it not only pays off so much of the debt, but likewise stops the interest on that much of the debt.

Having accomplished so good a work for the church, and thus relieving the anxiety of those entrusted with this work, you would certainly feel a satisfaction and peace that cannot be expressed by the pen. Do not hesitate about this matter, or feel fearful that you will displease either the bishop or the board of trustees, and although I have no authority to direct in this business, nevertheless I can assure the church that all the trustees are alive to the liquidation of the college debt. And the sooner the debt is satisfied, the sooner will new life be imparted to Graceland, and its importance as a church institution be understood.

Please do not think that I write for fun upon this college question, or that I am meddlesome in other people's business, for that is not the case. So you have been amused only, at our continuous efforts, be advised, that with others I was chosen by the General Conference to look after, care for, and seek to have Graceland College fulfill the purpose of its creation, and do not forget that all these humble requests are authoritative, and our vouchers in part to the general body of our faithfulness to the trust and stewardship reposited upon us.

For payment upon the indebtedness you can send direct to the bishop, and for running expense you may send to the undersigned.

I take pleasure in stating that the clouds that have darkened the horizon hitherto have now taken on a brighter tint, and a silver lining begins to appear. Now will you by helpfulness strengthen our hands for the work?

Let the watchword of all be: A long pull, a strong pull, and all pull together! So might it be.

Box 224.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

"You will not be sorry for hearing before judging, for thinking before speaking, for holding an angry tongue, for stopping the ear to a tale bearer, for disbelieving most of the ill reports, for being kind to the distressed, for doing good to all men, for asking pardon for all wrongs, for speaking evil of no one, for being courteous to all."

The Optimist, a little journal published monthly at Boone, Iowa, is one of the brightest magazines which come to our desk. It makes the claim of being the only Iowa magazine, and in its first year has reached a circulation of 10,000.

Letter Department.

UNDERWOOD, Ia., Jan. 18.

Dear Saints:—As knowledge dispels ignorance from my mind and takes its place, I crave for more of its enlightening power. If God has called me to his work, and I make that claim, there should be a great difference between my works and the ministrations of one who does not claim inspiration from God. No higher claim could be made than "called of God." What does it not mean? And yet, of what worth is the claim to the sons of men unless attended by heavenly works?

Occasionally, when flashes of inspiration sweep through my soul, and I am given to know that this latter-day work is of God, I wonder who knows to what usefulness and power that man may attain who has entered into the work of the Lord and who then studies diligently and works faithfully with an eye single to the glory of God? Who knows? "Made in the image of God," and engaged in the work of an infinite mind!

More and more I see the futility of condemning others for not obeying the gospel just when we would love to have them do so, and the necessity of living holy lives and declaring the gospel with faith, and with the sound of rejoicing, and as the sound of a trumpet, thereby leading them to God. How many, whom we think ought to obey the gospel, have been kept from the living God by our bad works and unwise sayings. Oh! may the day soon dawn when more of those who profess godliness shall do nothing but push forward the work! We believe the morning has come and gone and the noon has passed and the even has come: let us work while it is yet called day. It means much to live acceptably to God.

When we look at the heavens and see how the planets shine, and then at the crowning work of God, and then think, we are led to ery out, "How much more should an immortal soul shine than a planet!" The one moves according to God's design, the other does not. Why do we not shine as the stars, become clear as the moon and bright as the sun? Part of God's law has been neglected, part of it we have extolled. The same lips that taught "repent and be baptized." have said. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse." The former is a means of entrance into the kingdom; the latter is one of the means of pushing the work to other places. Is it just that we, who have been honored of heaven. should be criminally inattentive to our fellow men? God has spoken the one, concerning tithing, as well as the others; do we disbelieve him? No, oh, no! Do we believe and then not do? Let us not stand as did the fig tree, professing without fruit, for then, blasting awaits us. God lives and reigns. Let us move on the rock and shine, for we can shine if it is our holy object.

The more I comprehend God's ways and what he has done for me, the more willing I am to sacrifice for him. May he ever be my abiding friend and God!

The past month, my voice has been heard in churches, schoolhouses, and halls declaring to unbelievers and Christians the power of Christ. Last week and over Sunday I held meetings in Crescent. Sunday evening the church was full, and at the close I was glad, for liberty of thought and speech had been given me from heaven. Such blessing cheers me and give me hope when clouds cast their shadows over me.

Let us awake to a better understanding of God and a higher conception of life! Let us awake and serve God, for surely, Zion ere long, shall be redeemed!

Blest be thou, O God of Israel,
Thou, our Father and our Lord!
Blest thy majesty forever!
Ever be thy name adored.

Thine, O Lord, are power and greatness, Glory, victory a e thine own; All is thine in earth and heaven, Over all thy boundless throne.

Riches come of thee, and honor, Power and might to thee belong; Thine it is to make us prosper, Only thine to make us strong.

PAUL M. HANSON.

CREOLA, Ohio, Jan 21.

Editor Herald:—I started out the first of the year in missionary work in Bro. Kelley's field. Held six meetings at Ashmont, Ohio. Had the use of the M. E. church while there. Had good sized audiences and felt blessed by the divine Spirit in dispensing the word of life. There was quite a spirit of inquiry among the people, and we think by continued effort there will be an ingathering by and by.

We have some very good Saints living at that point and in the regions round about. These few Saints have struggled hard for years to get the gospel before the people, as on account of the prejudice in the minds of the people, no interest could be had, until recently. This is entirely due to the godly lives of the Saints. We shall keep an eye on that part of the country, and if possible will preach a few sermons on our way west to General Conference.

On the 13th inst., on urgent request, I stopped off at Cleveland and preached for them at morning service. Bro. E. Miller has been having quite a serious time for some weeks on account of diphtheria in his family. He has been under quarantine for several weeks. Bro. Ed. is a hustler, and is much missed by the Saints when absent.

Bro. O. B. Thomas has been assigned to labor in Cleveland for a few months, beginning operations last Sunday. We hope by the coöperation of the Saints there he may accomplish much good for the cause of the Master. He is active, industrious, and an able minister in the cause of Christ. We look for good results from his efforts there.

On the evening of the 13th, I arrived in Columbus in time for evening service, occupying the rostrum, being greeted by a fair-sized and interested audience.

We continued the efforts three nights longer with apparent success in retaining the interest. We had the pleasure of meeting our old time friend and brother, Elder T. J. Beatty, who, with the aid of Bro. V. M. Goodrich, has accomplished a great work in the capital city of Chio, as we now have a very interesting branch there with prospect of many being added by baptism. Bro Beatty is feeling well spiritually and fairly well physically. He is held in high esteem by the people, judging from the reports that came to us during our stay there. Bro. V. M. Goodrich was at home on account of sickness in his family, and his labors, as well as Bro. Beatty's, are highly appreciated and still in demand.

Bro Josiah Matthews, whom we baptized years ago while he was a very young man, is president of the branch, and takes an active part in the work and is applying himself to study to make a polished workman in the church. His companion is willingly seconding his efforts. It is a pleasure, indeed, to see man and wife working together in the interests of the kingdom of God, and the salvation of their fellow men. Srs. Schofield. Eichorn, Graham, and Smith, Bro. Green and wife, Bro. and Sr. Thorp, and many others are striving with all their might to keep the campfire blazing. We were cared for at the home of Sr. Schofield, who with her family made my sojourn with them very pleasant. Thanks!

Arrived in this place on the evening of the 17th, just in time to be ushered into the pulpit, and have been at it ever since, occupying the rostrum nightly. Will continue until Saturday next. There have been some wonderful changes wrought in this little place since I was here before. Some twenty-six have been added to the church by baptism since my last visit. There are more investigating, and seem very near the kingdom. We are enjoying excellent liberty in preaching and have large attendance. They have also erected a commodious house of worship which is indeed a great credit to the Saints here. Dimensions 30x44, with everything complete to make it a comfortable place of meeting. They have a flourishing Sabbath school, also a Religio, which proves they are alive to the interest of the work here. Bro. A. B. Kirkendall is steadying the ark assisted by Brn. Long and Thomason as Priest and Teacher, respectively; all of whom are young men and full of the gospel fire. Hence we look for good results in the future. Sr. Kirkendall is leading the singers and trying to make that department of church work attractive, to the outsiders, as well as pleasurable to the Saints. Oh, yes, they have a Prayer Union, too; and, by the way, it has accomplished much good, as the following will show. With one exception the husbands of the faithful attendants at the services were not in the church, but after years of prayers on the part of the sisters every man of them is now in the church and an honor to it, one of whom was a rigid Catholic for forty years but now bears a strong testimony to the truthfulness and the divinity of the latter-day work.

On Saturday, 19th inst, we and Bro. James Moler composed an elder's court to try three persons for apostasy. Those three with three others have formed a new organization to be know as "The Church of God called to be Saints," with the distinct understanding that no book outside of the King James translation of the Bible is to be held for a standard, or guide. The formality of calling men by revelation or ordaining by the laying on of hands is done away with, and every man who feels it his duty and has a desire to preach is qualified, so say they. However, they teach men must repent, believe, be baptized by immersion for the remission of sin, receive the laying on of hands for the Holy Ghost. We sincerely hope these poor, short-sighted brethren will see their error and repent and return to their Father's house, ere too late.

Bro. James Moler has grown no less if we judge by outward appearance, notwithstanding the fact that he fasts every day to reduce his corpulence. However, we wish him success in his new undertaking. Bro. Moler will leave with his family for his new home in Holden, Missouri, about March first. He will be greatly missed in this district where he has labored so faithfully for years.

Bro. H. E. Moler stopped over Sunday with us on his way to his mission. He gave us one sermon Sunday afternoon, which was appreciated very much.

Had the pleasure of a five minutes' conversation with Bro. S. J. Jeffers at Wellston on his way home. It seemed good to meet these brethren after so many years' separation. It brought to mind many happy scenes of the days of yore.

I also wish to call attention of the following brethren missionaries on the Pacific slope mission, that I have not yet received their reports, which possibly have miscarried: T. W. Chatburn, T. W. Williams, David Anderson, A. B. Phillips, Joseph F. Burton, F. B. Blair, E. P. Smith, and Thomas Daley. The brethren and Saints there are still remembered with kindly feelings.

I go from here to Weldon, thence to Jackson, and to Limerick to attend conference, February 2, 1901.

Wishing all a prosperous and happy New Year, I remain,

Your brother in the one faith,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

DELHI, January 17.

Editors Herald:—I have been busily engaged in gospel work in this vicinity since the new year, and had the pleasure of baptizing one, Mrs. Barham, last Tuesday, the 15th. She is a noble woman, and will be an honor to the cause here. There are others we expect to follow her, in the near future.

I have also opened up an administration at the town of Norwich, assisted by Elder Mc-Donald, with small but very attentive audience. Expect good to be accomplished there.

Wishing the editors and HERALD readers a happy new year,

Yours in gospel bonds, SAMUEL TOMLINSON.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Jan. 18.

Editors Herald:—My heart's desire is to do all I can for the work. I was long afflicted so that I could not hear, and did not go to church. I was in a condition that I never heard anyone tell of. I felt I had no friends. Finally, in 1896 I thought my time was short. The pain was so bad in my head and body that I went east, and when I came back it seemed that I heard something say, "Go to church and you will hear." I went, and heard some; then I went as often as I could. Then I was impressed to write to the HERALD, and something told me that it would not be printed. I sent it, and it was printed. I think it was the evil spirit. As that leaves me I can hear better. I think God has a work for me to do, and I must be tried. I feel to thank him every day for his care, and pray that I may not faint by the way. I feel glad that the pain in body and head is gone. The medicine that has done it is, trying to do my duty, and consecrated oil. That always eases my head. The evil spirit tries to discourage me, but I am still pleading with the Father for grace. I feel glad that when I am called to the stand the darkness is not so bad. I pray God to keep us all in the right way.

> Your brother in the gospel, F. T. Dobie.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jan. 21.

Dear Herald:-When I last wrote for your pages I was at Fort Worth, Texas, the latter part of May. So it has been some time since the HERALD readers have known anything of my labors. I left Fort Worth, May 31, and arrived in San Antonio the next morning early; preached each night and twice on Sunday until the 6th, when with Bro. Thomas Jett and family I started for the mountains of Texas, to attend a conference of the Southwest Texas district. We arrived the next day in time to take part in the eleven o'clock services. Found a goodly number of the Saints camped on the ground, all having come with the expectation of enjoying themselves. I preached each night and three times on Sunday, continuing until Tuesday night following. Bro. Hodges took me to Bandera next morning, where I stopped with our whilom brother, J. A. Currie, Jr., until Thursday, when Bro. O. D. Johnson came for me and we started for the Medina branch, farther up in the mountains. We stopped with my cousin that night, Sr. Hattie Minear, and next day drove to Bro. R. E. Love's; began services that night, and staid until we had held seven services, and on Thursday returned to Bro. Johnson's. Rested Friday.

Saturday, with Bro. Johnson and Jesse Currie, visited the place of my birth. The place is situated about fifteen miles south of Bandera, and is known throughout that country as "Old Mormon Camp." It is the place to where my grandfather led and located a colony of Saints after the death of Joseph Smith. It is a beautiful place, surrounded on two sides by high, rocky bluffs, and on two sides by the Medina river, and shaded by numerous trees of the pecan, hackberry, and live oak varieties. The ruins of the houses still remain. I was there on the 23d day of June, 1900, making it almost forty-five years after my birth, as I was born December 15, 1855. Some of the chimneys are still standing, so that one can tell what they were. Bro. Jesse Currie is a photographer and took three different views of the ruins, in each of which I appear. One of them was taken as I was standing by a small mesquite tree, that has grown up on the site of my grandfather's house, and shows the chimney still standing about seven feet high. Memories of the days gone by crowded round me. Those hills had echoed to the sound of childish laughter, and the songs of Zion had resounded through those trees. My father's hands, now dust, had helped to pile those stones, mute evidences of a once busy community now scattered to the four winds. I expect now that even those evidences have been obliterated, for on July 15th there occurred one of the greatest floods ever known in that country. The Medina river rose forty-one feet, and as the ground of the old settlement is only about twelve or fifteen feet above the river, this place must have been twenty-five feet under water at least. Had the flood occurred fortyfive years ago, there would have been an appalling disaster to record, as the rise was so sudden, that few would have escaped.

On the next day I preached, at eleven o'clock, the funeral of Sr. Maggie Chipman, and occupied in the afternoon the hour of a Methodist minister who failed to appear, and the next day started on my return trip to San Antonio, in company with Bro. and Sr. Johnson, and their daughter Vida. We arrived there Tuesday, and I took up my abode at Sr. Merritt's. I found Bro. I. P. Baggerly holding meetings in a small grove, as the Saints have no house of worship of their own. At his request I spoke that night, and alternated with him until July 5, when I left for Cook's Point to meet with the Central Texas district in conference. Brn. Henson and Sheppard joined me here, and after conference Bro. Henson went on to San Antonio, his mission, and Bro. Sheppard and I staid until the 14th, holding meetings each night, thence on to Texas Central branch, where we held forth until the 19th, going on the morning of the 20th to Dallas and Elam. At the latter place I held forth five times, with splendid interest, on the Book of Mormon and the divine calling of the nineteenth century prophet.

An early hour on the morning of the 26th found me enroute to Dallas, where I took the Santa Fe for Paris, and thence to Bagwell. thirteen miles north, where the Northeast Texas and Choctaw conference was to be held. Bro. E. A. Erwin met me at the train and took me to Bro. Goolsby's, where we staid for the night, and met Brn. E. Short, E. D. Bailey, J. Cole Moxon, and Sr. Carrie Bailey, and together we went to the place of conference. Many of the Saints had already assembled and were camped on the ground; a commodious arbor had been constructed, lighted by large pine knot, fires built on platforms about three feet from the ground. Here is where Bro. A. J. Moore and Elder Chism of the Christian Church measured swords a few years ago, and where Mr. Chism had boasted that he had killed Mormonism. I had the privilege, however, of speaking to an audience of, by actual count, over five hundred people. The preaching was done by Brn. Short, Erwin (J. D.), J. Cole Moxon, and myself, and Mormonism presented a very lively appearance for a corpse. Seven were baptized by Bro. E. A. Erwin, one elder ordained, and much good instruction given the Saints, especially by Bro. Short.

In company with Brn. Bailey, Short, Moxon, and Sr. Bailey, I left on Thursday, July 31, for Grannis, Arkansas, thence to Cove, where I preached once on August 1. From there I proceeded over the Port Arthur and Choctaw routes to El Reno, Oklahoma, and from there over the Rock Island to Hennessey, to attend the Oklahoma reunion. Arrived on the grounds late the afternoon of the third, but in time to assist Bro. Keck in the opening discourse. I found here a band of earnest workers bent on doing their utmost to make the cause honorable. Ten days were spent in the enjoyment of association of Saints and in preaching the word. Much good was done, we believe, to both Saint and sinner. Eight were baptized at the close of the reunion by Bro. Macrae, and it was unanimously decided to meet again next year.

From the reunion I went home by wagon with Bro. and Sr. McGeorge, and remained with them two weeks, preaching each night. This is the Oak Grove branch, and is composed of a few earnest workers known for good among all the regions round about. From there I was taken by Sr. Hughs to Bro. S. J. Hinkle's, near Stillwater. Bro. Hinkle took me to Bro. Thomas N. Berry's, but openings for preaching not being good just then, I soon took my departure from Stillwater by stage to Perry. From there over the Santa Fe to Paul's Valley, where I found Bro. J. M. Crawford holding the fort as best he could. He took me by team to McGee, about twenty miles east, where I found a stopping place at a Mr. Henry Duncan's, while I remained in that vicinity. I gave out an appointment and began the next night to small audiences, but the attendance increased until Saturday night, when I found when I arrived at the place of meeting that a Methodist and Baptist were in my place. They pleaded a previous appointment for that night and the next day, so I yielded, but they were wound up and could not stop, so continued all the next week and over Sunday, and I had to look on. During their meeting I got a chance to talk privately to a few, and took two subscriptions to Ensign, and sold a Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. When they got through I held three more meetings, and then was rained out. On the last Sunday of their meeting I attended a baptism of the Baptist ministersaw him baptize two. When he came out of the water I announced to the crowd that I had two candidates for baptism, and after singing those beautiful words that commemorate the baptism of Bro. David H. Smith, written by himself-531 Saints' Harp-I led Mr. and Mrs. Duncan into the water and buried them with Christ in baptism. I do not think that many of that crowd will easily forget the singing of that hymn. One man came to me afterwards and said that for beauty of sentiment it was the finest he ever heard, and deplored the fact that sentiment of the proper kind had become almost a thing unknown in religious hymns.

I had come to Paul's Valley on September 1; it was the 23d before I left. Brn. Duncan and Crawford came after me, and on the 24th in the waters of the Washita river, I baptized his daughter, confirming her the same night at home, and at two o'clock the next morning took train for Wilburton, Indian Territory over the Santa Fe and Choctaw routes. I began meetings on the 26th and continued without intermission until October 14, preaching my last sermon on Sunday night, and taking the train at 10:30 p. m. for Cove, Arkansas, to begin meetings the next night. I arrived at Bro. Newton's the next morning at four o'clock, and took a short rest and sleep before being called to breakfast. Began meetings that night and continued preaching to good audiences until the 28th, when I baptized four, all adults. The next day went to Grannis and began in their beautiful new church, preaching sixteen sermons and closed my effort there on the 11th. The last day Bro. Newton and about thirty of the Cove Saints came down and we had a very enjoyable time. Two were baptized at the close of this meeting by Bro. John Harp.

At midnight I took train with the Cove Saints, and at 2:50 p. m. next day, the Cove and Grannis Saints kindly furnishing me the means to do so, I left Cove for a visit home, arriving there the next day at 10:30 a. m. Found all well, and spent nearly three weeks visiting home folks and looking after the needs of my family. Spoke four or five times to the Saints at St. Joseph while home, and left home the evening of November 30. My home visit was a treat to me, as I had been just six months and two days absent, and I am thankful to the generous Saints of Cove and Grannis that made it possible.

I met Bro. G. H. Hilliard at Kansas City by previous arrangements, and at 9:15 p. m. our train rolled out of the Wyandotte street depot for the sunny South. We arrived at Cove in time to participate in the conference exercises the next day, and met a number of Saints from different parts of the district. Bro. Hilliard gave much good instruction to the Saints, preaching until the Wednesday night following the conference, when he went to Grannis, and I continued to hold forth at Cove. Much good is being done at these two points by the untiring zeal of Brn. Newton and Bailey, and their efficient corps of workers.

On Monday, December 10, I left Cove, joining Bro. Hilliard at Grannis. We went via Texarkana and Fort Worth to Beaver, Texas, where Bro. A. J. Moore lives. I had contracted a severe cold while at home, which unfitted me for services, so Bro. Hilliard did all or nearly all the preaching while here and at Oklaunion. We stayed at these two places until the 18th, when we left for Fort Worth, where we spent a very pleasant evening with the family of Bro. McFarland. Bro. Nicoll came in and Bro. Hilliard talked to them a while on their duty and development along spiritual lines.

Early next morning we boarded the Santa Fe and were off for Cook's Point, where an appointment had been sent ahead. A few Saints assembled, and for three nights Bro. Hilliard discoursed to them on the law of tithes and offerings and other duties. Saturday morning, the 22d, Bro. John Sherill took us to the Brazos river, where we found a ferry boat to take us across, and a short walk brought us to the H. & B. V. depot, where we took train for Hearne, where we were met by Bro. S. R. Hay, and were told that he already had an appointment out for the night. Bro. Hilliard spoke to the people here three times, Saturday night and twice on Sunday, I still being under the weather. Monday morning early we were on our way to the depot, where we took the I. and G. N. for San Antonio, where we arrived about six p. m. on Christmas eve and put up with Sr. We held seven meetings with Merritt. small audiences, except Sunday night, when we had the house comfortably filled.

On the 4th of the present month we started by team for the mountains of Texas again. Drove to Bandera the first night, leaving an appointment at Pipe Creek for the following Thursday. We staid with Bro. Jesse Currie that night, and drove to Bro. R. E. Love's the next day; got out appointment for Sunday, and held until Wednesday night to small but attentive audiences. I had so far recovered my voice that I did my share of the preaching here and at San Antonio. Sickness prevented many from coming out at these meetings. We returned to Pipe Creek in time to fill our appointment Thursday, but only three or four greeted us, as the day had been cloudy and threatening. Friday night we had a larger crowd, also Saturday and Sunday. We were unfortunate in going up there in the dark of the moon. The people are scattered so, and the roads are dark and rocky. Sunday we had both of our meetings in the day time. It was quite an experience for me, who had been raised in the north, to pichic out under the shade of a live oak tree on the 13th of January, but we all enjoyed it. Bro. Hilliard gave us two extra good sermons here. One sister remarked after we had closed the meetings, that she thought that if Bro. Hilliard and I could remain there a while we would convert the whole neighborhood. Early Monday morning we left Bro. Clark's for San Antonio again, arriving there before dark.

On Wednesday, Bro. Hilliard left me and started to California. Our association had been very pleasant and profitable to me, and I felt loth to give him the parting hand.

In some parts of this large mission the work is prospering finely. Oklahoma is in the lead, I believe. The probable reason, however, is that we have more laborers there than in Texas, with less ground to cover. We need more laborers in Texas, as in every other part of the world. There is need of careful men to be set over branches and districts; men who keep the Word of Wisdom are badly needed here to take charge of branches and instruct the Saints in their duties. We have a number of such men now, but not enough. I have never seen the wisdom of the statement made in the revelation of '94.as I have since coming to this field, where it says: "To ordain and set High Priests to preside over large branches and districts." I believe that these men should be sent by General Conference to take charge of the different places and placed in position, when they could devote all their time to the work of building up of the branches and instructing them in the law, leaving the Twelve and Seventy to push their work into other and new fields. When this revelation was received there was a general stampede of the Seventy away from branches without the above being complied with. I think this was a mistake, and I believe the work in some parts suffered by it. A great deal has been said in the past about "lounging around branches," and "having a good time among the Saints," and words of similar import. But it becomes necessary sometimes to look after branches, and if a brother has a talent that way I am not going to envy him, but say Godspeed. One of the most arduous labors we have is the keeping the sheep and lambs fed.

My experience goes to prove to me that if I want to have a good time it is to get out, open new places, even if I do have to endure some hardships and privations. You are then free at least from perils by false brethren, and free from the carking cares incident to trying to adjust difficulties which occur occasionally between brother and brother, or sister and sister, and when the pebble of discontent or trouble is dropped in the water, and the waves circle round with a shock, you are too far out to feel the shock much. Some men, however, are ambitious for place and power in the church, but I never could see why anyone should be so. I am willing, as God gives me strength, to discharge responsibility that may be placed upon me by the church, but to seek for greater responsibility is a step that I never expect to take, or to be envious of my brother because he may be called to positions of greater responsibility than myself. There is a laudable ambition, however, that all men should have, But that ambition causes a man to seek to fill the position he has, and to do well his part, humble though it may be. Robert G. Ingersoll said he had no use for a man who "rattled in his place," or in other words does not fill his place.

Some men come to the conclusion that the church cannot get along without them, but this is a mistake, unless they are doing exactly right. Such men as that are an absolute necessity to any church or society that wants to do right, and for such men the church will always find a use. Some men are always alert to the interest of their church or cause, whatever it may be. Among them I must mention Bro. A. L. Newton, of Cove, Arkansas. In a recent letter to me he says he and his coworkers have made another fight on the saloon, and have succeeded in banishing it from Cove another two years at least. They have thus far been successful in keeping saloons out of the place, and their influence for good has been felt all along the line of the Port Arthur route. While I was there I met quite a number of traveling men. who told me that their ideas of our people had been entirely changed by their contact with the people at Cove. The man who can be successful in getting people into the church is a necessity, but without the man who can be successful in developing them, his work is a failure, unless he can do both. It is useless for us to bear our testimony that we have the best system of religion unless we show that it begets the best people, then we do not need to bear our testimony with our lips, as our "actions speak louder than words."

Only two districts in my mission are organized according to what I understand the law contemplates, with high priests to preside, who are at liberty to spend all of their time in the work. Bro. E. W. Nunley presides over the Texas Central, and Bro. A. J. Moore over the Northwest Texas district, both have been hindered from doing all they wanted to by sickness and other cares. I hope, however, to see a marked improvement in the future along these lines. I seldom occupy much space in the HERALD, and this is my apology for occupying so much at once. Then, too, the present system of reports contemplates the keeping the church informed through the columns of the HERALD and Ensign of the details of our work as missionaries. Hoping for peace and unity,

I am yours,

H. O. SMITH.

SPICKARDS, Mo., Jan. 22.

Editors Herald:—We have been visited recently by Brn. Foss and Walter Smith. They gave us some good sermons. Our meetings were disturbed by some thoughtless boys, who were promptly fined for their bad conduct. This never occurred before, and we hope will not again. Our regular meetings are attended by most of the young people of this community, our church being usually filled on Sunday nights. Whether the gospel seed sown from time to time will bring fruit remains to be seen.

While there are some things not just as we could wish, yet we think our little branch is in good condition. Bro. Frank Chatburn preaches for us when home, and his sermons are well received by outsiders. He draws a crowd when it is known he is to speak.

Bro. Walter Smith's sermons were favorably spoken of by all the people.

We have good, spiritual prayer meetings, and most of our members, we think, are zealous and alive in the work. We are within a day's drive of Lamoni (not by telegraph either), so we are in the "regions round about," and we hope to be assisting and not hindering the building up of Zion.

Your brother in Christ, E. MORRISON.

CARBERRY, Man., Jan. 21.

Editors Herald:—On account of cold, rough, stormy weather, and badly drifted roads, I am pretty well housed up. Practically, I have done nothing since the first of the year, except to write, which of itself is not very satisfactory to the writer. I obtained an opening at Carlington schoolhouse, but could not continue the effort, much to my sorrow. The people appear interested, and I believe would give me a good hearing if the roads were fit to travel and the weather not so uncertain. Not many care to leave the fireside, and as a general thing there is little or no accommodation for teams, when service is held in a schoolhouse.

As the winter is but half over, and the most stormy half yet to come, I expect to labor in the east until spring opens, when, if God does not will otherwise, I will return and renew the struggle remaining till winter. Have been in the west just one half year, and give the following brief summary of labor. Preached 133 sermons, and canceled in the neighborhood of 30 services for various causes. Baptized and confirmed 16. Organized one Sunday school, and leave one school. and two branches to organize upon my return. Ordained 1 priest, 1 teacher. Sold 3 copies Book of Mormon; 3 Doctrine and Covenants; 4 volumes Church History; 9 copies of Book of Mormon Vindicated, and 17 copies of the Voice of Warning. Obtained 1 subscription to HERALD and 1 to Ensign, Gospel Quarterlies, etc.

Praying for grace to continue active in this holy faith, and for the blessing of God to follow my feeble effort of the past six months,

For victory,

FRED'K. GREGORY.

Editors Herald:-I think it possible those Saints who have been lifelong members of Latter Day Saint Church, and have enjoyed its influence, privileges, and society, do not fully realize how the doctrine of polygamy retards the kingdom of heaven on earth; how it hinders the honest seeker from finding the truth, because it is so revolting to the most sacred feelings, and fills the mind with prejudice. The way of truth is straight and narrow; but that monstrosity was brought in by stealth, and placed into it fraudulently. When the investigator finds that in his way, he turns back and seeks no more in that direction. Those of the Reorganization may think this simile unfair to them, for, say they, we are in nowise connected with Utah Mormonism-have nothing to do with them.

I want to tell them, for I know, because I have always lived among the world's people. that that chapter on Mormonism, in the contemplated history of Illinois, is an index to what people think generally of Latter Day Saints, and is not confined to Illinois alone. All the churches, all speakers and writers against Mormonism; the world's people, all persist in saying they are alike. To them Latter Day Saint means Mormonism, and Mormonism means polygamy. And after you have proved the Reorganization has no connection with Utah Mormonism, still the opinion prevails that the Reorganized Church seceded from the polygamous church: was broken off, or reorganized out of it, leaving out polygamy. The Utah elders themselves agree to have the world think as they do, and are even now in all new places preaching and proclaiming themselves true Latter Day Saints; and whenever they can meet a better reception by passing themselves off as of the Reorganization, they do so.

Our elders have all this false history to combat, and the prejudice it has engendered to clear away, as they go out in the world to preach,—a work no other preacher has to do. What could be more noble than to go to Utah and try to rescue the few honest from that pesthouse of polygamy? I do sincerely appreciate Bro. Anderson's motive in his effort to show up the polygamous methods. He did not sit and listen out of morbid curiosity. but to show the world the difference, for they say there is none. Bro. Anderson is the first to raise the curtain and show to the world the inside of a conference of nolvesmists. Sorry he was called away, because I wanted the world to have the benefit of the whole scene, while the light was turned on. We want them to know just where that stench belongs, and what the difference is; for we isolated ones have to hear it said, "There is no difference, they are all polygamists; however much they deny it, they are of the lowest ignorant class," etc., etc.

Are not those polygamists of that class who have turned the grace of God into lasciviousness, and made lies their refuge, and under falsehood have hid themselves; and who is willing and able to sweep away the refuge of lies, and uncover their hidden iniquity, unless the Reorganization does the work?

Just one thing more before I close. Where is the reliable history of the church before Smith's death in 1844, if his private secretary took all his books and papers, even to his private diary? I think I have been told, that the editors and writers of such papers as the Millennial Star and the Seer, all went subsequently to Utah, as did P. P. Pratt, the author of the Voice of Warning. These books and papers are often referred to for bits of history, and all these affiliated with the Utah Church. Who can tell when they degenerated from true Saints into polygamists? Who knows when or where to draw the line? I am for justice and right.

MRS M. J. KEAGLE.

[THE chapter on "Mormonism" in the History of Illinois, referred to by Sr. Keagle, has been revised by the author. It will be published at a later date in the HERALD.—ED 1

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"What though the tendrils may not claim the fruit?
There must be tendrils on the growing vine
To hold to high resolve the heavy shoot,
To help the inner life to rise and shine,
And sway in gladness over the cramping sod,
To keep its bloom and treasure clean for God."

The two following papers—the one upon "Hygiene," read before the Lamoni local, and the one upon "The Marriage Covenant of our Church," read before the Dow City local—seem to cover more completely the object had in view in asking that they be written than any which have thus far been sent in. All, however, are good, but not so much to the point as these.

Science, for the good of society and the state, steps forward and demands that the individual shall be sound in body, and that the object of this perfect health—this soundness of body—be not defeated; it also demands supreme affection upon the part of those entering into the marriage relation, boldly affirming that the latter (and it alone) has power to overcome or annul the evil inherited from our ancestors. Consider carefully the law of our church, or the commandments of the Lord in regard to the hygiene of our homes, and answer if science has demonstrated any more effectual laws for the obtaining and preserving of perfect health? Add to these specific commands the broader one, "To obtain knowledge from all good books," and we think none can deny the fact that the entire ground is covered.

Consider then the binding nature of our marriage covenant, and answer what remains lacking that supreme affection is not secured by those who take these holy vows upon their lips? Then the question arises, Whence comes this marvelous agreement of science with the polity of the latter-day work? It is a question worthy of our most careful consideration, and one which ought surely to challenge the attention of those opposing us.

"HYGIENE OF OUR HOMES."

When considering the subject of the Hygiene of our Homes, one very important point is cleanliness. Cleanliness means a great deal, especially to the tired mother who-having four or five little ones to look after-is doing her own housework. For how many things there are in a house to keep clean. No wonder people are beginning to cry out against having so many unnecessary articles in the home. We will all agree, I think, that to keep a house and family of children clean, means work for all. But as one of the things we are commanded to do is to work, why it is a blessing that we must work to keep clean, otherwise we might not take the exercise needed.

We are all quite sure that to be healthy we must not be idle. We are told in the Doctrine and Covenants, section 42, paragraph 12, that we must not be idle, "for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer;" and also in section 85:38, we find the command, "Cease to be idle." We see from these passages that the Master does not uphold idleness.

I wonder if he sanctions cleanliness.

In section 42:12, he says, "Let all things be done in cleanliness," and in section 85:38 the command, "Cease to be unclean" is given; and again in section 119:3 we find him saying to the elders, "Be ye clean in your bodies and in your clothing." Surely this advice will apply to us as well as to the elders.

We see from this that there is need of keeping our bodies as well as our clothing clean, and I am afraid that bathing, the chief way of keeping the body clean, is neglected a great deal more than it should be in many homes.

What is sweeter than a child that is clean, and it is particularly sweet if it is being taught to work. Children, to be healthy, must have exercise; and if they haven't work to give them exercise a part of the time, they will probably find mischief to do, for play will become tiresome if it is the only kind of exercise they have.

The best time for exercise, whether work or study, is during the morning hours, for then the brain and muscles are rested and invigorated from a night of rest, and so are ready for the hardest kind of labor; while in the afternoon and evening the body is becoming more and more tired, therefore, is less able to stand vigorous exercise. I think that students, especially, make the mistake of studying in the evening, and yet what other time a day is so convenient for study.

"Early to bed and early to rise, Makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise."

This is an old saying we often hear, and I wouldn't wonder if we would stop to think it over, but what we would make up our minds that there is more truth in that little saying than we might at first think. The advice given by our Master in section 119:9 is to "take sleep in the hours set apart by God for the rebuilding and strengthening of the body and mind: for even now there are some, even among the elders, who are suffering in mind and body, who have disregarded the advice of the Spirit to retire early and to rise early, that vigor of mind and body may be retained. In section 85:38 we are told also to "cease to sleep longer than is needful," to retire to bed early, "that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your mind may be invigorated." I think we all know from our own experience that we feel better when we obey the voice of the Spirit. Retire to bed early "that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated."

Another very important point to consider, while thinking about this subject, is the ventilation of our homes; so although it is not mentioned in the Doctrine and Covenants, I take the liberty of mentioning it here. Of course we all know, without taking a second thought, that to be perfectly healthy we must provide some means by which pure air can enter our rooms, and also some way for bad air to escape. This is especially important in our sleeping apartments.

I wonder if we are all as particular about breathing as we should be. Children should be taught to breathe slowly and deeply, and through the nose. I understand that the expression, "to breathe deeply," means that a person should breathe so deeply that by placing the hand over the lower part of the body (the abdomen), motion could be felt there; that it is very important that the organs in the lower part of the body should be moved by each breath.

I wonder if it matters what we eat or drink.

I am quite sure there are some things mentioned in the Doctrine and Covenants that we should not use. In section 119: 3, there is instruction given to "avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example." In the Word of Wisdom, section 86, we are told that it is not pleasing in the sight of God to use strong drink.

Strong drinks are good for the washing of the body, and that of course means the outside. We are also told in this section that tobacco "is not good for man." Surely if it is not good for man it is not good for women and children, so let us women bear that in mind, and hereafter never take a cud of tobacco into our mouths, and never touch a pipe, cigar, or cigarette, to our lips, no matter how much we may like to use the floor or stovehearth for a spittoon, or how well it pleases us to make a smokehouse of our homes. The difference of course would be that in our homes it would be our husbands. children, and friends that were being smoked while in a real smokehouse it is hogs that are smoked after they are divided into hams, shoulders, and side meat.

There are things mentioned that are good for the use of man, for we are told in the same section that all wholesome herbs, with fruit and grains, were intended for man's We find also that the flesh of the 1186. "beasts and of the fowls of the air" hath been "ordained for the use of man." But "they are to be used sparingly," and it would please our heavenly Father if they were used only in times of winter, cold, or famine. In section 49:3. we find that "the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air," are "ordained for the use of man;" but "woe be unto man that sheddeth blood or that wasteth flesh and hath no need."

Another point which should be brought out while considering this question, is dress. I was able to find only one place in the Doctrine and Covenants where that subject was mentioned. In section 42:12 it says, "Let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands."

This is a passage that has been discussed by a great many people, and hardly any two seem to have the same opinion as to what it means. I am quite sure though that if we wish to dress for our own comfort and health, we must declare ourselves subjects of Queen Fashion no longer, and then forming a republic of our own, each individual acting as governor of her own particular state, we should adopt modes of dress more in keeping with the requirements of our bodies.

When we do this, we may find our health improving, and with good health comes that cheerfulness which is so essential to our wellbeing. Not only does health bring cheerfulness, but cheerfulness, in a measure at least, brings health; therefore, let us cultivate cheerfulness, and by so doing we may be able to help those around us, for what helps a poor, discouraged mortal so much as to be in the company of a cheerful, light-hearted person. We should be very careful though that we do not become light-minded.

I believe the Master recommends cheerfulness, for doesn't he say in section 119: 6, that "Saints should be cheerful in their warfare that they may be joyous in their triumph." Also in paragraph nine we have this instruction, "In cheerfulness do whatever may be permitted you to perform, that the blessing of peace may be upon all." Therefore, let me urge again that we cultivate cheerfulness, for cheerfulness in a home is like rays of sunshine, it brightens the whole household and seems to give new life to all with which it comes in contact.

Now suppose after all that someone in the household becomes sick, what are we to do? Well, the Master has given us instruction in section 42:12, "And whosever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live they shall live unto me."

Now since considering these different points that come under the head, "Hygiene of our Homes," i. e. cleanliness, exercise, sleeping, eating and drinking, dress, and cheerfulness, we can surely see that by obeying the commands of God we will not only receive better health, but will be more worthy of the great abundance of blessings that he gives us.

How good it would be if we could all live worthy of the blessings promised us in the latter part of section 86, where our Master says that "all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their naval, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen."

Read before the Daughters of Zion, December 14, 1900, by Alice E. Gould.

THE MARRIAGE COVENANT.

The marriage covenant of our church is very forcible, complete, and binding, though it is very brief. It includes the all essential points which are couched in these words: "Marriage should be celebrated with prayer and thanksgiving; and at the solemnization, the persons to be married, standing together, the man on the right, and the woman on the left, shall be addressed, by the person officiating, as he shall be directed by the Holy Spirit: and if there be no legal objections, he shall say, calling each by their names: 'You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other. and from all others, during your lives.' And when they have answered 'Yes,' he shall pronounce them 'husband and wife, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by virtue of the laws of the country and authority vested in him: 'May God add his blessings and keep you to fulfill your covenants from henceforth and forever. Amen."-Doc. and Cov. 111:3.

This covenant enjoins a virtuous, true and loving companionship during life, which is sealed by the impress of the Holy Spirit; and Paul's admonition to husbands and wives will apply with force in this connection, as follows: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the Savior of the body. Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything."—Eph. 5: 22-24.

It is not irksome for the wife to be thus submissive to her husband in everything, but it is a pleasure, an elevating pleasure and duty if the husband truly observes his part of the covenant, and always remembers to put into every day practice the advice given in the next verse by the same author, as follows: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it." With such love as this existing between husband and wife, home becomes a heaven here below; the sweetest and most sacred place on earth, and the sons and daughters will inherit loving dispositions and will develop into righteous men and women who will be a joy to their parents, a blessing to the church, and the pride of our glorious nation, America.

This thought is made strong by later revelation in these words: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else."

Polygamy is excluded, not only by the revelations found in the Book of Covenants, but also by the word of the Lord to the Nephites, thus: "Hearken to the word of the Lord, for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none."

The reason assigned by the Lord why this requirement of the marriage covenant should be observed is found in these words: "For I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women."—Jacob, Book of Mormon. To pursue the opposite course is to insult God, break the marriage covenant, and bring shame, sorrow, and contempt into the home, and disgrace and damnation to the souls who practice it. Polygamy has a blighting effect upon the home and the nation.

Speaking of the condition of the hearts of wives and children where polygamy exists, God said to the Nephites: "Ye have broken the hearts of your tender wives, and lost the confidence of your children, because of your bad examples before them; and the sobbings of their hearts ascend up unto God against you."—Jacob, Book of Mormon. God himself solemnized the first marriage in the garden of Eden, and said to the man: "Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh."—Gen. 2: 24.

Jesus makes this thought easy to be understood in these words: "For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh."—Matt. 19: 5.

The object had in view by the Almighty when he established the marriage covenant for the benefit of mankind, but especially for the benefit of his church, may be found in his words to the church as follows: "And again I say unto you, that whose forbiddeth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made."—D. C. 49: 3.

Read by Ida Butterworth, before the Dow City Daughters of Zion, December 15, 1990.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A sister in the church asks the Saints to offer a prayer to God in her behalf, that she may be given the blessings she has been long praying for, and that her days may be spent with God's people.

Flory Bolbey, of Cedarville, Missouri, not a member of the church, writes: "I ask the Prayer Union to remember me in my affliction, that if it is God's will I may be healed; and also that I may have faith to trust in God and hear the true gospel preached."

On the 5th of February the sisters of the Prayer Union are requested to fast and pray in behalf of Sr. Dora Parker and her baby, that they may be restored to health, if it is the Lord's will. Sister Dora is a faithful Prayer Union sister, and is willing to be submissive to the Lord's will.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

DON'TS FOR THE SUPERINTENDENT.

Don't be late.

Don't fail to see that the room is well ventilated. Don't overlook the passing visitor; make him feel so welcome he will want to come again. Don't speak criticisingly of one teacher or officer to another. Don't fail to encourage the teachers by speaking of the commendable features in their work. Don't forget the Christmas offering.

FOR THE TEACHER.

Don't change the subject too abruptly. Don't be discouraged. Don't set a poor example before your scholars. Don't forget to give previous notice to your class of your intended absence. Don't forget to have variety in your methods.

FOR THE CHORISTER.

Don't forget to be on time. Don't forget to select music in keeping with the lesson, when practicable. Don't forget to let the scholars choose a song or two occasionally.

-St. Louis Sunday School Advocate.

CHEERFUL IN WARFARE.

We should strive at all times to cultivate a cheerful spirit, and if we but make up our minds to do so no matter what the circumstances may be, or how discouraging, we will increase our happiness as well as the happiness of those around us.

Charles Lamb says, "A laugh is worth a thousand groans in any state of the market." Bishop Hall wrote, "For every bad there might be a worse; and when one breaks his leg let him be thankful it was not his neck."

There are none of us who have everything just as we would like to have them. Trials and vexations are incident to the lives of all of us from childhood to old age; but if we should all go about moping and grieving about them, what a sad world we would have. If we constantly allow ourselves to fret over our annoyances, our dispositions will become soured, causing unhappiness generally. . . .

We should all aim to look on the virtues and not the faults of those around us, and refrain from brooding over the trials of the past, but study how we might make the future bright and cheering. From proverbs we learn, that "a merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance; but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken." Is there anything more pleasing to behold than a bright and cheering countenance? especially to those that are downcast? It is just as cheering as to see the sunshine after several days of cloudy weather. Jesus said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world..."

We are told that the Lord loves a cheerful giver. This does not mean that he loves the cheerful giver of money alone, but the cheerful giver of all things. And one of them is to cheerfully give the glad news that we have received to others: to teach it to our Sunday school scholars. A teacher who is cheerful can hold the scholars' attention far better than one who tells things in a quiet, indifferent manner, thus causing the scholars to wholly misjudge the joyful nature of salvation. A child is naturally cheerful and clings to that which is joyful, so let us teach the glad news cheerfully and joyfully, and let the hope of a portion in Zion cheer until trials are o'er.

From the St. Louis Sunday school newspsper from the pen of Sr. L. M. Patterson.

"BY THEIR WORKS YE SHALL KNOW THEM."

All through the New Testament we read that Christ sent the people he had healed and helped back to their homes and friends to tell what had been done for them. We may be very sure that he has not changed in his policy in this respect. The first place where every Christian is set to work is his own home. Those of his own household, the ones who know him best and love him most, are the ones to whom he should first carry the message that transforms life.

"But it is hard to do such work at home," some of you complain.

Is it not a fact that part of the difficulty comes from a lack of harmony between what we say and what we do? We may talk in prayer meeting about the peace that floweth as a river, and no one present will question our right to claim it; but the brother or sister who heard us fretting and scolding because a shower interfered with some cherished plan, will look a little incredulous over such testimony.

Home is a very hard place for the inconsistent Christian. It is easier to deceive all the rest of the world than those of our own household, and if we reserve our Christian activity for Sunday and the mid-week prayer meeting, we are not likely to be a spiritual blessing to our family. On the other hand, patience and loyalty to the right have a mightier influence in the home than anywhere else. When every other cable has broken, the life of a Christian father or mother or sister has held many a storm-tossed heart firm to its faith in God.—Young People's Weekly.

MINDS, like other measures of capacity, when they are full cannot be any fuller of that which fills them. One drop of water will cause the brimful glass to overflow; but that same brimful glass may have packed into it more than its bulk of loose raw cotton without spilling the water. Similarly one may have one's mind so full of one flow of thought or care that one drop more would be disastrous; but a wholly different kind of thought can, like the raw cotton, be packed into it without seemingly making it any fuller. This is one of the secrets of accomplishment. It includes the secret of true recreation.—Great Thoughts.

A GOOD ANSWER.

In the question drawer in the Nova Scotia Sunday School Worker is this question and most excellent answer: What kind of a report should a convention delegate take home to his Sunday school? Answer: Notes of the most helpful things in Bible study, methods of organization and teaching, and spiritual impressions. The brightest points and illustrations in the address. All the inspiring facts in the reports. Such hints of the joyful fellowship and helpfulness of the convention as will make every teacher hungry to go next time.—The International Evangel.

GIVING UP.

Do not say that you have failed because you have made a blunder. Do not let yourself think that you have failed because you have fallen below your standard. The wisest make mistakes. The most successful are never wholly satisfied with what they have done. The only real failure is to give up trying. No matter how clumsily you work, no matter how slowly you grasp what you need to know, you are not beaten as long as you keep trying. But the moment you stop trying, no matter what reserves of ability and power you may have, you have ignominiously failed. The hero of one of the best stories we have ever read gathered an inspiration from a dog whose master proudly declared that when he once "took a holt" nothing could make him let go. Unless something of the same quality is in each of us, failure is a foregone conclusion. When we hold fast to that which we have undertaken, working at it patiently even though slowly and painfully, we are on the straight road to success. We may find it a longer road than we expected, with a great deal of hard climbing, but we shall reach the goal by and by if we keep plodding on. The only chance of failure is to give up trying.-R. O. Everest in Young People's Weekly.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Convention of Northeast Missouri district will meet at Bevier, Missouri on Friday, February 10 [8?], at 9:30 a.m., for prayer service. Election of officers and delegates to General Convention will take place. The afternoon will be devoted to papers and talks on school work. Literary program in the evening. Come all who can and let us share God's holy blessings. Mary Rudkins, Bevier, assistant superintendent; George A. Tryon, Huntsville, secretary.

Des Moines district Sunday schools will be in convention in Des Moines, Friday morning, February 8. An especial effort is being made to render this convention one long to be remembered. Local secretaries who have not sent in their reports will please do so immediately BESSY R. LAUGHLIN, Sec. mediately BES OLIVET, Iowa, Jan 21.

Northwest Kansas district Sunday_school association will convene at Blue Kansas, February 1, at 2:30 At this meeting we will have election of officers, and hope that all who possibly can will attend. Officers not able to be present, please send written reports of your work.

N. C. JOH, Supt.

The Pittsburg district association will convene at Wheeling, West Virginia, Friday, March 1, at 7:30 p.m. There will be a session on Saturday, 9:30 a.m. General Superintendent T. A. Hougas, will be present. A good program has been arranged for the occasion. School reports to be sent to undersigned not later than February 25, also reports of officials.

LOUIS A. SERIG, Sec. 4024 Eoff St., Wheeling, W. Va.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTH MISSOURI.

Conference of above district convened at Pomona, Missouri, January 5 and 6, in charge of district president, D. W. Thomas; A. M. D. McGuire, secretary pro tem. Officers reporting: Elders D. W. Thomas, D. E. Tucker, J. B. Graham, R. H. Davis, and A. M. D. McGuire; priests W. T. Roach, Enoch Coose, and J. T. Davis. Branches reporting: Pomona and Woodside. Officers elected: D. W. Thomas, president; J. B. Graham, vice president; G. W. Winegar, secretary and treasurer. Next conference to be held at Johns Mills, Douglas county, March 2. G. W. Winegar, district secretary, Burnham, Missouri.

Miscellaneous Department.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

On January 2 we mailed to each member of the First Quorum of Elders a circular letter requesting an immediate reply. We have received many replies but there are yet many to hear from. And from the fact that but one has been returned "uncalled for," and, too, that each bore my return request, I conclude that they were delivered. Brethren, may we not hear from you? In case you have not yet received the letter, write me for another. Up to January 21 the following have not been heard from: Joseph Boswell; Horace Bartlett; Dr. J. H. Hansen; Thomas Whiting; Wm Newton; R. McKenzie; W. F. Seward; David S. Holmes; Amazon Badham; Amos B Moore; F. L Sawley; George Daley; S. O. Waddell; M. B. Williams; L. W. Torrence; H. F. Durfey; Wm. A. Moore; Frank P. Scarcliff; H. C. Bronson; Enos J. French;

Marcus Shaw; E. A. Blakeslee; Wm. Farley; A. E. Elliott; James M. Smith; S. G. Cunningham; E. H. Durand; Isaac Carlile.

Anyone knowing of the death of any of the above named brethren will confer a favor by reporting the same to me. May we hear from all soon. A little more delay will defeat the whole object of getting these circular letters out. In bonds, T. A. HOUGAS, Sec.

PASTORAL.

To whom it may concern:-We advise that Bro. R. M. Self, as soon as practical, devote his labors at Brownville, Nemaha county, Nebraska, in preaching the gospel, making a special effort to give an impetus to Sabbath school work. We incline to the opinion that by well directed labor a flourishing Sabbath school may be raised. We therefore advise that Bro. Self arrange to do ministerial work in addition to Sabbath school work in Brownville for several months, so arranging his labors as to spend the Sabbath in Brownville. However, he may utilize his time during the week in the regions round about.

The forming of a nucleus is most essential for the building up of the church. Hence spasmodic efforts and then a cessation, is injurious. We trust there may be a readiness, iurious. with the few members in Brownville, to cooperate with Bro. Self in his labor. If needed, Bro. Self may get help by other elders, as the district president may direct.

JAMES CAFFALL. Missionary in Charge. J. W. WALDSMITH, District President.

RELIGIO NOTICES.

Spring River district Religio will meet at Webb City, Missouri, March 4, the Monday following conference. All Religians, please take notice and begin to get ready to attend. M. S. FRICK, Sec.

CHURCH RECORDER'S REQUEST.

TO THE OFFICERS OF QUORUMS.

During recent years there has been increasing work in the General Church Recorder's department, as well as less ability on his part to labor overtime, therefore I have nis part to labor overtime, therefore I have not fully carried forward the "General Quorum Record," originated by me in 1876. The higher quorums I have continued a record of, namely the First Presidency, Twelve, Bishopric, High Council, and High Priests; and now, having been granted an assistant in this office, I desire to bring up and complete the records of the various cue. and complete the records of the various quorums of the Seventy, the Elders, the Priests, the Teachers, and the Deacons.

Therefore, I ask the officers of the above quorums to send me their latest printed lists of members, or a written one where no printed one is had. By these, and what correspondence may follow, there can be made a correction of the "General Quorum Record," also corrections of the record in the hands of each quorum, as to names enrolled and their spelling and initials, and of dates of birth, baptism, confirmation, and where and by whom ordained, if quorums desire such comparison to be made. We can also supply them with items they lack as to birth, baptism, and ordination, and from the General Record report to them about deaths, expulsions, and ordinations to higher offices that have occurred. Thus, for all aid received we will give full aid in return, all of which is needful for quorum officers to know and put on record.

Also, I mention that in nearly all lists heretofore issued, some names have been misspelled and wrong initials given. suggest that when it is desired to issue new lists, the copy be submitted for comparison with the "General Quorum Record" and with the Church Record. For it is evident that only those having immediate and constant association with all the names in the church can best see to their proper recording, also guard against the reënrolling of those already enrolled elsewhere, or where two or more have the same name that one is not taken for the other, or some other complication arise, that would take time and make trouble to rectify, much more to the persons or quorums than to the Church Recorder.

Therefore, if the presidents and clerks of quorums will send full lists of names, then we can operate together for the perfection we Hence this appeal to you. Please write us.

Some ask for lists and post office addresses. By extra searching of HERALD and Ensign lists we might find the most of them, but time to do it in is doubtful, especially when we consider the number.

Respectfully submitted for attention.

H. A STEBBINS, General Church Recorder. Lamoni, Iowa, Jan. 25.

CREDENTIALS OF DELEGATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

District officers, and officers of branches not in districts, are requested to forward credentials of delegates appointed to represent their districts or branches in the coming General Conference, to the Church Secretary, as soon as possible, that a complete roll of delegates may be prepared, as provided for by resolution of General Conference, to facilitate prompt organization and work of that body. Credentials of delegates appointed at fall or winter conferences should be forwarded without delay, and of those yet to be appointed, immediately after appointment. It is desired that all credentials be in hand as early in the month of March as possible.

One certificate for each delegation, with number of members in district or branch and names of its delegates, signed by the president and secretary of the district or branch appointing, with name of district or branch and place and date of holding of conference or business meeting, is sufficient. Separate individual credentials are not necessary.

Attention is called to the following, adopted at the General Conference of 1900:-

"Resolved, that the Secretary be and is hereby authorized to devise and have printed a blank form of delegate credentials; and that a copy or copies be sent to each district or branch entitled to representation, prior to the convening of each General Conference."

District secretaries and secretaries of branches not in districts who fail to receive credential blanks will be supplied promptly on receipt of postal card with address

The rules governing "representation" and the "restrictions of delegate voting," are as follows:

"Each district shall be entitled to one delegate for every twenty-five members of said district, and one vote in conference for each delegate to which they may be entitled. [Scattered members in districts, including those enrolled on records of disorganized branches, who are not recorded as members of other districts, may be included in the enumeration of membership.]

"The delegates present at conference from any one district shall be entitled to cast the full vote of the district of which they are delegates, unless otherwise instructed by their district conference:—

"Provided, that in case of a disagreement of views among the members of said delegation, (the full delegation not being present,) they shall be entitled to cast only their individual votes as said delegates.

"No one delegate shall be entitled to cast, as representative in the same conference, more than twenty votes.'

The Saints' Herald.

(Established 1860)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, lowa.

Subscription price. $1 50 per year.
Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."

Marriage, birth, and death notices: Marriages, $1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business manager.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as re-ceipts for all money received are sent within two delpts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E. Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Viorly Engine also

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

"Each regularly organized branch of the church not included in an organized district, shall be entitled to one delegate, who shall have the same privileges as delegates of districts." However, at the General Conference of 1900 the chair ruled "that a branch of more than twenty-five members is entitled to one delegate for each twenty five of its membership, the same as a district."

Respectfully, R. S SALYARDS, Church Secretary.
Lamoni, Iowa, January 28, 1901.

> CHURCH SECRETARY'S NOTICE. ENROLLMENT IN QUORUMS.

The law provides for enrollment in quorums of all church officers, including elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. (D. C. 104: 31; 118: 1; 120: 10) Such enrollment is regulated by rules adopted by General Conference, which provide that applications for enrollment shall be forwarded to the Church Sec-

Applications should contain full name, office, dates of birth, baptism, ordination; by whom ordained; also permanent address, labor performed; for the information of quorums, and their records. None of said items should be omitted. Application blanks will be furnished by the secretary on request.

Quorums make their own selections, from applications in the hands of the Church Sec-The secretary cannot enroll anyone retary. in a quorum. Quorums report all enroll-ments and other changes of membership to the General Conferences, in their general reports, which are published in the General Conference minutes. Presidents and coun-selors of quorums are authorized to select names and enroll members to fill vacancies between conferences, subject to quorum approval or disapproval.

All requests for enrollment should be in hand before April 1. Brethren who have sent in applications in past years, not yet enrolled, also those ordained to other offices, should send in new applications.

R S SALYARDS, Church Secretary. Lamoni, Iowa, Jan. 28.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Massachusetts district conference will convene February 23, at Providence, Rhode Island, 2:30 p.m. The branch clerks are kindly requested to have statistical reports in my hands not later than February 10; Let as many as possible come and make our first session of the new century the keynote of future expectation, and show our willingness toward promoting the "bastening time."
M. C. FISHER, Clerk.

39 Hudson street, Somerville, Mass.

Conference of the Central Nebraska district will convene at Inman, February 23, at ten a. m. The Sunday school convention will convene on the 22d at two p W. M. RUMEL, Sec.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE

The past orders for the third volume of Church History are being filled as rapidly as possible, and when these are completed the book will be advertised for sale. Persons willing to wait may forward their orders.

WANTED

A practical binder. A brother preferred. JOHN SMITH, Mgr.

DIED.

WHITCOMB -Sarah Fletcher, at the residence of her daughter, Sr. Helen Merritt, Red Oak, Iowa, January 17, 1901, at seven o'clock p. m., Sister Whitcomo passed peacefully to the other shore in the 87th year of her age. Sister Whitcomb was born October 31, 1814 Her maiden name was Sarah Fletcher, and she was married to Zanas Whitcomb, Ostober 4, 1835, in Compton, Canada. They united with the church in 1839, and afterwards with the Reorganization, being early members of the same; the husband, Zenas Whitcomb, being chosen a member of the High Council in April, 1860. The husband died in 1895, and the oldest daughter, Mrs. Elmira Erwin, in 1893. Three children sur-Eimira Erwin, in 1893 Three children survive her; namely, Sister Helen Merritt, Red Oak, Iowa: Sister Emma Briggs, Lamoni, Iowa; and a son, E. F. Whitcomb, York, Nebraska. Funeral discourse by Bishop E. L. Kelley in Red Oak, Sunday morning, January 20. Thus departed a worthy mother in Israel.

In passing along a row of city tenements in the dawn of a midsummer day, about ninety-nine of a hundred windows can be seen tightly closed. Sleepers whose lungs crave life-air as a desert traveler thirsts after a draught of cold water, have excluded the refreshing night wind in obedience to the behest of a sanitary superstition. "Beware of draughts, get a dollar's worth of weather-strips; be sure to close your windows after dark"—in other words, exclude the air which the children of nature have for myriads of ages breathed with perfect impunity, and poison your lungs with the azotized, sickening at-mosphere of an unventilated bedroom. We might as well advise a health-seeker to avoid rock springs and fill his water bucket at the effluent pipe of a festering city sewer. We might with the same logic admonish our children to beware of fresh vegetables and mountain strawberries, and still their hunger with the garbage of a dump-pile.

Millions of travelers pass the night in boats and open sheds, without the least injurious consequences; animals that perish with consumption in the atmosphere of a well-warmed menagerie, survive the tremendous night storms of the tropical forests.

Is night air a lung poison? Is the outdoor atmosphere made deadly by the absence of sunlight? Does the gas lamp of a stifling dormitory remedy that grievance? Must we exclude the cool night wind bringing relief to countless sufferers from the misery of a sweltering summer day?

It is no exaggeration to say that individuals who have freed themselves from the nightmare of that superstition can live out and out healthier in the central wards of a large manufacturing town than its victims on the airiest highlands of the southern Alleghenies.-"Sanitary Superstitions," The Chautauquan for February.

The Arena for February is sixteen pages larger than usual—the increase being probably due to the exhaustive presentation of the "Theological Views of a Layman," by Edward A. Jenks, A. M., of Concord, New Hampshire, whose article will repay perusal by both clerical and lay members of all branches of the Christian Church. Among the other contributors are two clergymen—the Rev. T. F. Hildreth, who makes some pertinent observations concerning the last Presidential campaign, and the Rev. Joseph S. David, the Swedenborgian, whose paper on "Vibrations, Waves, and Cycles" will interest all students of the occult sciences. Other timely articles are: "The Merchant Seaman and the Subsidy Bill," by Walter Macarthur, and "Prepare the World for Peace," by E. S. Wicklin. The first of a series of articles on "Laying the Foundations of a Figher Civilization," by the Foundations of a Higher Civilization," by B. O. Flower, and Miss Kallor's second paper on "The Criminal Negro" are especially inon "The Criminal Negro" are especially in-teresting, while an interview with Prof. Frank Parsons on "City Ownership and Operation of Street Railways" is perhaps the most important feature of the number. Editor Flower's discussion of "Topics of the Times" and "Books of the Day" is, as usual, instructive.

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Address, THE PATRIOT Lamoni,

A postal card brings a sample copy.

SAINTS' HYMNAL. Words only. 15 115. Paper 15 Per dozen 1 60 116. Cloth, limp 25 Per dozen 2 70 117. Cloth 35 Per dozen 3 75 118. Flexible, gilt edges 50
Per dozen 1 60 116. Cloth, limp 25 Per dozen 2 70 117. Cloth 35 Per dozen 3 75
117. Cloth
117. Cloth
, 0
OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS, AN-SWERED AND REFUTED. By Elder J. R. Lambert.
142. Paper
143. Cloth 40
PATTIE; OR LEAVES FROM A
LIFE. 144. Cloth
MANUAL OF THE PRIEST-HOOD. By Elder C. Derry.
Tio. Clour, milp
TRUE SUCCESSION IN CHURCH PRESIDENCY. By Elder
PRESIDENCY. By Elder H. C. Smith, Church His- torian.
152. Paper
153. Cloth
COMPENDIUM OF FAITH.
141. Cloth

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER, Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa. July 1, 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162,781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All esters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

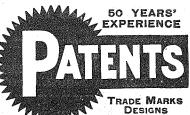

STOCK HOLDERS: --Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Ella D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

QUIT-TO-BAC

THREE BOXES POSITIVELY GUARANTEED to cure any form of tobacco habit or money cheerfully refunded. Sent postpaid on receipt of $1.50 U.S. stamps taken. Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, III., U S. A.

GOSP	EL QUARTERLIES.
	Published by the General
	Sunday School Association.
	Designed for use in Sabbath school work. Issued quarterly.
73	Senior Grade, per quarter		08
	Per year, in advance	4	25
74.	Intermediate Grade, per quar-
9	ter		05
	Per year	• •	15
75.			05
	Per year		15
	Ter kear		10
	OT MODMON F
ROOK	OF MORMON. Large type edition.
92.		-	m 0
	ners	1	50
93.	Seal grain russia, gilt edges	2	00
109.	Flexible, gilt edges	4	00
NEW	_TESTAMENTS. Inspired
	Translation.
173.	Cloth, limp		35
83.	Cloth sides, leather back		50
	_		-
SATNT	S' HARP-HYMN BOOK.
	Words only.
	Cloth		75
A Unit.	010077 24 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28 28
THE	TWO RECORDS. The Book
*	of Mormon and the New Tes-
*	tament Inchired Transla-tament. Inspired Translation; large type, in one volume.
92	Leather back and covers	2	ሰሰ
90.	Seal grain russia	9	50
100	Imitation manage wilt adme	2	50
100.	Imitation morocco, gilt edges,	J	90
101.	Morocco, gilt edges	섚	00

COPYRIGHTS &C. nyone sending a sketch and description may only ascertain our opinion free whether an ention is probably patentable. Communicas strictly condidential. Handbook on Patents if free. Oldest agency for securing patents, attents taken through Munn & Co. receive cial notice, without charge, in the MUNN & CO. 361 Broadway, New York Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

SAINT	S' HYMNAL. Words and
	music.
108.	Paper covers, each		30
	Per dozen	3	20
110.	Cloth, limp		35
	Per dozen	3	75
111.	Cloth and leather		50
		1	00
113.	Gilt edges	1	25
114.	Flexible, leather	1	50
NEW	TESTAMENTS. King James
	Translation.
159.			10
160.			25
THE	INSTRUCTOR. A compendium of the faith and doctrines of the church by Elder
	G. T. Griffiths.
126.	Cloth		75
127.	Leather	1	00
128.	Flexible	ī	50
	and an array one campain was not by your or many state your unwest problem and the desired for the state of t	alga\ti	Albrania (All Ta

GRACELAND

COLLEGE.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Telephone 7%

For catalogue or further information, address, PROF. R. A. HARKNESS, President, or I. W. ALLENDER, Secretary, LAMONI, DECATUR Co., IOWA.

COMMERCIAL BANK

- IOWA. LAMONI, Solicits your D posits and pays

> 4 1-2 % INTEREST. D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

Book of Mormon Maps.

Lecture size 5x8 feet on muslin for traveling ministry, $2 00 Home and office size 39x51 inches on paper. cloth back and varnished in colors. $1,50.

All map sent by express, charges 30c. and upwards according to distance, to be paid at end of route. Send orders to

G. F. WESTON,

1-9-6t

Buchanan, Michigan.

HUMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in D. Kalb county. Missouri, four miles from Anity, and five miles from Clarksdale; near line of R ck I-land rathroad and switch station, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchas. Terms reasonable. Address,

J. O. SOUTHARD, Mgr.,

Amily, Missouri. or CHARLES P. FAUL,

Charkedale, Missouri.

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good oh tograph, and get 25 stame photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 ligh photo button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents ach. Large 60 ligh buttons 35 cents and extra buttons from same picture 20 cents. Your photograph will be returned. Send silver.

W. M. KECK Photographer, 49-13t

Lock Box 125, Joy, Illinois.

DR. E. S. SWEET. DENTIST. Decoe Building.

WOODBINE, IOWA. 17Oct 00

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on investment.

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Iowa.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a. m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a.m.

Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C. B. & Q. at Leon.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chicago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning.

BRING YOUR LAUNDRY TO South Side Barber Shop.

For every five dollars worth of Laundry you receive a

HANDSOME SHAVING MUG. SHOOK & KLINE, Plop .

FORSCUTT-SHINNDISCUSSION. 154. Paper.....

SAINTS' HERALD

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lords for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 6, 1901.

NO. 6.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH EDITOR: FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR. Joseph Luff D. W. Wight CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEB. 6, 1901.

THE POWER OF THE KING.

It is usually alleged in this country that the king of the British Empire is more or less a mere figure head; that his power is almost entirely limited; that the President of the United States has more power than the King, that he has the power of the veto which the King has not. An ex attache, presumably of some embassy to the English government writing in a late issue of the Chicago Tribune, gives quite a different view of the prerogatives of the King of England under the constitution which makes the government a constitutional monarchy.

From the statement of this exattache we derive the following:-

The conduct of the international relations of the British Empire is vested by the terms of the constitution, not in Parliament, nor is done by the sovereign with regard to foreign affairs is therefore the act of the whole nation and is binding upon the latter. Whatever agreement, whatever treaties or conventions the Sovereign may make with a foreign state, no other power in the empire, not even Parliament, can legally delay, resist, or annul.

From this it may be seen that King Edward VII. will control the foreign policy of the United Kingdom.

As to the domestic or home affairs of the kingdom:-

No statute can be enacted or repealed, no new measure put into force, so far as domes-tic affairs are concerned, save with the knowledge and the sanction of the duly elected representatives of the people assembled in Parliament. But, on the other hand, Parliament cannot enact any law, repeal any statute, or put any new measure into force without the consent of the sovereign, which may be given or withheld as the monarch

It is this faculty of giving or withholding the royal signature that virtually places su preme power in the hands of the Eoglish sovereign, for it is not only every Parliamentary measure, but every administrative act of any importance that must receive the monarch's sign manual before it can be put into force or become endowed with any degree of salutary cannot become of force. This power may be far more fatal to legislation than the veto power of the President of the United States, for the reason that the people by a two thirds' vote of their representatives in congress may pass an act over the veto; this Parliament cannot do over the King's refusal to sign.

It is stated by this writer that during the last twenty five years of the reign of the Queen she had to sign some 70,000 official documents a year, or about 200 in a day. If she made herself acquainted with the contents of each document before signing it involved an amount of labor simply astonishing. If the new King does as well he will have plenty to do to keep his royalty out of mischief, if he shall do his work wisely and well.

Further. It is the constitutional right of the British ruler to dismiss from office an individual cabinet officer, or all of them, if for any reason they may have failed to be retained in his confidence. And this too, without regard to whether the single officer, or the whole array so dismissed have the confidence of and are sustained by Parliament or not. It is sufficient if they may have lost the confidence of the King.

This brief statement of what the King may do points to the fact that the real value and beneficial efficiency of the monarchical form of government, whether absolute, or limited by a constitution like that of Great Britain, depends upon the excellence of character of the ruler.

Queen Victoria ruled well. her son to whom the rights above recited inure as her successor do as well? Or will the "pomp and circumstance that hedge about a king" with the privilege of such extreme powers prove to be too much for his human goodness and wisdom, and make him a ruler to be feared or detested, instead of admired and loved.

VENTILATE THE CHURCHES.

There is no one thing which should be more closely watched than the ventilation of our churches. A poorly ventilated church building will render the best of sermons void of interest to the congregation. The rule followed validity.

Hence if the King will not sign about like this: Shortly before the them, laws and enactments however time for meeting the building is opened, the fire built, if in winter, and some of the windows opened a little. After the close of the service, without any further ventilating, the doors and windows are tightly closed. and the air which has been befouled by the congregation is housed up and kept for the next time. The same proceedings are gone through with every service.

It is not much wonder that there are persons in the audiences who find it difficult to keep awake. The greatest wonder is that there are those who can remain sufficiently wide awake to understand what the preacher is saving.

How often do we hear some one say: "I don't know why it is, but every time I go to church I get sleepy, and can scarcely remain awake." This same person may be one who is usually active and energetic, and the fact that he is unable to remain awake at church is a source of great annoyance to him.

The trouble is not with the person, but the fault lies with those who have charge of the church building. When a congregation assembles in a building which has insufficient ventilation, the air is breathed over and over, and becomes highly charged with the moisture and the carbonic acid gas given off from the lungs. The oxygen of the air, the life-giving element. becomes exhausted, and the breathers are continually taking into their lungs what was previously thrown off from them.

Carbonic acid gas, or carbon dioxide, while not poisonous, will produce death, if taken in large quantities, because it will exclude from the lungs the oxygen necessary to life. reasons for the feelings of elassitude and drowsiness which overcome one in church are now understood. There is not enough oxygen being taken into the lungs to sustain one's life. The lungs are virtually being starved by being deprived of what they need to purify the blood which goes to them for regeneration. While we are striving to take into our minds mental food, we are starving our lungs.

The remedy is obvious. We must see to it that more air is supplied to congregation. The building should be opened hours before the audience begins to assemble, and should be so thoroughly ventilated that the room is full of fresh, pure

Then when the listeners are in their places, the windows should be so arranged that there is an abundance of fresh air taken in right along to maintain the freshness of the air in the room. When this is done, there will be less of the habit of going to sleep in church manifested, and the sermons will take on a brightness not noticed before by the congregation, for two reasons. One is that the audience being continually refreshed by the pure air, will be in the best of receptive moods, and the preacher, also having his lungs full of good, pure oxygen, will lose his moroseness, and his sermons will take on a better tone because he will be feeling better and brighter.

Our churches should be equipped so that the best of ventilation can be secured under all conditions, and those who have charge of them should be careful to see that the building is thoroughly freed from all foul air after every service.

Let plenty of sunlight into the room, too, through the week. Sunlight is one of the best purifiers known to man. Disease germs cannot live in the sunlight. So the building should have facilities for flooding the room with the bright sunshine of nature.

Up with the curtains, down with the windows, and let God's fresh air and his pure sunlight get in their offices for the good of the work, and let the hour of service be one of the brightest of the week.

NEW FAITHS.

We are living in the day of many religions, and the passing of every year sees the organization of new sects advocating what they believe to be new principles. The peculiar fact noticeable is that nearly all are supposed to be based on the Bible. So many are there that it is indeed difficult to keep one's self posted as to what they are doing and what they are teaching. One brother writes of a new sect lately organized in Kansas City, having its headquarters somewhere in The Chicago Tribune in a recent issue speaks editorially of the "New Faiths for the New Century," and calls attention to the fact that before the first week of the new century had passed three new sects were organized in that city alone. three are Professor George Herron's "Apostolic League," the "School of the Prophets," and the "Tribe of Beasts." Professor Herron-has formed a so-called apostolic league of five members, to join which three ministers bave left their pulpits and a young student of sociology has given up all outside work.

The professor and his colleagues will emulate the example of the apostles of old, and will travel constantly, teaching the application of the principles of the founder of Christianity directly to the problems of every day life. The student of sociology, who is the only lay member, will act as business manager and editor of the organization.

"The School of the Prophets," as organized or originated by another Chicago man, will be actuated by the belief that the end of the world is very near at hand, and their work will be to prepare for that momentous occasion.

Of the "Tribe of Beasts," the Tribune writer says that—

So far as its objects are plain they are to protect dumb animals from the cruelty and oppression of man, who is called in the prospectus of the order "a brother animal."

Thus are the beliefs and organizations multiplied, and the end is not yet, for as long as there exists the diversity of opinion among men as to the teachings of the Bible, and so long as there are organizations built or based upon the interpretations of man alone, so long there will continue to be factions and factions. However, it is all in harmony with the words of the prophets of long ago—it is part of the confusion that shall exist near the end, or in the latter days. Surely, the signs of the times multiply.

A LESSON FROM CONFUCIUS.

It would appear that all that is good in religious idea does not belong exclusively to the Christian of the present day; or rather, that the so called Christian philosophy so held by the present day teachers of it, has not all of the good in the world in its confines. Commenting on a recent discourse of Minister Wu, of China, the Chicago Tribune, of the 29th January, has this to say:—

Wu Ting Fang has shown himself not only apt and alert in discussion but also animated by noble sentiments as to the whole duty of man—sentiments which, if more generally followed, would make for the happiness of It is possible that with all our the race. boasted civilization and religious advancement we have something to learn from this follower of Confucius. In making the comparison between Confucianism and Christianity the Chinese Minister particularly disclaimed any intention to disparage the latter. He does not think it any more discreditable that all Christians do not live up to the doctrine of Christianity than that all Confucians do not obey the precepts of Confucius, nor can be understand why some clergymen should resent any attempt to compare Christianity with other systems of belief when they do not scruple to attack other religions. Wu Ting Fang recognizes all that is good in all systems, and from this high-minded standpoint does not think that "the noble and sublime teachings of Christianity need fear criticism, much less comparison."
To this extent Wu Ting Fang stands for the good of humanity. He believes that all religions teach men to be good, and that if every man would live up to the doctrines of his religion it would be a better world and men would live in brotherly peace.

This is good Christian doctrine if it does come from a Confucian, and the world is not so near the attainment of the best in any religion that the followers of one system of belief can afford to set themselves up above the followers of any other, or play the Pharisee. A good Confucian, a good Buddhist, or a good Christian is a good man, for goodness is the ultimate purpose of every religion. The words of Confucius, "Let us all live in peace as brothers," and the words of Christ "Little children, love one another," are far yet from fulfillment, and there is no harm in being reminded of it by a "heathen Chinee."

It looks a little incongruous at least for the Christianity that is so loudly condemning the idolatry of the "heathen Chinese," and lauding western religious thought to be clamoring for revenge for the slaughter of missionaries in China, when the Master whom they claim to be "the Christ," said of his own murders, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

Christians of these latter days may well find that by contrasting the philosophy of Confucius with the practices of, so called, Christians, there is something to be learned.

CHURCH STATISTICS.

We lately published some figures showing the cost of evangelizing in the world. We present herewith a table which appeared recently in the New York Independent, showing the statistical gains or losses of the various churches in the last ten years:—

O WO O THE OTHER TWO	o con y	JULIS
Denominations.	Members.
	1890.	1900.
Adventists:
Seventh Day	28,991	55 316
Life and Advent Union.	1,018	3 000
Armenians	335	8.500
Baptists:	000	0,000
	000 450	050 000
Regular (North)	800.450	973.820
Regular (South)1	.280 066	1.608 413
Regular (Colored) 1	,348 989	1,864.600
Seventh Day	9,143	8 991
E'reewill	87 898	85 109
General	21,362	28,000
Separate	1.599	6 479
Brethren in Christ (River)	2,688	4,000
Catholics:	-,	-,000
Roman Catholics6	249 267	8 610 996
Independent Catholics:	,,	0,010,220
Polish Branch		15 000
Old Carballan	005	15 000
Old Catholics	665	10.000
Catholics: Reformed	1 000	1 500
Christians	103,722	111,835
Christian Catholic (Dowie)		40 000
Christian Scientists	8.724	1,000 000
Church of God	22,511	38,000
Church of the New Jeru-		•
salem	7.095	7 679
Congregationalists	512.771	629 874
Disciples of Christ	871,017	1,149,982
Dunkards:	0,1,011	2,220,000
German Bantists (Con-		4.5
servative)	61,101	95,000
Cormen Bentiete (Old	01,101	00,000
servative)	4,411	E 9 E 00
Order) German Baptists (Pro-	4,411	(3,500
German Bapusis (Pro-	0.000	40 505
gressive)	8,089	12,787
Episcopalians:
Protestant Episcopal	532 054	716.431
R-formed Episcopal	8,435	9,743
Evangelical Bodies:		4
Evangelical Association	133,313	118,865
United Evangelical		4
Church	54 000	60.093
Friends. Orthodox	80,655	91,868
German Evangelical		52,500
Synod.	187,432	203,574
~~~~	,	2001012
・ 「かしことだらますと発酵で発酵です。」が異数質

	*****
Greek Church:
Greek Orthodox	100	20,000
Russian Orthodox	13,504	45.000
Jews	130,496	‡211,627
Latter-Day Saints:
Mormons	144,352	300,000
Reorganized Church	21,773	45,500
Lutherans:
General Synod	164,640	194,442
United Synod in the	•
South	37.457	38 639
General Council	324,846	370,409
Synodical Conference.	357,153	581,029
Independent Synods	346,976	481,359
Mennonites:
Mennonite	17,078	22,443
Amish	10,101	13,051
Reformed	11.655	1,680
General Conference	5,670 1,388	10,395
Bundes Conference Defenseless		3,050
Brethren in Christ	$856 \\ 1,113$	1,176 $2,953$
Methodists:	1,110	2,000
Methodist Episcopal2	240.354	2,716,437
Union Amer. M. E	2,279	2,675
African M. E	452 725	673 504
African Union M. P	3,415	2,000
African M. E. Zion	349,788	536,271
Methodist Protestant	141,989	181.316
Wesleyan Methodist	16,492	17,201
Methodist Episcopal	000 074	1 455 004
South1 Congregational Metho-	,209,970	1,457,864
	8,765	20,000
Colored M. E	129,383	199,206
Primitive Methodist	4,764	6 470
[ Free Methodist	22,110	28,588
Evangelist Missionary	951	4,600
Moravians	11,781	14,817
Presbyterians:
Presbyterians in U.S.	#00 go4	070 400
A. (Northern)	788,224	973,433
Cumberland Presby- terian	164,940	180,192
Cumberland Presby-	101,010	100,192
terian (Colored)	12.956	39,000
Welsh Calvinistic	12,722	12,000
United Presbyterian	94,402	115,901
Presbyterian in U. S.
(South)Associate Ref. Synod of	179,721	225,890
Associate Ref. Synod of	0 704
the South	8.501	11,344
Ref. Pres. in U. S. (Syn.)	10,574	9,790
Ref. Pres. in N. A.	4 602	5.000
Ref. Pres. (Covenanted)	4,602 37	5,000 40
Ref. Pres. in U.S. and		10
Canada	600	608
Ref. Pres. (Russellites)		2,500
Reformed:
Reformed in America
_ (Dutch)	92,970	107,594
Reformed in U.S. (Ger-	004.010	040 545
man)	204,018	243,545
Christian Reformed	$12,470 \\ 8,742$	18,096
Salvation Army United Brethren:	U, 1 3266	40,000
United Brethren in Christ	202,474	243,841
United Brothron (Old	,	-,
Constitution)	22.807	226.643
Unitarians	67,749	71,000
Universalists	49,194	48,426
†Families. ‡Families e	stimated	•
Population, 1,058,135.
It will be noticed th	at with	a very

It will be noticed that with a very few exceptions, all the churches have made substantial gains. Some few have suffered loss, while yet others have made comparatively little gain. The Roman Catholics have made a wonderful growth. By the table it well be noticed that the Christian Scientists are credited with 1,000,000 in 1900; but the Literary Digest for February 2, calls attention to the fact that the Independent's table was in error in that instance, and the figures should be 100,000. The Independent made the correction, stating that the enrollment was 100,000, and the number of adherents as "from 400,000 to 500,000."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

J. F. Mintun, under date of January 30, writes from Magnolia, Iowa:-

Since my last letter to the HERALD I have labored at Little Sioux, Sloan, and Jones schoolhouse, where I close my labors tonight. Many features of the work at Little Sioux and Sloan were peculiar, yet I rejoiced in the results, in which is seen the wandering ones returning, the heavy laden seeking the Burden-bearer, and the afflicted relieved, the evidences of a present Savior represented, and rewards given to the diligent seeker. Sunday school and Religio work is progressing slowly, yet in such a way as to express a brighter future for the church when more fully inflenced by the young of today. By for bearance, and spiritual counsel, the broth-erhood are becoming more united, old things are passing away, the fog of suspicion is be-ing lifted, and the sunlight of heavenly peace appears, giving a healthy appearance and growth to all who are in Christ. I go to Moorhead to begin a series of meetings tomorrow eve.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter from Bro. John Chisnall, of Kewanee, Illinois, we learn that the branch at that place has been quite successful in raising the funds to pay off their church building debt. Bro. John says: "We found on counting up we had sixteen dollars to spare over the amount needed to complete entire payment on church building." We congratulate the Saints on this satisfactory condition of affairs. St. Joseph, Missouri, branch is getting along well with the burden on its building. Independence has about paid out, and these evidences of vitality and financial progress are cheering to all the church. It is better not to get into debt; but when by stress of changing conditions, or lack of wisdom it is done, then there is but one thing left for honest men to do and that is to pay out as rapidly and as soon as it is possible to do it.

Bro. L. M. Sollenberger, 41 North Third street, Reading, Pennsylvania, is very anxious to get two or three or more families into that place in business in order to form a nucleus for a branch. He also wishes to secure the services of one or two young men of the ministry to come there, go into business, and preach as conditions may offer opportunity. He solicits inquiry as to place and business. He wants men who can and are willing to work. This is a chance for some body who may be waiting for an opening. Correspond with him. Bro. Sollenberger is an earnest, sober-minded man, who believes in doing what a man can for his faith. He now has two openings for preaching.
Bro. J. W. Burgett, writes from

"Word of Wisdom." He thinks the Saints should be more careful to observe the teachings therein. He believes we should discontinue the use of white bread and use only whole wheat bread. Thinks white bread is not nourishing enough.

We have received from the "Philippine Information Society" a complimentary set of pamphlets giving information in regard to the Philippines. One set of these pamphlets, giving in convenient shape the most authentic information accessible to the public in the Philippine question will be sent, free of cost, to anyone sending the name of his congressman, stamps to cover postage, and his own name and address legibly written. Address L. K. Fuller, Secretary Philippine Information Society, 12 Otis Place, Boston, Massachusetts.

Brn. James Caffall and Eli Hayer are out in the Hills, Rock county, Minnesota, Crescent of January 24, with a column and a half of "A Religious Explanation" in which a good defense of the faith is presented.

The Ensign will publish a daily during the session of General Conference, and will send it to any address for twenty-five cents. Orders can be addressed either to the HERALD Office or Ensign.

Pres. Joseph Smith left on Saturday the 2d inst. for Independence, Missouri.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION .- NO. 6.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

Mother had already a fever and headache, and immediately took to her bed again; was sick all night, and I sat up with her. Just at daylight she dropped to sleep and breathed easily, while all night she had been very restless, and was very much troubled for breath, having a constant, burning fever. I stood by the bedside watching her for some time, but became very tired, and finally took a pillow and lay down on the carpet in an adjoining room.

I must have gone to sleep immediately, for I soon had a dream or vision in which I saw Bro. Samuel H. Gurley standing in the door, and he awoke me by speaking the following words in a distinct tone of voice: mother will not recover, but will die. Sarah says so." I sprang to my feet and stepped into mother's room, but she was sleeping sweetly as I had left Bro. J. W. Burgett, writes from her just a few moments before. I Guttenberg, New Jersey, about the hastily returned to meet Bro. Gurley, but he was not there. I then stepped to the door and called for him, and upon receiving no response I hastily went around the house, fully expecting to find him. It was impossible for him to have gotten out of sight of the house if he had been there. I was very much surprised and disappointed at first, as we were great friends. Just as I returned to the house something seemed to say to me, "Sarah is the wife of Abraham, who was the friend of God, and God has in his mercy revealed to you in this manner of your mother's death so you may be better prepared for it, and not feel so bad when she is taken away; and as Sarah was the companion of Abraham the friend of God, and is now in heaven, it is to show you that your mother will also soon be with them in heaven, and be at rest from all the trouble of this world."

A feeling of happiness and joy indeed came over me to think the Lord in his goodness had shown me that my mother would surely be saved and go to heaven, and not only men, but women in heaven were interested in the salvation of their children, and that Sarah, the companion and wife of Abraham was permitted to reveal to me through a dream or a vision in this way and make it clear to my mind for my comfort and satisfaction, so that I might be fully at rest in relation to my mother's gaining eternal life in the celestial glory.

With these thoughts I felt perfectly resigned to part with mother and let her go to rest with the angels in heaven. A peace and contentment of mind seemed to take possession of my whole being. And then a feeling of doubt came over me in relation to the Bible. Was it really true that God did reveal himself to Adam in the gar-den of Eden? Did he really make him out of the dust of the earth, and talk to him? And did Eve eat of the forbidden fruit? Were they cast out of the garden, and flaming swords kept them from returning again to the garden? Could I really say I believed these things? I confess they did not seem reasonable, and a disquiet and dissatisfaction took possession of my very being, and I was unhappy in the thought that all these extravagant things in the Bible could not be true.

But again, the dream, vision, and voice I had just heard that morning in relation to my mother was true. I knew it was true. I heard the voice, I saw the vision, I had the dream, and was happy in the thought that certainly I knew mother would be saved in heaven. But while these happy reviews passed through my mind, all at once something would seem to say, Do you believe God commanded Noah to build an ark and by this means save himself and family, while he deluged the whole earth with water to drown all the inhabitants thereof, with their little, innocent children? And all the dumb animals? Did God do that in his wrath? And the righteous Noah. after that, got drunk and cursed his grandson because his own son did not show respect to him when he was drunk?" These interrogations brought doubts; and forebodings filled my mind, and I began to feel skeptical in relation to all of my early teaching in the Bible. But my experience just that morning, and the evidence that I had been moved on by a power that was not earthly, gave me a peace of mind more than mortal man can give. The destiny of my beloved mother was real and surely true, and I was satisfied.

While these pleasant thoughts were passing through my mind, again I was asked (it seemed almost as though some unseen person stood by me), "Do you believe Jesus is the Christ and was born of the Virgin Mary? That he created this world, worked miracles, raised the dead, was crucified, and rose from the dead and appeared to his disciples, and finally ascended to heaven? That Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and translated from gold plates the Book of Mormon?" My dear reader, while I pen these thoughts, I confess to you that I was unhappy all that forenoon, except when I was thinking upon the new revelation I had received in relation to my darling mother, who had taken so much care of me in my childhood. I could realize in my innermost soul that she would soon be at rest in heaven with God and his angels, and I was happy in the very thought that she would be in heaven and would not mind my sorrow in her death.

About noon, as I passed the little church near our house, I had a desire to enter and pray and thank the Lord for all his mercies to me. I was all alone; a quiet, serene feeling pervaded my mind as I knelt in prayer, and the Holy Spirit rested on me in great power and said, "Verily, thus saith the Lord, As I have said, your mother shall recover every whit and be noted for faith in Zarahemla. That spirit that spoke to you this morning represented through your friend was the Devil and Satan; and I permitted him to do so that you might know the difference between my power and the power of Satan. All this forenoon the revelation concerning your mother has given you perfect satisfaction and peace of mind, but you have been led to doubt all my words in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Covenants. have even doubted the existence of God, and even your own existence, and doing so has brought unhappiness and sorrow to you. While you have been comforted in the one reve-have doubted and been led to disbelieve all the revelations I have given to my servants the prophets. By this you may know the contrast between my Spirit and the power of Satan. My Spirit brings to memory what I have said in the past and gives comfort and peace concerning my promises in the future, while the spirit of the evil one gives fear and doubt concerning all my words. By this you may know the difference. during all your life, so you may not be deceived. Even so, Amen and amen."

The above revelation was a remarkable manifestation to me, and experience more wonderful than I had ever had before. A peace of mind and certainty that it was the voice of God by the Holy Ghost to me left no doubt in my mind. I could see very clearly that the spirit that had been tormenting me all the forenoon in relation to the truthfulness of the Holy Scriptures and in all of those essential things around which the Christian had anchored his hope for salvation was swept away from me, and my joy was centered only in the thought of the salvation and happiness of my mother in heaven, and this at the expense of all the blessed truths of the Bible and the gospel of Christ. Certainly that was the Devil trying to deceive me!

Was it not the Comforter that brought to memory the blessed promises of the gospel of Christ? Mother would surely recover, though she had a high fever and was very weak; but all uneasiness about her had left me. My brother Ri-ley and Sr. Elizabeth Cline were with me, and we watched over her all the time, day and night, until Sunday morning. Three days and nights mother seemed to be sinking and grew worse, but all this time I had not a single doubt that she would get well again.

When time came for meeting I had a desire to attend. I did so, and Bro. Samuel Powers, from Beloit, Wisconsin, was the preacher. After services I immediately invited him to go home with me, and informed him that mother was sick, but did not tell him anything of my experiences or of the circumstances of mother's sickness. As soon as we reached home Bro. Powers prayed and anointed mother, and laid his hands on her and said. "In the name of Jesus Christ, I rebuke the Devil and Satan, and command him to leave this house. Amen." He turned from the bed, and mother was clear in her mind, and the fever very soon left her entirely, and she was well. Soon she got up and dressed herself, and in a few days was strong as ever. This wonderful circumstance made a deep and lasting impression on my lation concerning your mother, you mind. Surely there is a God who rules in heaven and on earth, and a Devil and wicked spirits among men! I knew Elder Powers knew nothing of mother's condition, or of my manifestations. He had just arrived from his home, and soon as he entered the meetinghouse was called into the pul-He was naturally very timid, retiring, humble, and without affectation, and always seemed to act like himself, without self-importance. He simply and very quietly rebuked the evil one who had tormented my mother nigh unto death for days with a fever, and now she was well, thank the Lord, O my soul! These thoughts. and a general survey of the landmarks of my own experiences brought afresh to memory the harmony of my experience with the experiences related in the Bible and the Book of Mormon of other men in times of old, confirmed me indeed in the thought that if those books were true, then I was surely being taught by the same Spirit that the prophets and saints of ancient times were led by. And here allow me to suggest that all the prophets of God in the past have been taught by experience to know that there is a Devil and wicked influences from the unseen world, hence the instructions by the Beloved Disciple:-

Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.—1 John 4: 1.

And in the great commission to the apostles, Jesus said:—

In my name shall they cast out devils.—Mark 16: 17.

And the ancient apostle says:—

To another discerning of spirits.—1 Cor. 12: 10.

How shall they discern spirits if they never come in contact with them? Jesus, our blessed Master, was tempted by the Devil in the wilderness, and Moses had an audience with the evil one, for,

Behold, Satan came tempting him, saying, Moses, son of man, worship me.—See preface to Inspired Translation, p. 7, par. 8.

For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world.—Rev. 16:14.

the earth and of the whole world.—Rev. 16:14. and I advance the thought to all Saints that it is wise not to be too ready to accept spirit manifestations until you are sure they are of God, for it is Satan's cunning to deceive the members in all the branches as well as individuals in their experiences, and he who passively invites with anxiety spirit manifestations without a proper prayerful examination of the teaching of the Spirit is on dangerous ground.

But to return. Mother was now well, as promised to me she would be, and the next Tuesday I went to Bro. Gurley's to assist him in some work he was doing on his farm. That even ing they received a letter from Galesburg, Illinois, that their eldest daughter, Mrs. Eaton, was very sick, and if they wished to see her alive must come immediately. The distance was far and cost much, and they had not a dollar to bear expenses and did not know where to borrow it. They were greatly distressed over the matter. When time for prayer came, Bro. Gurley said, "Let us remember Louisa in our supplication." Both Bro. and Sr. Gurley fervently prayed to Almighty God to spare their child. Just as they arose from their knees, their son Samuel came into the house and said, "I had retired, and as soon as I lay down on the bed I had a vision, and I saw a very large room, and in the door which opened into another large room, stood Sister Louisa. I do not know what it means, but I saw her very plainly as she stood in the door." Sr. Gurley screamed aloud, "It's death's door, and my daughter will die," and she wept aloud like a child, crying. "My darling child is going to die. Oh, my dear girl!" My sympathy was much wrought upon as the family all wept. They all seemed to believe the vision certainly meant that Louisa was going to die. A quiet, calm feeling impressed my mind, and involuntarily, without any special motive on my mind, I arose from my seat and stepped near to Sr. Gurley and said, "Sr. Gurley, your daughter will not die, but recover, and return home very soon, and you will introduce her to me here in your own house. Thus saith the Holy Ghost."

I sat down much astonished and thought, How did I know that? and a fear came over me, and I was very sorry I had used such words to Sr. Gurley. I repeated to myself, "I do not know any such thing. I can't see why I spoke such words."

Bro. Gurley seemed to believe it, and tried to comfort his wife over the matter and said, "We will wait a few days and see if we do not get another letter giving us better news."

The next day I felt much distressed in mind over my prophecy to Sr. Gurley, and in the evening of Wednesday, Bro. Gurley sent for his son Samuel and wife to come over to a prayer meeting, remarking, "We will make Louisa the special subject of prayer." During the meeting Bro. Samuel spoke in prophecy to me and directed me to go to the branch of the church in Zarahemla and preach to them, saving, "Your mouth shall be opened and your tongue loosened to declare my word to my people, and you shall not be confounded, saith the Lord of hosts."

e would be, ent to Bro. This again was a great trial to me. The Spirit rested on me in great power while he was speaking, and brought to memory the events of my conversion, how I would embrace this doctrine, be baptized, ordained an elder, and preach it. The promise I had made the Lord if he would tell me what I ought to do that I would do it, and the promise which was made to me for an evidence to me that the man who baptized me should ordain me an elder the day I was baptized, and many things which had been revealed to me, and also many passages of scripture confirmatory of the gospel, all rushed through my mind, it seemed in a moment of time; but yet to comply with this command of God, to go and preach to the Saints at Zarahemla, seemed impossible. I had never spoken in meeting to the Saints in my life, or made a single prayer in meeting vocally. Oh, I thought I could never do it. Thursday was a long day to me, full of misgivings, doubt, and debate in my own mind, for and against the latter day workthat God's Holy Spirit had certainly been with me if the Bible was true, and then how did I know it was true. Jesus of Nazareth had not accomplished what was expected of him, his disciples were all disappointed and finally died, and their work was followed by a long night of war and carnage called the dark ages.

Joseph Smith came, and one hundred and fifty or two hundred thousand had been converted to the gospel in fourteen years, and now they were scattered and in darkness, and knew nothing for certain, it seemed to me, concerning the kingdom of God and the great hope held out to God's people in different ages of the world according to the scriptures. A thousand things seemed to rush into my mind to discourage me and throw doubt and distress in my mind. Friday the debate continued in my very soul. It seemed as though two influences surrounded me at the time, one to encourage me in the gospel of Christ, and to refresh my mind in relation to my own experiences; the other, to throw doubt and uncertainty upon all sacred and divine things that had ever been taught to me by my Even her prayers would mother. come up before me, and her Bible stories seemed so real, yet I was made unhappy through doubting them. How could I go and preach to the Saints? All knew more than I could tell them, and the other influence impelled me to doubt all God had ever said.

While these thoughts were pressing on me, one of Bro. Gurley's little boys came running to us, exclaiming, "Father, come quick! Louisa has just come home." Bro. Gurley exclaimed, "Thank the Lord, Bro. Briggs, your prophecy has come to pass, and I will go to the house, and you come after a little, for supper will be ready."

At supper time I was introduced to

Sr. Eaton by her mother. I soon learned from her own lips the following: "On Tuesday evening I was very sick, not expected to live, but all of a sudden a change came over me, and I was well. I knew father was praying for me, and I soon went to sleep and rested good all night, and in the morning I told Mr. Eaton I must go home, and he was willing I should, so I hurried to get ready, and took the cars last night, and when I got to the station I procured a livery and got here about four o'clock this afternoon."

All of this again substantiated the thought that indeed, if the prophets and apostles were led and taught of God by his Holy Spirit, so was I led by the same Holy Spirit. But how I could go and begin to preach to the Saints still troubled me the more, for I really felt that I knew God had commanded me to do so.

I went home Saturday evening. Bro. Gurley had an appointment for Sunday morning in our meetinghouse. I started for meeting as usual, and just before I got to the house the Spirit rested upon me in great power, and said to me, "Elder Gurley will attempt to fill his appointment, but he will be confounded and cannot preach, and when he sits down, you speak.' This clear manifestation and revelation of the will of the Lord to me was impressed in such a calm, serene manner that I felt no doubt in my mind but what my heavenly Father wished me to now begin in his service as a minister of the gospel. But oh, I was so weak! I could not see how it was possible to obey the command, and I began praying in my heart for Bro. Gurley to be blessed with the spirit of his calling so that he could preach. But after meeting had opened as usual Elder Gurley read a chapter in the New Testament, quoted his text, and tried to speak, but instead began to stammer. He then tried to read a few verses again, and speak, but he could not for some moments, when he closed the Bible said. "I do not feel that I will ever preach again in Zarahemla, and sat down much confused. I was very anxious and distressed in mind for a few moments, and some one started a hymn, and after singing, Bro. Samuel Gurley arose to speak. He also was confused, and sat down, feeling embarrassed and mortified. Another hymn was sung, and while singing, the Holy Spirit rested on me and like a shock passed through my whole being, and I was lost to all consciousness of my surroundings, and did not know that I arose to my feet or was speaking for some moments, and in fact was not exercised in thoughts for ideas or words to speak. I saw the words spelled out before me, and uttered them one by one as they pass through my mind. I spoke for half or three quarters of an hour rapidly, and was fully conscious and in my normal condition before I sat

I have been thus particular, my dear reader, to relate my first experiences, that you may judge of my real condition of mind and heart when I began in this latter day work.

By this time every vestige of doubt had been cleared from my mind, and I was fully committed and consecrated to the gospel ministry. The Almighty Father of heaven and earth I acknowledged as my God, and Jesus the Christ his only begotten by the Holy Ghost as the Savior. The office work of the Holy Spirit I had attested to my satisfaction to be what is declared to be the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, and will bring all things to remembrance, and show things to

From this hour I commenced in the ministry as the work of life to my fellow men. My first labor was with the Saints in Zarahemla, which resulted in holding meetings at Bro. Reuben Newkirk's. At first I met him at his house, and talked with him out doors. The following evening I called on him again, and this time he invited me into the house, and after quite a long conversation in relation to the hope of the Saints, I suggested we have prayer. This was the first prayer that I ever attempted to make in the hearing of others; and only Bro. Newkirk and wife were present. They did not pray, but before I left that evening he suggested that I come again the next evening, and he would invite his brother David and wife, and we would have a prayer meeting at his house. I agreed to this and we had an excellent meeting. The spirit of prayer and testimony was given to us in a goodly degree. We kept the meetings up. One by one the Saints came to meet with us and our meetings became very interesting, and in order to accommodate all who came we accepted the invitation to hold our meetings at Bro. Cyrus Newkirk's house, as it was a much larger build-The gifts of prophecy, tongues, and interpretation of tongues were given to us in great power, with joy in the Holy Ghost. All the Saints of the branch soon attended our meet-

Sometime early in the fall, a Mr. Cox came to Bro. Deam's. He had been a member of the church in Nauvoo, an acquaintance of Bro. Deam, and was well acquainted with the Prophet Joseph: had just come from Nauvoo: was on his way up north, and said he was at the funeral of little Joseph, as Joseph was then called by us. He reported that he knew he was dead and buried. Mr. Cox was an elder of appeared before me and seemed to the church at the time when Bro. Joseph would soon come and take his Deam knew him, was thought much of and was well respected; hence Bro. Deam recommended him very highly as a man. But now he was a spiritualist, lecturing on that subject, and lectured in our little church. second evening after his arrival in our neighborhood, and during his lectures he told us of his visit to Nauvoo, Illinois, on his way to our place, and that he attended the funeral of Joseph Smith, just a few days previous, and that he knew he was dead and buried. This announcement caused a sensation among the Saints. They had received many evidences, and all believed from God that he would be the successor of his father in the presidency of the church. We were all very quiet and said but little, but the next evening, while in our prayer meeting, the Spirit rested on me and I arose and prophesied,

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Joseph the son of Joseph the choice seer is not dead, but is alive; and it is impossible for him to die, for he was called, chosen, and ordained before the foundation of the world to be the successor of his father and president of the church."

This manifestation of the Holy Spirit gave us some hope again; but others would say, "It is not possible that he is alive, for what object would this man have in lying to us about his death and burial?" I felt somewhat concerned over the matter, fearful lest I had been deceived by some false spirit. Bro. Z. H. Gurley, Sen., took courage again and wrote to the postmaster at Nauvoo, asking this question: "Is Joseph Smith, son of Joseph Smith the Mormon Prophet who was killed at Carthage, dead and buried?" It was some ten or fifteen days before he got the following an. swer: "Joseph Smith, the son of the Mormon Prophet who was killed, was just in and got his mail and is alive and well. Signed, John Bauer, Postmaster, Nauvoo, Illinois."

When the above letter came to us it gave new life to the Saints. I was particularly rejoiced over it, for I had suffered much in my feelings, and thought how I would be mortified and disgraced if I had been deceived by a lying spirit. It now appeared that the very evil one had been tormenting me over my prophecy. The facts are, the Saints in Zarahemla had more trials over the coming of Joseph Smith to take his place at the head of the church, than in relation to the general principles of the gospel, for in these they were thoroughly established. The other was a matter of prophecy.

At one of our meetings during this summer, while Bro. Samuel Gurley was speaking, the spirit of prophecy rested on him, and he predicted that place as the prophet of the church. Soon after he sat down, he very abruptly took his hat and left the house. He was gone some time, and when he returned I noticed he was much cast down in his feelings, and crestfallen. I wondered about it at the time, but the next morning I met him and he began talking of the excellent meeting we had the day before, when he remarked, "Did you notice me leaving the meeting yesterday?" I answered him in the affirmative. "Well," said he, "I was so certain that Joseph was coming to take his place in the church that I went to meet him, thinking that I might see him coming then." Continuing, he said: "Well, I believe he will come in the Lord's due time, don't you? And if I ever doubt again I ought to be damned."

"WHO SHALL PRESIDE?"

Such is the caption of an article found in HERALD, December 5, 1900. I have been waiting patiently for some one to reply to said article, but so far waited in vain. Hence, have concluded to assume the task of replying. The writer contends that in case of death or disqualification of the President of the church that either or both of his Counselors should preside in his stead. If this claim be correct, Sidney Rigdon's position was also correct; for Sidney Rigdon made the claim that he was the legal successor to the Presidency of the church by reason of the fact that he was First Counselor to Bro. Joseph at the time of his death. We are forced to the conclusion that the Lord did not take the same view of it as did Rigdon, for it is evident that from the manner in which the Lord brought the Reorganization into existence that he did not recognize the claims of Sidney Rigdon; for when the time had come for the fragments to be gathered and made ready to be formed into an organization, so that the legal heir should take the Presidency of the church, the Lord moved upon Jason W. Briggs, Z. H. Gurley, Sen., and others, to prepare the way for that event. It is also a fact in history that the Lord directed Joseph Smith towards these, and the work they were doing, thus ignoring Rigdon and his Query. If, as claimed by the writer, the Counselors should succeed to the Presidency, why was it that Rigdon was not directed by the Lord to do the work that the Lord afterwards assigned to Briggs, Gurley, et al.?

It would be as easy for the Lord to speak to Rigdon in New York as to these brethren in the west. If the brother can prove that Rigdon had disqualified himself by transgression, that would put him out of the way.

We want proof, however, before acceding that point.

We are aware that Law, the Second Counselor, did disqualify himself by transgression. If Rigdon was also disqualified, then the Twelve, from the brother's own admission, were the proper ones to assume the Presidency.

Then why criticise the Twelve for doing what was their right under the The position of the Twelve law? until 1847 was correct and in harmony with the law. When the Twelve created a new quorum, without divine guidance, and out of harmony with the law; when they elevated Brigham Young and two others of the Twelve to a position which the Lord only had the right to fill, is where the great mistake was made. It was their right to continue in the Presidency, as a quorum, and keep the organization intact, until the proper heir was old enough to assume the reins of the Presidency. For we are informed in section 122, paragraph 9, of the Doctrine and Covenants:-

The parallels are; in the presidency, the president and his counselors; in the second presidency, the twelve.

Hence we conclude that there are two quorums that constitute the Presidency of the whole church; viz., the President and his Counselors and the Twelve Apostles.

In section 104, paragraph 11, we are told that the Twelve

Form a quorum equal in authority and power to the three presidents.

As I view it, the Counselors stand in the same relationship to the President of the church as the Cabinet stands to the President of the United States. These men are simply counselors to the President, or in other words simply hold up his hands. But in case of his death they do not succeed him in the Presidency; the Presidency coming from another line. The Vice President, who succeeds upon the death or removal of the President, can choose his own Cabinet; thus the Cabinet's work concludes with the death or removal of the President.

So in like manner does the work of the Counselors or assistants of the President of the church cease upon the removal of the President. As foreshadowed in Moses' case when Aaron and Hur held up the hands of the prophet, so in like manner today do the Counselors by counsel and assistance uphold the hands of the Prophet or President of the church. But if the man whose hands they uphold is removed, that ends their work as there are no hands to hold up. The Lord could rechoose them to act as Counselors and assistants to the successor to the Presidency.

Therefore the Twelve would continue as a quorum to act in their place as a second presidency, to hold the organization intact until the legal successor should take his place.

However, we do not anticipate such a thing occurring in our day, as we believe our gracious God and Father will amply provide for the continuation of the Presidency in their place, ere the present incumbent is taken

It is apparent that the brother has based his entire argument upon a statement in section 99, paragraph 6, Doctrine and Covenants, where it is said that "the other presidents" may "preside" in the absence of the President. But the brother should have borne in mind that this statement relates only to the duty of the presidents in the High Council and not the church in general. Because in the same paragraph it says that it is the President's "privilege to be assisted by two other presidents." But I do not find a statement in all the revelations where the Lord makes it imperative upon the High Council to select the President's Counselors to preside with him in the High Council. It is possible that they could select any two high priests to assist him in presiding over the High Council. And moreover, it is his privilege to have assistants; which statement implies that he may preside without assistants. He presides by the dignity of his office, and the High Council of 1834 selected Sidney Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams to preside with Joseph Smith, by virtue of the dignity of their high office, not that the Lord compelled them to do so, as the Lord says nothing about the Counselors presiding by virtue of the dignity of their office.

And again; we should consider that there is a vast difference between presiding over the church and over the High Council. It is not a question of "privilege" whether he should have assistants in presiding over the whole church, for the Lord makes it imperative that he have assistants or Counselors. Section 104, paragraph 11, Doctrine and Covenants:—

Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the Presidency of the Church.

We admit that the Counselors can and do perform duties during the lifetime of the President that are parallel with the duties of the President. But there are certain duties enjoined upon the President that the Counselors cannot perform, even while the President is alive; namely, no one can receive revelations for the church except the President. (D. C. sec. 27, par. 2.) The ordinance of washing of feet:—

And again, the ordinance of washing feet is to be administered by the President [not presidents], or presiding elder [not presiding elders] of the church.—Sec. 85, par. 46.

Again, the President is a "Moses man" to this church. He is the Seer, Revelator, Translator, and Prophet. (Sec. 104, par. 42.) There was but one Moses assisted by Aaron and Hur, who upheld his hands for a time, and we have but one Moses today, also but one Aaron and Hur, who simply uphold his hands as shown in the type. We should not go to the extremes and assume positions because men in the past have ignored law and gone beyond their bounds. Because the first Twelve exceeded their rights under the law, are we justified in concluding that the present Twelve will make the same mistake? Would it not be better policy to wait and see when they are put to the test? Why undertake to cross a bridge before we reach it?

So far as I am concerned, I am willing to trust the future in God's hands. believing that he will steady the ark. Yours for the right,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

PRECIOUS PEARLS.-NO. I.

GATHERED FROM THE DEPTHS OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.

INTRODUCTION.

In presenting this paper it is with a desire upon my part to bring out a display of the grand and elevating sentiments and principles contained in a book which has been and still is being looked upon and denounced as an outgrowth from his satanic majesty, and its believers as an ignorant and deluded set, especially by the professed Christian world, whose prejudices, like those of the Pharisees of old, in a great measure govern the popular feeling. There are two expressions in the accepted word of God which to my mind more than counterbalance the above expressed ideas. I read that "All good cometh from God," and "A good tree cannot bring evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." And as the sentiments and principles extracted from that book are certainly in line with the sentiments and principles of the accepted word of God, the Bible, the objections raised fail in their intent. In all my experiences with this book, which have extended over a period of near sixty years, I have yet to find in all of its teachings a single sentence detrimental to the elevation and salvation of man or calculated to stultify or degrade; but upon the contrary, all its teachings run upon the line of reproof of sin, of righteousness, and of a judgment to come. And in this paper, which represents but a fractional part, they come in their own language, no word of mine being added. With this presentation we will proceed.

I am your brother in the faith. WILLIAM HAWKINS.

Hosannah to the Lord, the most high God; for he is God over all the earth, yea, even above all. The Holy Ghost giveth authority that I should speak these things and deny them not. And whose shall publish peace, yea, tidings of great joy, how blessed upon the mountains shall he be. The Lord knoweth all things from the beginning; wherefore, he prepareth a way to accomplish all his work among the children of men; for he hath all power unto the fulfilling of all his For I know that the Lord words. giveth no commandments unto the children of men, save he shall prepare a way for them that they may accomplish the thing which he commandeth them.

Therefore remember, O man, for all thy doings thou shalt be brought into judgment. He that is righteous is favored of God; these are made white in the blood of the Lamb, because of their faith in him: do ye not remember the things which the Lord hath said, if ye will not harden your hearts, and ask of me in faith, believing that ye shall receive, with diligence in keeping my commandments, surely, these things shall be made known unto you. And I have, even from the beginning, declared to thee: before it came to pass I shewed them thee; they were declared unto thee, lest thou shouldst say, behold I knew them. And the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto them by the power of the Holy Ghost, as well in these times as in times of old; and as well in times of old as in times to come; wherefore the course of the Lord is one eternal round. And in the mouth of as many witnesses as seemeth him good, will he establish his word; and the way is prepared for all men from the foundation of the world, if it so be that they repent and come unto him; for he that diligently seeketh shall find; and if they endure unto the end, they shall he lifted up at the last day, and shall be saved in the everlasting kingdom of the Lamb. But behold, I say unto you, that the kingdom of God is not filthy, and there cannot any unclean thing enter into the kingdom of God; wherefore, if ye have sought to do wickedly in the days of your probation, then are ve found unclean before the judgment seat of God. Remember to be carnally minded, is death, and to be spiritually minded is life eternal.

Behold, my soul delighteth in proving to my people the truth of the coming of Christ: for, for this end hath the law of Moses been given: and also, my soul delighteth in the covenants of the Lord which he hath made to our fathers; yea, my soul delighteth in his grace, and his justice, and power. and mercy, in the great and eternal plan of deliverance from death; and my heart doth magnify his holy name.

He ruleth high in the heavens, for it is his throne, and this earth is his footstool; and he loveth those who will have him to be their God. He doeth not anything save it be for the benefit of the world; for he loveth the world, even that he layeth down his own life, that he may draw all men unto him; and they must come according to the words which shall be established by the mouth of the Lamb; for behold, thus saith the Lord God: I will give unto the children of men line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little; and blessed are those who hearken unto my precepts, and lend an ear unto my counsel, for they shall learn wisdom; for unto him that receiveth, I will give more; and from them that shall say, We have enough, from them shall be taken away even that which they have. For the Lord God giveth light unto the understanding: for he speak. eth unto men according to their language, unto their understanding. Great and marvelous are thy works, O Lord God Almighty! Thy throne is high in the heavens, and thy power, and goodness, and mercy are over all the inhabitants of the earth. And he also has shown unto me, that the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, should should manifest himself unto them in the flesh; and when he shall manifest himself unto you in the flesh, the things which he shall say unto you, shall ye observe to do. For there is save one Messiah spoken of by the prophets; and that Messiah is he that should be rejected of the Jews. And according to the word of the prophets, and also the word of the angel of God, his name shall be Jesus Christ, the Son of God. That they may know that there is no flesh that can dwell in the presence of God, save it be through the merits, and mercy, and grace of the Holy Messiah. And we talk of Christ, we prophecy of Christ, and we write that our children may know to what source they may look for a remission of their sins. Behold, the way for man is narrow, but it lieth in a straight course before him. O then my beloved brethren, come unto the Lord, the Holy One, remem. ber that his paths are righteous: and there is no other way save it be by the gate, for he cannot be deceived, for the Lord God is his name. For the gate by which ye should enter is repentance and baptism by water: and then cometh a remission of your sins by fire, and the Holy Ghost. Where-fore, my beloved brethren, can we follow Jesus save we shall be willing to keep the commandments of the Father? And the Father said, Repent ye, repent ye, and be baptized in the name of my beloved Son. And he commandeth all men that they must repent, and be baptized in his name, having perfect faith in the Holy One of Israel, or they cannot be saved in the kingdom of God. Behold, then shall ye receive the Holy Ghost: yea, then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, and then can ye speak with the tongue of angels and shout praises unto the Holy One of Israel.

But behold, my beloved brethren, thus came the voice of the Son unto me, saying, After ye have repented of your sins, and witnessed unto the Father that ye are willing to keep my commandments, by the baptism of the water, and have received the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost, and can speak with a new tongue, yea, even with the tongue of angels, and after this, should deny me, it would have been better for you, that ye had not known me. And I heard a voice from the Father, saying, Yea, the words of my beloved, are true and faithful. For the right way is to believe in Christ and deny him not: for by denying him, ye also deny the prophets and the law. And remember, after ye are reconciled unto God, that it is only through the grace of God that ye are saved. For the Lord of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul? And his hand stretched out, and who shall turn it back? And now my beloved brethren, this is the way; and there is none other way nor name given under heaven, whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God. And then are ye in this straight and narrow path which leads to eternal life; yea, ye have entered in by the gate; and again: it sheweth unto the children of men the straightness of the path, and the narrowness of the gate, by which they should enter, he having set the example before them. And he said unto the children of men, Follow thou me. Wherefore, ye must press forward with a steadfastness in Christ, having a perfect brightness of hope, and a love of God and of all men.

Behold, he offereth himself a sacrifice for sin, to answer the ends of the law, unto all those who have a broken heart and a contrite spirit; and unto none else can the ends of the law be answered. Who layeth down his life according to the flesh, and taketh it again by the power of the Spirit, that he may bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, being the first that should rise. For as death hath passed upon all men, to fulfill the merciful plan of the great Creator, there must needs be a power of resurrection, and the resurrection must needs come unto man by reason of the fall; and the fall came by reason of transgression; and because man became fallen they were cut off from the presence of the Lord; wherefore, it must needs be an infinite atonement; save it should be an infinite atonement this corruption he suffereth this that the resurrection might pass upon all men. And because of the way of deliverance of our God, the Holy One of Israel, this death of which I have spoken, which is the temporal, shall deliver up its dead, which is the grave; and this death of which I have spoken, which is the spiritual death, shall deliver up its dead, which spiritual death is hell; wherefore death and hell must deliver up their dead, and hell must deliver up its captive spirits, and the grave must deliver up its captive bodies, and the bodies and the spirits of men will be restored one to the other; and it is by the power of the resurrection of the Holy One of Israel. And the spirit and the body is restored to itself again, and all men become incorruptible, and immortal, and they are living souls; having a perfect knowledge like unto us, in the flesh. Behold, the righteous that hearken unto the words of the prophets, and look forward unto Christ with steadfastness, behold they are they which shall not perish: but behold, the righteous they shall inherit the king. dom of God, and their joy shall be full forever; and the righteous shall have a perfect knowledge of their enjoyment, and their righteousness, being clothed with purity, yea even with the robe of righteousness: they who are righteous shall be righteous still; and it shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall give thee rest from thy sorrow.

Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart I have written my law: fear ye not the reproach of men: neither be ye afraid of their revilings; the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel; and the meek also shall increase; and their joy shall be in the Lord: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. If ye shall say there is no sin, ye shall also say there is no righteousness. And if there be no righteousness, there be no happiness. And if there be no righteousness nor happiness, there be no punishment nor misery. if these things are not, there is no God. And if so, this flesh must have laid down to rot, and to crumble to its mother earth, to rise no more. And now, my sons, I speak unto you these things, for your profit and learning, for there is a God, and he hath created all things, both the heavens and the earth, and all things that in them is: If ye shall say there is no law, ye shall also say there is no sin; but behold, his will be done, for his ways are righteousness forever, behold God is my salvation: I will trust, and not be afraid: for the Lord, Jehocould not put on incorruption. And vah is my strength and my song; he also has become my salvation. God that is holy shall be sanctified in Wherefore, he has righteousness. given a law; and where there is no law given, there is no punishment; and where there is no punishment there is no condemnation; and where there is no condemnation, the mercies of the Holy One of Israel have claim upon them, because of the atonement: for they are delivered by the power of him: for the atonement satisfieth the demands of his justice upon all those who have not the law given unto them, that they are delivered from that awful monster, death and hell, and the devil, and the lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment; and they are restored to that God who gave them breath, which is the Holy One of Israel. Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the Lord that is faithful. And the law is given unto men, and by the law, no flesh is justified; or, by the law men are cut off; yea, by the temporal law, they were cut off; and by the spiritual law, they perish from that which is good, and become miserable for ever. Wherefore, redemption cometh in and through the holy Messiah: for he is full of grace and truth; if not so righteousness could not be brought to pass; neither wickedness; neither holiness nor misery; neither good nor bad: but behold, all things have been done in the wisdom of him who knoweth all things. To the law and to the testimony: and if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them. O the greatness of the mercy of our God, the Holy One of Israel! Wilt thou make my path straight before me?

And now, my son, I would that ye should look to the great Mediator, and hearken unto his great commandments: for he gave commandment that all men must repent; for he shewed unto all men that they were lost, because of the transgression of their parents. Prepare your souls for that glorious day, when justice shall be administered unto the righteous; behold the way for man is narrow but it lieth in a straight course before him, and the keeper of the gate is the Holy One of Israel; and whoso knocketh, to him will he open. And he manifesteth himself unto all those who believe in him, by the power of the Holy Ghost. And be faithful unto his words, and choose eternal life, according to the will of the Holy Spirit; wherefore, if ye shall press forward, feasting upon the word of Christ, and endure to the end, behold, thus saith the Father: ye shall have eternal life. If ye will not believe; surely ye shall not be established. He shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many peo-ple; and the scorner is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity are cut off. And none will he destroy that believe in him, for he delivereth his Saints from that awful monster the devil, and death, and hell, and that lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment. And the wicked will he destroy; and he will spare his people. yea, even if it so be that he must destroy the wicked by fire. And never hath any of them been destroyed, save it were foretold them by the prophets of the Lord. Behold the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate: and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it, for the Lord God of Hosts shall make a consumption, even determined in all the land. I must needs destroy the secret works of darkness, and of murders, and of abominations; for they who are not for me, are against me, saith our God.

And because of the words which have been spoken ye need not suppose that the Gentiles are utterly destroyed: wherefore, he will manifest himself unto them in power and great glory, unto the destruction of their enemies, when that day cometh when they shall believe in him. Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his servant: that walketh in darkness, and hath no And I speak unto you for your sakes, that ye may learn and glorify the name of God; and that save Christ should come, all men must perish. Say unto the righteous, that it is well with them; for they shall eat the fruit of their doing. the wise, and the learned, and they that are rich, who are puffed up because of their learning, and their wisdom and their riches; yea they are they whom he despiseth; wo unto the rich, who are rich as to the things of this world; for because they are rich, they despise the poor, and they persecute the meek, and their hearts are upon their treasures: wherefore, their treasure is their God; and behold their treasure shall perish with them also. And wo unto the deaf, that will not hear; for they shall perish. Wo unto the blind, that will not see: for they shall perish also. Wo unto the uncircumcised of heart: for a knowledge of their iniquities shall smite them at the last day. Wo unto the liar: for he shall be thrust down to hell. Wo unto the murderer, who deliberately killeth: for he shall die. Wo unto them who commit whoredoms: for they shall be thrust down to hell. Yea, wo unto those that worship idols: for the devil of all devils delighteth in them. And, in fine, wo unto all those who die in their sins: for they shall return to God, and behold his face, and remain in their sins. O my beloved brethren, remember the awfulness in transgressing against that Holy God, and also the awfulness of yielding to the enticings of that cunning one. Remember, to be carnally minded is death, and to be spiritually minded is life eternal.

O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned, they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God; for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves; wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness, and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish. But to be learned is good, if they hearken unto the counsels of God. Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink: that continue until night, and wine inflame them! And the harp, and the viol, the tabret and pipe and wine are in their feasts; but they regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operations of his hands. Wo unto the mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink: who justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him! But wo unto him that rejecteth the word of God; behold. I will show unto them, saith the Lord of Hosts, that I know all their works. For wo unto them that fight against God and the people of his church. I say unto you, that the Lord God worketh not in darkness. I know that the words of truth are hard against all uncleanness: but the righteous fear them not, for they love the truth, and are not shaken. He raiseth up a righteous nation, and destroyeth the nations of the

But behold, saith the Lord of Hosts, I will show unto the children of men. that it is not yet a little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field; and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest. Behold, in the last days, or in the days of the Gentiles; yea, behold all the nations of the Gentiles, and also the Jews, both those who shall come upon this land, and those who shall be upon other lands; yea. even upon all the lands of the earth; behold, they will be drunken with iniquity, and all manner of abominations, and when that day shall come, they shall be visited of the Lord of hosts; for the time speedily cometh, that the Lord God shall cause a great division among the people; for the kingdom of the devil must shake; and they which belong to it must needs be stirred up unto repentance. Therefore as the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff, their root shall be rottenness, and their blossoms shall go up as dust; because they have cast away the law of the Lord of Hosts. My righteousness is near; my salvation is gone forth, and mine inhabitants of the earth. And now, arms shall judge the people: they are life, through the great mediation of all men, and they shall obtain gladness and joy: sorrow and mourning shall flee away. Therefore cheer up your hearts, and remember, that you are free to act for yourselves; to choose the way of everlasting death. or the way of eternal life. My righteousness shall be for ever; and my salvation from generation to genera-Wherefore, he commandeth none that they shall not partake of his salvation. Behold, doth he cry unto any, saying, Depart from me? Behold, I say unto you, Nay: but he saith, Come unto me all ye ends of the earth, buy milk and honey, without money and without price.

But we unto him that has the law given; yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation; for awful is his state! Therefore, wo be unto him that is at ease in Zion. Wo be unto him that crieth all is well: yea, wo be unto him that hearkeneth unto the precepts of men, and denieth the power of God and the gift of the Holy Ghost. He commandeth that there shall be no priestcrafts; for, behold, priestcrafts are that men preach and set themselves up for a light unto the world, that they may get gain, and praise of the world, but they seek not the welfare of Zion. But the laborer in Zion shall labor for Zion: for if they labor for money, they shall perish: behold, the Lord hath forbidden this thing; wherefore, the Lord God hath given a commandment, that all men should have charity, which charity is love; and except they should have charity, they were nothing: wherefore, if they should have charity, they would not suffer the laborer in Zion to perish.

And now my beloved brethren and also Jew, and all ye ends of the earth, hearken unto these words, and believe in Christ; and if ye believe not in these words, believe in Christ. And if ye shall believe in Christ, ye will believe in these words; for they are the words of Christ, and he hath given them unto me; and they teach all men that they should do good. And if they are not the words of Christ, judge ye: for Christ will show unto you, with power and great glory, that they are his words, at the last day; and you and I shall stand face to face before his bar; and ye shall know that I have been commanded of him to write these things, notwithstanding my weakness; and I pray the Father in the name of Christ, that many of us, if not all, may be saved in his kingdom, at the great and last day. Wherefore, how great the importance to make these things known unto the my beloved brethren, all those who free to choose liberty and eternal are of the house of Israel, and all ye ends of the earth. I speak unto you, as the voice of one crying from the dust: Farewell until that great day shall come; and you that will not partake of the goodness of God, and respect the words of the Jews, and also my words, and the words which shall proceed forth out of the mouth of the Lamb of God, behold, I bid you an everlasting farewell, for these words shall condemn you at the last day; I have spoken these few words unto you all, my sons, in the last days of my probation; and I have chosen the good part; according to the word of the prophet. And I have none other object, save it be the everlasting welfare of your souls. Amen.—From Lehi and his son Nephi.

A REVERIE.

Our Father! Who is he? Our Father in heaven. Have we then the honor of having a Father in heaven? But still we would ask, who is he? What is he to us? He is a king, a great and mighty ruler. But are there not other kings, other great and mighty potentates, who control millions of people? He is the King of kings. The King over all other kings. How large is his territory? Let us see if we can come anywhere near the true idea of it. We step outdoors on a moonlight night. We have seen the mighty orb of day come forth in all his splendor; we have seen his rising and his setting. At least, that is the way we express it. Now we see the moon in the spacious firmament, and sing:-

The spacious firmament on high. With all the blue ethereal sky, And spangled heavens, (a shining frame,) Their great Original proclaim: The unwearied sun from day to day Doth his Creator's power display, And publishes to every land The work of an almighty hand.

Soon as the evening shades prevail, The moon takes up the wondrous tale, And nightly to the list'ning earth, Repeats the story of her birth; While all the stars that round her burn, And all the planets, in their turn, Confirm the tidings as they roll. And spread the truth from pole to pole.

Then he is the Creator, too. And as we look we see the stars, a great host. Let us count them. We get up to one hundred, two hundred, three, four! But stop. We have only just begun. Why, there are millions of them. And how the number may be increased with a telescope. But oh, what beauty, what magnificence is spread out before the natural eye. And as we contemplate all this, our mind runs on beyond what we see here. We pass on to another sun, moon, and stars spread out in all their glory. Is that all? No! for it is a spacious firmament. We go on to other suns with their them. Our mind goes on and on, till we are obliged to call a halt, and come back to terra firma, to our own little sphere, the earth.

We become daft, as it were, for so much of it is beyond our ken. We cannot realize, hardly conceive of, the glory and grandeur of it all. How should we? We are but as atoms on this one little ball called the earth. And the earth itself is so small compared with many of the planets we see. But did God make the other worlds as well as ours, or do they have other Gods for the many other worlds? In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. Here the word says "heavens." In the plural. How many heavens are there? We don't know. It is not necessary for us to know, not in this earth life, or our Father would have told us. All these suns, and moons, and stars are no doubt a part of the heavens. Paul assures us that he was caught up to the third heaven. That brings us back home to ourselves. We are a part of his creation. And in all these vast creations of suns, moons, and stars, with their trillions of human beings, that perhaps have never sinned like us, with all the angelic host, with the Cherubim and Seraphim, yet we are cared for, watched over, and guided-when we will yield to his guidance—by this great "King of kings," this "God," this "great Jehovah," this "I Am." For not one sparrow falls to the ground without our Maker's notice, but each of us are worth more than many sparrows.

Oh, how incomprehensible are his ways, and past finding out. It is so very little that our finite minds are capable of comprehending.

But this thought, this one great thought, that with all his majesty and greatness, with the vastness of his dominion, the thought that he loves even us, should call forth the truest and best there is in us, that we may lay all that we have and are in a full consecration at his feet, gladly, joyfully. O how should an answering love be begotten in every human heart. So little, so unworthy, that the God of heaven should love even us! Shall we not be learning more and more of our heavenly Father throughout all the countless ages of eternity? I surely think so. We are making just a wee, small beginning

Only the perfection of the little seed in the ground that is just beginning to grow, that will in eternity develop into the full flower. As we enter the glory world, as we leave this shell behind, this clod of clay that holds us here, and pass over into the land of the leal, and then behold the verdure that never fades, the grass that is always green, the flowers that never fruits that never become stale or worm-eaten, but far excel in taste those grown here, where nothing ever decays or become offensive to the smell, where everything is so perfect, and nothing ever dies; no offensive taint in the air, no disease germs to breathe; no aches, no pain, no feeling of being so tired we would like to lie down never to get up again; no threatening clouds, and darkening thunder storms with its lightning flashes to destroy our homes or lives, or earthquakes to break in on the harmony above, but all is beautiful, bright, and restful.

O. the loveliness of it all! We can almost see the river of life in which we first bathe, removing all the stains of earth life, and coming forth free as air, released as a bird from its cage to fly forth and sing the joyous notes God gave it. We walk the streets paved with gold, with pearl and emerald lining its sides, we enter the home built for our habitation and meet glad, bright faces we once knew in the earth life, who throw dear. loving arms about us and bid us welcome to our own home among the many mansions above. Then we remember that Jesus said he was going away, when he ascended, to prepare a place for us. It may have been the abode of want and poverty on earth, but here are the broad porticos, supported by marble columns, the trailing arbutus, the climbing roses, everywhere the sweet perfume of fragrant.

We enter room after room, and find new beauty in each. Here is the library, filled with rare and costly books, from which we can go on with the studies we left on earth, for we are still to go on learning; not learning and forgetting as here, for by and by, when we have made sufficient growth in knowledge and wisdom, we shall see our Savior, shall take him by the hand whom our soul had learned to love on earth. And oh, the joy of it all, to see him of all others, and let our eyes rest upon the benign countenance of him who was pierced for us.

I have thought many times in these later years, that I want to live so pure here, that his would be the first face I might meet when I got there, that I would desire to see it before parents or children.

After inspecting the rooms, and by the advice of a dear friend or brother who had first come to conduct me to the spirit world, and my home in it, I lie down upon one of the many couches that occupy the different rooms and in the quiet halo we have that peace and rest which the inhabitants of earth do not enjoy. We look out upon the green sward and see many children at play, all with hosts of satellites revolving round die, the trees that bear all manner of bright happy faces, with the ringing, joyous laughter of childhood. So many things remind us that we once belonged to earth, but the contrast is so great that it is a joy to think of it. We are so glad to be here.

And we will soon see our Savior. for we have advanced in wisdom and knowledge, and from all we see about us, as well as from the companionship of the dear friends about us who are farther advanced than we. By and by some of them take us on a journey. We do not get tired traveling there, for we can walk or go through the air. We come to a sea, as it were of glass, so transparent are its pellucid waters. Boats are on its bosom, with people in them, crossing over. But what do we see on the opposite shore? People; yes, tens of thousands line the banks. Many angels with harps in their hands are among them. We hear their music, as it swells and redounds to the very dome of heaven. Now and again the music peals forth anew. What is it for? We cross over, that we may have a better chance to see. Now, we see a party landing from their boats, and friends and relatives reach out glad hands to welcome them from earth. Then the angels peal forth anew the harps they hold, in joyous strains, for what is the joy of one is the joy of all. And as we look and listen, there is an innumerable company of singers in the air. Cherubim and Seraphim who join the glad chorus. One boat after another is continually landing, with its precious freight, friends receiving and taking away with them the loved one to make room for others that are constantly coming.

But we pass on. We behold the Christ. He is sitting on a raised mound, surrounded by children. Some at his feet, others leaning on his shoulders, others standing round, but having eyes and ears for none else, but to be near and listen to his loving words. Surely the little ones are not forgotten, but he loves them. too. Well might he rebuke the disciples when on earth, as he took the little ones in his arms and blessed them. We will pass on. We pass over city after city, and village after village we leave behind us. We see a crowd gathered in the open air. Let us go nearer and see what they are doing. Behold, a white-haired missionary preaching to the red man. Heaven would not be heaven to them till they were prepared for it, neither for the millions of heathen that have gone before us. People wonder so much at God taking away men and women in the prime of life who were doing so much good here. He is only taking them over there, where they can do more good. There is a great deal of preaching to be done over there before many millions will be able to come into the full rest and habitations of the mansions continually being prepared for them. There, when prepared for it, I love to think that we shall mingle with people from other worlds; we shall learn more of them and they of us, and millions of years will not exhaust what we will still have before us to learn.

As all these things pass in panorama before me, I do not wonder at the great Apostle Paul, after being caught up to the third heaven and hearing and seeing things beyond expression, exclaiming, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." And "I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Shall we repine at waiting a few years here, amid the trials and sorrows of earth, and filling the place he has appointed us? To depart and be with Christ seems better, but it is needful for us to remain longer in the flesh, or Christ would take us. Then let us see to it that we fill our places here, improving the talent he has given us, and no time be wasted, that when our time here is ended, we may have an abundant entrance into the mansions above.

MRS. M. J. PHIPPS. EL DORADO SPRINGS, Mo.

Letter Department.

BOONSBORO, Iowa, Jan. 26.

Editors Herald:—Although I have not written for publication for some months I have not been idle, but have been doing what I could for the Master's cause that we love so much

Beginning December 11, I held a seven sessions debate with H. Ford, of the Christian Church. Bro. J. C. Crabb assisted me. and Davis H. Bays assisted Rev. Ford. Debate was held in the Christian church at Redfield, Iowa. It is a new point. There has never been any preaching done by our people in this region. Bro. Ward Christy, who bore our share of the expense of the debate, says in a letter I received a few days ago: "I have been at Redfield several times since the debate, and I am satisfied with the results. Good was done. People, both in and out of the churches, have a different understanding of us as a people, and most everyone out of the Christian church thinks Ford was defeated, especially in the last proposition. Of course it is very hard to get people to believe in the divinity of the Book of Mormon, but it was a crust breaker, and there must always be a starting point."

Bro. Christy, I am confident, will pardon me for using some more of his letter in mine.

He says: "We have enjoyed rich blessings from the bountiful hand of a loving Father. Health good, business thriving, and all to make life complete except the communion of Saints. We feel, as we never felt before, the lack of the association of the Saints." I cannot but contrast this feeling with some things I see when I go to places where there are scores of members who make no effort to associate with the Saints in worship.

I closed meetings in a schoolhouse ten miles southwest of Eagle Grove last week. I believe I can safely say they were the best attended meetings I have held this conference year. The interest was also good, and I think there will be reaping done as a result of that sowing.

Your brother in Christ,

D. M. RUDD.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—A new religion, about four months old, has appeared in Kansas City. It is being expounded in the hall formerly used by the second Kansas City branch, corner Seventeenth and Madison. The leader is Mr. Charles Parum, of Topeka, Kansas, where they have what they term a "Bible College," where a few students (men and women) are living according to the Bible teachings, that is, all things common, consecration of all property, etc. They teach that they should not labor for the bread that perisheth, but that all their time be given to preaching the gospel and the Lord will provide.

Mr. Parum preaches just about the same as Latter Day Saints, including tithing, consecration; the gathering; the near coming of Jesus Christ, the Saints to be caught up in air to meet him; baptism by immersion. They teach the power of God to heal in answer to prayer, and through the laying on of hands. Any member of the church may administer this ordinance.

At a watch meeting in Topeka, Kansas, New Year's eve, Mr. Parum claims the gift of tongues was made manifest to them, and he says the gift has been with them at different times since then in their meetings. He claims the discerning of spirits, prophecy and all the gifts of the gospel, when the Lord wills to bestow them. He claims God directs them by inspiration, revelation, visions, dreams, and in prophecy through the spiritual gifts.

Seven of the students of the Bible College are here with Mr. Parum to assist in spreading the new light they have received. They are a good looking lot of people, clear-skinned, bright-eyed and healthy as though they were keeping the "word of wisdom." Their zeal is commendable.

When I spoke of the Lord always giving authority through angels to his servants, and of the necessity of a prophet at the head of the church, he said: "Yes, that is alright when we are in a condition to receive these blessings."

Is God pouring out his Spirit upon all flesh? I did not partake of their spirit while with them.

The Saints of the second Kansas City branch wish to thank the Saints of the Lamoni branch for their donation of twenty-one dollars toward our chapel at Twenty-third and Holly streets, where some strangers are hearing the gospel every week. May God speed the right in the name of the Master.

JOHN C. GRAINGER.

2124 East street, near Holly.

NEVADA, Iowa, Jan. 25.

Editors Herald:—I am tied at home with la grippe, but can see a great many things to be thankful for. The Lord has been very good to me and my family, and he will always bless us and care for us if we will keep ourselves in the proper condition before him. There are only two families of Latter Day Saints in this place, and we do not hear preaching or have the privilege of assembling with those of like faith, unless we go twenty-two miles; but the Lord calls on us to serve him where we are, and to do all we can for his work.

We had an experience here last fall which I will relate. A Baptist evangelist came here and advertised that he would expose Mormonism, and Spiritualism, and Adventism, and all other isms that were of the Devil. I at once wrote to our missionary in charge, Bro. D. M. Rudd, but he did not get my letter until the day he should have been here. I told my wife we would go and hear, anyway; but I said to her: Before we go, let us ask God to tie that man up, or stop his speech, that he cannot destroy the work already begun here. We both asked God very earnestly, and started to the church. When the evangelist arose he commenced on the Saints, but had only talked two or three minutes when he became confounded and could not find the quotations he wanted, and said: "What is the matter with this old Bible; the leaves won't turn over." Then he said: "I have something better to tell you," and started off on Adventism and Spiritualism, and talked about them for three fourths of an hour.

We felt to thank God for his watchcare and his tender mercy in caring for his work in the way he did. May the time soon come when the gospel will be preached to all nations, and all evil be cleansed from the earth, and the meek inherit the earth in its purified and celestialized condition.

Your brother in the gospel, W. C. HIDY.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 29.

Editors Herald:—I left Philadelphia just before Christmas in company with Bro. George Smith, homeward bound, just to see how things looked on Christmas in Rhode Island. While in the home field I labored at Fiskville, Antony, Boston, and Providence. Also visited Wareham, and with Bro. Bullard enjoyed a day and night with the few Saints and friends there. On Friday last I left Providence for the Quaker city. About an hour before the boat left for New York, a number of the Saints came to the boat to see the lone missionary off, and to give him good cheer. It was a distinction I never enjoyed before, and they were such a good-natured crowd that one could not feel sorrowful while they were there. While not very many in quantity, they were considerable in quality, as there was among those present a preacher, not counting myself; musical talent of no mean order both instrumental and vocal, and last a number of linguists who, while the good steamer slowly glided from the wharf, b gan to shoot all kinds of questions at the missionary in various tongues, some of them not down in the vocabulary of any book. But as I looked at my brothers and sisters slowly fading from sight in the gathering gloom of the winter's night, there came floating over the dark waters the sweet German farewell, "Auf Wiedersehen." May God bless the kind hearts. It is a green spot in my life. The trip was a pleasant one, and I arrived here about noon next day. The Saints in this city are busy doing what they can for the advancement of the work, and we look for much good to be done in the future. Bro. George Smith, late of Providence, is at work in the city, and has been elected president of the branch, so we are glad that help has come to us. Our district conference is to convene here next Saturday, and we trust a joyful time may be had. We may not be very spiritual here in the good city of Penn, but we are peaceful most of the time, and the Saints seem to desire to work together and follow the suggestions of those that are sent to them. But then, grass grows in our streets here, and that may make some difference. I expect to leave the city for other parts of the field after the conference, and trust the good Lord may bless the effort to present this unpopular faith to a dying Yours as ever, world.

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

DOGWOOD, Mo., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:-This country is very broken in places, but fertile and healthy, and has as good, pure water as is in the world. The land is not so broken but that it can nearly all be cultivated, and produces well all kinds of tame grass that we have tried, and fair corn, wheat, and oats. We have plenty of timber of the different varieties of oaks, hickory, etc., for fuel, building, and fencing purposes. Stock does well here on the range from April until November. We have quite a number of Saints in this (Douglas) and adjoining counties, most of whom are trying to keep their lamps aglow. Several families have moved in recently and permanently located with us. They seem to be well pleased with the country. Other Latter Day Saints who are wishing to locate in the land of Zion can find good, comfortable homes cheap in this country. The writer knows of several good locations with some improvements that can be had cheap, and Saints who wish to locate in this country might do well to secure them. We are commencing to build a church house a few miles from this place, where we can meet and worship God unmolested. We are mostly poor, but think with the help of all generous hearted Saints and friends we will succeed. Elder J. C. Chrestensen and Jacob E. Swegart are appointed to solicit aid, so anyone wishing to donate can do so by sending their donation to either of the above at Beaver, Missouri.

The writer preached at Beaver schoolhouse last Thursday evening, to a large and attentive audience, with good liberty. I think if the Saints will only live their religion in this community the work will grow, for the prejudice against the church is fast giving way.

The Saints in this place all miss Bro. C. J. Spurlock. Yours in the hope of eternal life, W. G. HODGES.

HARLANVILLE, Texas, Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:-We have had some good and some very rough times here of late. We cannot get the use of the schoolhouse, and the Saints have become discouraged and have given way to some extent; but the writer and others meet. But, judging from present conditions, it will not be very long till the branch will be disorganized. We hope to do all the good we can. Two of the Utah elders staved with us awhile ago, and we discussed the differences between us with about the usual result. They refused to defend their claims in public. May God be our helper in the time of need. Let us all watch as well as Your brother, pray.

B. F. SPICER, JR.

BOSTON, Mass., January 28.

Editors Herald:-The usual fervor of interest was manifest here yesterday in the meetings held by the Saints. Two preaching services, a Sunday school and Religio constitute the regular order for Sunday. There are talented teachers and students engaged in conducting affairs and training whose efforts cannot fail of bearing good fruit. How rapidly is the younger element developing into young men and young women, soon to take their places in the great and busy world for weal or woe. It may be that those who toil and sacrifice in their interest will then see satisfying fruits manifest for labor bestowed. There are signs of promise pointing that way at least.

While on my way here, I tarried over a few days at New Canaan, Connecticut, and aided Brn. U. W. Greene and Albert Stone in the work they have in hand there. They have succeeded in attracting a very interesting class of people to the faith in an adjoining neighborhood and are moving along hopefully and confident in the faith.

A visit to Brooklyn, New York, and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, also found the Saints hopeful and earnest in the faith. Of course, as in the affairs of men, some more industriously so than others. Regular services are being held and an effort put forth to bring the work to the notice of others as well as to keep in proper religious tone themselves. One has to make haste to go slow in counting on gathering a people, carving a name and forcing a standing and recognition in great cities, where vanity, pride, and prejudice reign and with an unpopular faith. There are difficulties on every hand; and only the most persistency of effort and devotion to the cause will avail. More especially when it requires of men that they should forsake evil, walk humbly, deal justly, love mercy, and contend earnestly for truth. The Saints are making some progress and are hopeful of success, even with so much against them, relying on the justness of their cause.

Yesterday Bro. F. M. Sheehy was at Plainville, Bro. R. Bullard at Providence, Bro. Geo. W. Robley at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and it is likely Bro. M. H. Bond at Fall River. Weather fine.

> Hopefully, WM. H. KELLEY.

LUVERNE, Minn., Feb. 1.

Editors Herald:—I send you a very condensed report of the debate now being held here. The feeling at present is all that we could wish for in our favor. A complete vice tory for us so far. Many outsiders have been in tears while Bro. Wight was speaking. Good is being done, and the Lord's work maintained. Begin second proposition tonight. Will send results when through.

For the right,

E. A. STEDMAN.

LUVERNE, Minn., Jan. 31.

Editors Herald:-The debate between Eder J. W. Wight, of the Reorganized Church, and Elder G. M. Walker, of the Christian Church, is now well under way. It began January 28, the writer acting as moderator for Elder Wight, and Mr. Boardman Weymouth for Elder Walker. The first proposition now under discussion, and affirmed by E der Wight, is: "Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is, in organization, faith, and practice, in harmony with the New Testament." Bro. Wight in his opening speech dwelt to some extent upon the thought of organization and operation of law. Contended that all things are governed by law. Elder Wight said that where there was no organization chaos reigned; said that to sever an arm from the body, chaos would take its place. He presented Jesus as the great teacher and lawgiver, and that the system presented by him to the world was a perfect one, given to make men perfect, to bring us nearer to God, and make us more Christlike. Referred to Matthew 10; 1 Corinthians 12:2", 28; Eph. 4:8-14. These Elder Wight maintained were given for the perfecting of the Saints, for the edifying of the body of Christ, and were to be in the church until perfected.

Elder Walker in his opening remarks said that we do not find very much organization in the New Testament, that officers were put in the church that they might grow in grace. Must have some organization, but must not put too much stress on it. Said that if every one would do right, would not need any organization. In making this statement he did not seem to grasp the thought that these things (gifts) were given that men might do right, and be brought to a knowledge of the truth. Elder Walker said that when the apostles laid on hands power was given, but when they died the power ceased. They could not give it to any one else; said that we do not need them, the apostles, now; we have their words. The dead ones have just as much power now as they ever had. But he failed to tell how that power was now manifested. He said that in order to be an apostle one must know the history of Christ. He maintained that as God no longer revealed himself to men, they could not receive this knowledge. Said the only way we could know that Jesus was the Christ, "The Son of God," was by the Bible. Must see and know. Paul declared the whole counsel of God, and we don't need any more revelations. Elder Walker said that the Latter Day Saints are a great people for revelations; that any and every one could receive one, and no two alike. Referred to Book of Covenants, concerning Sidney Rigdon and Oliver Cowdery. He dwelt at some length upon the last chapter of Revelation, about adding and taking from the prophecy of this book. Said that he did not believe in the healing of the sick; said the Latter Day Saints could not heal; would be "hypnotizing" them. By the parity of reasoning, then, the apostles did not heal any one, they only hypnotized them.

The second night of the discussion proved more interesting than the first, and we came together with an increased attendance and interest manifested. Elder Wight in his first speech referred to and answered some of the statements of Elder Walker, and then took up the affirmative, and in one of the grandest and most elequent bursts of oratory that I ever heard from him, defended the principle of revelation, and the outpouring of the Spirit of God upon the day of Pentecost. The room seemed to be filled with the Spirit of God, and to hang over the congregation like a mantle. The congregation was spell bound, and I know that some felt like shouting Hosanna to God. I know I felt that way, and I never saw a greater outpouring of the Spirit upon a congregation of those outside of the church than was then and there manifested.

Elder Walker the night before had made the statement that if any one should make the claim that they had received of the Spirit of God as at Pentecost, the people of Luverne would mob him or them. Elder Wight resented this in behalf of the good people there assembled; and while thus speaking, the outpouring of the Spirit came.

Elder Walker in his second speech said that the duty of a prophet was to tell future events, and challenged any living man to show a single prophetic statement ever made by Joseph Smith that had ever been fulfilled; —said that he did not read in the New Testament anything about high priests. I suppose this was because he does not read it, much less teach it. Said that apostolic succession was the bane of the world; that the idea of apostolic succession came from Rome. He said that they, the Disciples, had apostles, but they were dead ones. Apostles without power would not be apostles. We have their word. The evangelists were to teach the doctrine of the apostles. Said that Jesus came to reveal God. Jesus is the revelation. Every man must have a creed; Jesus our creed. A creed may be true, or it may be false, but we do not need one. Elder Walker has tried hard to create a feeling against Elder Wight by introducing the Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants as a part of the faith of the church, and to confound the Reorganization with the Utah church. But when pressed by Elder Wight, admitted that he knew the difference. This placed him in a bad position before the people.

Elder Wight in his first speech the third night referred to the challenge in regard to Joseph Smith, ever giving a prophecy that had ever been fulfilled, and read the prophecy on the rebellion, made some comments upon the same, and read from different authorities concerning the doctrine of polygamy, proving that it was not a part of the original faith of the church, but introduced by Brigham Young and others associated with him in 1852. This had a good effect upon the people.

Elder Wight here caused some merriment by referring to Elder Walker demanding a sign that he might believe. Walker had said that if Wight would show him a sign he would become a Latter Day Saint, would swallow the whole thing, error and all. Elder Wight showed him the foolishness of such a statement, and then read Matthew 12:38-40, where Jesus said to those asking a sign of him that "an evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign." The congregation caught the force of the answer, and it had its effect.

Elder Wight in contending for the inspiration of the Spirit, related some of his experiences, and said that while arranging to go to a certain part of his field of labor he was directed to go another way, and the result was that ten precious souls were buried with Christ in baptism. While he was relating this incident, he seemed to be enveloped in light, and the Spirit rested upon him in great power; and, with another burst of oratory seldom surpassed, he held the people as under a spell. This, too, had its effect, and those present could plainly discover and see which of the speakers was in harmony with the Bible. Never in all the debates which I have attended have I seen such a spirit of vindictiveness manifested as was manifested by Elder Walker in his last speech last night. He wished for a rattle snake, that Elder Wight might take it up and see if any harm would come to him. He then took a small package from his vest pocket, and wanted Wight to take some poison. He became so vindictive that he ran towards Elder Wight, shook his fist at him, and acted as though he wanted to strike him. He became so enraged while examining the Book of Covenants, that he pounded it with his fists, and fairly jumped from the floor to hit it hard.

The church was packed full last night, and the debate is growing in interest. It is rumored that the Baptist minister is going to challenge Elder Wight when this is over.

Elder Walker said that miracles were given anciently to confirm the word, but failed to tell how the word was to be confirmed now. Said that when once confirmed, does not need confirming again. By this kind of logic, then, we are led to believe that the apostles made a mistake when they went out to represent Christ and his work. The word was confirmed at Jerusalem, and instead of referring to that as all sufficient for all time, we find that wherever they went they taught that the signs were to follow the believer in the gospel.

Elder Wight in answering Elder Walker in regard to miracles, read from "Hayden's History," the healing of a Mrs. Johnson by Joseph Smith, at Kirtland, Ohio, as found on page 250 of that work. Elder Wight, turning to Elder Walker, asked him if that history was authentic, and he replying said that it was. This was a clincher, and Elder Walker has not alluded to it since.

Last night being the last session on the first proposition, Elder Wight used a chart representing the gospel ladder, and a tree representing the organization of the church. In his first speech he asked Elder Walker if he really had poison the night before, and asked him if he realized the condition that he (Walker) would have been in if he (Wight) had taken it and it had killed him. Then, reading from Mark 8: 11, 12, where the Pharisee asked for a sign of Jesus. And he sighed deeply in spirit and saith, "Why doth this generation seek after a sign. Verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation." Elder Wight then, turning to Elder Walker, said to him, "You have asked for a sign from me; have asked me to do what the Master refused to do while here, and I think you owe an apology to this congregation." Elder Wight said that he felt humiliated himself to think that a man like Elder Walker would ask such a thing of him. Elder Wight had the congregation with him in this, and I felt glad that it was not one of us that was thus being held up before the people.

Elder Wight in his closing speech used the chart to good advantage, and showed that the evidence presented by him proved conclusively that he had maintained the proposition under discussion. The good Spirit was present, and it would have been impossible for one to have spoken faster than he did on his last speech. Many were in tears, and much good has been done.

Elder Walker in his last speech last night virtually admitted defeat by accepting all of the officers and gifts as contended for by Elder Wight but the president, evangelist, and priest. His effort last night was very weak, and in an effort to raise a laugh no one laughed but himself. Without boasting, we can say that truth has triumphed again. The Christian Church will be on trial tonight.

(To be continued.)

E. A. STEDMAN.

Love your children and they will love you in spite of all your shortcomings; keep faith with them and they will keep faith with you; treat them courteously and they will be courteous; maintain high ideals and they will follow them; make them the centre of your life and they will make you the centre of their lives.—Caroline Leslie Field in February Ladies' Home Journal.

During the last century the Bible was translated into 250 languages, and it is now accessible to nine tenths of the world's population.—Globe-Democrat, February 3.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Keep on praying—
E'en though in death
With parting breath,
He will forgive
And bid thee live.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Sept. 12.

Dear Saints:-I see the Home Column is very much neglected, and wonder why more of the mothers do not add their mite. For some time I have felt that I must try and write you, and feel just like one does when prompted in prayer meeting, that I have quenched the Spirit, until I do not know whether I can say anything that will edify or not; but the only way I can find in this great work is, if we get out of line of duty, the sooner we get back the better for us and the work also. And if we cannot do much, we can try to do something; and if we hesitate because we think there are others more able, we may not receive the approval we otherwise would. The Lord said of the one who gave the two mites, that she had given more than them all, for she had given her living, while others had given out of their abundance.

Sisters, do not become weary in the things of the Lord, for it is in faithfully discharging our duty, that brings peace and rest to our souls. We may feel like we could not say or do anything of worth, when one word will cause our hearts to leap with joy, and we will receive new life and hope. Sometimes it takes a long while for seed to start, and we cannot expect all seed to come up; but we must not stop sowing, for if there is no sowing there will be no harvest. We are all called to labor in the one great harvest field, and if we but glean, and the wheat is good, the small amount we gather may be good seed. Are we doing anything in the great harvest field? Are we sitting with folded hands. while others are bearing the burden and heat of the day? Some may say, They do not keep pace with my time, and I will not work. There is One at the helm, and he will keep time, and every one will get their just pay. He has said, Why sit ye here idle? there is work to do; go work, and I will give you what is right.

Dear Saints, do we ever think that the same voice is today calling us to do our duty, and has called us out of darkness into light to sit idle? No; but to be as a light unto others, or to do what little we are able. We can find work if we hunt for it; but when one does not care to work, it is hard to find sometimes. And it may be hard to find when we put forth an honest effort. If so, then ask God to help you, and the way will be opened; but if we are slow to obey, he has said he would be slow to hear. I often wonder why he is so good and kind to us and bestows so many blessings upon us, while we are so indifferent to our duties. I say "we," because there are many of us who will come under this rule. Should it be so? Are we keeping the covenant we made at the water of baptism? Have we renounced the things of the world? Are we in the army working for Jesus? Have we deserted, and crossed the line into the camp of the enemy? If so, let us get back into line, and keep in the straight and narrow path that leads to life; for broad is the way that leads to death.

Sisters, how are your Prayer Unions? Do you make an effort to meet? Do you think of the many sisters in different places who have met to implore the blessings of God upon the mothers and the children? Can you well afford to live without these blessings? We often have the peaceful influence of God's Spirit in our meetings, and we do know that the Lord approves of the Prayer Union; and we often feel the rebuke when we have been careless or negligent of our duty, for God will not bless us with his Spirit unless we have done something to merit it.

Dear Saints, let us all strive more and more to live in line of our duty, and the way will become brighter, clearer, and we will have more love and charity for each other; our homes will be much happier, and our lives be of more use; and when we come to lay down these bodies, we will have a reward awaiting us if we live to earn it. Do not neglect the sick, the poor, or those in trouble; they are worth our attention. The Father says there is not a sparrow falls to the ground without his care, and are we not worth more than a sparrow? May the Lord help us to be able to overcome and to renew our diligence; improve the time we have; the present is ours, the future, who can tell? Asking an interest in your prayers in my behalf, I remain your R. M. BRADLEY. sister.

RESURRECTION AND JUDGMENT.

A FAVORITE WELSH HYMN.

Ten thousand glorious wonders
Shall greet the morning ray,
When earth's storm-beaten children
Shall wake to endless day.
All in their snow-white garments,
And crowned with new-born bloom,
Like to their Great Redeemer
When rising from the tomb!

Behold! the day is coming,
In which our faith to test,
To see who have the substance,
And who on shadows rest;
Lord! let my soul unworthy
Be sealed by thine own hand,
The one, the only token,
The final test will stand.

-J. D. Evans, in Observer.

A STORY OF ONE CHILD.

For nearly three years I have closely watched the development of a little girl who has in that time passed from the third to the fifth grade. When she first came under my notice she was one of the sunniest and brightest—as far as temperament was concerned—children in the building. She has twice failed of promotion at the close of the half year. This year her little sister started to school, entering the "I B" grade, finishing the year's work in a half year, and being promoted to the "I A" class, where she is accounted a very bright pupil who seems destined to go on taking grade after grade in the same easy fashion. I have seen the older child change gradually from the happy, smiling, sunny state that I had thought the outcome of an unsually happy nature, to something entirely different. She often seems depressed and gloomy; her manner has taken on something reckless and defiant at times, and I occasionally see on her face an expression of frightened sullenness. I have puzzled over the case a good deal. The change, I was sure, could not be wholly accounted for by her failure to pass, as she has never been an especially good student, or seemed to grieve over poor lessons, or low grades.

I have had several conferences with her mother, who is a beautiful. brilliant woman of society, but who seems to have a deep concern for her children's welfare, and, it seemed to me, was trying to do her very best to bring about an improvement in this Lately I have thought I saw some hopeful indications. The half-yearly readjustment has brought about several changes, and she has seemed to be in an atmosphere better suited to her in some respects. However, she did not 'pass." One day recently I met her mother on the street leading by the handthe brilliant six-year-old child, and I stopped to speak of the improvement in the older one. She heard what I had to say, and expressed her appreciation of it.

"But," she added, "the fact remains that she didn't pass, and the worst thing about it is that she just says, 'Oh, well, I'll know it all the better if I go over it again,' and seems utterly indifferent. Why, if I had ever failed at school I should have died of mortification. Now, if she were like this child there wouldn't be any trouble. This child is so smart and bright that she learns everything, and knows more today about many things that - ought to know than she ever will know."

I am not sure that the light that dawned on me at that moment was the correct light in which to find a solution of the mysterybut I think it was, don't you? I recall now that the apparent decadence of the older child began almost simultaneously with the entry of her sister into school-life. What child would not become sullen, reckless, and obstinate, who was daily reminded of her own shortcomings, and contrasted unfavorably with a brother or sister? And on the other hand, what surer method could be taken to make a conceited little prig out of the younger child than to tell her to her face that she was incomparably smarter and hrighter than her sister?

Parents "wound the spirit of childhood" too often by unconsidered criticism in the presence of others, and most of all by that most inexcusable of all mistakes, contrasting one child's conduct and attainments with those of another. There is no hope for that child's being permanently reclaimed unless the mother sees her error, and begins an earnest work of trying to restore her selfesteem by judicious praise of her good qualities, and sympathetic, loving, private discussion of her mistakes and failures with a view of aiding her in their correction,-Margaret E. Dennis, in Child Study.

IF I were asked to name one product of vice and crime that would soonest touch the hearts of all good people, I would say a neglected child. Give me the child and the state may have the man. Every case of vagabondage has its root in some neglected child.-Dr. W. T. Harris.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Bro. Wallis, of San Antonio, requests the prayers of the Prayer Union for his daughter (only child), Sr. Minnie Applewhite, that she may be relieved and healed of her great affliction. She is a great sufferer, and it is the desire of her loved ones that if it be God's will her life may be spared for the sake of her two little ones, who stand in need of her

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to"Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

THE TEACHER AS A CHARACTER BUILDER.

All are character builders, builders of our own characters, and factors in the lives of those with whom we associate; and the closer the association, the stronger the influence we exercise. More especially is this true of those who, not unconsciously, but knowingly, endeavor to mold and teach others. Therefore, the attribute of "character builders," belonging to us as Sabbath school teachers, ranks high in the list of responsibilities resting upon us, and is worthy of grave consideration. Many think, and very truly, that the home should be the prime factor in the upbuilding of a child's character; but the fact is evident that it does not always reach the desired end; for, while many of our scholars are members of Christian homes, yet there are others who receive little or no instruction regarding their spiritual natures. Upon the Sabbath school. then, devolves this highly important work.

Some may think that it is, after all, a very small matter, this teaching in the Sabbath school; but earnest workers cannot entertain such a thought when they remember that it is God who has called them to this work, and with him nothing is small or unimportant. Realizing that

WE ARE, IN A MEASURE, RESPONSIBLE for the characters of our Sabbath school scholars, we should give careful and prayerful attention as to when to begin to build. what materials to use, and how to use them. It requires but a limited knowledge of childnature to convince us that even in extreme youth lasting impressions can be made either for good or evil. It is said of Mrs. Wesley, the godly mother of John and Charles Wesley, that she began to instill the principle of obedience into her children when they were but six months old. Let not, then, the primary teacher think the work in that department of any less importance than among the older scholars, for, in order that the superstructure may be of lasting value, it is necessary to lay the foundation with diligence and care.

LESSON HEARING IS ONLY A SMALL PART of the teacher's duty. The minds of our scholars must be developed in more lines than one, even in the short time we have in Sabbath school, and with our well-chosen portions of God's word it is easy for us to point out and impress with force many helpful lessons. We should not be afraid to repeat. God has often to tell us the same thing many times before we remember and understand, and this should make us more patient with our scholars. Let us bear in mind that each little body is the temple of a precious, budding soul, which must blossom for good or evil, and that our hour's work on Sabbath may be of greater moment than we think. When we wish to construct something that will be durable and valuable, we use nothing but pure, good material. Then let us consider some of the principal elements which constitute a high and noble Christian character.

CHARITY RANKS FIRST,

for without love all other virtues fade into insignificance. There should be a deep, underlying spirit of unselfish, self-denying love; that love or charity which, we are told, is love, which the apostle says "never faileth." The first step toward teaching this virtue is to love our scholars, and by doing so they will be drawn to us, and will more readily incline their hearts do what we endeavor to teach. That teacher who is not capable of winning the love and respect of at least the majority of his pupils, will not make much success as a Sabbath school teacher. The earnest, active, interested teacher makes

A DEEP IMPRESSION

by getting close to his class, and they feel the force that emanates from his kindly interest in them. He builds, for as out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, so out of its abundance the busy, willing hands and feet and brain labor: and of such a one it may truly be said, "Work is worship." His works are his prayer and praise to his God.

TEMPERANCE.

perhaps, comes next in importance as an element of Christian character. Bible temperance, which means total abstinence from all improper things, and a moderate use of all proper things. As it is impossible to overestimate the evils of intemperance, so it is impossible to conduct Sabbath school work faithfully without making temperance one of the prominent features of study. Honesty, truthfulness, fidelity, and benevolence are all indispensable to the healthful existence and right development of character. It requires LIFE, ACTIVITY, AND ENERGY to be a builder; it requires love, and an intelligent use of power to build wisely. How does the unfaithful teacher build? The one who for one short hour each week goes coldly and carelessly through a form of teaching? Let us hope that such half-hearted teachers are few, for they are not builders. The true Sabbath school teacher seeks to build the characters of his pupils by interpreting to them the Scriptures—the word of God; he holds up to them the pattern, the model life, Christ Jesus. He points his class upward to higher life and nobler conduct. But in order to insure any degree of success as a character builder, it is absolutely necessary that the teacher's own character be blameless, that he be possessed of that religion which is pure and undefiled before God, and that he keep himself unspotted from the world.

PERSONAL EXAMPLE

and influence counts heavily for or against our work. A teacher influences more by what he is six days in the week, than by what he says on the seventh. One mistake. one false step, may undo the faithful work of years. We must be what we teach. We should not only point to a higher, nobler life, but we should strive to walk in that life ourselves. We should not only teach the principles of religion, but we should strive to practice them in our daily lives. We should examine ourselves, and determine whether all our works and ways are characterized by that Spirit, which bears for its fruit, love, joy, peace, and long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. It was not only the doctrine advanced by our Savior with such persuasive elequence, nor the miracles performed by him, that had such power to draw the hearts of men, but these were made doubly effective by his everready, loving sympathy, and the example he set at all times under most trying circumstances. When we think of

THE SOLEMNITY OF SABBATH SCHOOL WORK

and that we are striving to lead souls to a saving knowledge of Christ, to warn and persuade the growing minds, to stir up the fruitful soil of youthful hearts, and sow therein seed which shall bear fruit in a consecration of their lives to loving service for our heavenly Master, and in every way to upbuild and fortify their characters, so that they will develop into noble Christian men and women, we cannot but humbly feel our inability to do this work as it should be done. we cannot but realize the weakness of our best efforts, and that what is true of the ministry is true also of Sabbath school work, that "Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, but God giveth the increase." And so when we have the blessed consciousness, that what we are striving to do is in loving obedience to, and faithful cooperation with our Lord, we know that our labor is not in vain, for although we may not be allowed to see any wondrous transition as a result of our present toil, neither are we permitted to know what might have been the condition of those we ministered to had we not served them as we did. "Patience, accomplish thy labor; accomplish thy work of affection! Accomplish thy labor of love, till the heart is made godlike, purified, strengthened, perfected, and rendered more worthy of heaven."

A. M. R.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

New York district convention, will meet February 22, at 199 Saratoga avenue, Brooklyn, at 10:30. We desire to make this meeting the greatest success of all, and hope to have much labor bestowed upon this grand work, for there is great need of extending the influence of school work into all the homes of Saints at least, and also of those that are not Saints. Come and join in making this a banner meeting.

A. E. STONE, Supt. ESTELLA M. STONE, Sec.

Sunday school convention of Eastern Iowa district will meet at Amber, February 16 and 17. Will the schools send their reports in time? Election of officers at this session. J. R. Sutton, Supt.

Convention of South Missouri district Sunday school will convene at Johns Mills, Missouri, March 1. We hope to get reports from all schools in the district.

G. W. WINEGAR, Sec.

BURNHAM, MO.

Conference Minutes.

DECATUR.

Conference of Decatur district met at Lamoni, Iowa, February 2; Brn. F. M. Weld and Duncan Campbell presiding; B. M. Anderson secretary; A. M. Chase assistant. Branches reporting: Davis City, Cleveland, Centerville, Leon, Lucas, Pleasanton, Wirt, Lone Rock, Allendale, Lamoni, Greenville, Evergreen. Ministry reporting: F. M. Weld, D. Campbell, J. R. Lambert, H. A. Stebbins, R. M. Elvin, J. S. Snively, M. M. Turpen, I. P. Baggerly, R. S. Salyards, Jas. Allen, H. N. Snively, Price McPeek, F. E. Cochran, C. I. Carpenter, Lewis Gaulter, Jas. McDiffit, T. R. Allen, W. A. Williams, C. Scott, David Keown, D. J. Krahl, John Harp, J. P. Anderson, W. T. Rook, G. F. York, J. T. Williams, Nephi Lovell, D. D. Young, Wm. Anderson, J. A. Gunsolley, J. C. Clapp, H. R. Harder, John Shippy. B. M. Anderson, district treasurer, reported: Receipts $30 70, expenditures $24 33, balance on hand $6.37. Referred to an auditing committee and found correct. Bishop Anderson reported: Received $3.795.69, expended $3,873.49, due bishop $77.80. Audited and found correct. Sunday school and Religio conventions also reported. Recommendation from Greenville branch that Bro. Alfred Lovell be ordained to the office of deacon was adopted and ordination provided for. Recommendation from Evergreen branch that Bro. A. B. Young be ordained to the office of priest was also adopted and provided for.

The following were chosen as delegates to the next General Conference, with instruction that in case of division on any question, they cast a majority and minority vote; those present casting the entire vote of district. J. R. Lambert, Heman C. Smith, D. Campbell, F. M. Weld, D. A. Anderson, R. S. Salyards, H. A. Stebbins, R. M. Elvin, A. S. Cochran, F. A. Smith, J. C. Clapp, William Anderson, C. Scott, E. L. Kelley, M. M. Turpen, J. S. Snively, D. E. Daniels, John Smith, H. N. Snively, J. R. Evans, Nellie Prall, I. P. Baggerley, James McDiffit, J. W. Wight, S. V. Bailey, Jos. Bogue, A. M. Chase, Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, Isaac Phillips, E. B. Morgan, David Archibald, Frank Hitchcock, H. R. Harder, J. J. Watkins, D. J. Krahl, George Thorburn, F. E. Cochran, Vida Smith, M. B. Nicholson, Ella D. Whitehead, D. F. Lambert, H. A. Hartshorn, D. F. Micholson, M. A. Richards, David Keown, Kate E. Smith, Anna Salyards, Sr. J. R. Lambert, I. N. Roberts, Sr. I. N. Roberts, L. L. Resseguie, A. B. Hanson, Ada R. Smith, Sr. S. B. Hartshorn, Audentia Anderson, C. B. Stebbins, C. B. Kelley, Elizabeth Blair, C. H. Jones, Sr. C. H. Jones, J. A. Anderson, Sr. J. T. Williams, Alice, Thorburn, John Harp, Eliza Chase, A. Whorlow, Alma Newberry, J. Robedau, Sr. J. Robedau, W. J. Mather, Robert Johnson, M. D. Lewis, Flora Scott, Eli Hayer, Sr. Eli Hayer, D. W. Wight, Sr. I. Carlile, M. F. Gowell, Eli Stedman, D. C. White, J. A. Evans, A. K. Anderson, F. M. Smith, Ruth L. Smith, B. M. Anderson, J. P. Anderson, Maggie Bagley, W. H. Kelley, D. D. Young, La June Howard.

Bro. R. M. Elvin was chosen president for the ensuing year, B. M. Anderson secretary and treasurer. Bishop William Anderson and his counselors were sustained. Seven sessions were held, two for business, three for preaching, one priesthood meeting, and one social and sacrament service, at which Bro. Alfred Lovell was ordained a deacon by Brn. R. M. Elvin and Duncan Campbell. Bro. R. M. Elvin nominated as his associate for the next four months, Bro. H. N. Snively, and the nomination was ratified by the conference. Preaching by Brn. C. Scott, R. M. Elvin, and Bishop William Anderson. Collection for district expenses, $7.00. Adjourned to meet at Cleveland, Iowa; time of meeting left to district officers.

NORTHERN NEBRASKA.

Conference met at Omaha, Nebraska, January 25; F. A. Smith, district president, in the chair; James Huff, secretary. President reported he bad visited Columbus, Platte Valley, Fremont, and Omaha branches since last conference, and also the Saints in Sarpy county. Ministry reporting: Elders F. A. Smith, H. J. Hudson, Oscar Case, G. W. Galley, S. S. Black, J. E. Butts, W. F. Seward, James Huff, E. Rannie, John Avondet, A. W. Ballard, and Jens Anderson; Priests H. W. Belville, J. F. Weston, and E. R. Ahlstrand; Teachers W. C. Fetter and H. S. Lytle; Deacons C. M. Hollenbeck and J. J. Suttles. The ministerial reports show 144 sermons preached, 9 baptized, 9 confirmed, 125 administered to for sickness, 4 marriages, and 16 children blessed. Missionaries' labors show F. A. Smith 51 sermons, Oscar Case 41, and H. W. Belville 16. Statistical reports show no changes in Blair, Decatur, and Fremont branches. Columbus branch 30: one baptized. Omaha 286; received by baptism 7, by letter 5, deaths 2. Platte Valley 59; baptized 1, removed 3, marriages 1. Bishop's agent's audited report: On hand last report $231.72; received since $869.25; total $1,100 97; paid out $838 63; balance on hand $262 34. Tent committee reported 97 cents on hand. District treasurer reported $4 33 due him. Delegates to General Conference instructed to work and vote for the change of district line on the south side of district, are: H. J. Hudson, C. M. Hollenbeck, F. A. Smith, Oscar Case, S. S. Black, J. F. Weston, Lloyd Marteeny, J. J. Suttles, H. W. Belville, James Huff, A. W. Ballard, W. Feagin, also Sisters C. M. Hollenbeck, Mamie Suttles, Ellen Richardson, Rose Huston, Alice C. Schwartz, and Lottie Edwards. ton, Alice C. Schwartz, and Lottie Edwards. Resignations of James Huff, as secretary, treasurer, and member of tent committee received and accepted. Resignation of F. A. Smith as president and member of tent committee received and accepted. F. A. Smith elected president, A. W. Ballard vice president, and James Huff secretary and treasurer, F. A. Smith and James Huff elected tent committee. Adjourned to Platte Valley branch, the last Friday in May, at 7:30 p. m. Preaching by Elders H. J. Hudson and F. A.

Miscellaneous Department.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

On January 30 I mailed each member of the Fifth Quorum of Elders a report blank. If anyone has failed to receive his blank, please notify me at once and another will be sent.

By resolution the members of this quorum are instructed to report labors up to March 1, preceding each succeeding conference. If your last year's report to the quorum was dated later than that, then report labors performed since date of last yearly report; otherwise include all work done since March 1, 1900, up to March 1, 1901.

By another resolution the quorum asks its members to pay into the treasury fifteen cents, or more, each year, for the purpose of defraying the quorum expenses.

Now, brethren, you all can get your reports to me by March 10, and I trust none of you will cause any delay. Please put forth an effort to make out your report and mail it to me March 1, 1901.

D. A. ANDERSON, Sec.

LAMONI, IDWA.

AMENDMENT-GRACELAND COLLEGE.

Notice of amendment to articles of incorporation of Graceland college, Lamoni, Decatur county, lowa.

Notice is hereby given that the board of trustees of Graceland college contemplate amending the articles of incorporation, at a meeting of said board of trustees to be held on the 8th day of April, 1901, or at the Gen-eral Conference of Reorganized Church, etc., to be held at Independence, Missouri, in April, 1901, this being the requisite notice provided for in article 16 of the articles of incorporation.

The following will show the nature of the changes where contemplated:-

The prefatory "statement" and articles 1, 2, and 3, are to stand as heretofore.

Article 4 will contain the duties of board of trustees as now set forth in articles 4 and 5, making it more comprehensive, by including duties of former board of directors, and the wording more harmonious and consistent.

Latter part of article 4 will take place of article 5, without any farther change.

Article 6 to stand as heretofore.

In article 7 the word president of trustees to read "chairman" of trustees, in conformity with article 4 original articles of incorpora-

Article 8 having been stricken out by amendment at last conference, article 9 to take the place thereof, and provides for selection of professors, teachers, etc., as soon after the election of new members of the board as practicable, instead of "during commencement week" as heretofore.

Article 10 to take place of article 9, and changed by striking out part providing for board of trustees "in case of failure to elect suitable officers, etc., to meet on first Monday after commencement at ten o'clock a. m." and retaining part beginning with the word special and changing the word president to that of "chairman."

Article 11 to take place of article 10, gives the treasuser exclusive authority to collect and receive moneys due or belonging to the college from all sources whatever, and requires him to make report of same to secretary regularly, as required by board, and makes him alone responsible for the funds and property. The word president is changed to "chairman."

Article 12 to take place of article 11 which requires the secretary to keep account of all receipts of money, and of the funds and property, etc. of the college and of all disbursements. He is thereby required to keep a debit and credit account of the business transactions and is relieved from the responsibility of receiving money.

Article 13 to take place of article 12, and requires treasurer only to give bond instead of secretary and treasurer both as heretofore.

Article 14 to take place of article 13, and to stand as beretofore.

Article 15 to take place of article 14, and the words in trust to be added after the word trustee, to conform to style given Bishop of Reorganized Church, etc., as "trustee in trust."

Article 16 to take place of article 15. Article 17 to take place of article 16. Article 18 to take place of article 17.

The last three articles otherwise to stand

Signed this 1st day of February, 1901, at

Lamoni, Iowa.

WM. ANDERSON, Chairman.

Secretary I. W. ALLENDER, Secretary.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Memorial service was held in Saints' chapel, North Plymouth, Massachusetts, December 9, 1900, in memory of our late brother, M. P. Hanson. Bishop Bullard, of Boston, delivered the sermon, basing his remarks upon the fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians; also the fifth and sixth paragraphs of section 76, Doctrine and Covenants. He spoke that which would comfort the mourners and Saints. Bro. Hanson died in Arendal, Norway, October 26, 1900, having gone there under General Conference appointment to labor with Bro. N. C. Enge. He was 62 years old, and had been identified with the Reorganization for the past sixteen years. He was ever a zealous worker in his home branch, where he will be greatly missed. He always desired to do the right, although his labors to that end were many times at a great disadvantage.

B. W. LELAND, Clerk.

MINNESOTA REUNION.

The committee on reunion for 1901 met at The committee on reunion for 1991 met at Clitherall, December 8. I. N. Roberts chairman, W. W. Gould secretary. Bro. Will Oaks having moved away, Bro. Arthur Whiting was chosen in his place. The time set for the beginning of this reunion is June 20, 1901, and to continue over two Sundays, and longer if the interest demands. Sr. M. P. Hawley was chosen as organist. The F. Hawley was chosen as organist. chairman was empowered to appoint one in each branch to solicit money for expenses:
Bro. Charles Pierce in Union, Sr. Lucy M.
Hawley in Audubon, T. J. Martin in Oak-lake, Bro. Gustaf Nelson in Amor, Sr. EmmaAnderson in Bemidji, Sr. Alfred Hawkes in Minneapolis. I hope that the above named parties will act as requested, and the Lord will bless them in so doing. The committee requests and invites Bishop G. H. Hilliard to attend this meeting, believing that his aid will be a power for good. Arrangements for board and horse feed will be looked after in due time, and notice given through the church papers. Committee:

I. N. ROBERTS. A. W. WHITING. LON WHITING. CHARLES PIERCE. W. W. GOULD.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of Pittsburg district will convene at Wheeling, West Virginia, March 2, at two p. m. Presidents of branches will please see that reports are duly made out and sent to the undersigned at 435 Sixth avenue, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, not later than February 25. Give full report of resident and scattered members. All brethren holding the priesthood are requested to send reports to same address. The brethren residing in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, are in this district, and will please report. Delegates to General Conference to be appointed. Let be blessed.

All are invited to come, with as many of the elders as can. Let us all try to bring the Spirit of the Master with us, and General Conference to be appointed. Let there be a good attendance, and bring the Spirit of the Master with you. The Wheeling Saints are preparing to entertain all visitors. Edw. E Omohundro, Sec.

Independence district conference will convene at Independence, Missouri, March 9 and 10, at ten a.m. Delegates to General Conference are to be elected and much other business of importance is to be transacted. and a good representation from all branches in the district is desired. We would also like to have a correct statistical report from every branch in the district. Please mail reports, both statistical and ministerial, to D. F. Winn, 2306 Bellefountaine avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

D. ROB'T. WINN, Sec.

Persons intending being at Des Moines district conference and Sunday school convention, which meets in Des Moines, February 8, 9, and 10, will please observe the following directions: The church is located at East Sixteenth and Des Moines streets. Upon arrival in the city, take a street car having "Capitol and East Grand avenue" on the signboards on top of car, and go to Sixteenth and Grand avenue, then walk one block north to church, where the entertainment of all visitors will be looked after and provided for.

E. O. CLARK, Sec.

Central California conference will meet in San Jose, March 8-10. We hope all branch officers will send reports to conference. The expressions of Divine favor have been shown in the past, and we trust that God will abundantly bless in this meeting.

J. M. PUTNEY, Pres.

J. B. CARMICHAEL, Sec.

Conference of the South Missouri district will convene at Johns Mills, March 2, at ten a. m. Presidents, we would like a report from every branch. If reports are sent by mail, send as early as possible to G. W. WINEGAR, Sec.

BURNHAM, Mo.

Conference of Southeastern Illinois district will meet at Springerton, Illinois, at ten a. m., March 2 and 3. Hope all interested will send in complete and timely reports. J. T. DAVIS, Pres.

Conference of New York district will convene on Saturday, February 23, at 199 Saratoga avenue, Brooklyn, New York, at 10: 30. Reports should be in writing and forwarded to secretary three days before conference.

JOSEPH SQUIRE, SR., Pres. SAM'L GUILFOY, Sec. 189 Schaeffer street, BROOKLYN.

Pottawattamie district conference will meet at Crescent, Iowa, February 23, at ten o'clock J. CHAS. JENSEN, Sec.

Oklahoma conference will convene March 2 and 3, at Okarche; it is on the Rock Island railroad, and near the center of the district. Each branch is expected to report; branch officers should be on time with reports. All holding the priesthood are expected to report. Election of officers and delegates to General Conference. Let all attend and do their part to advance the cause R. M. MALONEY, Pres. of truth.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

To the Saints of Eastern Maine District:-There will be a two days' meeting held with the Saints of Indian River branch, March 9 and 10. All are invited to come, with as

The Saints' Herald.

(Established 1860)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price. $1 50 per year. Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."

"Mattors Heraid."
Marriage, birth, and death notices: Marriages,
$1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births,
50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

Hor advertising rates apply to business manage

For advertising rates apply to business mana-

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as re-ceipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

NOTICES.

This is to give notice that William Wilson, Thomas Canter, and Mary Canter, were expelled from the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, January 19, 1901. Cause, apostasy. By order of Milton branch, Ohio. A. W. KRIEBEL, Pres.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The past orders for the third volume of Church History are being filled as rapidly as possible, and when these are completed the book will be advertised for sale. Persons willing to wait may forward their orders.

A practical binder. A brother preferred. tf John Smith, Mgr.

BORN.

JASPERSON -Herman Wendell, son of Bro. and Sr. H. H. Jasperson, was born at Independence, Oregon, September 28, 1899. Blessed November 4, 1900, by Elder A. M. Chase.

SEE .- At the home of her daughter, Mrs. H D Stevens, of Madison, Wisconsin, Mrs. Adam See passed to be with Jesus. Eunice Linnell was born at Lime, New York, in 1817; was married to Adam See, in March, 1835. She was the mother of fifteen children, seven of whom survive. She was an old time Saint, joining the church just before the death of ple for twelve years from a broken limb.

ple for twelve years from a broken fimo.

HART — William H. Hart was born in Oneida county, New York, November 14, 1819; on January 24, 1841, he was united in marriage with Lucina Stanard; to them were born eight children four are still liv-Our brother united with the church May 15, 1840: was ordained an elder at Amboy, April 6, 1863, and presided over the Fox River branch for a number of years. He came to Sandwich in 1893, and has since been January 28, 1900. Funeral at the Saints' church, by E der Charles H. Burr, assisted by E der E. M. Wildermuth.

PENFOLD.—Bro. J. Charles Penfold died December 20, 1900, at San Jose, California, at the home of Bro. and Sr. Moses Holmes. Bro. Penfold was born at Lamberhurst, England, June 14, 1824; and was baptized by Bro. J. F. Burton, September 27, tized by Bro. J. F. Burton, September 27, 1893. After a sickness lasting about one month, our brother peacefully passed away, trusting in the Father and in the hope of a resurrection of the just. Funeral services conducted by Eider J. B. Carmichael.

HATHAWAY.-Catherine Fenn was born in Benfordsnire, England, August 29, 1851; came to St. Louis, Missouri, with her parents in 1853; was married to Mr. Joseph Hathaway, January 14, 1874, at Hastings, lowa, where they have resided most of the time since. She died at her home, January 18, 1901. Those left to mourn are a hasband. three sons, one daughter, her mother, three brothers, and three sisters. Funeral at the Congregational church, Hastings, Iowa, in charge of D. Hougas. Interment in North Grove ce metery.

WAGGNOR.-At Paul's Valley, Indian Territory, December 20, 1900, Sr. Mattle L Waggnor. Born at Fort Smith, Arkansas, July 28, 1874. She was baptized September 3, 1893. by A. J. Moore; died firm in the faith. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. Leaves her husband and little Laura Lee of two years old, with many relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Funeral sermon by R W. Davis.

WETMORE — Bro. Ulysses S. G. Wetmore was born in Boston, Massachusetts, May 31, 1868, and died January 28, 1901. He had a paralytic stroke last November, and finally quick consumption set in, which was the immediate cause of death. He leaves a wife and three children, two girls and a boy. He was engaged in the grocery business, and was of good standing in the community. He had been a member of the church a number of years. Was buried in Mt. Hope cemetery. Funeral sermon by Wm. H. Kelley.

THEORIES OF WORLD GEOGRAPHY.

We know that the sphericity of the earth was taught by the Pythagoreans in the sixth century B. C. .

As has been frequently pointed out, however, the enunciation of this theory can constitute no claim to scientific acumen. The earth was regarded as a sphere because the sphere is the most perfect geometrical figure; it was at the center of the universe because that is the position of honor; it was held to be motionless because motion is less dignified than rest. Belief in the sphericity of the earth did not displace the idea of a circumfluent ocean on which men were already beginning to conceive it would be possible to sail from shore to shore by two diametrically opposite routes. It is worthy of note that this theory of circumnavigation, first advanced by the Greeks, was never wholly lost to view, although the navigator who was to put it to the supreme test was not born for almost a score of centuries. Plato and Aristotle adopted the Pythagorean view of the form of the earth and did much to make it popular. The latter, in his treatise "De Caelo," cites three distinct grounds upon which was based the theory of the earth's sphericity: (1) the tendency of all things to seek the center, (2) the unvarying circularity of the earth's shadow at eclipses of the moon, (3) the proportionate change in the altitude of the stars resulting from change in the observer's latitude. Beyond these facts the science of today cannot go, except that it has added the conclusive proof which comes from circumpavigation. . .

The calculation of the real size of the earth was a very slow and difficult process, but at the same time an exceedingly important factor in the evolution of western discovery Aristotle states that the mathematicians of his day (fourth century B C) estimated the earth's circumference at four hundred thousand stadia. Archimedes (born about 287 B. C) puts the current reckoning at four hundred thousand stadia. How these figures were obtained we do not know, nor can we ascertain their English equivalents; for, though the Greek stadium is known to have comprised six hundred feet, yet the length of a Greek foot is uncertain because of a peculiar system of double standards, the Olympic and the Attic. The first measurement of the earth based upon methods now understood was made about the middle of the third century B C by Eratosthenes, the librarian at Alexandria. By comparing with the angular distance the linear distance between Syene-a city under the tropic-and Alexandria, he computed the earth's circumference to be 250,000 stadia. It is generally agreed that Eratosthenes's figures were equivalent to 25,200 geographical miles—the correct measurement being 21 600 miles. Posidonius of Rhodes (B C 135-51) made a calculation which is reported by Cleomedes at 240,000 stadia and by Strabo as 180,000 stadia. The latter measurement (about 18 000 geographical miles) more nearly accords with views of Posidonius elsewhere expressed. This estimate, like that of Eratosthenes, surprises us by its approximation to accuracy — Geography from Homer to Columbus." by Frederick Austin Ogg, Chautauquan for February.

THE FEBRUARY WORLD'S WORK.

The immediate success of The World's Work-a fact unparalleled in magazine hisnant Americanism. The expression of a strong and broad spirit of nationalism and the embodiment of American ideals have met an instant response. There is a strong note of patriotism in all American achievement.

The February number is characteristic. An editorial interpretation of the month compressed, clear and cheerful; an illustrated article on "The Great Empire by the Lakes," by Frederic C. Howe, E q, of Cleveland, explaining the industrial and intellectual building up of that working centre of the world, vivid sketches of Cecil Rhodes and General Kitchener written by men who personally know them, an article on "The Changing Character of Immigration," (how the Italians and the Jews are taking the place of the Irish,) and an account of a naturalist's adventurous climb to the summit of a Mexican volcanic peak; another first-hand article reporting improving relations between workers and employers; a view of the new aggressive Germany under the strenuous Emperor; an outline by Dr. Reinsch of the new conquest of the world by the industrial machinery and methods of Americans, and Mr. Billy Sanders's (Joel Chandler Harris) quaint humor directed this time at the Democratic partythese are only a part of the contents, which includes also short articles, interviews and anecdotes, a study of C. G. Bush, the cartoonist, terse comment on books and the record of doings of the month in trade and profession in "Among the World's Workers."

There are, further, full page portraits of John Marshall (from a painting), General Chaff-e, President Gilman of the Johns Hopkins University, Cecil Rhodes, and Charles G. Bush, besides the seventy-five or a hundred necessary and attractive pictures. magazine improves in its superb typography and illustration.

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Address, THE PATRIOT Lamoni,

A postal card brings a sample copy.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS. Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON. Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iows, July 1, 1894, Total assets January 1, 1900. $133,032.34; April 1, 1900. $162.751.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All esters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

STOCK HOUDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Ella D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkias.

WANTO

Using tobacco. Quit-to-bac makes it easy to do so. Three box is postpaid, only $150 with positive guarantee to cure or the $150 cheerfully refunded! It cures others, why not you.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, Ill. (U.S. Postage stamps taken) 47-42

GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.
Published by the General Sunday School Association. Designed for use in Sabbath school work. Issued quarterly.
73. Senior Grade, per quarter Per year, in advance	08 25
74. Intermediate Grade, per quarter	05
Per year	15
75. Primary Grade, per quarter Per year	05 15
BOOK OF MORMON. Large type edition.
92. Cloth, leather backs and cor-	1 50
ners	2 00
109. Flexible, gilt edges	4 00
NEW TESTAMENTS. Inspired Translation.
173. Cloth, limp	35
83. Cloth sides, leather back	50
SAINTS' HARP—HYMN BOOK. Words only.
102. Cloth	7 5
THE TWO RECORDS. The Book of Mormon and the New Testament. Inspired Transla-tament. Inspired Transla- tion; large type, in one volume.
98. Leather back and covers	2 00
99. Seal grain russia	2 50
100. Imitation morocco, gilt edges,	3 00

101. Morocco, gilt edges..... 4 00

COPYRIGHTS &C. Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. Handbook on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charce, in the

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year: four months, $L. Sold by all newsdealers. MUNN & CO. 361 Broadway, New York Brauch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C. 625 F St., Washing

SAINT	rs' HY	MNAL.	Words	and
	music.
108.	Paper c	overs, ea	ch			30
	Per de	ozen			3	20
110.	Cloth, l	imp				35
		ozen			3	75
111.		d leather				50
		ther			1	00
		ges
		, leather
TOSED	H THE	वयप्र
			100
129.	Paper					25

NOT IN THE CATALOGUE.

TRACTS.

Trial of the Witnesses to the Resurrection of Jesus.

Each 5 cents; per doz. 50 cents. The Basis of Brighamite Polygamy.

Per doz. 10 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

GRACELAND ....

COLLEGE.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Telephone 7%

For catalogue or further information, address, PROF. R. A. HARKNESS, President, or I. W. ALLENDER, Secretary, LAMONI, DECATUR Co., IOWA.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI, IOWA, Solicits your Deposits and pays

> 4 1-2 % INTEREST. D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

Book of Mormon Maps.

Lecture size 5x8 feet on muslin for traveling ministry, $2.00 Home and office size 39x51 inches on paper, cloth back and varnished in colors, $1.50.

All map sent by express, charges 30c. and upwards according to distance, to be paid at end of route. Send orders to

G. F. WESICN,

Buchanan, Michigan.

HUMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in D. Kalb county. Missouri, four miles from Amity, and five miles from Clarksdale; near line of R ck I land railroad and switch statiot, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchase. Terms reasonable. Address, J. O. SOUTHARD, Mgr., Amity, Missouri, of CHARLES P. FAUL, Clarksdale, Missouri.

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good oh tograph, and get 25 stame photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 ligh photo button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents each. Large 60 ligh buttons 35 cents, and extra buttons from same picture 29 cents. Your photograph will be returned Send silver.

W. M. KECK Photographer, 49-13t

DR. E. S. SWEET. DENTIST. Decoe Building,

WOODBINE. IOWA. 17Oct 00

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on investment.

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Iowa.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p. m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a. m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a. m.

Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C. B. & Q. at Leon.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chicago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning.

BRING YOUR LAUNDRY TO South Side Barber Shop.

For every five dollars worth of Launary you receive a

HANDSOME SHAVING MUG. SHOOK & KLINE, Props.

FORSCUTT-SHINNDISCUSSION. 154. Paper.....

SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE BEORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTE 1 )AY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make yo :..."—John 8: 31, 32.
"Hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall : e none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 13, 1901.

NO. 7.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH -- EDITOR. FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR. JOSEPH LUFF D. W. WIGHT CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEB. 13, 1901.

COMMITTEE ON HISTORIES GETS CORRECTION.

In the Herald for October 24, 1900. under the heading "Work for the Committee on Histories," we called attention to a chapter which appeared in a book entitled "The Making of Illinois," which purported to give a short history of "Mormonism." Since the publication of our comments on this chapter, the Committee on Histories and Encyclopedias has taken the matter in hand, and through the courtesy of the publisher, A. Flanagan, of Chicago, and the author, Irwin F. Mather, the chapter has been revised so that it now does not do the injustice to us that it did in its previous form.

As soon as his attention was called to the matter, Bro. Heman C. Smith, who was then in his mission in Illinois, and who is also chairman of the Committee on Histories, called on the publisher, and presented our claims to him. Bro. Smith was given a patient hearing, and was asked to write an article giving our claims as to the historical facts. This he did, and it was submitted to the author of the book, who, in the light of this article, rewrote his chapter. This was submitted to the Historical department, but as it was still unsatisfactory, another personal conference was arranged for between the author and a member of the committee. This conference took place in Chicago, at the office of Mr. Flanagan, January 9, and the member of the committee and the author spent some time in canvassing the differences, and the historical matter of the chapter generally. The committee did not ask to have our claims presented in all matters, but asked that where matters were spoken of which are in controversy, if both sides were not presented, the question be left open, so that we would have a chance to defend ourselves, and not have the handicap of being confronted by erroneous statements presented as nistorical facts. The committee was was born on December 23, 1805, a child met on the part of the author and the named Joseph Smith, who was destined to historical facts. The committee was publisher in a spirit of fairness, both expressing themselves as desiring to present facts without favoring to any degree the claims of either side at the expense of the other.

In regard to the statement in the chapter as first published wherein the claim is made that Solomon Spalding's romance was the origin of the Book of Mormon, after hearing our claims in regard to the matter, and learning that the original of the "Manuscript Found" was in the library of Oberlin College, the author said that he would write the librarian of the college, and if he found that things were as we claimed he would be glad to make such correction as would do us entire justice in the matter. He did so, and our people will be glad to note that he does not take a luke warm position but comes out squarely and declares that the position that the Book of Mormon originated with the "Manuscript Found" is wholly untenable, that there is no resemblance between them. Other parts of the chapter which hinged on this theory of the origin of the Book of Mormon have been changed accord-

We are glad to record that the treatment accorded us by both Mr. Flanagan, the publisher, and Mr. Mather, the author, was courteous and liberal. Mr. Mather, in thus breaking away from the traditional and prejudiced errors which have so long existed, has shown a spirit of courage and liberality which is highly commendable, and to us very gratifying, accustomed as we are to meeting most stubborn prejudice.

"The Making of Illinois" will appear to a great extent in the schools of Illinois, and as it now appears, will not place our children in those schools to the disadvantage the first edition did. Things are left now in such a way that they will have a chance to defend their church without being handicapped by false statements.

Mr. Flanagan's business address is 266-68 Wabash avenue, Chicago, and any of our Illinois Saints who may desire a copy of the book can purchase there, if it is not on the shelves of the local book dealers.

The corrected chapter is as follows:

NAUVOO AND THE MORMONS.

In the little village of Sharon. Vermont.

wield a wide influence and establish an additional religious sect. When Joseph was but a lad his father removed to Palmyra, New York.

At about the age of fifteen young Joseph Smith attended one of the great revival meetings which were being held in the state and was deeply affected. He relates that retiring to a wood for prayer and meditation he beheld a wonderful vision. Two persons ap-peared to him in a pillar of light. One of these heavenly visitors commanded him to unite with no established church. He further states that he was again visited by an angel, who revealed to him the location of certain gold plates hidden in the earth, that contained a record of the former inhabitants of America. In a few years these were obtained and translated by him and published as "The Book of Mormon."

About this time there appeared an itinerant preacher named Sidney Rigdon, who had one time worked in a printing office in Pittsburg. To this office one Solomon Spaulding had sent a writing styled 'The Manuscript Found," * a romance of the origin of the North American Indians. Certain people claim that this manuscript obtained by Sidney Rigdon is the basis of "The Book of Mormon." A comparison of the two books, however, necessitates an abandonment of this theory. There is no common incident or name, in fact, no resemblance whatever be-tween "The Manuscript Found" and "The Book of Mormon." The Mormons, moreover, claim that Joseph Smith made this translation several years before he became acquainted with Sidney Rigdon, who joined the sect November 14, 1830.

The "Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints" was organized at Fayette, New York, on April 6, 1830. The little band, at this time numbering but six members, chose Joseph Smith to be the presiding officer.

The church grew rapidly and in 1836 dedicated its first temple at Kirtland, Ohio. This structure still stands and in many particulars is a remarkable monument of Mormon industry and zeal.

Through a revelation it was declared that Independence, Missouri, was to be the future "City of Zion." To this religion [region] many of the faithful gathered. But there was much strife between them and the people of Missouri concerning religion and the question of slavery, for the Mormons did not nold slaves. The newly organized county of Caldwell was given them for their exclusive use. Here they gathered in great numbers and established the city of "Far West." To this place Joseph Smith and other leading Mormons from Kirtland, Ohio, came in the year 1838. But the persecutions did not cease and in the winter of 1838-39 they were driven from the state and sought shelter in Illinois purchasing a large body of land in Hancock County. In the midst of this tract, upon the banks of the Mississippi, they estab-lished Nauvoo, "the Holy City of the Saints."

A special charter was secured for this new city and John C. Bennett was elected mayor. Each of the two great political parties—the Whigs and the Democrats—desired to secure the support of the Mormons.

Thus it happened that when Dr. Bennett went to Springfield to secure a charter for the new city he was aided by the politicians of both parties. The State Legislature granted them a charter which contained liberal and extensive powers.

*This manuscript is in the possession of the Oberlin (Ohio) College Library.

A Nauvoo Legion was established which, in addition to the regular powers of the Militia of the State, was to be "at the disposal of the Mayor in executing the laws and ordinances of the City Corporation."

The Governor of Missouri made a demand upon Governor Carlin of Illinois for Joseph Smith, who had fied from the state while under arrest. A warrant was issued for him and he was brought before Judge Douglas. who found the warrant defective and released the prisoner. Because of constant persecutions and fearful that their leader might be taken from them, it is said the Mormon Council enacted a law "That no writ issued at any other place except Nauvoo for the arrest of any person in the city should be executed without approval endorsed thereon by the mayor." The result of this law was soon apparent. Any man who committed a crime would now endeavor to hide in the city of Nauvoo, and it is certain that the Mormons were blamed for many crimes committed by others.

The Mormons now became unpopular everywhere. After the release of Smith by Judge Douglas his followers had returned to the Democratic party.

The Whigs, realizing that they were lost to their party, began to attack them through the columns of their papers. The Legion had been furnished by the state with 250 stands of arms and three pieces of cannon. These the papers magnified into many thousands of muskets and cannon.

The people, now inflamed, prepared to make war upon the Mormons, and the Governor called out the troops. Before his arrival upon the scene, the entire militia of McDonough and Schuyler counties had assembled at Carthage and Warsaw. The Governor, fearful that the Mormon leaders would be sacrificed to the fury of the people, obtained from the officers a promise that they would keep within the limit of the law in the Knowing that warrants had been issued. Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum went to Carthage and gave themselves up to the sheriff But on June 27, 1844, they sassinated at the hands of a mob.

In summing up the character of Joseph discharge of their duties.

Smith one writer states:
"But whether knave or lunatic, whether a liar or a true man, it cannot be denied that he was one of the most extraordinary persons of his time, a man of rude genius, who accomplished a much greater work than he knew; and whose name, whatever he may have been whilst living, will take its place among the notabilities of the world."*

As organized, the church consisted of three presidents and twelve apostles, who were abroad preaching Mormonism. Two of the presidents—Joseph and Hyrum Smith—were dead. The third, Sidney Rigdon, proposed to seize the power, but becoming unpopular a fierce dispute arose between him and the twelve apostles who had returned at the news of their leaders' death.

The apostles with Brigham Young at their head gained control and sent missionaries everywhere preaching Mormonism and the martyred Joseph Smith. Many flocked into the church and the sect grew rapidly. At the death of the Prophet the church numbered about two hundred thousand, "a number equal, perhaps, to the number of Christians when the Christian Church was of the same age."

Meanwhile the state had revoked the charter of Nauvoo and the Saints prepared for the journey to the promised land, where they hoped to live undisturbed.

In the spring of 1846 the great company

The city of Salt Lake grew up around it, and with passing years the church of the "Latter Day Saints" has grown in wealth and in the number of its people. But many Mormons refused to follow Brigham Young to Utab, nor would they accept the doctrine of polygamy announced by him in 1852 These people, many of whom lived in lilinois, Missouri and Iowa, began a movement to reorganiz: the church This was finally accomplished and in 1860 Joseph Smith, a son of the founder, was chosen to be the presiding officer.

This branch of the Mormon Church, the "R-organized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," has its headquarters at La-moni, Iowa. Its members are a quiet, law-abiding people.

UNDER date of February 4, Bro. J. W. Wight wrote from Luverne, Minnesota:-

Debate almost solidly our way. I never before enjoyed as great a degree of inspiration in a debate. Other man losing ground.

Bro. Wight also sends the following clipping from some paper, the name of which he does not give:-

RELIGIOUS DEBATE.

The debate between Evangelist G. W. Walker, of the Christian Church of Worthington, and Elder J. W. Wight, Latter Day Saint, of Lamoni, Iowa, opened Monday evening at the Christian church in Luverne, to continue eight nights. The discussion is quite interesting and the church is taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the crowds in attendance. It may yet be necessary to secure the opera house.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Chas. E. Crumley, under date of January 25, writes from Bridge, Oregon:

Missionary work is against odds in this country in winter. I travel horseback through deep mud and in rain (snow in mountains), but am blessed in telling the story we so love to hear and tell. Four entered the watery grave at Bandon last Sunday. I left the Saints rejoicing. I meet Bro. Harris at Drain, February 1, where we shall organize a district. And so the work

"A Sister" writes from Wilber, Nebraska, under date of January 31:-

We think we cannot do without our paper, which is the only preacher I have had for two years, being unable to attend meetings of the Saints or any other. I have been a cripple for three years, and have at times suffered severely, but have never asked to be healed, and have not complained. I am in the hands of the Father, and I know he does all things for our good. I have been confined to the house since last summer, but am not to the house since last stable, our all lonesome, and I wonder how any Saint can complain of being "scattered." I can do more for the church here in the country than I could in Lamoni or in Wilber. One family at least likes to read the HERALD and another man is anxious to read the Church History. Sow by the wayside.

Bro. Arthur Allen writes under date of February 5, from a place four and one half miles south from Nebo, Illinois:-

I am at this place preaching every night in private house to about forty. Enjoying best of liberty.

In a letter to President Smith, under date of February 7, Fred A. Smith writes:

Bro. Heman reached here Monday night, and after a hurried supper we repaired to the church on the corner of Twenty-sixth and Grant streets, where the debate was to be held. Elder Bays was there, but his mod-erator, Judge W. W. Slabaugh, failed to put in an appearance; so Elder Hilton, the man who issued the challenge, took his place, Brother and the investigation was on. Heman was in good form and voice, and seemed to be blessed in his efforts. We met with a disappointment in Mr. Bays; he seemed to be in poor condition, and his first claim of importance was "that the Book of Mormon did not claim to be a record or history of the ancient Americans," but was "written by Joseph Smith or dictated by him and written by O. Cowdery." He then resorted to the old objection, "Of what use have you for the Book of Mormon if the Doctrine is the same as the Bible?" These were met by Bro. Heman in a masterly manner, and seemingly to the confusion of Elder Bays and his followers. Mr. Bays here referred to the Bible as being alright, and Bro. Heman could not resist the temptation to ask him "how long since you thought the Bible was alright." This called out quite a lengthy explanation on the part of Bays, and the denouncing of everything Mormon when he left the church, and the statement that while he doubted, he never lost faith in God and his son Jesus Christ, and he would prove that the Book of Mormon was a fabrication. ferred to his letter to Mr. Lederer, and accused the Latter Day Saints of saying he has turned infidel and scattering the report all over western Iowa. His subtle misrepresentation here was such that Bro. Heman deemed it wise to show him up a little, so sprung some letters on him that seemed to take the spirit nearly all out of him, and surely he stumbled and blundered around like one dazed. He has ridiculed the idea of archæology having anything to do with the truth of the Book of Mormon. Last night Bro. Heman made a splendid presentation of the Book of Mormon evidences.

Mr. Bays' first speech was a very weak effort. His last speech was spent in an effort to rebut Bro. Heman's archæology, although he had said before that he had spent too much time of that kind of silly stuff. His statements. He brought no proof and has not so far on this proposition. Tonight closes the first proposition. On the Book of Mormon we anticipate an interesting time.

Bro. Heman is feeling well and confident. We are having crowded house. quite good. Saints feel well.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Eve C. Myers, of Alpena, Michigan, writes that she is alone, and that she would like to place her little boy in the family of some good Latter Day Saint, where he will be brought up in the faith. Her address is 324 Oldfield street.

By letter from Pres. Joseph Smith we were pleased to learn that he had for a few days past been quite free from his facial trouble, neuralgia. He is still at Independence, staying with his daughter, Sr. Emma Mc-Callum.

^{*}Smucker's History of Mormons, page 183. † Ford, History of Illinois, page 359.

began to depart, and after enduring many hardships arrived upon the shores of Salt Lake. Of this region their industry soon made a garden. Here were laid the foundations of a mammoth temple, which has been completed after many years of labor and the

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION .- NO. 7.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS. OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

Our meetings continued to be more interesting, and all the Saints were faithfully attending the services, when one Sunday afternoon Elder Reuben Newkirk, while prophesying, came and laid his hands on my head and said, "Verily thus saith the Holy Ghost, I ordain you to take a mission to my people, scattered latter day Israel, and to my servant Joseph, son of the martyr. Tell him what you know and most assuredly believe, and say to my Saints, Establish your family altars, and preach my gospel with a warning voice. Fear not, for I will be with you by the voice of my Spirit, and I will protect you from evil, and you shall not be confounded. and your enemies shall not have power over you. Thus saith the Holy Ghost. Amen."

While this manifestation was being given, the Spirit rested on me in a great degree, attesting to me its divinity and the sure voice and word of God calling me to a mission to the Latter Day Saints. The very next Sunday afternoon there was another prayer meeting at Bro. Cyrus Newkirk's, and Bro. Reuben again had the gift of prophecy, and while speaking his face was lit up by the Spirit so it shone brightly, and he laid his hands on Bro. Samuel Gurley's head and said: "I ordain you to accompany my servant Edmund on a mission to the Latter Day Saints, and to my servant Joseph. Tell him what you know and most surely believe." Then he turned to my brother and said: "My servant Jason, thou shalt write a letter to my servant Joseph as thou shalt be prompted by my Spirit. Thus saith the Lord of hosts."

The next Wednesday evening while in the meeting, I was in prayer, and the spirit of prophecy rested on me and said, "My servants shall not return until my servant Josesh comes forth to preside over my people, saith the Holy Ghost."

When I came to the word servants, the word servant was given me. I also saw the words five years, also the figure 5, and I was given to understand that Joseph would come to the church within five years. I also knew that Bro. Gurley would be greatly disappointed at the reception Joseph would give us. I became so well prepared in mind before I left home, that no matter how things might turn when we should meet him, it would be no surprise to me.

After I returned home from meeting. I retired to my room and read a chapter in the Bible: and when I came to the last verse of the chapter I continued to read. "Thou shalt start on thy mission Wednesday, three weeks from today, and on your journey call on my servants Alva Smith, Edwin Cadwell, Jotham Barrett, and W. W. Blair."

I was greatly astonished at this reading, at first, for the words were as plain in the Bible as any printing I ever saw; and my first thoughts were. This is like the words on the wall as recorded in the prophecy of Daniel. A peaceful, happy feeling rested on me, and I rejoiced in the knowledge that God could and did truly reveal his mind and will to me as he did to his prophets in days of old. I was now certain as to the time when I should start on my mission. second Sunday after this the letter Bro. Jason had written to Joseph was read in our meeting and unanimously accepted by the branch, and then he remarked, "Let all those who feel to do so, kneel and put their hands on the letter and ask the blessing of the Lord to accompany it and the mission to Bro. Joseph." Seven of us laid our hands on it, and Jason offered a solemn prayer, asking a blessing upon Joseph and the mission. The letter bore date of November 18, 1856.

Wednesday we started on our mission, taking the cars at Darlington, the county seat of Lafayette county, fifteen miles from Bro. Gurley's, on the Illinois Central railroad, Dixon, Illinois, where Elder Alva Smith then lived.

Here I will mention a remarkable conversation I had on the cars with a stranger who sat in the seat back of me. Bro. Gurley sat across the aisle from me at the time. The stranger. with whom I had had no conversation, and without any seeming intrusion, or at least I did not even think of the singularity of his conversation at the time, said: "When you meet Bro. W. W. Blair he will express joy and gladness in a marked degree, so much so that you will notice it very particularly, and when you get into conversation with him he will oppose you very much, but do not have any fear. Bro. Gurley will contend and discuss with him, but you will not. Brother Blair's mind will be lit up and his tongue loosed, while Bro. Gurlev's mind will be darkened, and he will be confounded. But have no fear. It is wisdom in me. You will have no contention or debate with him, and you may ask a sign that when you are there at Bro. Blair's it may be given you."

I replied, "I can't think of anything to ask."

"Then," said he, "I will give you one while you are there, and ever son Stephen, after, whatever may be your condition of mind, or however much you may be cast down in mind, if you can recall the sign or bring it to your mind, it will revive your feelings and give you assurance until you will feel bright in your mind and have perfect confidence and faith again."

I was becoming very much interested in his conversation by this time, and wondered who he was, but at this instant my mind was all absorbed over the knowledge this stranger had of my mission, and he was gone without my observing when he left. At first I felt very sorry I had not asked him who he was, and then I became satisfied he was a messenger sent from God to prepare me more fully for my mission, and that it would not be wise for me to tell Bro. Gurley of it.

We reached Dixon in the night. Bro. Alva Smith kept a hotel there at the time, and we rode from the depot in his omnibus. We immediately retired for the night. In the morning we met Bro. Smith and told him of our mission and the promises we had received through the gifts, that one of the sons of Joseph Smith would take his father's place, and expounded the law of lineage to him as best we could. He was much pleased with what we said. We conversed until the middle of the forenoon that day, and then we walked to Bro. Cadwell's (ten miles from Dixon), staid over night, and had a very interesting conversation with him in relation to cur faith, and of the reorganization of the church. He was very much interested, and told us he had been looking for little Joseph to be the successor of his father ever since he left Nauvoo, and was well acquainted with the Prophet Joseph. Bro. Alva Smith was also acquainted with the choice seer, and they were both fully interested in the restored gospel, but much disheartened at what they called the apostasy of Brigham Young and his horrible doctrine of polygamy, and they both avowed they knew Joseph never taught it in Nauvoo.

The next day (Friday) we called on Jotham Barrett at Palestine, near what is now Amboy, Lee county, Illinois; found him very sick. Dr. Gardner had just been there, and a council of physicians had been held the day before, and they told him there was no hope for him; that he was in the very last stages of consumption. He was feeling very badly, and wept while speaking of leaving his family. We said everything we could to comfort him. He had then been sitting up in his chair six weeks, for he could not breathe when lying down. When we arose to leave him that evening he requested us to call on him in the morning if he were alive. We staid over night with Bro. Royal Stone and his

The next morning, Saturday, we called on Bro. Barrett again. He was sitting in his chair just as we left him the evening before, his hands and feet swollen as large as it was possible for them to be, it seemed; and after some little conversation we did the best we could to comfort the as we thought -dying man. I said to him, "Bro. Barrett, we must go, as we have twenty-eight miles to walk today.'

He then said: "I wish you would pray for me before you go. It is not likely you will ever see me again. Do not pray for my recovery. I am reconciled to go, and I believe the Lord will take care of my family, but pray that the fear of death may be taken from me, and that I may not fear the passage from time to eternity.'

We knelt in prayer, and the Spirit rested upon me and I said only these words: "As I have said in my word, Before ye ask me I will answer. My servant Jotham Barrets shall recover every whit, saith the Lord." arose, and I was at first much distressed in mind, for I could not think it possible he would live. His eyes were sunken and his hands and feet looked dreadful. But these words came to my mind: "Holy men of old spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, and the Holy Spirit will show you things to come." Bro. Gurley anointed him, and we laid hands on him, and I spoke these words in perfect faith and confidence as I was moved by the Spirit: "Dear Bro. Barrett, your disease is now rebuked. and you shall begin to amend from this day and fully recover. Your companion should unite with you in prayer, and as you increase in faith, so shall you increase in strength until you are in perfect health, saith the Lord of hosts. Amen."

This was the first time I had ever administered to the sick in my life according to the instructions of the Bible, to "lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." (A year afterwards I went to Bro. Barrett & again and he was well; and he then said to me, "My general health is now better than it has been before for fifteen years."

Notwithstanding this rich experience and blessing, Saturday was a long, tedious day to us. Bro. Samuel Gurley was cast down in spirit and depressed. He felt badly about leaving his home and companion. Doubts and fears seemed to trouble him all the day. It seemed to be terrible for him to leave his wife and be away among strangers, on a mission in the interest of the most unpopular doctrine of this world.

Sister Cadwell, just as we were about to start from their home Friday morning, remarked, "I guess I better give you a lunch for tomorrow, for I do not I replied, "No sir, I am a spectator we retired to the sitting room, and suppose anyone will think to give you tonight. Go on," and as I was very after we had all joined in prayer any, and you are too bashful to ask." I took the lunch in my satchel, and when we sat down, out on the prairie, to eat it, we were tired and cast down in our feelings. I was feeling much perplexed over my prophecy that morning in relation to the recovery of Bro. Barrett, and was wondering if Bro. Blair would receive us with joy and gladness, as the stranger had told me he would, and if not, would I continue on my mission? It seemed to me that Satan was determined to destroy our faith in the gospel and our mission. At times when we would talk of our many experiences, our hope would revive and we would feel encouraged.

Night finally came on us ere we reached East Paw Paw, where Bro. Blair was living, and we went to his store. Himself and clerks were waiting on customers who seemed to fairly crowd the room. I knew Bro. Blair, but he did not notice me as I came in so particularly as he did Bro. Gurley. I introduced Bro. Gurley as Mr. Gurley to him. At that he at once gave some directions to his clerks about shutting up the store, etc., and then turned to me and said, "Let us go home." Soon as we stepped out of the store he turned to us and said, "Who is this Mr. Gurley? Is it Elder Zenos Gurley?"

I replied, "It is Samuel Gurley, his son, and we are on a mission."

He exclaimed, "Oh, I am so glad to see you! I never was so glad to see anyone in my life! What news have you?"

I at once informed him it had been revealed to us by the Spirit of prophecy that little Joseph would soon take his father's place, and it was his right by lineage.

He replied, "I do not know about that, but I am glad to see you, anyway." When we reached the house he introduced us to his wife, who very coolly said, "Good evening," and soon got us some supper. As we sat down to the table Bro. Blair told us to be at home and eat our supper, but to excuse him and he would build a fire in the sitting room. As soon as the room was warm we went in, and Bro. Blair again expressed himself as being extremely glad to meet us, and said, "As we are going to talk on matters of great importance. I suggest we have a word of prayer first." We readily assented; in fact, we too felt the spirit of prayer. He led, and we each prayed in turn, and when we arose from our knees I introduced Bro. Gurley as the speaker, saying, "You now have the floor. into business at once, and I will take the lounge, as I have nothing to say." They both demurred, saying, "I guess you will have something to say, too."

weary I reclined on the couch, and they were soon in earnest debate. Bro. Blair believed that Joseph was a fallen prophet, hence had nothing to descend to his posterity; that the choice seer would be a descendant of Joseph son of Lehi, and therefore would be an Indian or a Lamanite. In fact, at this time he was inclined to favor the views of James Colin Brewster. His tongue was loosed and his mind filled with thoughts to successfully oppose Bro. Gurley in everything he would bring up.

Bro. Gurley was baffled and much confused. I thought several times that I would help him out, but instead of entering into the conversation or debate, I would refer to some of our prayer meetings and experiences in relation to the gifts that we had enjoyed at Zarahemla, and promises we had received, which seemed to encourage Bro. Gurley, and again he would renew his argument. Thus matters continued in a spirited contention and debate until three o'clock in the morning, after which Bro. Blair said, "I guess we had better retire, and we will continue this controversy in the morning." He showed us our rooms and bade us good night.

Soon as Bro. Blair left us, Bro. Gurley burst into tears and sobbed like a child, and said, "I am confounded and can't say anything, and you don't try. We might as well go home." I felt very sorry for Bro. Gurley, yet I could see what the messenger had told me on the cars was coming true, that Bro. Blair's mind would be fruitful and bright, and Bro. Gurley's darkened and he would be confounded; and I was comforted and clear in my mind all the time. I did not know how it would be brought about, but I was certain we would have the victory in the end and Bro. Blair would see the light. We prayed again and retired. Bro. Samuel wept like a child. I was sleepy, and urged him to dismiss the matter from his mind and rest, and was soon asleep.

When I awoke the sun was shining brightly. Bro. Gurley was very much overcome. He said, "I have not slept a wink tonight, and you have been sleeping like a log. We might as well go home. I am confounded and can't talk, and you don't try."

I replied, "Do not get discouraged. I guess it will come out all right." All the burden had left me, and I felt we were in the hands of the Lord, and he would deliver us so we would not be finally confounded, although I could not yet see how it would be done.

We got up and united in prayer before we left our room. Bro. Gurley felt better, and tried to be cheerful as we met the family. Breakfast over, again, Bro. Gurley led in the conversation and began quoting the passages usually referred to in defense of the Reorganization and Joseph's right to the blessing of his father. But Bro. Blair could not see any light in them. He argued that Joseph died a fallen prophet, lost his gifts as such, and did not appoint his successor.

They continued the debate until ten o'clock, when Bro. Blair went out after wood to build a fire. As soon as he left the room, Bro. Gurley burst into tears and cried out, "I am confounded, and I will give it up, and we might as well go home!" I involuntarily replied, "I am glad of it." Bro. Blair returned with a smile on his face, and while he was putting wood into the stove he remarked, "Brethren, all I want is the truth. I do not care how it comes," and just as he sat down, the Spirit of the Lord rested upon me in power and I took up the Book of Mormon, intending to find Lehi's prophecy to his son Joseph and his quotation in relation to the choice seer and read it, but instead of finding it, I read the following words: "I will forgive whom I will; and have mercy on whom I will have mercy." I then commenced expounding those passages of scripture they had been discussing, and delivered a prophecy, declaring that Joseph would soon come forth as prophet and president of the church. When I sat dent of the church. down, Bro. Gurley arose and prophesied of the coming of Joseph, and that it was his right according to the law of lineage and the blessing of his father upon him. Bro. Blair in a flood of tears immediately said, "Brethren, pray for me! One living prophet is worth more than a hundred dead prophets."

Bro. Gurley then led in prayer. Bro. Blair was converted, and we had a season of rejoicing together and knew that the Lord was with us in very deed by the power of the Holy Ghost. Bro. Gurley was ever so happy, realizing that God had delivered him from all the trials and distress of mind which he had suffered. From that time on, while we were at Bro. Blair's, we had a feast of gladness and joy in the Holy Ghost.

Bro. David Fuller came in and spent the evening with us. Elder Gurley soon commenced conversation with him, and his mind being clear and lit up by the Spirit, he in a most eloquent and fervent manner explained our faith and hope, and bore testimony to the voice of the Spirit to us, and backed it up by abundant scriptural evidence. While he was talking, the Spirit rested on me in greater power than I had ever experienced before. I fell to the floor, overcome by the power of the Holy Ghost, and saw and realized that God would in his own due time bring to pass all his words; that Joseph would indeed come to the church, and it would be fully organized according to the pattern given in the Book of Covenants. I do not know how long I lay on the floor, but I was so weak I could not stand on my feet. I attempted to rise, but could not stand, and fell again on the couch, where I lay until Bro. Gurley came to me in the power of the Spirit, and touched me with his hands, and said: "Receive strength, saith the Lord." Immediately I received my natural strength, and again prophesied that Joseph would soon come to the church and the gospel be preached to all nations; the Jews build up Jerusalem, and the ten tribes return from the north.

Sr. Lizzie Blair then rose and bore her testimony, confessing how cold and indifferent she felt towards us when we first came to their house, but the Lord had healed her that very morning as evidence that we were his servants, and ministers of the gospel.

We remained at Bro. Blair's until Wednesday morning, when he took us with carriages to Ottawa railroad station, and by cars and stage we came to Nauvoo, on the following Friday, the 5th of December, 1856, and stopped at the mansion house kept by Major L. C. Bidamon. He had married Emma, the widow of Joseph Smith, and had an impression, when we first arrived, that we were Latter Day Saint ministers. We told him we were missionaries of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, and were from Wisconsin. After some conversation, in which he spoke very highly of young Joseph, and that his wife Emma was the best woman that ever lived, and that she believed her former husband was a prophet of God, he said, "And I believe she is honest in her convictions. She tells so many things that took place in connection with the writing of the Book of Mormon that I can't help but believe there is something in it, and I had much rather believe in it than to believe in the Bible. In fact, I do not believe in the Bible anyway." He was quite talkative and claimed to be skeptical on religious matters, though he continued: "I believe Joseph Smith was an honest man, but think he might have been deceived. My wife wrote a part of the Book of Mormon as Smith translated it from the plates he had found," he said. He seemed quite inquisitive in relation to our mission. I told him we wished to see Joseph. He informed us that he had been married lately and was living on a farm, and that there were some Mormon elders from Utah there a few days before to see him, but Joseph would not have anything to do with them.

He then took us into the dining room, where his wife was, and introduced us to her. We informed her that we were on a mission preaching the gospel. She appeared quite reserved; seemed inclined to talk very little with us, and we avoided telling our special object of visiting Nauvoo at this time. We staid over night in the hotel, and until about the middle of the afternoon Saturday. Major Bidamon informed us he expected Joseph in the city, and as he did not come, about three o'clock in the afternoon we walked out to the farm to see him.

(Continued.)

THOUGHTS ON CHARITY.

Many good things have been spoken, written, and published on the subject of charity; but the place which this principle occupies in the divine plan, its comparative importance, with a proper consideration of that which it was designed to accomplish by the divine Being, suggested that the subject is not yet exhausted.

WHAT IS CHARITY?

In this case, as in most others, the definition is important. Without an understanding of what charity is (which includes an understanding of what it is not), we shall be left all at sea, exposed to every cunning counterfeit which his satanic majesty can, by any means, and for his own purposes, cause to be put into circulation.

The Greek word from which we get charity is agape, and the literal and primary meaning of the word, according to Robert Young in his Analytical Concordance, is love. In King James' translation of the New Testament, this word is rendered love about eighty-two times, and charity about twenty-six times. Love is certainly a good and correct translation. The Book of Mormon is very plain upon the meaning of charity, and its statements are in complete harmony with the teachings of the Bible. In Moroni 7:4, small edition, we have the following:—

Wherefore, cleave unto charity, which is the greatest of all, for all things must fail; but charity is the pure love of Christ, and it endureth forever; and whoso is found possessed of it at the last day, it shall be well with them.

In another place in the Book of Mormon, I believe, charity is termed "the pure love of God," which, of course, is the same as "the pure love of Christ." In Moroni 8: 2, the writer is represented as saying:—

Wo be unto him that shall pervert the ways of the Lord after this manner, for they shall perish, except they repent. Behold, I speak with boldness, having authority from God; and I fear not what man can do; for perfect love casteth out all fear; and I am filled with charity, which is everlasting love.

Now, let us not forget that charity is "the pure love of Christ," or "everlasting love," which is "the pure love of God." And Mormon, when filled with that pure love, denounced false doctrine in very strong terms, and said of the perverters, "they shall perish except they repent." And in paragraph 3 he says:—

Wo unto such, for they are in danger of death, hell, and an endless torment.

It may be a little difficult for some, who talk much about charity, to see any exhibition of it in language like the above; but it is there in that epistle of Mormon, all the same.

Mormon says, as already quoted, "For all [other] things must fail," but charity "endureth forever." Let us give this statement a passing notice. Will justice, mercy, truth, divine knowledge, etc., fail? Certainly not. This same Book of Mormon teaches that justice cannot "be destroyed; if so, God would cease to be God" (Alma 19: 11). Justice, mercy, and truth enter into the character of God, as well as love.

Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before thy face.—Ps. 89: 14.

HERALD readers need not be informed that God's mercy and truth, with all the other attributes of his character, endure forever. It must be, therefore, that charity, "the pure love of Christ," not only harmonizes with truth, justice, wisdom, mercy, etc.; but it comprehends these principles in its full scope and meaning. Every manifestation of "the pure love of God" is a manifestation of justice, mercy, and eternal right. That which conflicts with or outrages any of these principles is not charity.

WHAT CHARITY IS NOT.

It has already been stated and implied, to some extent, what charity is not. It is not such a manifestation of supposed love, to few or many, as will inflict injustice on others. It is not extending to some that which, under similar circumstances, must be denied to others who are equally worthy. This is favoritism, not charity. Favor is frequently bestowed from a purely selfish motive, and with the hope of receiving back much more than is given; or with the hope and for the purpose of bringing others under our control, in which case it is nothing less than a bribe. Giving money, or goods, except for the real good of others, so far as our motive is concerned, and in this way doing service to God, is not charity. (1 Cor. 13: 3.)

In short, charity is not a mere feeling, but an eternal principle of truth. Our acts, resulting from the intense feelings of the soul, must be in harmony with God's attributes, God's truth, God's Spirit, else they are not manifestations of charity. That which does not operate within the limitations of God's law, truth, and right, is not charity. Charity is just, impartial, wise, and unchangeable; and is always considering the greatest good of the greatest number concerned.

IS PART OF THE LAW OF SALVATION.

The gospel by which we are saved (1 Cor. 15:1, 2) is "the perfect law of liberty" (James 1: 25); and if there is anything outside of this law which is essential to the salvation and perfection of man, we should be pleased to know what it is. And if there is not, then charity is evidently an important part of the law of salvation. In the gospel, we have the law of faith, the law of repentance, the law of baptism, and so on to the end, including the law of love, which is the subject of this article. Now, every law has its bounds and conditions, and those who ignore them are deceiving themselves when they imagine that they are in the practice of charity.

And they who are not sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom. For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, cannot abide a celestial glory; and he who cannot abide the law of a terrestrial kingdom, cannot abide a terrestrial glory; he who cannot abide a telestial kingdom, cannot abide a telestial glory: therefore, he is not meet for a kingdom of glory. Therefore, he must abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory.—D C. 85: 5.

This paragraph teaches that salvation is secured through obedience to law; that outside of the laws which govern the celestial, terrestrial, and telestial kingdoms, there is no salvation. Is it not true, therefore, that charity is a part of the celestial law? I certainly think so.

And again, verily I say unto you, That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, cannot be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore, they must remain filthy still.

All kingdoms have a law given: and there are many kingdoms; for there is no space in the which there is no kingdom; and there is no kingdom in which there is no space, either a greater or lesser kingdom. And unto every kingdom is given a law; and unto every law there are certain bounds also, and conditions.

All beings who abide not in those conditions, are not justified; for intelligence cleaveth unto intelligence; wisdom receiveth wisdom; truth embraceth truth; virtue loveth virtue; light cleaveth unto light; mercy hath compassion on mercy, and claimeth her own; justice continueth its course, and claimeth its own; judgment goeth before the face of him who sitteth upon the throne, and governeth and executeth all things: he comprebendeth all things, and all things are before him, and all things are round about him; and he is above all things, and in all things, and is through all things, and is round about all things; and all things are by him, and of him; even God, forever and ever.—D. C. 85: 8, 9, 10.

The above paragraphs are full of good instruction, and carry with them clear evidences of divinity. The kingdom of God is certainly one of the "greater kingdoms;" indeed it is the greatest; and as such, it is governed by the greatest or most perfect laws. Charity being the most important principle belonging to this kingdom, it cannot be that it is without law, bounds, or conditions. It will never do to affirm directly, or by implication, that that part of the divine plan which does more than any other part in bringing us to God, is no part of "the perfect law of liberty;" or that it is an indefinite something which knows no law, bounds, or conditions.

"The truth," is one of the phrases employed to designate the divine plan (John 17:17; Eph. 1:13; 1 Peter 1:22); and Paul says in 1 Corinthians 13:6, that charity "rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth."

ITS IMPORTANCE AND POSITION.

In one respect, charity is on an exact parallel with every other principle of the divine law; that is, it is indispensable to the accomplishment of its own work. Its superiority lies in the fact that its achievements and legitimate work is greater than that which can be performed by other principles, and therefore, it stands at the head.

And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins.—1 Peter 4:8.

The inspired version reads, charity preventeth a multitude of sins." Charity prevents us from committing sin, because it is the pure love of God, correctly representing his knowledge, purity, and power, hence it cannot look upon sin "with the least degree of allowance." It leads us practically to acknowledge the importance of complete obedience to God's word, which includes a strict but proper administration of the law of God against transgressors, without regard to who they are, or what their social and political standing may be before the people. "Perfect love casteth out fear." To say that a strict and proper administration of the law, given of God for the government of his church, will not prevent sin, and protect the church, is equivalent to charging God with a lack of knowledge or goodness, one or both, when he gave the law. God forbid.

Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned.—1 Tim. 1:5.

"The end of the commandment."— That is, the result of a proper obedience to the commandment, is love "out of a pure heart," "good conscience," and "faith unfeigned." How grand! Not a hypocritical appearance, but a grand reality.

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.—1 Cor. 13:13.

We can no more be saved without faith and hope than we can without charity; but, evidently, charity is the greatest, because it does more to mold and transform the human character into the divine, than any other part of the gospel. Love, true love, is the most potent agency in reforming and transforming the human character into a state of perfection that the world has ever known.

And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.—Col. 3:14. That is, charity is the divine force or influence which binds and holds all other divine forces, principles, and influences together, in a proper manner, and without which the system known as the gospel would be of no efficacy whatever. In answer to the question, "Master, which is the great commandment in the law," Jesus said:—

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.—Matt. 22: 37-40.

A practical demonstration on the part of the members and ministers of the church of such love as this would bring us much nearer to God, and lay a proper foundation for the exercise of that confidence which is so needful in the building up of the work which God has intrusted to us.

MERCY AND FORGIVENESS REQUIRED.

Mercy and forgiveness are closely connected with charity; and all who are sufficiently influenced by "the pure love of Christ" will not fail to extend them to all transgressors, in accordance with God's law, as expressed in his word. Our work is to save, not to destroy. Therefore, all that we can do to contribute to this grand end should be done cheerfully and promptly, for in this way only can we be the true children of God. Certain it is, that we cannot go too far in extending favor-mercy and forgiveness—to another, provided (1) that what we do will be a real help to him in securing salvation; and (2) that we can deal with all others in the same way, under the same circumstances; and (3) that our proposed favor, if extended, will not interfere with the rights of another, or others; or (4) in a word which covers the whole ground, that our act of supposed favor is in harmony with God's will, as expressed in his word.

First, God requires us to forgive all, without regard to the character of the offense committed, and without regard to subsequent confession and repentance. Is this standard too low? If any one thinks so, and is able to rise higher than this, let him hold up his hand! It seems to me that this is one of the greatest achievements of the "glorious gospel of Christ." Suppose some one should murder your child, whom you love more than your own life, could you forgive him? Well, the gospel requires it. This is the standard to which the writer has been striving to come for many years and the one which he has tried to keep before the people; and again, I ask, What is the matter with it? Is it too low? This, it will be perceived, is unconditional forgiveness from the heart.

My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another, and forgave not one another in their hearts, and for this evil they were afflicted, and sorely chastened; wherefore I say unto you, that ye ought to forgive one another, for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses, standeth condemned before the Lord, for there remaineth in him the greater sin. I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men; and ye ought to say in your hearts, Let God judge between me and thee, and reward thee according to thy deeds. And he that repenteth not of his sins, and confesseth them not, then ye shall bring him before the church, and do with him as the scriptures saith unto you, either by commandment, or by revelation. And this ye shall do that God might be glorified, not because ye forgive not, having not compassion, but that ye may be justified in the eyes of the law, that ye may not offend him who is your Lawgiver.-D. C. 64: 2.

The above paragraph, down to the word deeds, fully supports my position; but the remainder of the paragraph plainly implies that there is another kind of forgiveness which is conditional, and can only be extended by us when the conditions are complied with. For the want of better terms, we will call this a legal, or conditional forgiveness (although the first kind referred to, is also legal). As administrators of the law against transgressors, we can only forgive when the wrongdoers repent of their sins, and confess them. And we require this at their hands, not because we do not forgive from the heart; not because we refuse to extend mercy, but that we may be "justified in the eyes of the law;" that we "may not offend him who is our Lawgiver," and that God may be glorified. If, therefore, we refuse to proceed according to these expressed conditions of the law, we thereby offend God, fail to glorify his name, and are condemned in the eyes of the law. That kind of charity (?) which incurs such terrible consequences as these, is certainly not very desirable.

As further evidence that under certain conditions there is a sense in which we are not to forgive, the reader's attention is called to Matthew 18: 15-17, which shows that if an offender will not make his wrong right, he is to be delivered up to the church, and become as a "heathen man and a publican." And in Luke 17: 4 we are instructed and commanded to forgive our trespassing brethren even to seven times in one day, if he repents.

In Doctrine and Covenants 58: 9 we are plainly told how we may know when individuals repent:—

Behold, he who has repented of his sins, the same is forgiven, and I, the Lord, remembereth them no more. By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins. Behold, he will confess them and forsake them.

In Doctrine and Covenants 42: 6 we read that

He that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come; and in paragraph 7, we have the following:—

Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall he cast out; but he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart, and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive; but if he doeth it again, he shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out.

Liars and thieves, if they will not repent, are to be cast out (paragraph 7). Thus we see that there is a conditional and legal forgiveness, which can only be granted, in harmony with the will of God, when the expressed conditions are complied with; and the most charitable beings that we know anything about are those who act in harmony with the will of God.

WHAT ARE THE TESTS?

If a man has true faith in God he will work according to God's revealed will; if he truly repents, he will turn away from evil—cease to do evil and learn to do well. A truly repentant man begins and continues to believe the truth instead of error, and to practice it in his life. The test of our love to God is our willingness to keep his commandments, or the keeping of his commandments.

If ye love me, keep my commandments.... He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me.... If a man love me, he will keep my words.—John 14: 15, 21, 23.

If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. ... Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15:10, 14.

And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him. He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.—1 John 2: 3-6.

The apostle, John, wrote much and grandly upon the subject of love; but, as may be seen from the above, and much more like it, he was very exacting with reference to the conduct of the saints, making practical right-eousness, and obedience to God, the proof of our love for him.

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.—2 John 9.

The proper criticism on much that is offered to us as charity, is that it ignores, is in conflict with, or requires us, in accepting it, to go contrary to some part or parts of the gospel. I do not, I cannot, believe that God is ever in conflict with himself. I do believe that God is always in harmony with himself.

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed for that purpose.—D C. 42: 8.

Thou shalt live together in love, insomuch, that thou shalt weep for the loss of them that die, and more especially for those that have not hope of a glorious resurrection.—D. C.

42:12.

Our love for man is shown by our willingness to labor and sacrifice for his timely and eternal good. Many of the commandments of God not only test our professions of love to him, but also to the people of the church, and the world. Indeed, if we do not love our neighbors (the ones with whom we come in contact), we do not love God; but if we truly love God, then we love the people also. (1 John 4: 20)

It is well for us to test our present standing and condition before God, for it is possible for us to go through the entire form of obedience to the first principles of the gospel, and yet have no proper standing before God.

We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

—1 John 3: 14

Do we feel perfectly satisfied so long as our needs or wants are provided for, even though we are enjoying temporal privileges and blessings which are denied to our brother? so, it is not charity that leads to such contentment. Charity in a nation, church, or individuals, will lead them to extend to other nations, churches. and individuals, the blessings which they prize and claim for themselves. Equality consists mainly in equality of privilege; and it is an awfully solemn thing, and a great sin, for us to attempt to destroy, or justify the destruction of the rights and privileges of others, with which they have been endowed by their Creator.

Paul's treatise on charity, as found in 1 Corinthians, 13th chapter, shows that it is not a thing of outward appearance and pompous display; but, rather, it is modest, humble, easy to be entreated, patient, unselfish, firm in the right and against the wrong; consistent, kind, and wise. In verse 5. Paul says that charity "thinketh no evil." What is it to think evil? When we try to justify ourselves, or others, in that which is wrong, we are thinking evil. When we think to build up self at the expense of right principle, and by tearing down others, we are thinking evil. When we plan to do anything that is wrong—anything that is contrary to the high standard of the gospel, we are thinking evil. When we think others are guilty of such and such wrongs, without any good reasons, or proof, for so believing, we are thinking evil. It is not thinking evil to believe what is true, whether the thing believed is good or bad.

Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.—1. Cor. 13:7.

From this I understand that charity will enable us to bear all that may come upon us (and which we cannot properly hinder) as a result of our obedience to the truth, and a full performance of duty. "Believeth all things." That is, "the pure love of Christ," in our hearts, enables us to believe all that is true. God does not want us to believe to be true that which is false, and that which is true to be false; for charity "rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth." But it is a great thing, and a rare achievement, to be able to readily believe all truth as fast as there is opportunity of becoming acquainted with it. Political, social, and religious prejudices,—yes, and national prejudices, - frequently "...Hopeth all stand in the way. "Hopeth all things." The love of God causes our hope for life and salvation to grow brighter and brighter, and we desire and expect that all the glorious promises of the divine plan will be realized, by the faithful and true, no matter what our present surroundings are, or how dark the clouds of today. But we do not hope, nor does God want us to hope, that the transgressors, the unfaithful, the hypocrites, and deceivers, except they repent, will ever inherit the kingdom of God. "Endureth all things." We are weak. Trials leave their effects upon us. However, "the pure love of Christ" strengthens us for every conflict, prevents us from falling out by the way, because of trial, or in other words, it enables us to continue in the work, faithful and true, till the end shall come, even though our trials and sufferings may be great.

The great rule laid down by the Master, which is binding upon his disciples in all ages and at all times, will of itself measure what degree of love we have for our fellow men.

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.—Matt. 7: 12.

Here, again, we must avoid the foolish and dangerous practice of putting God in conflict with himself. We are not at liberty to presume that this injunction applies to immoral and criminal persons, nor to any whose desires are wrong and corrupt. But whatever we desire that others should do for us, that is right, moral, and according to the gospel, that same thing we should freely extend to them. But if it be contended, as it has been, and actually acted upon, that as we would not like to be brought before an elders' court to answer for wrong, or crime, therefore we should not bring anyone else there; we answer, that by this contention we make God contradict himself, and put a premium upon all kinds of wrong. As the thief, adulterer, or murderer would like those who are knowing to his crimes to help him keep them from the people by lying, misrepresentation, and deception of the deepest dye; in like manner, according to this interpretation, they should lie and deceive in order to extend the same favor to others! All criminals desire that others should help them execute their damnable deeds. Are they authorized by this rule, given by the immaculate Jesus, to extend like help and assistance to all other criminals? Is it possible that anyone will so interpret, and especially a minister of this church, as to make the Christ a party to all kinds of wrong and crime?

In conclusion. The best exhibitions of "the pure love of God," and the pure love of Christ," that has ever been, or ever will be, were manifested in the work of God the Father, and Christ the Son, for the salvation of man. Nobody's rights invaded here. No poor soul neglected. The same privileges extended to all, without regard to sex, social standing, finances, nationality, or color.

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3: 16.

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.—Mark 16:15, 16

For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.—Gal. 3: 26-28.

For he doeth that which is good among the children of men; and he doeth nothing save it be plain unto the children of men; and he inviteth them all to come unto him, and partake of his goodness; and he denieth none that come unto him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remembereth the heathen, and all are alike unto God, both Jew and Gentile.—2 Book of Nephi 11: 16.

"God is love," and the above passages from the Bible and Book of Mormon correctly represent him. Here is a plan which challenges our admiration. It touches the heart, and informs the judgment. It brings no disappointment to the honest and intelligent seeker after good. It is nothing less than God's love to man, but in it we find his wisdom, justice, impartiality, and power displayed.

Not a soul is wronged, not a soul neglected. God's love is manifested in every part of the divine plan, and in the law which he has given for the government of his church. fore, whenever we undertake to substitute any portion of that law with something which we call charity, we thereby reflect on the character of the divine Being, and we virtually say that when he gave the law he was not a God of love, and we will see if we cannot improve upon his work. We cannot do it. All such efforts must fail, as they ever have failed in the past. When we are in harmony with God, we are right; but when we are in conflict with God, we are wrong.

Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.—Matt. 15:13.

And, thank God, every plant which the great Father of love hath planted, shall remain. There is no power on earth or in hell that can pluck it up.

J. R. LAMBERT.

SHACKLES FETTERING THE BOOK OF MORMON.

One of the greatest difficulties we have to contend with in getting the Book of Mormon among the people is its high price. This ought not to be. There are thousands of books published as large as it and yet sell for less than one half the price that our lowest edition is held at. Of course we can understand that a popular demand warrants the publishing of a greater number, hence cheapness. But why not attempt to make the Book of Mormon popular by taking a step in the advance and lowering the price. When an elder concludes his discourse on the divinity of the Book of Mormon and then offers the book for sale, the general audience is astonished that the book is priced so high. They begin to wonder where is the spirit of the gospel "without money and without price." Of course they don't expect the book for nothing, but they conclude that if it is really the word of God-a message of salvation or damnation to this generation—that it ought to be proffered at a much lower figure. They remember that the Bible can be had for six and eight cents a copy, and sometimes Am not agitating the idea that the Book of Mormon can be sold for so low a price as the Bible. but it ought to be somewhere at a respectable nearness.

I sometimes think that the church has lost sight of the God intended "sphere of influence" that the Book of Mormon ought to occupy. By erecting the wall of high price around that sacred book, it confines its evangelizing power to the few within the church. God has intended tongue, and people;" not only to Israel, but "to the Gentile," to convince them that Jesus is the Christ" manifesting himself unto all nations."-Salutatory page, of Book of Mormon. The angel at hill Cumorah informed Joseph that it should be carried to the Gentiles, and work a marvelous work; and Nephi said it would be brought forth for all "the children of men, yea, even upon all nations."-2 Nephi 12:43. I wonder if we are assisting this book to fulfill its mission by tying it down with the cable of high price?

The publisher may say, Sell more, and we'll cheapen the books. Yes, but the zeal of the elder to preach it up falls flat on the minds of the people when they are informed of amount demanded before they can peruse its spiritual pages. They conclude that it is but a money making scheme, and as such the book would be dear at half the price.

To my understanding, the Book of Mormon is the best missionary of the Reorganized Church, at least it would be if we would unfetter it: and instead of keeping it at home by a high price, it would be more profitable to publish it freely, and give it away. Think of it: There are millions of people in this Joseph's land who know not the existence of the book, and yet this church huddles it up very much like Rome did with the Scriptures in the dark ages. It would be well for us to remember what signal triumphs greeted the publication and distribution of the Bible when Erasmus, Luther, and Tyndall launched forth their editions. Nations were born in a day. The Reformation was established, and I venture to say that the growth of this church, insignificant as it is at present, would increase fifty per cent instead of four or five, if we, like the Reformers, lay hold of the secluded word of God, so long buried in the catacombs of Cumorah, and publish its glad tidings in every home. The meat is not too strong. Where is the honest, humble soul who can arise and say that a reading of that work stunted their spiritual growth, or estranged them to the gospel of Jesus Christ. The book breathes an influence so heavenly and so penetrating that it is sure to convict the sinner, convert the inquirer, and confound the wise; and, like the rays of the morning sun, will brighten the caverns of sin-cursed nations.

I don't think that the publishing authorities are growing fat over the profits made out of the book, but it seems to me that a little of the speculative exercised on the part of the church, would set aside a few thousand dollars and appropriate it to an extra large edition of the book, and thus secure cheapness. This idea of it to go to "every nation, kindred, holding the book within our own circle is unworthy the spirit and genius of this latter-day work. The church was started and established by reason of the introduction of the angel's message, which was the Book of Mormon. 'Twas same message that aroused the lethargy of the people to gaze upon this the marvelous work and a wonder, and thereby the church soon grew to two hundred thousand strong. Has that book lost its charms? If so, away with it. If not, circulate it, and let us see the work go on once more. The world needs it. It is the book that God has intended to arouse the "drunkenness" of the age. The Bible, like all excellent garments which become aged, is glossed over with the traditions and misinterpretations of the age, so that a thousand sects seek to support their fantastic claims from its holy teachings. It requires a powerful remedy to remove this gloss. The Book of Mormon is the only remedy.

For behold, this [the Book of Mormon] is written for the intent that ye may believe that [the Bible] -Book of Mormon, 3:27.

The meager circulation of the Book of Mormon is not entirely blamable to the high price. Some of us elders. by our scrupulous wisdom (?) and caution, are afraid to launch it out. We haven't sufficient faith in its powers to evangelize. Why, then, did God give it? It is really amusing to see an elder preaching the divinity of the book and advertising its virtues, and yet he has only one solitary copy in his possession, and that is so especially choice that it must not go out of his possession for fear of an unseen accident befalling it. About as consistent as the street vender who vaunteth the virtues of his wares and yet has none to sell.

That the church may loosen the shackles binding the Book of Mormon, and that the elders may loosen their tongues to advance it as the prime missionary of the church, is my prayer. D. MACGREGOR.

ONE TRIAL OF A MISSIONARY.

I was packing my valise, preparing to enter the field after the holiday visit with loved ones. Blair, who is five years old, came in, and, seeing what I was doing, said in a choking voice: "Papa, don't go away."

I told him I had to go. Not being able to control his feelings longer, he said between his sobs: "Papa, why can't you stay with your little boy?"

I put my arms around him, and explained as best I could that I had to go and preach and tell the people what the Lord wanted them to do. This quieted him for a few minutes, then he, sobbing, asked: "Papa, why don't you quit preaching?"

We were then called to dinner, but his sorrow was so great it overcame his appetite, and although he sat at my side during the meal, he could not eat, and occasionally would break down and cry, but would try to control his feelings again. My heart was full to overflowing, but I did not dare to show my feelings, only to try to kiss away his tears and promise him I would go home and see him as soon as I could.

A SEVENTY.

Letter Department.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 1. Editors Herald:-I ask space to note a few things I have heard and seen while on a preaching tour in south Missouri. I had made arrangements to attend the St. Louis conference for January 5 and 6; but at the very time I was to start, Ammon, my boy, was taken suddenly ill, and was prostrated for two days. This greatly disarranged my previous arrangements. I asked God to open my way and on Monday night, the 7th, I heard a voice saying to me: "Go to Springfield, and start Wednesday." Without sending any appointments I at once arranged to go. Wednesday morning came and a bad storm was on-a cold sleet and snow. It indeed was a "blue day." Wife thought I had better put off going till next day. But I feared to do so, though the temptation was something, I confess. Train time drew near and I became uneasy and remarked, "I am going, though I know not what is before me."

I hastened to depot and took the 10:27 train for Harrisonville and transferred to the Springfield train. A very talkative man sat just behind me, and we soon were engaged in a real debate. He was a minister of the Campbellite order, and had met Baptist and Methodist, and seemed not to know what defeat meant; but now he had struck a steel sword that would neither break nor bend, and he asks, "What is your name?" I. N. White, sir. "God Almighty! I have heard of you. You are considered a second Christ in debate." I was more astonished at his remark, than he was of his man. He was a loud, boisterous talker, and this remark drew the attention of one half the car. His wife and children sat on the opposite seats, and all on their way to Texas via Springfield. He said he was leaving Miller county and going to a strange land, as a prophet in his own country has no honor. The knowledge which I had of Campbellism from its very inception, was more than this man could meet. The position of our respective churches were canvassed from a biblical standpoint, seemingly from start to finish. People became much interested, and it was no difficult task to see that they thought I had the best of the argument. I was once flatly called a liar in Braden style. This proved a boomerang to my opponent, and one in which I made him feel it. When in the last ditch he asked for a sign; this went back on him so completely that I could see that the man's spirit was broken, and presently the controversy closed. Right away some of those who had been listening to the debate extended to me their hands and made inquiry where I lived, and expressed themselves as being on my side. Before we reached Springfield my opponent reached over the seat and said: "Here is a half dollar I wish to present to you, as I believe you are an honest man; one who believes he is in the right, and want to say God speed to you in doing what good you can." I thanked him kindly and refused to take the money; though I asked God to bless him for his extended kindness as though I took the gift. Told him he had his wife and little children with him, and would drop off in among strangers and would probably need every cent he had to care for them. He urged that I take it, but I refused and gave good reasons, and hoped God would bless him and that he might find friends and do much good where he was going.

As I went south the sleet and snow turned into rain and it poured at times. I asked in silent prayer that it might hold up by the time I got to Springfield, as it would be dark and I had no umbrella. Just before the whistle blew for Springfield it quit raining. On leaving the car I shook hands with, now my friend, and breathed a prayer that he might some time find the whole truth as is in this restored gospel. I do not give his name: think it wise not to do so when considering the controversy, and those that heard it, and the good terms that we separated on. If this friend ever accepts "our gospel" as Paul would say, he will be glad to talk over and relate this very circumstance. May God bless him, his dear wife and children, is my earnest prayer.

I walked over to the "corner store," and learned from the clerks that the Latter Day Saints were holding meetings at a brick hall. I took street car and got off at the hall. The electric lights were all out for some reason. and it was as dark as pitch. I waited outside of hall for our preacher, but none came. I had come over two hundred miles to preaching, and our preacher four or five blocks away thought it too bad weather to fill his appointment; so a congregation of one was disappointed if no more. I left my grip in a store and started in the dark to hunt a stopping place. The first street I attempted to cross, I splashed into a mud hole; floundered out and felt to learn if I had left my over shoes in that hole. By inquiring at stores and shops I found my way to Bro. Hughes, and there met our preacher, Bro. D. E. Tucker, sitting by the stove drying his clothes as he had been in the rain. I jogged that good brother's memory for not being at the place where he had announced himself to preach. Bro. Tucker left for Lowry City on the 15th, and I continued the meetings in hall up to the 18th. The brethren are making a heroic effort to finish their church house here. Bro. Tucker and I put in a little time in helping lay the floor, till I felt so sore I quit the business. Brn. Sparling, Thomas, Gray, and Schwab, and some others are the carpenters, and they have done a good, substantial, and respectable job; one they may be praised for. I spoke six times, and met with the Saints in prayer service, which was a spiritual feast. The Saints were much encouraged and many resolved to live a higher and purer life. May they not forget their promises made to God.

Bro. Sparling and I left on the early morning train on 18th; I to go to Pomona, and he to Mt. Grove, where both had appointments close by. My visit at Pomona was timely, and the hearts of the Saints were made glad, and the people convicted of their sins and some resolved to obey the truth. One young lady, Miss Clara Meinecke, who was one of the Sunday school teachers, arose for baptism the last night of my meetings. Time for baptism appointed and the local brethren asked to attend to it. Here I spoke five times and attended one prayer service and left on the 22d for Thayer.

I visited from house to house while at Pomona and was greatly blessed while blessing others. Few times in life have I felt more of the Holy Spirit in my work than upon that occasion. I administered to a number of sick and blessed one child.

While visiting Bro. and Sr. Milks, the sister in tears related to me how prejudiced she used to be, and how the Lord had opened her eyes to the truth; and after she had been baptized she could not believe the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith a prophet and good man to bring forth that book; and how she had fasted and earnestly prayed for two days and nights for a witness and testimony of the truth of that book and Joseph's mission, and the following dream was given to her: "I was journeying with a large number of people along a narrow road. On the left of the road was a large body of water, and on the right was a high, steep bluff. I heard a great noise behind me, and saw the cars coming close upon me, and instead of people there was a large flock of sheep, white as snow. I was running fast looking for the steps that went up the bluff, as the train was very near me. I saw the steps and sprang on them just as the train rushed past me, it being so close that the suction almost carried me from the steps. When the train was past I commenced to look about me, and noticed the steps up the bluff were almost perpendicular-one right over the other, and so far apart that while standing on the first I could just reach the second with my hands. To ascend these I had to raise myself by the main strength of my hands. I reached the second step in this way and felt so fatigued that I sat down to rest. Presently I looked for the third, and noticed to my astonishment it was broken in the center and the two ends hanging down, and it was impossible for me to get any further. I knew I dare not go back as I had been told that was certain death. I sat down in despair and buried my face in my lap and cried as though my heart would break, saying: God, what shall I do? Oh, what can I do?' Then I heard a voice say: Sister! I looked up and there stood Joseph Smith holding the Book of Mormon. He said: Here, Sister, take this book and lay it on the step where you stand and it will enable you to reach this other step. I took the book from his hand and thought it looked too small for such a purpose. However, I did as I was told, and when I stepped upon the book I reached up and took the hand of Bro. Joseph and thus easily stepped upon the other step; then we went up the steps together. I had not gone far when I thought of the book I had left on the step; but Joseph said: That is all right, it may help some other poor sister over the broken step. Said he: Come with me and I will show you where I got the book. We went to the top of the hill, and I stopped and gazed in wonder and admiration at the beautiful scene before me. So far as the eye could see there was beautiful green pasture with snow-white sheep grazing on it. I said: Oh, how beautiful! Joseph said: Come this way, and I will show you where I got the book. We came to a large boulder; he put his hand on the rock and it yielded to his hand like unto a trunk lid. As he laid the lid back he said: Look! I looked, and what dazzling beauty! The dazzling brightness of the stone was like the brightness of the sun. And in the rock, (which was hewn out like a trunk) there lay ten or twelve books with large gold letters on the back-'Golden Bible.' I said, these are not like the one we left on the step. Yes, they are the same, said he, and lifted one up and handed it to me. I turned it over and on the other side was written in gold letters, 'Book of Mormon-Golden Book.' I handed it back, but Joseph said, Keep it, it is yours. I sat down and began to read it and presently I turned to see where Joseph was, in order to thank him for the book, that I now pressed to my heart; but he was gone. But there sat an angel upon the rock and he said: 'You seek Joseph, but he is gone; be has filled his mission.' I felt sad that he was gone before I could thank him for the book that I now prized above all books. Then the angel began to sing hymn 1110 as found in the Saint's Harp: 'I came to the spot where the two martyrs lay,' etc. He sang the whole hymn as it appears in the Harp, then made a bow, and I went my way leaving the angel sitting on the rock."

This certainly is a remarkable dream, or "vision," as the sister calls it in her written manuscript, as it lays before me to copy. I wept with her as she related it to me; and now note, for the special benefit of any that may have any doubts in regard to the present Joseph being God's choice to lead the people that believe and accept the church and Book of Mormon as brought forth by Joseph the Seer in 1830, without polygamy and its kindred evils that have been attempted to be fastened upon the church by Brigham Young and his followers; which is now condemned by Joseph the Seer, and an angel that appears to this sister while she is fasting and praying, asking for light in regard to the great message that was introduced to Joseph at the beginning of the church, in this the last dispensation. The angel points out who the deceivers are, that would attempt to lead the church "from precepts of virtue," after the death of the Seer; and chants with a heavenly voice the calling of "young Joseph" to "lead us again," in these poetical words:-

But anguish gives place to a fullness of joy,
Revived are the hopes that were slain;
From th' seed of the Martyr, called by the Most High,
Comes a prophet to lead us again.

This agrees with the vision I had in 1880. which is as indelibly printed upon my mind today, as it was when first seen. Utahism is fast working out its own dissolution; it will come by and by. We shall be content to carry the angel's message to the people without polygamy, which the Book of Mormon condemns so vehemently as a "wicked practice" in the following terse language: "And now it came to pass that the people of Nephi, under the reign of the second king, began to grow hard in their hearts, and indulge themselves somewhat in wicked practices, such as like unto David of old, desiring many wives and concubines, and also Solomon, his son."-Page 113.

On page 116, the Lord calls the having of "many wives," "abominable," and says: "I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem, by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph." This "leading out of Jerusalem" getting from the "abominable" practice of Solomon and David with their too much marrying system, was on purpose to raise up a "righteous branch" by the practice of the one wife system. But now, to follow the Utah system, is to reverse the whole system inaugurated by God. Brigham and his followers attempt to make God say he failed in his adopted method of the one wife system to raise up a "righteous seed;" and now has to resort to the very thing he condemned in the Nephites, David and Solomon, and lead the people out of Nauvoo, Kanesville (Council Bluffs), etc., to the salt land (Jeremiah 17:5) -into polygamy, the very thing he had so stoutly condemned in all former times; but now resorts to this "abominable" practice in order to raise up a "righteous branch," from the loins of Brigham, Taylor, Woodruff, Snow, etc., etc.!! Will honest, well-informed men and women accept these men's testimony instead of God's, when he has said: "For I am the Lord, I change not." (Mal. 3:6) I hope not.

On Tuesday 22, I left for Thayer, which is three hundred and forty miles southeast of Kansas City. Here I was met by Bro. Burt Bootman and made his pleasant home my home while I remained. I commenced meeting that night in the Christian church; had a fair congregation and announced meetings over Sunday, 27th. Rev. Albert Sitten, the M. E. minister, attended for two nights and apparently became much interested. He called on me and we had a four hours' talk right to the point and he became much troubled over it. He said he was determined to give our claims an investigation and if he found it what it now appears to him, would at once accept it. He was suddenly called away to the bedside of a sick brother. This man has fine talent and seemingly trying to overcome prejudice; but how he will make it, time must determine. I closed with a fine congregation. Brn. A. M. D. McGuire, elder. and James T. Davis, priest, put in an appearance and assisted me throughout. Bro. Davis is now giving his whole time to the work, and is a promising young man. Bro. McGuire is a coming man, too, but tied down with a large family, but puts in his Sundays in and around his home (Woodside), and is well liked by all good meaning people. Mr. C. S. Madden and his sister Lillie, were convinced of the truth, and were baptized by Bro. Davis on Sunday. Others could hardly keep out of the water. We were glad to see the seed sown in Thayer. My meetings were the first of our faith in that town of 1,800.

During the Sunday school, some opposition was raised over me using the church; but one of the directors said: "He is preaching nothing but the truth." Others said: "It is tearing us all up." But the director stoutly affirmed, "If the truth tears us up, let it tear." He sent us word Monday morning as I was taking train, that the church was open for me when I came back.

I reached Malden, in the extreme southeast part of Missouri, at 10:10 that night. Bro. Loy's boys met me, and I am kindly cared for at the Malden hotel, with Bro. and Sr. Loy proprietors. Malden is a nice town of about 2,500, with three or four churches. I am the first to preach our faith here in a public way. Bro. Loy's have been here about five months, and Sr. Loy had joined the Sisters' Aid Society and attended the M. E. Sunday school and had secured some recognition from the pastor and members, so much so as to secure the use of their fine church for me. I commenced on the 29th and have held three meetings to date; but a number of things have kept the people away, and my congregations have been small, yet I am touching points that are opening some eyes and I can hear grumbling all along the line. I have thought every evening would be my last, as the key would be turned in the door; but I am announced till Saturday night, February 2, when I leave on the 10:10 train for St. Louis.

One more thing I wish to pen for the benefit of those that are tried because of the unchristianlike treatment they often receive from the bigoted sectarian preacher. But, I feel grateful that all sectarian ministers are not of that kind. Elder Sparling was to preach in Bro. Loy's house while they lived at Willow Springs. Sparling attended the M. E. service and handed the minister a written notice of his service, and asked that he read it to his congregation, which thing he did; but no sooner than read, another minister of that faith arose and said: "There are none of you that want to go to Utah: I want you all to come back here for the eleven o'clock services tomorrow, and I want you to keep away from that cesspool of iniquity," meaning Bro. and Sr. Loy's house. Bro. Sparling arose and asked a few minutes to make an explanation, and this preacher said: "Sit down, sir, or I will have you arrested!" This ended the episode there; but Bro. Sparling carried the news to Bro. and Sr. Loy, and at first they felt indignant at the preacher for publicly calling their house a 'cesspool of iniquity." After a moment's thought Sr. Loy said: "We can after all be thankful that we are worthy to suffer reproach for Christ." She went to bed praying

I wept for the church for her prophet was slain, And I felt that deceivers were near, Who would lead her from precepts of virtue so plain, Once taught her by Joseph the Seer.

and feel asleep weeping over the matter and dreamed that a messenger came into her house with a lamp in his hand, it burning brilliantly, and he presented it to her and said, read the ninety-sixth hymn in the Saints' Harp, and then suddenly left. On arising she hunted up the hymn and read:

"Zion's light again is dawning,
Praise ye the Lord!
Brightly ushers in the morning,
Praise ye the Lord!
Dark the night, when foes assailing
Zion's scattered ones, who 'wailing
Zion's woes, sang, faith unfailing,
Praise ye the Lord!"

Sister Loy had never noticed the hymn before; and this token of remembrance at a trying time was as cold water to a thirsty soul. They read the hymn through and wept and took courage. I praise God that his faithful children are remembered. I. N. WHITE.

BLACKFOOT, Idaho, Feb. 2.

Editors Herald:-On the 3d of January I left the Thomasfork valley in Idaho and started for the Hamsfork country in Wyoming, and after traveling sixty miles with team and by rail I arrived at my destination with less than fifty cents to begin a gospel campaign in that section of country. But the Lord raised up friends to me, so that I neither lacked for food nor shelter during the twenty-five days I was laboring in that great coal region in the state of Wyoming. Although I had to do a great deal of walking back and forth to my boarding place which I found with a Mr. Calvin Burt, of Hamsfork, walking from three to eight miles per day visiting from house to house, distributing tracts, and inviting the inhabitants of Kemmerer, Frontier, Diamondville, and No. 2 mining camp to attend preaching services at the places appointed; and although I tried hard to arouse an interest in spiritual things among the inhabitants of the above-mentioned city and towns, yet I only succeeded in getting an audience for two nights in Diamondville. What is the cause of so little interest in the gospel at Diamondville? I will tell you. In that town of one thousand to fifteen hundred inhabitants, I was told there are twenty places where intoxicating drinks are sold. This, together with the gambling and other places of amusement to be found in western mining towns, seems to satisfy the large majority of the people, and leaves no room for spiritual things.

At Diamondville I found three members of the church. David Kinghorn and wife, who were baptized many years ago by Lorenzo Powell and Strachen, at Washingtonville, Ohio, and Joseph Simpson, who formerly lived in Iowa, I think at Lucus.

At Kemmerer I obtained the Mormon church to preach in, and announced the meeting by posting notices in public places and by visiting and distributing tracts and inviting quite a large number to attend. Also attended a religious meeting and had my meeting announced from the stand. The result of all this advertising was an audience of two, who came in after eight o'clock p. m. But I did not preach to them, but had a good, social chat with them on spiritual things.

At Frontier could not get a house to preach in. At No. 2 could have had the schoolhouse, but there was no way of lighting the house for night services, and could not have it in day time; so did not preach there.

At Hamsfork I preached seven times in the home of Mr. Burt, who kindly cared for me while laboring in this section of country. The audiences here, though small, ranging from fifteen to thirty, were very attentive, and some became very much interested in the doctrine of Christ. One gentleman showed his appreciation of the plan of salvation as presented by the writer by presenting me with a five dollar bill; and after the last sermon was preached he said he was well pleased with the doctrine, and the last sermon was the best he had ever heard. To God be all the praise for all the good that may result from my labors, for I know it is by the power of his Spirit that I am enabled to preach acceptably, and not of myself. Seven or eight families seem to be interested in this region of country, and I believe some of them will unite with us if proper labor is done among them in the future.

On the 28th I said good-bye to the kind friends who had so kindly cared for me while trying to advance the cause of Christ among them, and turning my face westward, I boarded one of Nahum's chariots and came to Cokeville, where I was fortunate enough to obtain a ride of about thirteen miles in a sleigh, which brought me within one and one half miles of my home, which I soon reached by walking. Found all the loved ones in good health. Staid at home three days to rest a little, for I was not feeling well, having contracted a cold the last two days at Kemmerer.

January 31 bade the loved ones at home good-bye, and started for the Snake river country in Idaho. Drove to Montepelier, twenty miles; and having arrived too late to take the west bound train, I drove to Dingle, and visited the Saints there—stopped over night with Sister Sparks and family.

February 1 drove to Montpelier, seven miles, and took train for Blackfoot, Idaho, where I arrived at about six p. m., and after a few inquiries and a short walk I succeeded in finding the home of Bro. and Sr. Larsen, formerly of Council Bluffs, Iowa, where I am being kindly cared for at the present. Since coming here I have learned that Bro. S. D. Condit is in Blackfoot. Hope to meet him soon and arrange for a campaign in this valley.

Yours hopefully,

A. J. LAYLAND.

GREENLEAFTON, Minn., Feb. 4.

Editors Herald:—Since last contributing to your columns, I have kept myself in this the southeast corner of Minnesota and striven as best I could to hold aloft the banner of King Emmanuel; but in trying to do so, have had numerous obstacles to meet of various kinds, which, perhaps, will not interest your readers to know, as they are so common to missionary life.

This section of country is wonderfully blessed with churches. I call to mind six within a radius five or six miles here in the country, and the people are nearly all church-going people, each class to their own respective church, hence not much show for the Latter Day Saints to get a congregation. The various pastors are very careful in instructing their flocks to let us severely alone. It seems hard to persuade the people to the belief that we are not of the Utah stripe, and this makes it the more difficult to get a hearing, and the people have no use for polygamy whatever, and to them, that term and the term "Mormonism" or "Latter Day Saintism," are synonymous.

Some over a week ago, I had the promise of a schoolhouse in a new locality; but for some reason or other the person seemed to regret it, and backed out within about an hour after he had promised it. I already had given out meeting at the schoolhouse, getting the teacher to tell the children, so I then set about and secured the church which was located right by the schoolhouse, and the person offered voluntarily to announce my meeting at their Sunday school and church on Sunday afternoon. Gave him some tracts and departed.

In the evening the telephone bell rang at my stopping place, and somebody wanted to know if "that Mormon elder was there." Being answered in the affirmative, I was called to the 'phone. It was the party who had promised me the church, and he stated, that he had been looking over my tracts and he could not possibly consent to let me use the church. Another trucebreaker!

There is a large Dunkard community here. They closed their schoolhouse against me, after preaching one sermon in it on the mission work of Christ. So my work here has largely been in the way of distributing tracts, and talking with the people, wherever I have been invited to do so, and believe some good has been done. Several are beginning to see the Bible in a different light to what they ever saw it before. One of the leading Dunkard members told me yesterday, that since I have been here he had learned more of the Bible than he ever thought was in it. So I feel to rejoice amid tribulation, that I may possibly be the means of leading some to the light of Christ. A Lutheran family is also seriously investigating our work, and others are beginning to weaken in their own

An article was published in a Preston paper from the pen of a Rev. Corkey, against mormonism. It was written against two Utah elders, who had been at work there; but as he had attached the name of Joseph Smith to that abominable doctrine of polygamy, which he (Smith) called a false and corrupt doctrine (and indeed it is), by which the way of truth is evil spoken of, so accordingly I wrote a reply to it, but the papers refused to publish it, as Mr. Corkey is quite prominent in church and society circles, and the editors did not want to offend him. Hence I was under the necessity of having it published in pamphlet form in order to get it before the public. Will mail you both the article and reply. When in Preston distributing my reply, I met Mr. Corkey, to whom I had also mailed a copy; but to say that he was not very pleasant to meet, is putting it mildly. He called me a liar, and forbid me to circulate any more, and many more (to his mind) fitting epithets did he attach to me, very much becoming (?) a Christian clergyman.

Bro. Thomas Morris and family are the only Latter Day Saints here; but outside opposition does not seem in any way to weaken their faith, as they know they have not followed cunningly devised fables; but have anchored their barks upon the rock of God's eternal truth, and like the sturdy oak. which stands alone, subject to the fierce elements of nature, only becomes stronger, after each succeeding attack. Bro. Morris' father is a Welsh Methodist preacher, and is very much opposed to his son's religion. Surely the Lord is with his people who are scattered and isolated, which is shown by their zeal and interest manifested by them, to have their neighbors and friends, partake of the sweets of the gospel of the Lamb of which they themselves are partakers and which seems too good to enjoy all alone.

May the Lord abundantly bless his people everywhere, that the tribulations which are coming upon the earth shall not cause their love to become cold; but that we may all stand shoulder to shoulder, moving forward and never backward, until the victory is won and the crown obtained, and Christ reigning as our king, is the desire of your unworthy brother,

S. K. SORENSEN.

P. S.—I start for Wycoff today and from there tomorrow to Center Chain, Minnesota, about one hundred and twenty-five miles west of here.

ATCHISON, Kan., Feb. 5.

Editors Herald:-Since our last letter we have been blessed in the following ways: On December 28, Brn. I. N. White and M. T. Short, of Independence, Missouri, came and held meetings, Bro. White doing most of the preaching until Sunday when Bro. Short was called to Fanning, Kansas, to preach a funeral sermon. Bro. Short preached Saturday evening, and it was a good sermon. Bro. White preached Friday evening and Sunday morning and evening. In his sermon Sunday morning he spoke by the Spirit and told us that if we would live our religion that there were many prominent people that would unite with us, and that we would worship in a nice church located in the central part of the city, and that the poor Saints would build or help to build the new church house. The preaching was instructive, elevating, and edifying.

After about two weeks Brn. Samuel Twombly and Harry Thomas, of Netawaka, Kansas, came and held meetings for a week, and they both are good and humble young ministers of Christ. They did us good. Then Bro. M. T. Short came from Fanning and preached in the church with good liberty and at a schoolhouse in the western part of the city. Bro. Frank J. Pierce came and assisted Bro. Short. Bro. Short remained a week after, preaching, cheering, and administering to the sick, as most of the Saints were afflicted with la grippe.

Bro. Jones, a member of our branch, is here prospecting with the intention of relocating here again after a prodigal trip. However, he did not waste his substance, but left here to find a better home.

We are all rejoicing in God, and trying to "trust in his constant care." Our president, Bro. Warnock, and wife have been down with la grippe. Ever pray that God will bless all those that have obeyed his commandments. I am, Your brother in the bonds of Christ,

JAMES W. BURNS.

GALENA, Ind., Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—The long looked for and coming of Bishop E. L. Kelley to southern Indiana, accompanied by Bro. G. A. Smith, of Fremont, Indiana, is a thing of the past. I am only echoing the sentiment of all our people when I say that his coming was timely and his teaching meat in due season. His conduct reflected that of a "true servant of God." O that the sentiments of his teaching might be impressed on our every mind as indelibly as the engraving on the rocks that all time may fail to erase them.

After the Byrneville conference Brn. Kelley and Smith came to our village, where we had arranged for meetings in the town hall. Bro. Kelley spoke on the first night, Bro. Smith the second. The audience in number rather above the average and of the best citizens of our community. The meetings were highly commended by members of other denominations and outsiders.

From Galena the brethren went to Louisville. Held two meetings at the Saints' hall. They left us on the 2d for Jefferson county, Indiana. Yours,

M. R. Scott, Sen.

ISSAQUAH, Wash., January 28.

Editors Herald:—I am one of the isolated ones at present, and feel very lonely at times. I have been here nearly seven months, and have met only one elder, Bro. John Smith. There is an Italian here who belongs to the church; but as he understands very little Eaglish, it is hard to talk with him on the subject of religion.

A year ago last December I was very ill, and was in terrible agony for nearly three days. My good room mate did everything he could, but in vain. Finally he asked if he should go for the elders, and I said yes. Brn. Chase and Holt, who were laboring in this vicinity at the time, came and administered to me, and I felt but very little relief. In the evening they came again, and I shall never forget the feelings that came over me. I was healed instantly while Bro. Chase was pleading for me.

Last July I was taken sudd nly ill in the same way as before; but as there were no elders available I poured out my whole heart to God, asking him to restore me to health again, which he did in a very short time.

I know this latter-day work is of God; and like Paul I am not ashamed to prove it at all times. I distribute my papers as much as I can where I think they will have a reading, and by so doing can help the work some. Ever praying for the advancement of this work, Yours in gospel bonds,

A. B. MCCULLOCH.

LUVERNE, Minn., Feb. 1. (Continued from last week.)

Editors Herald:-Elder Walker in opening up the affirmative on the second proposition said that he had enjoyed the four evenings discussion very mucc, and if Elder Wight would get after him (Walker) as he had Wight, there would be a "hot time in the town." Elder Walker dwelt at some length upon the early history of the Christian Church, especially the Campbell's, and used time that might have been spent to better profit. It was really the weakest effort made by him. He used a chart in showing the different officers in the New Testament church, and said that he believed in them. Referred to Eph. 4:11; Titus 1:5; Pbil. 1:1. As to live ones, they had elders, bishops, and deacons. Believed in apostles and prophets. because Jesus set them in his church. He said that as men were not now endowed with miraculous power we did not need living apostles; that we had their word, and that was sufficient. Said the church began at Pentecost day. Time being called, Elder Wight asked permission to answer a statement made by Elder Walker the night before in regard to the three witnesses, Cowdery, Harris, and David Whitmer, denying their testimony to the Book of Mormon. The request being granted. Elder Wight said that the ordinary man when cut off from the church would turn and fight that church. Elder Wight said that it was not so with these witnesses, but that they held to their former testimony until death claimed them. He then read their dying statements, and spoke at some length, and showed that Elder Walker had misrepresented the facts of history. A goodly portion of the Holy Spirit was present, and the different points presented were so forcibly maintained that it was like driving nails in Elder Walker's coffin. Elder Wight then took up the negative of the question and said that it was now Elder Walker's duty to show that the Christian Church was in organization, faith, and practice in harmony with the New Testament scriptures-must show that they had live apostles and prophets, as well as all the other officers mentioned in the Scriptures. Said that if Elder Walker's theory was true, all the other churches had apostles and prophets, too, so that the Christian Church had no preëminence over other churches. Elder Wight said that there was a priesthood in the church organized by Christ-men set apart and ordained by the laying on of hands to minister in spiritual things. Read 1 Peter 2:5-9; Acts 13:1-3. These were presented so forcibly and earnestly by the aid of the Spirit that one could see that it had a telling effect upon the audience.

Elder Walker in his second speech admitted that there were seventies in the church before Pentecost, but could not find any this side of that. Said that the idea of priesthood came from Rome; that all were kings and priests, men, women, boys, and girls. Quoted Rev. 1:6; also 5:10, but he failed to show that it was those in heaven that sung this song, and that they, those now in heaven, were to be kings and priests when they should reign on the earth. Elder Walker here became quite boastful, and said that the word (striking the Bible with his hand) was all powerful, and that the worlds were framed by the word of God (the Bible, I suppose, by the way he hit it). He said that the Spirit was in the word. Did not come down and tell us what to do. Reaches the sinner through the word, and quoted Acts 2: 37, 38. Said they had live prophets; he was one.

Time being called Elder Wight said that a prophet was one who God inspires: one that foretells future events, and asked, "To whom did the angel of Revelation 14:6 and 7, come? Did he come to Campbell, Luther, Wesley, or to whom did he come?" Elder Wight read from "Christian System" by Alexander Campbell, pages 250 and 190, and made a strong and convincing argument therefrom, which had a telling effect upon those present. It showed Elder Walker up as a perverter of the word and of history. Elder Walker's looks and actions indicated that he had fully made up his mind that Elder Wight was after him, and that there was already a "hot time in town."

Elder Walker had stated several times during the debate that the Christian Church had no creed, and that the Bible, and the Bible alone was their rule of faith, and that the Bible was all sufficient. Elder Wight in reply read from "Christian System," by A. Campbell to prove that the Christian Church did have a discipline, and showed that to have a discipline was to have a creed, both being descriptive of a belief. Elder Walker had contended all along that to have a patriarch in the church was out or order, as the New Testament was silent about that office. He laid great stress upon this to show that Elder Wight was wrong, and that the Reorganized Church was not in harmony with the New Testament, and because of this Elder Wight had failed to prove his proposition. Elder Wight in replying to this read from "Hayden's History of the Disciple Church," page 253, concerning Simonds Rider of that church as follows: "He served the church as was his duty with little reward. The more the church grew, the more it seemed to need him. He was first the elder brother, then the father, finally the patriarch," notwithstanding this Elder Walker had contended that Elder Wight was wrong, and had lost because his church had a patriarch. Elder Wight sent this home with telling effect, and as yet Elder Walker has not replied to it.

Elder Walker contended that the church was set up on Pentecost day—did not exist before that. Elder Wight in referring to that statement quoted Acts 2:47 to show that the church must have been organized before, or it could not have been added to, and read Matt. 10; Luke 10:1, to show that the Twelve and Seventy had been chosen before that day, hence the church existed before. Elder Walker's argument was that the church could not have existed before that day because the Holy Spirit was not given until then.

Elder Walker said the Christian Church had four articles of faith, 1st, faith; 2d, repentance; 3d, confession; 4th, baptism. These, he said, was all that was needful.

Elder Walker in his speech Saturday night complimented Elder Wight upon his ability as a debater and thought he should have a "chromo," and presented him with one,—a large cardboard about fourteen inches square, with a picture of a large rooster, and the words "Christian Discipline" printed on it. This caused some laughter; but when Elder Wight's turn came he used the rooster to good advantage by saying that in politics the rooster was an emblem of victory, and as he had the rooster, Elder Walker had admitted defeat. The audience appreciated this turn taken by Elder Wight and laughed heartily.

Elder Walker said the Disciple Church must be right because of numerical strength. Had over one million members. Said both churches began about the same time; then turning to Elder Wight asked what the membership of the Reorganized Church was. Answer, "About forty-three thousand." This proves, said Elder Walker, that Wight's church must be wrong or they would have increased faster than this. Said that the Disciple Church in seventy-eight years had increased to 1,200,000, while the Reorganized Church in forty nine years had only 43 000; and if they had the truth, and were built on the true foundation, would have gained faster than this. He here became very much excited and boastful, the most so of anyone that I ever saw in debate, and told the audience what an able man he was. He could meet Elder Wight or any other man; said that he could beat the Pope of Rome. It was the most boastful speech that I ever heard from a public man, and Elder Walker lost with those present.

Time being called, Elder Wight said that he was compelled to do that which was painful to him, because it would humiliate Elder Walker, and then referred to Eider Walker's boasting about the numerical strength of the two churches, and then read from Matt. 7: 13, 14, which is a description of the straight and "narrow way," and Jesus says that few shall find it, while the "broad way leads to death and many walk therein." I have not given the exact words, but the substance of it. All can turn and read it for themselves. Elder Wight said that he had entered into this debate to get the truth, wanted all the truth that he could get, and bore personal testimony about the signs following the believer in the gospel. Said that he had seen the blind healed, and knew that the signs of Mark 16: 14-18 did follow now.

Elder Wight referred to the statement made by Elder Walker that the apostles never failed in their ministering to the sick, and then read Philippians 2: 25-27; 2 Corinthians 12: 7-10. He also referred to Paul's advice to Timothy to take a little wine for his stomach's sake, and often infirmities, and thought that a good many men now had weak stomachs. Said all these proved that the Apostles sometimes failed; that they did not always heal.

Elder Wight read Ephesians 5: 26, 27 to show that when Christ comes to receive his bride the church, that it is to be perfect, without spot or blemish; that to remove one of the things, ordinances, or officers, which Christ put there, would be to mar it; hence the need of everything being in the church that Christ put there that it might be perfect when he came. Elder Wight referred to Elder Walker's statement that all in the church were kings and priests, read Revelation 5: 1-10, and showed that it was those in heaven who sung that song; that they were the kings and priests, and were yet to reign upon the earth. This was to be during the thousand years' reign.

Taking it all together the last session was a lively and eventful one. The church was packed full, and Elder Wight is gaining favor for the church, and making many warm friends. He is carrying the congregation with him. I never have seen so much of the Spirit of God manifested in any debate that I have ever attended as in this, and it seems now that much good will result from it.

Elder Wight attended services at the Methodist Church Sunday forenoon, and preached at Magnolia in the evening. By the kindness of Elder Walker the writer occupied the pulpit of the Christian Church morning and evening February 3, and had a full house at night.

February 5. Elder Walker in his speech last night still contended that his church did not have a creed. This creed business seems to worry him, from the fact that Elder Wight has shown that a declaration of belief is a creed. And that to have a book of discipline is to have a creed. Read from "Christian System." by A. Campbell, page 91, to prove that the Disciple Church had a discipline. Elder Walker again last night read from Doctrine and Covenants, section 20, and tried to show by perverting the same, by leaving out the following, "Wherefore, although a man should be baptized an hundred times, it availeth him nothing." He left out this, after reading the first four lines, and then began: "For it is because of your dead work that I have caused this last covenant and church to be built up unto me even as in the days of old." He argued from this that we believed that both the Old and New Testament had been done away, and that the Book of Covenants took their place. In answer to this Elder Wight read all of the section and showed where Elder Walker had perverted it by not reading all, and charged Elder Walker of doing it to work upon the prejudice of the people that exists against us. This perversion of the book placed Elder Walker in bad light before the public, and he felt it, too.

Elder Walker spent much time last night dealing with the old covenant and different dispensations of the Old Testament scriptures. He has been contending for things that have no bearing at all upon the questions at issue.

Elder Walker said that the gospel covenant was based upon one promise, love, but that Jesus gave many minor promises; said that the law was added to the promise, but failed to say what that promise was. Said that God made a transfer of power from Moses to Christ at the transfiguration.

Elder Walker has tried to gain favor with the people by bringing in the Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants and ridiculing them, but has lost by his unfair methods. He has also lost by his attacks upon other churches, which at times have been very bitter.

Elder Wight's deportment has been that of a gentleman, and has shown much of the spirit of forbearance with Elder Walker.

The church last night was packed full, and interest intense. Elder Walker several times during the debate has made a bitter attack upon the sectarian churches, and has said many things that were uncalled for and not bearing at all upon the question being discussed, and by doing this has lost favor with the people. Elder Wight in one of his speeches referred to this onslaught, and defended the reformers in their work. Said he thought that they enjoyed the Spirit of God as they lived for it. This gave Elder Wight prestige with the people, and Elder Walker was not slow to see it. So in one of his speeches last night he changed squarely about and praised them as being men of God, and thanked God for their work. But he had lost, and could not gain the sympathy of the people. Elder Walker has complained about Elder Wight's quoting so much scripture, and then making an argument therefrom. Said that he. Walker, could quote scripture by the yard. If this statement is true, I wonder why he has not quoted more, for he has not quoted a yard of it in all this debate. But he has made many yards of assertions, and if thev had counted for anything, he surely would have won the debate.

Elder Walker has fought hard against revelation and priesthood. These have been a source of trouble to him all through this discussion, and has used commentaries to some extent to prove that the gifts were no longer needed in the church. Said the gifts were like the scaffolding of a building. Needed to build, but when the house was completed there was no more use for the scaffolding. Elder Wight showed the mistake of such an argument as this, as the gifts were inside of the building, and not on the outside - said they were the finishing touches on the inside. This was a new thought to Elder Walker and he could not meet it from a Bible standpoint, so read what Henry Ward Beecher had to say about it. This showed the weakness of his position and that Beecher was in a leaky boat as well

Elder Walker, in referring to the baptism of the Holy Spirit upon Pentecost said that Peter did not have it, but it (the Spirit) had him. Said that Peter did not promise the baptism of the Spirit, but the gift of the Spirit. Said that wisdom was not a gift of the Spirit; God gave wisdom, not the Spirit.

Elder Wight in his last speech again referred to the operation of law. Said that we exist by reason of its operation. Said that it is everywhere present in nature; then illustrated his meaning by referring to the law of assimilation by which we are physically maintained. He also noted that there were two contending laws; the one giving physical life, the other sowing the seeds of death. So it is in the Christ-life. The gospel gives life, the opposing law brings death. Law needs to be executed, hence the necessity of organization, the existence of officers to execute the law. Said that we could not remove one of the officers. Said apostles were to execute the law; seventies also given to execute the law. (Matt. 10; Luke 10:1; 1 Cor. 12:27, 28; Eph. 4:8-14.) Elder Wight said that if all these were needful then, that they must be now; that God set them in the church, and that what God doeth he doeth it forever. (Eccl. 3:12-14.) Said that Christ was to have a perfect church when he comes.

Elder Wight, in referring to a statement of Elder Walker's, that Christ and Joseph Smith were the founders of the Reorganized Church, thanked him (Elder Walker) for the statement and thought that he had him about half converted now, and that there was some hope for him yet. Elder Wight dwelt at some length upon the judgment in his last speech, and referred to several passages of scripture in making his argument. (Matt. 12 and 11 chap.; Rev. 20; Matt. 16: 16-18.) Said it would be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in day of judgment than for those wicked Pharisees and Saducees. Elder Wight also referred to 1 Cor. 15th chapter. where Paul describes the sun, moon, and stars as representing the different rewards that shall be given to men when Christ comes to judge the world.

Elder Wight plead earnestly for the gospel plan, and has made many friends to our faith, Many gave us a warm shake of the hand at the close of the debate, and wished us success in our work. We have secured the use of the courthouse and are to hold meetings over Sunday. Elder Wight tonight to show the difference between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Mormon Church.

I have only presented the general outlines of the debate. Our chairman, Elder Bronson, a retired Methodist preacher, has presided with dignity, and has treated us with courtesy. Has invited us to visit him, and said that he recognized inspiration in our work, and will attend further meetings as he can. Take it all in all, a complete victory has been won for the truth and we are satisfied with the result. Will write the result of our meeting at the courthouse when we close.

Yours for truth and right.

E. A. STEDMAN.

APPLEDORE, Ont., Feb. 1.

Editors Herald:—Feeling interested in Zion's cause I again write. I am a member of the Lindsley branch, of the Chatham district. Our numbers are few, but we try to keep alive, through clouds as well as sunshine. Our branch president, Bro. Moroni Traxler, is a faithful worker. May the Lord bless him in years to come.

Elders A. E. Mortimer, J. H. Tyrrell, D. Snoblen, and B. St. John, administered to Elder Geo. F. Green, who is very low. The Spirit of the Lord was present during the administration, but ere this reaches you his spirit may take its flight and return to God who gave it. Saints, remember us in your prayers in this our hour of need.

Elders St. John and Snoblen gave two interesting sermons on these subjects, "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven," and, "The meek shall inherit the earth," which still remain in the thoughts of their hearers. We learn that Elder T. A. Phillips is doing a good work at Wallaceburg. The Saints feel cheered and comforted by his wise counsel.

Elder George Green, district president, visited the Ridgetown and Cooperville branches recently, and found them trying to do their duty and keep God's commands. Has an appointment at Cedar Springs for next Sabbath. The Chatham district superintendents will meet today in the Maple City to transact business for the furtherance of the Sabbath school work.

Pray for us that we may hold out faithful to the end. Your sister, MARY M. GREEN.

AKRON, Ohio, Jan. 28.

Editors Herald:-At home Monday afternoon. We are having quite smooth sailing now, and we hope it will continue. We have preaching out in the country about three miles from here, towards Barberton, and the people there are greatly interested, and we think the time will come when we can gather quite a few into our little fold. We also have a hall on Market street; have it Sunday, and have Sunday school and prayer meeting in the afternoon, and preaching in the evening. Bro. McConnaughy has charge of the services on the hill at the schoolhouse, and papa preaches at the hall. Our Sunday school is prospering greatly, and we all are very much interested in it. I am twelve years old; was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by Elder G. T. Griffiths, at Krumroy. Bro. Baldwin and Bro. Ebeling were here on their way to Green Spring, about two weeks ago, and we had preaching at the schoolhouse and in the hall also. We have two late members, Bro. and Sr. Rhodes and we expect quite a few more yet.

[The above was unsigned. We should be pleased to know the young writer's name.— ED.]

MONTEVALLO, Mo., Feb. 5.

Dear Herald:-Since last writing I have made quite a successful opening in this part of the country. But little preaching has ever been done around here, and there is but little or no prejudice. I am making my home with Mr. Collins. His wife is the only member here, and he is a good friend of the church, doing a good work for it. He obtained the M. E. church for me. I began meetings January 25, and ever since then I have had a first class time. Mr. Harrold, chorister of the M. E. church, has stood by me (he looks something like me), and we are called "Moody and Sanky." The people came from far and near to hear me. The M. E. minister has assisted me some, and at other times I have called on others to open with prayer. The people are drawn to us so that a good feeling is manifested. I have preached every night since I have been here except one. We have made many friends to the church and also ourselves. Many tell me that they are glad that I have come, that they have heard so many things that they know is truth, but they little thought to hear such from a Latter Day Saint minister. Some are almost persuaded and have told me that they believe that they will unite with us next summer when the water is not so cold. I have many invitations to come and preach, at different places, and a number of elders could occupy around here very profitably. I have now six places where I am needed and requested to come, but I can only be in one place at a time, and where I fail to come it is not because I don't wish to, but because I cannot.

I close my meetings here tomorrow night. Next day evening I begin a series of meetings at Sand Stone schoolhouse, another new place about six miles from here, where I shall continue till over Sunday, then to Virgil City.

Yours in bonds,

F. C. WARNKY.

COMINS, Mich., Feb. 2.

Editors Herald:—The HERALD is a welcome visitor at our home.

About seven years ago we came to Oscoda county, and found an elder of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ here preaching. Supposing him to be a Utah Mormon, we did go to the meetings for some time, till by chance I stepped into one of the neighbor's when they were having prayer meeting. When the elders rose to speak he spoke of the principles of the gospel, and I sat as one amazed, for it was as I had always believed, although I had never heard it preached in that way.

After about four months of study of the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Bible, I joined the church of Latter Day Saints. Trials and troubles came to us, and being left as sheep without a shepherd many of them straved from the fold of God. But a few still clung to the rod of iron that leads to life everlasting. My wife and I went before God in fasting and prayer to know his will in regard to our movements, and we were spoken to in prophecy, and told to remain where we were, that our worst enemies would become our best friends and God would vet raise up a people here that would be an honor to his name. We waited three long years to see this verified.

We organized a Sunday school and had prayer meetings. Although we were greatly scattered we managed to meet every Sunday with good attendance.

A year ago last summer, a family by the name of Hogle moved in our neighborhood, and in the fall as we were surveying land we found some iron marks near the section corner, when Mr. Hogle stated that it was a "surveyors mark as sure as there is a God in heaven." I asked him if he believed there was a God in heaven. He said he did, and wanted to know if I did not, and I told him no.

My answer caused him to wonder. He was living on the place of a man who was known as the "Mormon eater," and they had many talks about it. He said if I didn't believe God was in heaven he would like to know where he was. His friend told him we took a verse here and there through the Bible and he did not know where we located him

In the spring he came to work for me, and said he had wondered about the remark I made and wanted to know where I believed God was. I told him that Jesus said that if we obeyed the will of the Father we should know of the doctrine, whether it was of God or whether Jesus spoke of himself; that I had obeyed the commandments, and I knew he was in heaven.

Mr. Hogle and family came to Sunday school all summer, and on the twelfth day of January we took them in a sleigh twenty-four miles to Hillman, where, on the thirteenth, they were buried in baptism by Bro. James Orton. There are three or four more near the kingdom, and if some of the elders could come here they would soon follow Bro. and Sr. William Hogle. As we stood on the ice at the edge of the water we thought they were valiant hearted ones who are not afraid to die. Always hoping for the welfare of Zion, Your brother in Christ,

GEO. W. BURT.

WETUMKA, Indian Territory, Jan. 30. Editors Herald:—As I have seen nothing from this part for quite a while, I write. I came here two weeks ago, and have been preaching in the schoolhouse to small audiences. I presume as one reason for there not being many out, is that there is quite an amount of sickness here; and another reason, I think, is that Bro. W. H. Smart gave them quite an amount of gospel food when he was here in the fall that some of the Christian people could not digest. But that is alright, Bro. Henry, they want you to come again.

I expect to stay in this part of the country until the first of March, and do what I can for the Master. There are only two families of Saints in this country, but their lives are such that the people have full confidence in them. If all could live that way it would be much better for the work. And if there is anything that does a Latter Day Saint good it is to see this work prosper, and to that end we should all work and pray.

Have done most of my labor in Oklahoma, among scattered Saints and strangers, but came here in time for the Indian scare. From the town and newspaper reports one might think it was not safe anywhere; but in the country here little is thought of it. While the soldiers have been called out to quell them. I hope it will amount to but little. Any Saints in Custer, Washita, and Roger Mills counties, Oklahoma, wanting preaching, please address me at Korn, Oklahoma, and I will respond as quickly as possible. Your colaborer,

W. R. SMITH.

A strong appeal to the imagination is made by an article in the World's Work for January, on "Great Tasks of the New Century," which deals with the most important canal and railway undertakings in America, Europe, Asia, and Africa now projected or in sourse of execution.

Original Poetry.

MESSAGE OF THE WIRES.

SUGGESTED BY THE HUMMING OF THE WIRES.

Tell me, ye wires that quiver and ring,
What is the news you bear?
Do you bring a message of peace and love,
To lift the human soul above,
Or a message of want and care?

Sometimes you bear the dreadful news
That make us "kiss the Rod;
Sometimes of wars in distant climes,
Or tell the tale of direst crimes,
That kindle the wrath of God.

Here is a message for you, ye wires, With lightning speed to bear; How an angel came to earth again; With gospel truth to sons of men To save from sin's despair.

Then bear this news, ye quivering wires,
Swifter than wings of light;
Tell it to all, the wide world 'round,
Wherever a human soul is found
Enwrapped in error's night.
J. H. HOPKINS.

PRINCEVILLE, Illinois.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Then to side with truth is noble, when we share her wretched crust,

Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 'tis prosperous to be just,

Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward steps aside,

Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified.

-Lowell.

HAVE WE DONE OUR PART?

The Home Column seems to be the place where sisters find comfort and cheer from the pens of each other. We are glad there is a Home Column, and we want to do our part in sustaining it; but do not wish to crowd out others. We will do all that circumstances will admit, then leave the arrangement to those holding the authority. The signs of the times show plainly that what is done must be done promptly, must be done understandingly. The sons and daughters of Zion must be up and doing-no time for sleeping soldiers. Many honest hearts are crying out for gospel truths. Many turn away in disgust from the teaching and practice of the popular religionist, and with longing hearts sigh for that which will satisfy. Now what is it that will satisfy the soul, if it is not the gospel in its fullness? There is nothing. "How can they hear except they have a preacher, and how can they preach except they are sent?" We as a people believe that God calls his servants as of old. So far so good; but if no human effort is made to support those chosen ones, how can the work advance? They must eat and drink, and be clothed; so must each member of their family. And on whom does this work rest? On the members of the church. to be sure. Wisdom and economy should be observed by both parties; if so, the work can be carried on by the plan that was delivered to the children of men, and thereby many souls will be prepared to meet Christ at his coming.

Now if only one half of the members give what God rightfully demands of them, how can the work progress? And if those who give have limited means, their portion will be limited, but their blessing will not. Where then is the means to bring the work up equally with the demands of the times? And how will it be with those who have not done their part in this great work? Found wanting, we fear.

Many of the brethren have been sent out from home to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, and only those who have no home, or those who are denied the privilege of home blessings, can appreciate its worth. They have many disappointments, trials, and temptations to encounter; and on the other hand they have great church privileges, great opportunities to receive spiritual blessings, and if true to their calling, will have a great reward. God bless them all.

Yes; and God bless the dear sisters-the elders' wives. They who stay at home and "stand by the stuff," need the prayers of the Saints, and merit the blessing of God as much as do the elders. They have the care of the household, with its thousand and one duties all devolving on them. Now, how about their opportunities for spiritual development, to say nothing about the pastime and rest. Such sisters know that it is good to worship a being that is everywhere present by his Spirit, and they know that it is bad to have the mind so filled with the cares of life that there is but little room for the Spirit to enter. Our heart goes out in sympathy for them, and also for the dear sisters who entertain us at conference. May they be strengthened.

"Tis good, 'tis great to meet with the Saints of God, and it will be glorious to meet on the glorified earth. Dear sisters, we shall be remembered there if faithful here, and the more self-denial we are called upon to use, the greater will be our joy. 'Tis good to be a Saint in latter days.

SR. ALMIRA.

AN INQUIRY.

Say, is thy lamp burning, my brother?
I pray thee look quickly and see,
For if it were burning, then surely
Some rays would fall bright upon me!

Straight—straight in the road, yet I falter, From the Shepherd I oft go astray; I am weary and faint and disheartened— "Discouraged because of the way."

But if only thy lamp had burned brightly,
And showed forth what Christ was to thee,
I, too, might have seen his salvation,
And felt it was also for me.

There are many and many around thee,

Needing sorely thy light's cheering glow;
If thou knew that they walked in the shadow,
Thy lamp would burn brighter, I know.

I think were it trimmed night and morning,
It would never grow dim or go out,
'Midst the fierce raging storms of temptation.

And the terrible tempest of doubt.

O, if all the lamps that are lighted Would steadily burn in a line, Wide over the land and the ocean, What a girdle of glory would shine.

How all the dark places would brighten!

How the mists would roll up and away!

How earth would laugh out in her gladness,

And hail the millennial day!

'Tis Christ, Christ alone, in whose power Thy lamp may again brightly shine, For he is the life of his children, And he, if thou wilt, may be thine.

-ANONYMOUS.

TEACH YOUR DAUGHTERS.

Give your daughters a thorough education. Teach them to wash, to iron, to darn stockings, and to sew dresses. Teach them to make bread, and that a good kitchen lessens the doctor's account. Teach them that he only lays up money whose expenses are less than his income, and that all grow poor who have to spend more than they receive. Teach them that a calico dress paid for fits better than a silk one until paid for. Teach them that a full, healthy face displays a greater luster than fifty cosmetic beauties. Teach them to purchase, and to see that the accounts correspond with the purchase. Teach them good common sense, self-help, and industry. Teach them that an honest mechanic in his working dress is a better object of esteem than a dozen haughty, finely dressed idlers. Teach them gardening and the pleasures of Teach them, if you can afford it, nature. music, painting, etc., but to consider them as secondary objects only. Teach them that the happiness of matrimony depends neither on external appearances, nor wealth, but on the man's character.-Toledo Blade.

MR. GLADSTONE liked plain and faithful preaching. On one occasion he said: "One thing I have against clergy, both of the country and in the towns. I think they are not severe enough on their congregations. They do not sufficiently lay upon the souls and consciences of their hearers their moral obligations, and probe their hearts and bring up their whole lives and actions to the bar of conscience. The class of sermons which I think are most needed are the class which offended Lord Melbourne long ago. Lord Melbourne was one day seen coming from church in the country in a mighty fume. Finding a friend he exclaimed: 'It is too bad. I have always been a supporter of the church, and I have always upheld the clergy. But it is really too bad to have to listen to a sermon like that we have heard this morning. Why, the preacher actually insisted upon applying religion to a man's private life!' But that is the kind of preaching which I like best, the kind of preaching which most men need; but it is also the kind of which they get the least."

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Ewing, of Smithland, wished her name presented to Prayer Union for prayerful remembrance, that she may be healed of her affliction.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

THE following upon the lesson for February 10, "The rich man and Lazarus," is taken from the Sunday School Superintendent, a supplement to the Berean Leaf Cluster, fourth quarter, 1900. We give it in full, and without comment. We cannot say that it is the best digest of this lesson that we have seen, but it is the only one sufficiently brief for our space. It will, we think, average very well with the work found on the International lessons. Study it carefully, for it is very probable that the question of the value of the helps found in the International Sunday school work will come up for consideration at the general convention.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

Read Luke 16: 19 to 17: 10.

Golden Text.—Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.—Matt. 6: 20.

LESSON SUMMARY.

Time.—Jan. A. D. 30. Same as last lesson. Place.—Perea, beyond Jordan.

In this parable Jesus shows us a picture of a thoroughly selfish and worldly life spent amidst luxurious surroundings, and contrasts with it a life of misfortune and poverty, conditions as apparent now as then.

The important thing however, is the outcome of these two lives, the contrasts in another life. No one but Christ could lift this veil and disclose the future and so seldom has he done it that we study with deep interest what he reveals.

The Jews used three phrases to indicate the heavenly state: "the throne of glory," "Paradise or Eden," and "the Bosom of Abraham," of which the last was the most popular. The fancy that lay behind it was that of a great feast in which "the father of the faithful was host." Jesus gives reality to this and vividly pictures another world.

- 2. It is a life where feeling and memory are still active. The rich man was conscious of his great distress. He was bidden to remember his earthly advantages.
- 3. It is a life where there are two conditions, one of blessedness, the other of misery. Between the two is an impassable chasm "that none may cross."
- 4. It is a life determined by this present life. "Death does not alter character, character makes destiny, and destiny once determined is unalterable and eternal."
- 5. It is a life about which sufficient light has been given to guide men in the attainment of blessedness. If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded if one rise from the dead.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Lesson Picture. The beggar, Lararus, lying at the rich man's door, with the dogs licking his sores. Inside the house the people are sitting about the table enjoying their luxuries. A servant comes towards the poor man, but puts no crumbs in his outstretched hand.

Trusting in riches. Two gentlemen were passing a fine estate when one asked, "What is the value of that estate?" "I only know what it cost its late possessor." How much?" "His soul. He used to be a Christian, but became absorbed in money-making and the pleasures of life, and forgot the life beyond. When dying he said: 'My prosperity has been my ruin.'"

HELPS FOR PRIMARY TEACHERS.

Central Thought. Sharing our blessings with others.

There were two little boys once who were the same age: they were strong, bright little fellows. One had beautiful clothes, fine toys, plenty of food, and he was tenderly cared for. As he sat in the carriage waiting for his mamma to make a call, he saw the other little boy. This other one was ragged, dirty, uncared for. One was rich the other poor. What did the rich little boy do for the poor one? What would you have done? I hope you would not have spoken unkindly, but would have pitied the little fellow. The rich boy of whom I have just told you did pity him and gave him a rosy apple. Afterwards he helped him still more. It is most pleasing to God when we are kind to the poor. The Bible says a great deal about helping the poor. It says: "He that hath pity on the poor lendeth unto the Lord," and again "Blessed is he that considereth for, thinks about the poor, the Lord will deliver him in the day of evil."

Write the word treasure upon the blackboard, and explain that it means money or anything we can use to make ourselves or others happy. Write on the blackboard the following.

TREASURE.

Keep for myself Share with others WHICH?

Then call for the Golden Text and explain that what we do for others is treasure laid up in heaven.

In our picture for today, there is a rich man and a poor man. Some one may point out the poor man, another child the rich one. We do not know the rich man's name. We know he had a fine house, servants to wait on him, plenty of food. The poor man was named Lazarus, he was sick and covered with sores. You see the dogs licking his sores. They are waiting with him for some of the food which will be thrown away from the rich man's table. "Poor man!" you say, "I would have helped him," and I hope you would have done so. Jesus told this story and there is more to it, a picture which we cannot make. Both these men died. The poor man went where he was happy and well cared for; he became rich with heaven's riches. But the rich man, who had laid up his treasure in heaven found pain and sorrow. He would gladly have begged of Lazarus, but he could not. They were very far apart, they would never be near together again. "Where your treasure is there will your heart be also."

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

Ask each child to hold out his hand. You do this when you want something. If you ask for bread or fruit, you very likely hold out your hand. In our picture for today you see a man holding out his hand. He is asking for food. He is very poor and sick. There is a rich man in the house. You can see him. He does not think of the poor man or try to help him. Our heavenly Father was not pleased at that and he sent the rich man away to sorrow, but he gave joy to the poor man. Let us learn this little verse: "Be ye kind, one to another."

LESSON HYMNS.

Epworth Hymnal.

O scatter seeds of loving deeds. No. 226. Come, ye disconsolate. No. 194. Look up to Jesus. No. 193 in No. 2. Kind words can never die. No. 217 in No. 2.

WE read with great pleasure a "pastoral" in HERALD of January 30, signed by Brn. James Caffall and J. W. Waldsmith, in which they advise that a brother "as soon as practical, devote his labors at Brownville, Nebraska, in preaching the gospel, making a special effort togive an impetus to Sabbath school work. We incline to the opinion that by well directed labor a flourishing Sabbath school may be raised. We therefore advise that Bro. Self arrange to do ministerial work in addition to Sabbath school work in Brownville for several months, so arranging his work as to spend the Sabbath in Brownville. . . The forming of a nucleus is most essential for the building up of the church. Hence spasmodic effort and then a cessation is injurious. We trust there may be a readiness, with the few members in Brownville, to coöperate with Bro. Self in his labors." We are pleased with the above thoughts, for several reasons, three in particular.

First, because the brethren have plainly indicated their confidence in the efficacy of the Sabbath school work, and also a deep-seated love therefor. They have done more for the hungry man than to say "be ye filled." They have provided the means to secure food for him. A wish or a prayer for the success of the work is good, but a substantial effort to help it along is much better.

Second, they place value upon the concentrated and protracted rather than the spasmodic effort. They see more permanent good coming from one effort well followed up than from many efforts scattered here and there and necessarily afterward neglected. What if the farmer kept plowing up new ground the whole season through, not stopping to plant or till any that he had plowed. He would as a matter of course, get no crop, and the ground would return to its original condition; or, worse still, to thorns and weeds. Yes, one effort well followed up will produce more permanent and good results than many neglected efforts.

Third, "the forming of a nucleus is most essential" in all kinds of work if we expect any great degree of success. Too many of the failures of our times are traceable directly to the fact that too great a start was made. Many who have thus failed might have succeeded in the same line of work had they begun on a smaller scale, with a nucleus.

A nucleus has a drawing power. We have seen a good branch of the church as the outgrowth of a small nucleus, a single member. We now have in mind several instances where large and flourishing branches have been the outgrowth of a small nucleus, a Sabbath school in the home of a brother or sister. And we have no doubt that the brethren of the "pastoral" have seen and rejoiced in the same. May God add to their days of usefulness, and bless them in their "declining years" and make these years to them a comfort and a pleasure. And may we all learn to "labor together for Christ."

NORTHWEST KANSAS.

Convention met at Blue Rapids, February I. Called to order by John Soderstadt. A. Kent was chosen chairman pro tem., and John Soderstadt secretary pro tem. District officers reporting: Ella Sanders, secretary, and Emma Snow, treasurer. Local officers: Ida Hodson, superintendent of Greenleaf. Treasurer's report accepted as read. Schools reporting: Blue Rapids, Greenleaf, Gaylord, Idylwild. Officers for ensuing year: John Soderstadt, superintendent, Marion Thompson, assistant; Harvey Sandy, secretary; Emma Snow, treasurer; Stella Hart, librarian. Delegates to General Convention: John Soderstadt, William and Ella Sazders, Alma Kent, J. H. Scott, Harvey Sandy. Adjourned to call of district superindent.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Central district convention will meet during conference held at San Jose. There will be election of officers. All schools send delegates, and be careful concerning their credentials. Send to 54 Colfax street.

ERIE CARMICHAEL, Sec. No date given in this notice.—ED.

Owing to slim attendance and lack of representation at the convention appointed to meet with Pleasant View school, it was postponed to convene on Friday before district conference, at Webb City, Missouri, which time will be March 1, at 9:30 Election of officers and delegates to General Convention, beside usual routine business and institute work.

E E GILBERT, Sec.

Sunday school convention will meet at Independence, Missouri, March 8. at two p. m.
EVA M. BAILEY, Supt.

Conference Minutes.

FLORIDA.

Conference convened with Pleasant View branch, February 2. Pres. W. J. Booker presiding. S. D. Allen clerk. Elders reporting: T. C. Kelley, W. J. Booker, and S. D. Allen; Priests C. Dixon and J. P. Calhoun. Open Head branch reported no change. No other branches reported; bad weather and a lack of proper blanks being the excuse with some. Bishop's agent's audited report: On hand last report, $10 51; received since, $40; paid out $18; on hand, $32.51. Elder W. J. Booker was elected district president; S. D. Allen vice president and secretary. General Conference delegates: T. C. Kelley, L. F. West, S. D. Allen, and Jennie Allen; those present to cast full vote of delegation. Preaching by

The Saints' Herald.

( Established 1860 )

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price. $1 50 per year.
Address communications for publication to 'Editors Herald.'

"Editors Herald."

Marriage, birth. and death notices: Marriages, $1 00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business manager.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E., Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at nost office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-

Box E. Lamoni. Decadur County, 10wn.
Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as secondclass mail matter.
Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

T. C. Kelley and S. D. Allen. Adjourned to meet at Calhoun branch on Saturday, May 4. This was one of the best conferences ever held in the district; the Saints were built up and made to rejoice. The preaching by Bro. T. C. Kelley was exceptionally good.

NORTHWEST KANSAS

Conference convened at Blue Rapids, February 3. District president, Alma Kent, in the chair; John Soderstadt secretary pro-tem. Branches reporting: Idylwiid, Blue Rapids, Rural Dale, Homestead, and Green-Rapids, Rural Date, Homestead, and Greenleaf. Ministerial reports: High Priest, A. H. Parsons; Seventy, M. T. Short, J. A. Davis; Elders, A. Kent, J. S. Goble, V. F. Rogers, William Landers, M. Smith, T. E. Tompson; Priests, L. G. Gurwell, William Scott, T. H. Barrett, W. S. Hodson, F. S. Ward, N. Lund; Teacher A. C. Ingle. District treasurer reported. Resolved that the presidents of branches see to it and that the presidents of branches see to it and urge the members to pay their district dues, so this branch of the work may be sustained, Resolved that the presidents of branches shall call a business meeting at least two weeks before district conference shall convene, and forward reports to district secretary. Resolved that hereafter those who are and those who shall be ordained in this dis-Resolved that hereafter those who are trict that shall fail to report for the space of one year without any just cause, shall be considered under censure; and unless proper confession is had, their licenses shall be called in till such times as they are willing to recognize that law and order require them to make reports to conference. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $51 10; received since $77 87; paid out $96 10; balance on hand $32 87 Delegates to General Conference: William and Ella Landers, J. H. Scott, John Soderstadt, Clem Christoph, Mary Smith, E. Sandy, Annie Kent, A. Z. Smith, A. H. Parsons, A. Kent. Preaching by M. T. Short and A. H. Parsons. Adjourned to Home-stead branch at Bizine, Saturday, May 4.

Miscellaneous Department.

HIGH PRIESTS' QUORUM.

A blank report form has been sent to each member of the quorum, and, by rule of the quorum, it is expected that these will be filled out and returned to the secretary as soon after the first of March as may be prac-ticable. Therefore, please do not wait till the latter part of March or the first of April before you report. If any high priest fails to receive the blank, then another will be sent him upon notification of its non-arrival. A few addresses have been changed, as follows: G S Lincoln to 28 Glen Park avenue, San Francisco, California. W. H P ast to 930 Sandusky avenue, Kansas City, Kansas M. H. Cook to 1015 East B street, Des Moines, Iowa. Robert Winning, Worcester, Massachusetts, care Shredded Wheat Company. R. Archibald has returned to St Louis, but have not yet learned his street address. Also Thomas Taylor's address should be care E Roberts, 68 Bristol road, Bournbrook, Birmingham, England. The former address was that of another Bro Thomas Taylor. Joseph Squire's address is 227 McDougal, not McDonald street. Of those not yet ordained V M. Goodrich has changed to Station B., North Columbus, Ohio, and J B Roush to 2942 California street. 2942 California street, Denver, Colorado.

R spectfully yours, H. A. STEBBINS Secretary of Quorum.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The past orders for the third volume of Church History are being filled as rapidly as possible, and when these are completed the book will be advertised for sale. Persons willing to wait may forward their orders.

JOHN SMITH, Mgr.

SECOND QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

Brethren, permit us to call your attention to the necessity of reporting to the undersigned by March 10. Send a complete report of labor done by you during the present conference year, to the secretary at Radcliff, Ohio. Try and have your reports reach us not later than March 10.

H. E. MOLER, Sec.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of Spring River district will convene at Webb City, Missouri, March 1, at at seven p. m. Statistical reports should reach district secretary as early as possible before conference, that they may be compared with former reports and records. Send to lock box 216, Galena, Kansas. Delegates to General Conference to be elected.

T S. HAYTON, Sec.

CHANGE OF DATE.

For the better convenience of all, the conference of Central district of California, to convene at San Jose, will meet March 1. This change, one week earlier, is made to secure the presence of A. H Smith, J. F. Burton, G. H. Hilliard, and E. A. Blakeslee, if consistent with demands elsewhere. They and the branches are notified This notice for isolated ones.

J. M. PUTNEY, Pres.

Conference of Kirtland district will be held in Cleveland, February 23 and 24, at 199 Superior street. All desiring to attend will greatly assist the committee by informing them of their desire. Address communications to C R Ollom, 671 Lorain Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Conference of Little Sioux district will convene at Magnolia, Iowa, March 2 and 3 Sunday school and Religio convention will meet at same place. Thursday evening, February 28, at 7:30. Secretaries, be prompt in sending your reports to district secretary.

LENNA STRAND, Sec.

LOOK OUT FOR HIM.

One, N. A. Nelson, claims to be a member of the Kewanee branch, is going the rounds, begging for money to help him west. Three or four years ago he was at Kewanee; they helped him off He claims he lost all he had in clothes and $40 in money in a fire in a hotel in Salt Lake. But since the fire of the Kewanee hotel, a few weeks ago, his story is he jumped from the third story of that building, and lost all he had. By letter from Brn. Giesch and McKiernan he is in Burlington plying his craft. He is a FRAUD He does not belong to the Kewanee oranch. Look out for him. J. S. ROTH.

RELIGIO NOTICES.

Zion's Religio-Literay Society will convene at Independence, Missouri, March 7, at 7:30 pm., and also hold session next morning at 9:30.

A. WHITE, Pres.

THE PARLOR A PLACE OF WELCOME.

Every room in the house has a certain ethical value. For example, as the parlor is the room in which you entertain your guests, it should first of all express a warmth of hos pitality. This welcome should be expressed in draperies, color effects, sunny windowseats, flowers, pictures, books, and all things that lend home atmosphere to the apartment.

Then there is an element of utility that must enter into a parlor. If you have elegant furniture that is too good to use, your guests will sit on the edge of your pink satin chairs and wish themselves well out of it. The drawing-room of the English house contains all that is best in the house. It is library and music-room combined, and it is also the sitting-room. Our parlor is approaching more nearly to the idea of the English drawing-room, for it no longer is too good to be used.—"The Esthetics of the Modern Parlor" in February Woman's Home Companion.

The Annals of Iowa, a most interesting publication, especially so to Iowa citizens, is an exchange which we are always glad to welcome to our desk. The January number has lately arrived, and is freighted with its usual amount of good things in the historial line. This number closes the fourth volume of the third series. The Annals is a quarterly publication, published by the historical department of the state of Iowa, and should be found on the reading tables of every one in-terested in the historical development of Iowa. The subscription price is $1.00 per year.

DIED.

JONES.—Mary Jones, born February 6, 1835; died at her home at Caseyville, Illinois, January 25, 1901, aged 65 years, 11 months, and 19 days. She united with the church in 1875, and was faithful to the last. Was loved by all who knew her. She leaves husband, four daughters, two sons, and a large number of relatives to mourn their loss. Funeral service in the Methodist church, by Elder Arthur Allen. A very large attendance at the funeral showed the departed sister was greatly esteemed.

LOOMIS -Jerome B. Loomis was born April 3, 1819, at Brighton. Monroe county, New York; died Jaouary 27, 1901, aged 81 years, 8 months, and 24 days. He leaves an aged wife, eight children, forty-eight grandchildren, fourteen great-grandchildren, and one brother. He united with the church in 1865, remaining faithful until death. Funeral services were conducted by Elder W. A. McDowell, at the Saints' church. The remains were taken to North Freedom, Wisconsin, for burial.

MULLER -Jenevive E, infant child of T. C. and Stella Muller, departed this life February 1, 1901. The little daughter remained in this life only 20 days, when the parents were bereft of their only child. Its spirit was called back to the One who gave it, and the little body was laid away in the Crescent cometery to await the resurrection morn. Funeral services at the home in Hazel Dell township, by Elder D. R. Chambers. WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS. Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162.781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All etters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

STOCK HOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eila D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

UWANTO STOP

Using tobacco. Quit-to-bac makes it easy to do so. Three box-s postpaid, only $150 with positive guarantee to cure or the $150 cheerfully refunded! It cures others, why not you.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, Ill. (U.S. Postage stamps taken) 47-42

	P. 1
94. 95. 96.	RINE AND COVENANTS. Cloth Morocco grain russia Imitation morocco, gilt edges, Morocco, gilt edges, flexible	7	65 00 25 00
יים בובויים	WO RECORDS. The Book
TITIL	of Mormon and the New Testament Inspired Transla-tament. Inspired Translation; large type, in one volume.
98	Leather back and covers	2	00
99.	Seal grain russia	2	50 -
100.	Imitation morocco, gilt edges,	3	50
101.	Morocco, gilt edges	4	00
	CS' HARP—HYMN BOOK. Words only.		1
102.	Cloth		75
103.	Cloth Morocco grain russia	1	00
104.	Imitation morocco, gilt edges,	1	25
105.	TS' HARMONY. Music and words combined. Leather backs, cloth sides Gilt edges	1 2	50 00
SAIN	rs' HYMNAL. Words and
	music.
108.	Paper covers, each		30
. /	Per dozen	3	20
110.	Cloth, limp	_	35
	Per dozen	3	75
	Cloth and leather	-1	50
	Full leather	1	00
113.	Gilt edges	1	25
114.	riexiole, leather	Å	50
NEW	TESTAMENTS. Inspired
	Translation.
173.			35
83.	Cloth sides, leather back		50

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamont, appears in the PATRIOT. Sub scription one dollar per year. Ad-THE PATRIOT Lamoni, dress,

A postal card brings a sample copy.

BRING YOUR LAUNDRY TO

South Side Barber Shop.

For every five dollars worth of Laundry vou receive a

HANDSOME SHAVING MUG. SHOOK & KLINE, Props.

The well known Oculist and Aurist

DR. J. B. FINDLEY.

Will be here again on Thursday, February 28, at the Barr Hotel to cure diseases of Eye, Ear, Nose, and Throat with mild medicine—no strong medicines used in the eyes trait if jure the eye. All treatment painless. Crosseys trait if jure the eye. All treatment painless. Crosseys straightened in two minutes without pain. Cataracts gnaranteed cored. Glasses perfectly fitted to cure all sights and gnaranteed headache cured with glasses. Granulated lids, watery eves, and ingrown eyelash soured. Catarrh permanently cured by a new method. The Doctor would like to have his friends and former patients call February 28. Examination free. Do not miss this opportunity.

NOT IN THE CATALOGUE.

TRACTS.

Trial of the Witnesses to the Resurrection of Jesus.

Each 5 cents; per doz. 50 cents.

The Basis of Brighamite Polygamy.

Per doz 10 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

SAINTS' HYMNAL. Words only. 115. Paper ..... Per dozen..... 1 60 116. Cloth, limp ...... Per dozen..... 2 70 117. Cloth ..... Per dozen...... 3 75 118. Flexible, gilt edges..... BOOK OF MORMON. Large type

92. Cloth, leather backs and corners ...... 1 50 93. Seal grain russia, gilt edges. 2 00

109. Flexible, gilt edges..... 4 00

THE COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI. -IOWA. Solicits your Deposits and pays

> 4 1-2 % INTEREST. D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

Book of Mormon Maps.

Lecture size 5x8 feet on muslin for traveling ministry, $2.00 Home and office size 33x51 juches on paper, cloth back and varnished in colors, $1.50.

All map sent by express, charges 30c. and upwards according to distance, to be paid at end of route. Send orders to

G. F. WESION,

Bucharan, Michigan.

HUMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in D. Kaib county. Missouri, four miles from Amity, and five miles from Clarksdaie; near line of R ck I land rathoad and switch station, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchaser. Terms reasonable. Address,

J. O. SOUTHARD, Mgr., Amity, Missouri, of CHARLES P. FAUL, 48 13t Clarksdale, Missouri,

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good oh tograph, and get 25 stame photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 lign phore button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents each. Large 60 lign buttons 50 cents, and extra buttons from same picture 25 cents. Your photograph will be returned Send silver.

W. M. KECK Photographer, 49-13t

49-13t

DR. E. S. SWEET. DENTIST.

Decoe Building,

WOODBINE,

IOWA.

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Inwa

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chi-cago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS.

Dates of sales, February 19, March 5 and 19, April 2 and 16, 1901, one lowest first class fare for the round trip, plus $200. Good for return 21 days from date of sale.

Cheap one-way colonist excursion rates to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego, California. Dates of sale F bruary 12, 19, and 26, March 5, 12, 19, and 26, April 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30 1901

One-way second class settlers rates. Denver, Colorado Springs, and Pueblo. Ogden and Salt Lake. Bozeman, Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Grantsdale, Missoula, Grant Falls, Kalispell, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma. Victoria and Vancouver

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p m. South-Lave Ds Moines 8:25 a.m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a. m. Trairs daily x xcept Sunday; connect with C. B & Q at Leon.

AINTS' HERA

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord; for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page !!6.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 20, 1901.

NO. 8.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR. JOSEPH LUFF CORRESPONDING EDITORS. D. W. WIGHT

LAMONI, IOWA, FEB. 20, 1901.

EDITOR IN INDEPENDENCE.

A visit to the Independence branch is interesting and instructive. Such visit makes known to the visitor that it is not alone in his branch off in the wilderness of the people that peace and spiritual enjoyment follow the effort for righteousness, and discontent, jealousy, and hurt follow gossiping, forgetful of the finer effort to become good.

The elements that make up the average branch are found in fairly equal proportion, and the leading, pushing, go ahead forces are with the few as everywhere else. And these few are as well sustained by the many who make up the sum total of the whole, and it may be to quite an extent better than in the outer circles, because of better spiritual teaching, and a greater desire to be examples of what the gospel can do.

In this the visit to Independence is instructive, and the visitor feels that whether there is a difference of spiritual influence in localities or not, there is evidently a difference in the sentiment obtaining in localities, and he is more or less impressed by it.

The visit is interesting because it affords a chance to study men as they develop in the spiritual race, or failing of development they become laggards in spiritual progress and, possibly, unconscious of wrong intention, become soured in feeling and assume the role of cynical critics of others; or casting off restraints resort again to the unfortunate habits of the flesh and the world. The visitor sees that there are strong lights thrown upon the general effort of church work, and under this light the good and cheering are shown in striking contrast with the bad and discouraging. He is impressed by this to an extent according to his previous experiences and degree of confidence he has in the final triumph of the good in every cause. He will also discover that the unfortunate and evil are seen with striking distinctiveness from the contrast with the good, and though in A careful analysis of what constitutes reality the evil may be small as compared to the whole, it startles with its vividness and alarms by its apparent greatness. A calmer reflection shows that though evil is present, yet glowing in the same light that reveals its presence and deformity there are seen side by side the true and the good steadily pressing forward resisting the evil and serving the interests of the whole with determinate perseverance and unflagging zeal. This will comfort the visitor and send him home with a thankful glow of love of God in his heart, if he came to learn of the good in Zion rather than to spy out the evil spots in human weakness.

The visitor will also note that there has been since his last visit a marked advancement and improvement in the material progress of the city, and especially among the Saints. A degree of material prosperity is making itself felt among every class, though there are still degrees between competency and want, a thing much to be deplored, but for which as yet the remedy has not been applied. It is to be hoped, however, that soon or late conditions may change for the better.

Many new faces greet the visitor, faces seen elsewhere than in the "regions round about;" faces set toward Zion years ago, and which now carry glad expressions of unabated hope and firm resolve for the better life.

The visitor learns, too, that the burden of debt so long borne, together with the bitterness of conflict during the erection of the church building, have been lifted by unity of effort and the putting together of small sums the result of sacrifice and consecration not confined to the few, but generously diffused over all. He who visits rejoices with the branch and hopes that not again will there be a need of similar burden and similar experiences.

Long live the Independence branch!

FRIENDSHIP.

Friendship is something that should be thoroughly studied and understood. This should be done for the double purpose of being able to recognize our own friends, and to exercise the gracious influence of true friendship toward others. In this, as in other things, right conceptions are primarily essential to right conduct.

real friendship might reveal many things in the attitude of supposed friends that are not as they should be. Further than that it might tend to regulate our own conduct toward those to whom we would be truly friendly. As the influence of an enemy is to be avoided, so we should avoid being an enemy; and as a friend is to be sought, recognized, and appreciated, so we should seek to make ourselves friends to others. what is a friend, and what is true friendship? We should not be surprised if a proper solution of the question would enter farther into the regulation of our characters than we at first might suppose.

We do not hesitate to define a friend as one whose influence will tend to our ultimate good; whose every effort will be devoted to helping us nearer the right. Viewed from this standpoint, the subject loses the sentimentalism with which it is so frequently clothed, and assumes a basis of right.

As right conduct only can bring ultimate good, it naturally follows that we are friends to others to the extent we do them good. But here, we think, is where a misconception of right so frequently enters in. We permit our judgment to be warped by a desire to please, and in our efforts to be agreeable, we condone evil when we ought to rebuke it; we magnify virtues and minimize faults, and thus create false conceptions. In doing so we make ourselves enemies to those before whom we pose as friends.

But this is not all. Acting upon such a standard, we will be disposed to ask of others such as we are willing to give; and if, perchance, in place of the flattering words we seek, we are met with candor and truth, we are apt to get ruffled. Such are not the characteristics of true regard for one's own good, or the good of others. What a blessing it would be if in our social relations we could lay aside all hypocrisy, and frankly meet each other on a plane of true consideration for each other's good. It was upon such a plane that Jesus stood in his great mission of love.

He did not seek favor; he made no special effort to please. He came to reveal the truth, and as such a revelator was the best friend the world ever had.

But they misunderstood, tormented, and finally crucified him because of his very love. The simple truth of the matter was that his persecutors were not in a condition of mind to discern a true friend when he appeared among them. Had he commended them in their ways, and offered flattery instead of rebuke, he would have been lauded as a friend, and permitted to move freely in the society of those who hated him because of his strict fidelity to the right. Alas that the world is unable to recognize its true benefactors! We grasp the hand of those who play to our fancy, and wink at our faults, and imagine them to be our friends because they are agreeable.

As often do we turn the cold shoulder to the one who nobly and fearlessly tells us of our wrongs.

Oh, the sham and deceit that characterize the social fabric at the present time. A little wealth, a little power, form magnets that draw crowds of blinded sycophants, while the less fortunate of earth's creatures live and die comparatively unnoticed and alone. It is sad, but it is true.

We believe in encouragement. The world needs it. Wise recognition of work well done is in itself proper and Jesus himself was commendable. ever ready to recognize and commend virtue; and his great heart went out in sympathy for mankind in their struggles for the right.

It gives strength to know our efforts are appreciated. But a true friend will not stop there. He will be as ready to call attention to weaknesses as he is to recognize virtues. He will, in short, stand for the right, whether it brings pleasure or pain, whether it meets our approbation or opposition. Beware of false friendship!

Beware of those who never oppose you; who speak of nothing but your virtues, your accomplishments, your commendable points. Seek for strong, earnest friends, who have the stamina of right; who will not permit themselves to be compromised in judgment by a desire to please. Seek the advice, the counsel, the cooperation of those who are frank and honest; who will not fear to tell the truth, and tell it to your face. It is not necessary that such friends should be abrupt or harsh. Sympathy and consideration should soften all our treatment of others and mollify every necessary criticism. What is true respecting our relations to others governs as well in the consideration of our own good.

If we are true to others and to God, we will be true to ourselves; and if we do right in the development of our own characters, we cannot do otherwise than stand in proper relations to God and our fellow men.

Let us be true.

OUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Would it be right to use for sacrament purposes wine of our own make, made of grape juice, which has fermented?

In two places in the Doctrine and Covenants the Lord speaks to us regarding the character of the element we are to use in the sacrament service. In section 26, paragraph 1, he speaks as follows:-

It mattereth not what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory; remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins; wherefore a com-mandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine, neither strong drink of your enemies; wherefore you shall partake of none, except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father's kingdom which shall be built up on the earth.

Again in section 86, paragraph 1, is the following: -

Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation, that inas-much as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold, it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together, to offer up your sacraments before him. And, behold, this should be wine; yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make. And again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies.

Here we are advised not to use wine or strong drink, except in the service of the sacrament, and in that case it should be wine. So it is evident that the Lord does not want us to use strong drink as a beverage at any time, and wine only in this particular case. Strong drinks, we are told, are not for the use of man; and as strong drinks are usually understood to mean those which have as an ingredient alcohol, it is probable that the Lord does not intend that we shall take into our systems as beverages anything containing alcohol. All wines contain alcohol, and we are of the opinion that it is best to use only new wine. Section 26, to be sure, says that it matters not what we shall drink or what we shall eat so long as we partake in the proper spirit, but as long as there is any doubt as to the propriety of using any other than the pure and new wine, we should be on the safe side and use nothing but what we are sure is right to use.

This question has so often recurred that we wonder at its revival.

The juice of the grape of the vine is not wine until a process of fermenta tion occurs. Nor is this wine pure until all the impurities contained in the pulp, skins and stems are thrown off by a process of clarification.

The addition of sugar in any quantity adds to the fermenting quality; and the addition does not help to make the juice wine.

The true meaning of the instruction is that the wine we should use should be made by ourselves from the "grape of the vine," keeping the same clean, and making it at each recurring season when the vintage time has come, discontinuing the use of the last year's pressing as soon as the new is made, in this way avoiding the use of the strong alcoholic beverage that old wine becomes.

In places where there is likely to be controversy it is better to use an element not open to objection; but in doing it, it is not wise to make the words of the Savior to mean what does vio-lerce to the language used.

If necessity should occur other element than wine might be used, but that element is the one that should be used if within the power of the congregation. In some branches water is used; in some hot water is poured upon raisins and after stewing awhile is poured off and used; in others the juice of the currant, or raspberry is used; and we believe each is acceptable, if, as suggested above, the sacrament is partaken of in the right spirit; but a constant contention as to the element to be used and a contest about words even to bitterness of feeling is hardly a right spirit, as we think.

A BIG POLICEMAN.

On the 9th inst. there appeared in one of the St. Joseph, Missouri, daily papers, the News, an article describing St. Joseph's largest policeman, and making the claim that he was the largest in the United States. officer is Milton K. Kinnaman, known to many of our readers as one of the sons of Bro. John T. Kinnaman so well known in the church. Milton is also quite well known.

In describing our brother, the News says:-

ST JOSEPH'S BIG POLICEMAN.

Thirty-three years old. Height...... 6 feet,  $8\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Girth of Waist. .....49 mches. Calf of Leg........... $20\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Thigh ......29 inches.

St Joseph has the biggest policeman in the United States.

His name is Milton K Kinnaman.

He does not drink intoxicants, nor use tobacco in any form He never uses profane language and is a devout attendant at church.

He is a baritone singer of local repute.

He can kick the helmet from the head of his tallest brother officer.

He is the descendant of a race of giants and has a son whose wonderful growth indicates that he may exceed his father in height.

He lives on plain fare, scarcely ever eating cake or sweetmeats, drinks cold water and occasionally a cup of coffee.

Although of immense proportions, he has a boyish cast of features, clear blue eyes, and is smooth shaven.

A phrenological examination of his head indicates the qualities of a preacher rather than a policeman. The bump of devotion is largely developed; he is gifted with imagination and the power of language. Determination and combativeness are traits that make him valuable as a policeman.

St. Louis boasts of having the largest policeman in the world; Kansas City does likewise. . . . He [Kinnaman] does not equal the St. Louis man in weight, but the measurements as a whole show him to be superior in size, all points considered, to both men.

There may be bigger policemen in foreign countries, but if there are any in the United States they are still to be heard from.

States they are still to be heard from.

Officer Kinnaman has a companion in Officer John C. Brown. The two often patrol the same beat together. Brown is a man far above the average in height. Together they form a formidable combination, which proves a terror to evildoers. When they are on the tenderloin beat, doing night duty, a Sabbathlike stillness falls over that district. The inhabitants live in mortal dread of the two minutes.

Officer Kinnaman was born on a farm in Mercer county, Illinois, and is thirty-three years of age. He comes of a family of giants. But one of the Kinnaman family, his mother, is less than six feet in height. Although considered small by her children, she is 5 feet 11 inches in height and weighs nearly 175 pounds. John T. Kinnaman, father of the giant policeman, is dead. He was a native of Indiana, and was a farmer. He was a powerful man, standing 6 feet 7 inches in his stockings and weighing about 265 pounds. He was seventy-two years of age when he died at his home in Stewartsville in October, 1899.

Policeman Kinnaman has two brothers and three sisters. D. C. Kinnaman is a resident of St. Joseph. He is 6 feet 6 inches in height and weighs 235 pounds. M. C. Kinnaman, the other brother, lives in the old Kinnaman home at Stewartsville. He is 6 feet 5 inches in height and weight 195 pounds. But one of his sisters, Mrs. Newton Collins, lives in St. Joseph. She is about 6 feet 1 inch in height. Mrs. D. E. Powell and Mrs. James Wood, the other sisters, are residents of Stewartsville. Both ladies are about 6 feet in height and are very heavy.

Policeman Kinnaman has three children, two girls and a boy, all of whom are well developed, healthy children. Kinnaman came to St. Joseph in 1891 and was employed by an express company for a number of years. He has been on the police force five years and is considered an efficient officer.

Kansas City's big policeman, Smith Cook, is a little taller than the St. Joseph guardian of the peace, but he falls short in weight seven pounds. The Kansas City man is nineteen pounds lighter in weight than Patrolman Davidson of St. Louis, but is eight inches taller, which, when averaged, makes the Kansas City policeman the better man of the two. Kinnaman, the St. Joseph officer, is nearly as tall as Cook, and is but twelve pounds below the St. Louis giant in weight. His other dimensions are greater in every instance than those of either Cook or Davidson. St. Joseph therefore claims the largest policeman in the United States, if not in the world.

It always pleases us to hear our brethren well spoken of, and it is evident from what the News has to say of Bro. Kinnaman that he has made a splendid record as an officer and as a man.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. L. Kelley, writing from Louisville, Kentucky, February 1, of his visit abroad, says:—

The Southern district conference of Indiana passed very pleasantly, with about twenty of the missionary force present and a number of the membership. I have more confidence in the goodly prospects than I had from reports. After all, there is quite an effective force of workers. There is much for them to contend against, as is also the case in all other places. The music I enjoyed very much. I like best a whole-souled song entered into by the entire congregation.

tered into by the entire congregation.

Bro. G. A. Smith, submissionary, was present.

Bro. Lake was detained by work in Michigan, I learn.

Preached my first sermon in Kentucky last night. Bro. J. M. Scott here. A good and attentive congregation to hear. Stay here tonight and go to Wirt, Indiana, tomorrow, for over Sunday. There is a big demand for work here and in Indiana. Had fine audience at Galena, on Wednesday evening. Bro. Smith stayed to follow it up an evening. I am now at Bro. Metcalf's, a tall Kentuckian, full of work and faith. His wife, another genuine Kentuckian just as earnest and good. If we find many more over here like them and Brn. Riggles and Gans and others here I think there is hope for "old Kentuck."

May the good work go on. Would like to take the time to visit the Kentucky and Tennessee conference on 9th of February, but duties at office will force my early return there.

Bro. C. W. Little, writing from Rosetta, Idaho, February 2, says:—

Bro. Charles Albertson has been doing some good work in this part of the vineyard, and I think you will hear from here oftener.

Elder Joseph F. Burton, San Benito, California, under date of January 21, writing to Elder H. A. Stebbins, says:—

I am expecting Metuaore here on the steamer which arrives March 7, and will accompany him to conference, and perhaps we will get to Lamoni before conference; if not we may visit after conference.

Bro. Joseph N. Stephenson wrote from Walker, Missouri, the 11th inst., to Bro. R. S. Salyards:—

Bro. T. R. White and I are holding meeting in a hall at Walker. Will leave tomorrow. A splendid conference at Coal Hill in this (Clinton) district. May the Lord bless his people with more zeal for the truth.

Elder Richard Ellis, Sydney, New South Wales, January 17, writes while ordering goods:—

We are getting along fairly well in the branch here. Two or three to be baptized next Sunday.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

President Smith returned Thursday from Independence, Missouri, and is somewhat improved in health.

Patriarach A. H. Smith, accompanied by his stenographer, Bro. Gould, returned from California the latter part of last week.

Bishop Kelley was suddenly taken sick Saturday, and has since been confined to his home. At last reports he was improving.

Bro. W. M. Aylor has appeared in print recently in defense of the work. Both the Standard and the Tribune, of Montgomery City, Missouri, of date February 8, contain a letter from the pen of Bro. Aylor, clearly showing that he is not of the Utah persuasion and that there is a vast difference between that people and the Reorgani zation in religious belief and practice. He objects to being called a "Mormon," as the world generally understands the term.

Bro. J. T. Gerber, of West, Texas, writes under date of February 9, that he would be pleased to hear from some of the ministry in Texas. He would like to correspond with them or have them call on him. He lives four miles southeast of West, McLellan county, Texas.

Bro. L. M. Sollenberger, of Reading, Pennsylvania, is anxious for some two young men desirous of going into business, and at the same time to assist in gospel work, to come to Reading, where he can help them to a business start. Boys, here is a chance. Write him, No. 41 North Third street.

Bro. E. H. Tordoff, of Brooklyn, New York, came to Lamoni, Friday last, and has begun work in the bindery, of which he now has charge. He is a bookbinder of considerable experience, having learned his trade in England, and having worked for some time in the bindery of Appleton & Co., New York.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION.—NO. 8.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

When we arrived at his place, Joseph was not in the house, but soon came in, and his wife introduced us to him as strangers who wished to see him. Elder Gurley at once introduced himself and me as missionaries of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and stated that we wished to have some talk with him, and handed him the following letter:—

The Church of Zarahemla, Wisconsin, to Joseph Smith:-Our faith is not unknown to you, neither our hope in the regathering of pure in heart enthralled in darkness, together with the means, to the accomplishment of the same, viz; that the seed of him to whom the work was first committed should stand forth and bear the responsibility (as well as wear the crown) of a wise master builder-to close up the breach, and to combine in one a host, who, though in captivity and sorely tried, still refuse to strengthen the hands of usurpers. As that seed, to whom pertains this right and heaven appointed duty, you cannot be unmindful nor indifferent. The God of Abram, Isaac, and Jacob covenanted with them and their seed. So the God of Joseph covenanted with him and his seed, that his word should not depart out of his mouth, nor out of the mouth of his seed, nor out of the mouth of his seed's seed, till the end come. A Zerubbabel in Israel art thou. As a nail fastened in a sure place, so are the promises unto thee to make thee a restorer in Zion, to set in order the house of God. And the Holy Spirit that searcheth the deep things of God hath signified to us that the time has come, for through fasting and prayer hath the answer from God come unto us, saying, Communicate with my servant Joseph Smith, son of Joseph the Prophet. Arise, call upon God, and be strong, for a deliverer art thou to the Latter Day Saints, and the Holy Spirit is the prompter.

The apostles, elders, and Saints who have assembled with us have beheld the vacant seat, and the seed that is wanting, and like Ezra of old with his brethren, by the direction of the Holy Spirit have we sent faithful messengers to bear this our message to you, trusting you will by their hands notify us of your readiness to occupy that seat, and an-swer to the name and duties of that seed. For this have our prayers been offered up without ceasing for the last five years. We are assured that the same Spirit that has testified to us, has signified the same things to you Many have arisen perverting the work of the Lord But the good and the true are throughout the land waiting the true suc-cessor of Joseph the Prophet as president of the church and of the priesthood. In our publications,—sent to you,—we have shown the right of successorship to rest in the lineal d-scendant of the chosen seed to whom the promise was made, and also the manner of ordination thereto. We cannot forbear reminding you that the commandments as well as the promises given to Joseph your father, were given to him and his seed. And in the name of the Master, even Jesus Christ, as moved upon by the Holy Ghost we say. Arise in the strength of the Lord and realize those promises by executing these commandments, and we, by the grace of God, are thy helpers in restoring the exiled sons and daughters of Zion to their inheritances in the kingdom of God, and to the faith once delivered to the Saints

Holding fast that which is good, and resisting evil, we invoke the blessings of the God of Israel upon thee and upon all Saints, for whom we will ever pray.

J. W. BRIGGS,

Representative President of the Church and the Priesthood in Zarahemla. Zarahemla, November 18, 18:6.

After reading the above letter Joseph handed it back to Elder Gurley and said, "Gentleman, I will talk with you on politics or any other subject, but on religion I will not allow one word spoken in my house."

Elder Gurley replied, "But we wish to tell you what we believe."

Mr. Smith in a most emphatic manner replied, "I will not allow one word spoken on the subject to me in my house."

At this blunt, emphatic statement that he would not allow us to speak one word on the subject of religion in his house, Bro. Gurley burst into tears and wept. At this juncture I spoke as follows: "Mr. Smith, while we respect your feelings as a man. and do not wish to injure your feelings, yet we will not allow you to hinder us in doing our duty, as we have been sent by the command of God to tell you what we know and most surely believe in relation to your calling as the successor of your father."

At that Joseph arose to his feet, and I thought somewhat sprung in his feelings, and said in a hasty tone of voice: "When men come to my house and tell me what I must do, I tell them there is the door and they can go out."

Bro Gurley then said to me, "Come, let us go.'

I replied, "Bro. Gurley, do not be in a hurry," and Joseph's wife said, "Don't, Joseph, don't!" (I will never forget those beautiful eyes as she looked up so imploringly to Joseph.)

Joseph then calmed down and said, "I did not mean to injure your feelings, and I ask your forgiveness." Bro. Gurley also then asked his forgiveness. I did not, for I felt I had only done my duty, and could not ask to be forgiven. I then told him briefly that it had been revealed to us that he would be the successor of his father in the church, and that we had been commanded to so inform him of our hope and faith in the matter.

He replied to us, "I do not allow myself to talk on such matters in relation to my own calling, or what I may do in the future." Up to this time Gurley was weeping all the time. spoke in a real earnest manner, and a part of the time quite loud. A quieter feeling now prevailed, and Joseph informed us that Elders George A. Smith and Snow from Utah had been to see him but a short time before, and that he would not have anything to do with that people or their corrupt doctrines.

Supper was now ready and Joseph invited us to eat with him, which we did, and after supper some little conversation was had in relation to our mission and hope, but he objected to any reference to his own calling, and I then said.

"Will you meet us in the morning in the city?"

He promised to do so, after which we bade him good night and walked to Nauvoo. Soon as we had left the house Bro. Gurley remarked to me, "He insulted us, and will not receive our mission, and we might as well go home. He might as well have turned us out of doors."

I said, "We have not yet finished our mission to him. You remember we were commanded in case he did not receive our mission that we should raise our hands before him and leave him in the hands of the Lord?"

Bro. Gurley then exclaimed: "Oh, I forgot that! Let us go back and do that now."

"No," I replied, "he promised to meet us in the morning at the mansion house, and then we will have some more talk, and if he does not accept our message to him, then we will present him to the Lord with uplifted hands."

Gurley then said, "That will do. How came you to think to ask him to meet us in the morning?"

I replied, "I thought of it all the

The next morning was Sunday, and after breakfast we started to take a walk, and just as we got to the door, at Zarahemla, and we informed her of Joseph opened it, and said, "Good morning.

Bro. Gurley hastily and abruptly said, "Have you received the evidence yet?"

Joseph answered, "No!"

"Then let us go and have a talk," Bro. Gurley continued.

Joseph led the way to a room upstairs, and when he had shut the door he said to us, "If you men have been commanded of God to do anything. why can't you do it without any reference to me, for I know that no man or the angels from heaven can lead the church in the condition it is now

At this Bro. Gurley again broke in tears and wept for some moments. I then said, "Mr. Smith, we can do our duty without any reference to other men, for we do not recognize any man, priest, or king as our leader save Jesus Christ only, neither would we receive you except you are called of God yourself. But as ministers sent to scattered latter-day Israel, we call on you as one of the spiritual stones of the house of God to come and take your place, as it has been shown to us by the gifts of prophecy."

At that my hands involuntarily rose and Joseph said, "Don't curse me. I can't stand that."

I looked, and Gurley also stood with his hands uplifted, and he replied. "That be far from us. rather bless than curse." He then offered a short but fervent prayer for Joseph, and presented him to the Lord in the name of Jesus Christ.

Joseph then said, "Are you now through?"

Gurley answered, "Yes."

Then Joseph with uplifted hands rose to his feet and offered a most fervent prayer. Among the things he said in his prayer were, "Heav-enly Father, keep me from wrongdoing, and that my face may be like a flint, that I may not fear the face of clay. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen." He then said, "I am through, and will take the responsibility upon myself for my own actions." peaceful feeling pervaded my mind, and there seemed to be a good feeling on the part of all.

Joseph then asked how old we were. When we informed him, he said, "I like the spirit of you men, and we may see many things yet." And he assured us again that he would have nothing to do with the practices of the "Mormons" in the west. After some little talk, which showed us that he was indeed interested in the work his father labored to build up, we separated good friends.

In the evening we had some little conversation with his mother. She made several inquiries about our meet. ings and the interests of the church the evidence we had received of her son taking the leadership of the church, as it was his right by lineage. She seemed to wish to avoid any reference about her children having anything to do with the church; spoke of her former husband with tears in her eyes.

The next morning she said: "I have always counseled the Saints who came to me for advice as to where they should go, to go north."

I inquired, "Why did you give them that counsel? Did you think James J. Strang's claims were right?"

She quickly replied, "No, but I thought if they went up north they could soon get away again, but if they went west they could not, and I always believed the church would arise again in the north. I have always avoided talking to my children about having anything to do in the church, for I have suffered so much I have dreaded to have them take any part in it. But I have always believed if God wanted them to do anything in the church, the same one who called their father would make it known to them, and it was not necessary for me to talk to them about it; but I never had confidence in Brigham Young, and Joseph did not for some time before his death."

I then said to her: "Did Joseph have any knowledge or premonition of his death before it took place?"

She replied: "Yes, he was expecting it for some time before he was murdered. About the time he wrote those letters that are in the Book of Covenants he was promised if he would go and hide from the church until it was cleansed he should live until he had accomplished his work in the redemption of Zion, and he once left home intending not to return until the church was sifted and thoroughly cleansed; but his persecutors were stirring up trouble at the time, and his absence provoked some of the brethren to say he had run away, and they called him a coward, and Joseph heard of it, and he then returned, and said, 'I will die before I will be called a coward.'

"He was going to find a place and then send for the family, but when he came back I felt the worst I ever did in my life, and from that time I looked for him to be killed, and had felt so bad about it, that when he was murdered I was not taken by surprise, and did not feel so bad as I had for months before."

While she talked to us the tears flowed from her large, bright eyes like rain, and I could see in every act affection for Joseph.

Delineating her evidence of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, she said: "When my husband was translating the Book of Mormon, I wrote a part of it, as he dictated each sentence, word for word, and when he came to proper names he could not pronounce, or long words, he spelled them out, and while I was writing them, if I made any mistake in spelling, he would stop me and correct my spelling, although it was impossible for him to see how I was writing them down at the time. Even the word Sarah he could not pronounce at first, but had to spell it, and I would pronounce it for him.

"When he stopped for any purpose at any time he would, when he commenced again, begin where he left off without any hesitation, and one time while he was translating he stopped suddenly, pale as a sheet, and said, 'Emma, did Jerusalem have walls around it?' When I answered 'Yes,' he replied, 'Oh! I was afraid I had been deceived.' He had such a limited knowledge of history at that time that he did not even know that Jerusalem was surrounded by walls."

She also spoke very highly of Elder William Marks and said, "Joseph always had confidence in him. David Whitmer is honest, and when you see him you will say he is an honest, truthful man, and the reason he absented himself from the church was because of his misunderstandings, and the acts of some in the church he could not fellowship."

I then referred to Oliver Cowdery and Martin Harris, when she said: "Oliver Cowdery was an honest man, but he became disaffected because of the actions of some in the church." Of Harris: "He was an honest man, but not naturally as stable and firm in his mind as some. There were only three classes that followed Brigham Young to Utah: knaves, fools, and those whose circumstances and environments compelled them to go."

Bro. Gurley was much pleased with what Joseph and his mother both said, though at first he was greatly disappointed at the way Joseph received what he had said, or, as he expressed it, "Would not allow me to say anything." But we were both impressed that he was aware of his calling as the successor of his father, but that human agency would not influence him to take any stand in the church, and that he was unalterably and utterly opposed to polygamy. As Bro. Gurley put it, "He gave us to understand he would not go to Utah, and I am glad of that, anyway.'

I was really glad in my heart to see the manner in which he resented what he first thought we wished to urge upon him as our views against his own conviction. We also thought he was impressed with the fact that we were sincere and believed that we were divinely impressed to visit him with our message, and that we would not accept him as the successor and president of the church without he was truly called of God as his father was.

The next day Bro. Gurley yet felt so badly about leaving home that he could not endure the thought of continuing in the ministry. I urged him to remain in the mission and we would visit as many of the members of the church as we could and tell them of our hope of the reorganization, but his struggles were too great, and the next Wednesday evening he said to me, "Bro. Briggs, I am going home to Katie in the morning if I lose my salvation." I saw there was no use in trying to persuade him to continue longer in the ministry, and after some conversation we had prayer, and in the best of feelings and spirit we talked over our hope, and agreed that he should return home. next morning he left me in Nauvoo and went home. It was as I had expected before we left, I was alone.

In a few days I received the following letter from Bro. Z. H. Gurley, Sen.:—

YELLOWSTONE, Dec. 16, 1856.

Dear Brother Edmund:—Feeling deeply interested in your situation, and in the welfare of the church, I have thought to trouble you with a few lines, sincerely praying almighty God to direct us all aright, for surely in and of ourselves we are weak, yea, perfect weakness.

Samuel returned Sunday evening almost tired out. Since you left, the snow has fallen two feet and upwards and is badly drifted, which renders it almost impossible to move. The roads are completely filled up and have been impassable for several days. As soon as we can get around, will go down to Zarahemla, and the church will then direct what you shall do. Until you hear from the church officially, stay where you are, and you shall do much good.

Last Sunday I was with the church at Zarahemia, and our prayer meeting lasted until 1:30 o'clock in the morning. We were told that you and Samuel had presented the message and had been faithful before the Lord. Sister Newkirk [Bro. David Newkirk's wife] had a vision; saw you on one side and Samuel on the other of a young man holding him up. The Holy Spirit then commanded us to hold up Bro. Joseph by our faith and prayers, as you were holding him up, with the promise that he should come to Zarahemia. So fear not. Do what the Spirit of God commands you, and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ you shall accomplish your mission, and I say unto you, Receive strength and help, and in the name of the Lord Jesus, after many days you shall succeed. Even so. Amen.

Bro. Edmund during your stay spend all of your time in study. Study the Bible prophecies. Pray for understanding. Commit more or less to memory every day, and wait patiently as does the husbandman for the early and latter rain, and know assuredly you shall not wait in vain. I would advise you at a suitable time to visit Bro. Wm. O. Clark. He lives, or used to live, about three miles west of Montrose. He is the man that baptized your brother Jason, Jones, and Whiticar's family, and on your road, if it seems right, go on to West Point. Inquire for John Hardy. Tell him you call at my request to see him. He is with us in faith, and is a good man. There are several in that region who know me, who used to live at Laharpe. They have as much faith in the gifts as you have and will welcome you.

Brother, the Spirit of God will, I think, direct you this way, for a measure of it is on me at this time. You will find several, no doubt, who will fill their several places in the church according to their appointment when the foundation of the earth was laid.

Stand up, Bro. Edmund, as a man of God. I would not advise you to debate much, but bear a faithful testimony of this work, of what you know and most assuredly believe, and in this way you will have victory every time.

As to money, some shall come to you soon. Sunday after you left, when on the way to Zarahemla, I saw you and Samuel in a close place, and I struggled in spirit near three fourths of an hour until you were delivered. I knew you had victory. Since Samuel has returned I have learned where you were. [We were at Bro. W. W. Blair's] After that I went on to the meeting. We had a good time. In vision some saw Bro. Joseph in company with two others. A part of the revelation given in March, 1833, read, A part section 87, paragraphs 1 and 2, the Holy Spirit directing at the same time that through him (Joseph) the oracles were then given to us, even the church. This is the second time that Joseph has been seen in our midst. . . . Your people are well. R.ley spoke and prayed in our prayer meeting.

I sent your license in Samuel's letter. Cut it out. Please write often, and know that the daily prayers of the church are for you. May God bless you and protect you, is the prayer of Z H. GURLEY.

To E C. Briggs.

In a second letter he said: "Samuel is in good spirits and faith that Joseph will soon be with the church," and advised me to remain in my mission, "because we have received evidence that you will not return to Zarahemla until the Prophet Joseph comes with you to the church.'

In a short time after, I received a letter from my brother Jason confirming Bro. Gurley's letters, and instructing me to return to Bro. Joseph his letter of November 18, as Samuel had left it with me. The first time I saw Joseph after this I handed said letter to him with this remark: "I have been instructed to hand this letter back to you."

He replied, "All right."

I never again referred to it, or my mission, nor had any conversation with him on religious matters involving his association with the church while on my mission.

(Continued.)

ENDOWMENT FOR GRACELAND.

I do not refer to "Lamoni's college," nor to that "sink hole at Lamoni which absorbs an unlimited amount of money." I am not meaning that "huge mistake made by a few well-meaning men who allowed their zeal to overtop their wisdom.' No, I am referring to a college erected by a certain peculiar people, called Latter Day Saints, who comprise the only true church, and who founded this institution of learning after years of thought and planning, and in an effort to comply with divine counsel. Being, thus, the property of the church, none can say "your college," "their college," "that college," or "Lamoni's college" with any degree of consistency; but it must and always will be, "our college!" If it fails for want of proper support, the failure will be eternally ours; if it succeeds-ah, well, there is no danger but that the success will be gloriously

Last spring, in the conference, when one after another of our brave, valiant heroes would get up and decline, with thanks, to serve upon the Board of Trustees, I felt indignantly to cry "For shame! The time will come when a position upon its college board will be one of the highest honors this church has to bestow!" And my heart did homage to those truly brave at heart who consented to take up the burden as it was and strive to carry it forward to a successful termination.

When a child is in its infancy, when its way seems all uncertain and its steps totter because of weakness due to extreme youth, then does the watchful arm of its mother extend ever ready aid and support and her cheerful voice lend encouragement and comfort.

Shall this church mother be less watchful of her youngest off spring? Shall her arm be less ready to proffer assistance, her voice less cheerful to approve and encourage? Shall she be unmindful of its present struggles to walk alone, to gain ground, strength, and self-dependence? then, the maternal instinct in our church so cold, untrue? No. no. it cannot be! Our beloved Graceland ours, yours, mine-must, and I firmly believe will receive the power-working support of that body which is responsible for its existence, and in whose bosom it has a natural right to be nurtured. As a child turns to the mother's breast for its first physical support, so our college turns to its parent for its first requisite sustenance. What either the child or the college in maturity may require from its lawful protectors remains for time and experience to determine. My plea today is that now is its need, and now is the opportunity of the church. When once it is selfsupporting, when it is seen and recognized to be an unqualified success, it will not lack for ardent friends; they will flock to its support, not perceiving that the golden opportunity of helping in the hour when help is most precious because most needed will have passed forever beyond their grasp.

Some say, "Why patronize Graceland when older and better equipped colleges are within reach?" The old question of the weak arrayed against the strong! Does the fact that there are older institutions prove that ours is inferior? Does it prove that, given the hearty support it deserves, it will not some day be better equipped or that, given time, it will not some day be older?

"Believers in word only." argued thus: "I have nothing against Graceland, only, I think it was a mistake to build so large; I would help with donations, only I haven't any assurance that it isn't money thrown away; but I do all I can for Graceland by way of influence; I never talk against it to anyone, only, I didn't think it the best school for my child so I sent him away to a more established college!"

O, let us do away with the husks and empty shells of speech! Let us recognize the difference between wordsupport and deed support!

I want to plead for an endowment for Graceland. I hear you say, "Oh ves, if some one would liberally endow the college it would be an easy way out of the difficulty." And that is just what I am asking for-a liberal endowment.

O, now, I see you put your hands down into your pockets and fumble over the few silver pieces there, and I hear you say with a long face, "But Latter Day Saints are all too poor to bestow an endowment."

Are you sure?

What does the Lord call an endowment? Is it a great sum of money?

The endowment Graceland needs is not a gift of money, for plenty of that will follow the true endowment; but it is one that is within the reach and ability of every member of the church, with no exceptions. It consists of faith, good-will (the active principle is intended), and heart y support, and is what we most earnestly bespeak as an endowment for our college! Could any institution be more richly endowed, think you, than that which has the true support of a loyal church, responsible for its origin, and one that will never go back on its responsibilities?

Let us arise, shake off these unmanly and unworthy fears and doubts! Let us each do our full share and trust God to add his blessing! Let us anew endow our clinging child, Graceland, with such a wealth of encouraging love and support that its growth may be firm and its beams shine out in all directions to bless and ennoble all those young souls who enter its portals!

Let us now give "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together" to pay the original debt according to the Bishop's plan of last April, and then by active and persistent effort never cease our endowments until the halls of our beloved Graceland are filled with happy faced students, earnestly seeking the precious gems of knowledge and truth.

BY ONE OF THE THOUSAND.

WISDOM AND UNDERSTANDING.

This is the substance of a discourse delivered at a commencement, held by the high school at Dow City, Iowa, last summer. It may lead some to be more diligent in seeking wisdom.—C. D.

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding.—Prov. 4: 7.

Wisdom is defined as the quality or state of being wise; the power or faculty of seeing into the heart of things and of forming the fittest and best judgment in any matter presented for consideration; knowledge and the capacity to make use of it.—Eacyclopedic Dictionary.

It is written that

God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.—Gen. 1: 27.

Again, it is written:—

Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor.—Ps. 8: 5.

From the above it is evident that man is something more than his physical form, and the Prophet Elihu said:—

There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding —Job 32: 8.

This spirit or mind is the intellectual part of man, the power to think and reason; to perceive and judge is indeed glory and honor, with which humanity is crowned. This power is inherent in the mind, and is the means by which we acquire knowledge and understanding of things. We are not born with our minds well stored with knowledge and wisdom, any more than our physical natures are at birth endowed with the full power of matured manhood; but we are born with latent faculties to acquire knowledge and wisdom, and it is by the proper exercise of our intellectual powers that we are enabled to perceive truths, and to drink in wisdom and knowledge, and obtain understanding of ourselves, and of our surroundings; and the possession of these faculties renders us responsible to the Author of our being for the use we make of them. If we allow them to lie dormant, inactive, and useless, we shall not answer the purpose of our creation; but like the barren tree. we shall only be fit for the burning, because we cumber the ground upon which we stand; hence it is our duty to develop every faculty of our minds, and this development is education. But we must see to it that our education is of the right kind; the mind is suceptible of being educated in a way that will work our destruction. Solomon says:-

There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death.—Prov. 14:12.

This reminds me that we are largely responsible for our own education. God has given us eyes to see and ears to hear; and also senses of feeling, taste, and smell, so that when we come in contact with things around us we may, by observation and study, learn their natures and adaptability to human necessities. He has clothed us with faculties, by the exercise of which we may discern between good and evil, right and wrong; and he has made us free to choose the right or the wrong—the good or the bad; and by proper observation we may learn the consequences of either course, and the certainty of those consequences; so that if we choose the way which leadeth to shame, misery, and death, we are left without excuse. God has given us the power to think; but we, individually, must do the thinking. Our parents cannot do our thinking, neither can our teachers, they can only direct us; but they cannot force us to follow their directions. I repeat, we are left to follow our own choice; even our Creator does not compel us to walk in the right way that leads to success in every good here, and to eternal life hereafter; and he has barred the evil one from exercising compulsion over us. until we voluntarily choose to be the slaves of that evil one. Then it is written:-

Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.—John 8: 34.

Again:-

Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?—Rom 6: 16 Here we see the necessity of educating not only the head, but also the heart. The brain is the servant of the heart, to execute its purpose, be that purpose good or bad. In the heart the will sits enthroned and dominates the whole being, hence the wise man says:—

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Prov. 4: 23.

And Christ says:-

Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies.—Matt. 15: 19.

Then how essential it is that the heart be properly educated, and that it may be, God has given as the great and first commandment:—

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength.—Mark 12:30.

The Master well knew that when the heart is brought into harmony with God, then all the other powers of man unite in obedience to its will, and the entire man is dedicated and consecrated to the service of God, hence it is mentioned first in this greatest commandment. It is written:—

O ye simple, understand wisdom; and, ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart.—Prov. 8:5.

Then let us educate the heart in righteousness, in every good word and work. Then we shall have a community, a state, yes, a nation of noble, pure, and Godlike men and women, that shall stand as a beacon light to the world. A nation that enjoys the full liberty and peace of God, and that dispenses righteousness and truth throughout the wide world; a nation that shall be an instrument in the hands of the divine ruler of the universe in proclaiming universal liberty and peace to all the oppressed sons and daughters of earth; a nation of patriots and invincible defenders of the right, because their trust will be in God.

Young men and maidens, you are called upon to constitute a portion of that nation; but your success in filling your missions with honor will depend upon your measure of diligence in study, the right application of your God given powers, your devotion to the right, and your unflinching integrity and trust in God.

This is called your commencement; the word indicates to me that you will seek loftier heights of knowledge than you have hitherto attained unto; hence, you cannot afford to rest here, and lay down your armor as though the great object of life was accomplished; you have just begun to learn the alphabet of life's great problem. The lessons you have learned will serve as keys to unlock and aid you in the mastery of higher and more difficult lessons in life's great mystery. Every truth you gain a knowledge of is a key to other higher, broader, deeper truths; and I believe that all truth is open to him who seeks aright. We may not be able to master the great lesson during this short life, but while the body is subject to decay until the glorious resurrection morn, the spirit, the inner man, lives on, and undoubtedly is susceptible of progress and improvement in the great field of truth. And the Savior promised to send to his disciples the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, even the Spirit of truth; and he said, When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth. From this promise it is evident that man is capable of ascending to the greatest heights, encompassing the greatest breadths, and fathoming the utmost depths of truth under the guidance of this divine Teacher; but he will not force the knowledge of truth upon us. He will guide, but we must follow; he will teach, but we must study and apply the lessons he Then the application of teaches. truth brings knowledge and understanding, and clothes us with wisdom. Without this application, and the proper exercise of our God-given faculties, we shall be destitute of knowledge. In this great work of acquiring knowledge, we need moral courage. A thousand obstacles will stand in the way, but even these, when rightly attacked, will be converted into helps to render us stronger, and fit us for still harder tasks; every difficulty overcome will render every future task less difficult.

Paul in his second epistle to Timothy exhorted him to Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—2 Tim. 2:15.

Solomon said:-

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.—Eccl. 9:10.

And Peter admonishes us thus:-

And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.—2 Peter 1:5-8.

These excellencies you will need, whatever may be your position in life; without them, your life will be a failure.—vou will have lived in vain. But remember, money cannot buy these excellencies; your teachers cannot clothe you with them. No power can adorn you with them, only as you seek for them as for a hidden treasure, and cultivate them in your hearts, and cherish and nourish them as essential parts of your being. They are choicer than gold and silver; rubies and diamonds are not to be compared with them. They are the crowning glory of all intelligent beings, and they are within the reach of There are none so poor but they may be adorned with them; none so weak and feeble, none so destitute, but these heavenly and priceless jewels may shed forth their glorious luster in their lives, and being clothed upon with these you are enrobed in that priceless wedding garment which will entitle you to admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb, and to be crowned with eternal life, and thus the grand purpose of our creation will be fulfilled, and God will be glorified in us. Amen.

CHARLES DERRY.

Letter Department.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4.

Dear Herald:—Yesterday was the first Sunday in February, and we held our first meeting in Druid's Temple, corner Fourteeath and Folsom, whither we have just moved. I preached at eleven a. m., and Bro. John Saxe at 7:30 p. m. We had a very spiritual meeting at 12:15, ending at two p. m. There was a good degree of the Holy Spirit with us to comfort. Our branch is in a healthy condition, yet there is ample room to improve. I went over to Oakland at 6:30 p.m., and in the absence of Bro. F. B. Blair, who had gone to Santa Rosa, I presided at their sacrament meeting, which was quite well attended considering the rainy weather. I preached for them, and I felt quite well in the delivery of the word, and some expressed themselves as having enjoyed the talk.

CHAS. A. PARKIN.

BYRNEVILLE, Ind., Feb. 6.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference is now a thing of the past. Everything went off quietly, and the good Spirit prevailed throughout the entire session. Elders Jenkins and Flinn began meetings about ten days before conference. This is the former home of Bro. Jenkins, and this, with his pleasant manner of address made the meetings quite interesting as well as profitable. Bro. Flinn also made us several good talks. he being a spiritual minded man. These two good brethren paved the way for the opening of a spiritual conference, at which time Bishop Kelley and Elder G. A. Smith joined us. Bishop Kelley did most of the preaching while here, his line of thought in a great part being instruction and exhortation to the Saints to live their religion. Many expressed their pleasure in hearing him. Come again, Brn. Kelley and Smith.

Bro. W. H. Kelley remained while all others went their ways, and by so doing three noble souls were born into the kingdom of our dear Savior. So the church is built. Our present number in Byrneville branch is sixty-three. May the Lord continue to add to our number, and may the Lord bless us in our efforts to do good, that we might all walk orderly and uprightly before our Master and magnify our callings, no matter what position or rank it might be, that the Lord might be glorified and the work accomplished and finished that was begun with the former day Saints. My prayer is that the Lord may keep us faithful that we might be instruments or helpers in accomplishing this great work. Your brother,

JAMES P. SAPPENFIELD.

PITTSBURG, Kan., Feb. 1.

Editors Herald:-My father, Elder J. T. Davis, requested me to write to the HERALD, as there were many of my friends inquiring for me and family. Since the death of my husband, E E Wheeler, at Millersburg, I moved first to Netawaka, Kansas, as my parents were there at that time. In a few months, on the death of my mother, it was thought advisible that I come to near Pittsburg, in Pleasant View branch, where I was raised. We have a comfortable new church in our branch, finished enough so we can use it. Our Sunday school is well attended and the Religio is a success. So my friends of Kewanee district, and in Dakota can see that we are situated where we have church privileges. School is only one-half mile from our house.

I feel very grateful to the Lord that he has raised up friends, and blessed the efforts we have made to care for ourselves. Surely the prophecy given at Kewanee at my husband's death has been verified: "That his family would be cared for." My children are doing well; the two oldest have taken up all the higher branches in the country school.

We sometimes attend the Methodist Sunday school at our schoolhouse. One cannot help noting the difference in that and our own. Sometimes I ask myself the question: Is it of any use for a Latter Day Saint to attend? I answer in the affirmative. In my case I gather thoughts that otherwise would be overlooked, and think if Saints make friends with the world we must be friendly, and if there is any attraction about our lives and views, they are sure to notice it, and will begin to come and hear. I do not think it always best to crowd our religious belief in conversation, rather wait until your associates inquire. Then don't be slow in giving information; it will be better taken.

Your sister in the one faith,

MRS C. A. WHEELER.

FAIRVIEW, Michigan.

Editors Herald:—We are yet alive in this part of God's vineyard, and are striving to do the best we can, and feel to rejoice in the gospel. We feel that God is owning and blessing us as his children. There has been only five or six of us until lately, but we have kept up our meetings, and God has blessed us by bringing two precious souls into the waters of baptism. We took them twenty-four miles to be buried with Christ in baptism. So you see, dear Saints, we are not dead in the work, but are striving to do the Master's will as best we understand it.

We have not had an elder here for about two years. We are entirely alone. We belong to the Hillman branch. We sometimes feel lonely, but feel to press onward, hoping ever to keep the gospel banner waving; and I feel to do the best I can, knowing that God is my friend, ever ready and willing to help me overcome trials and affictions. I have proved him many times, and often wonder when I see Saints live in a careless way, how they can be so. Although I am weak, and perhaps do and say many things I ought not, yet I want to fit and prepare myself for Zion.

There are others here very near the kingdom, and will soon follow Mr. and Mrs. Hogle into the water, and it makes us feel proud to see them coming in.

My prayer is for the Saints and the welfare of Zion. I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may be faithful. MRS M. BURT.

REACH, Me., January 27.

Dear Herald:—I am interested in this work of the kingdom. It has been some time since I joined the church. I am glad my heavenly Father called me out from this world of sin and woe into the everlasting light. God has no respect of persons; he that will do his will and keep his commandments shall be accepted of him. God is a prayer hearing and a prayer answering God. What a good thing it is to have a friend we can call on in time of trouble and sickness—a friend that is a present help in every time of need.

Dear Saints, there are times when earthly friends must fail to help us; when their aid and help cannot reach our wants; then we need a friend in Jesus. He can supply all our wants if we only obey his laws and precepts. I am trying to do my Master's will, and I pray his Spirit to be with me. I want to be found on the right hand of God when our Master comes to judge his people, and be found worthy to enter into his presence. The time will come when we shall be called on to give an account for the deeds done in the body.

Dear sisters, let us be faithful and do the best we can; let our light shine so that others may see our good works and be led to glorify our Father in heaven. I think we ought to be a happy people, for we read that eve hath not seen, nor ear heard, the joy and comfort that is in store for the people of God. God has a work for us to do, and if we are faithful in doing it he will give us his Spirit.

We thank the good Master that we can have his Spirit when we live for it. Now we have obeyed the gospel and have pledged ourselves to honor, love, and serve him if he would lend us his aid. Yet how weak and sinful we are; but with joy we are looking forward to the promised endless life.

We have meetings here every Sunday at Mountainville, and we have a nice Sunday school; it was organized about four months ago, by Elders John N. Ames and S. G. Cunningham. May the Lord bless them for their good work. I hope we shall meet on the new earth by and by.

> Your sister in the one faith, M. E. BILLINGS.

> > CHIC), Cal, Feb. 5.

Editors Herald:-After the Bushrod Park reunion at Oakland, Bro. A. M. Chase and I pitched our district tent at Golden Gate, on land owned by a lady who had been acquainted with some of our people and knew we did not represent Utah "Mormonism." Fifteen discourses were presented there to people who never before had heard the restored gospel.

Since then I preached at Standish, Alturas, and Ft. Bidwell. At the latter place I baptized a sister who has long desired to unite with us, but conditions had hitherto prevented. May the Lord bless her in the trials she has had.

Leaving the work to the care of Bro. T. Daley, who was in that county, I went to Sacramento, and while there held services in Oak Park at the house of Bro. Jas. Lawn; but the sickness of his wife for a time prevented continuing them, although some apparently became interested in the work. For two weeks I have been preaching at Dayton, which is six miles from here, and some are nearly, if not quite, convinced that our message is of God; but at Chico, where I have preached every Sunday, there seems much less prospect of any material results. or opportunity of a permanent opening, having only opportunity of preaching at Sr. Aiken's house, except last Sunday, when I, having no appointment till three p. m., went to the Christian church, and as they had no one that day to preach for them, I was asked to speak, which I did with a good degree of liberty. They also requested me to preach that evening, but I was obliged to refuse because of an appointment at Dayton.

The Brighamites come here and preach on the streets every year at a season some later than this, but I am informed have met with no success although Chico has about four thousand people.

I inclose a clipping descriptive of the death of J. D. Taber who claimed to be the sheriff who had custody of the Martyr at Carthage at the time he was slain: Chico has also several more characters claiming to know Joseph Smith. One of them, named Van Horn. said he met him in New York and saw him perform a miracle of healing. I asked: "Did the man really get well?" and he replied, "Yes! He got well alright, but it was nothin' but 'lectricity done it." He said the Book of Mormon was written by a man named Mosum, living in Ohio, whom Joseph Smith met after he moved from New York. I did not tell him that the Book of Mormon was published prior to that event.

> Sincerely, A. B. PHILL PS.

ARLINGTON, Iowa, Feb. 8.

Editors Herald:-I came to this place yesterday, and will hold forth over Sunday. Will then go to Amber, where our Sunday convention meets February 16 and 17.

Affairs in this district are moving along smoothly, though the work is not gaining in numbers as we would like to see it. Those of the missionary force are doing all that it seems possible for them to do; and so, after our sowing with a liberal hand, we can only pray that God may give the increase.

I am pleased to learn that the Saints in this district have done so nobly in tithes and offerings, and I hope that they may even increase the amount this year. I hope and pray that the Saints may do all they can consistently to relieve the church of the college debt, and that they who have subcribed to pay so much may not fail to send in the amount. May God bless Israel.

Still in the conflict.

J. R. SUTTON.

HAMILTON, Scotland, Jan. 26. Editors Herald:-In your issue of January 2, you state that England is facing a serious crisis, and that Lord Kitchener is demanding horses and men which the home authorities are hardly able to give him; and so serious is the situation that the soldiers' pay has been increased from one shilling and sixpence to five shillings per day. Now, there are two mistakes I should like to draw your attention to; the first, there has been no increase in the soldiers' pay, neither is there a scarcity of men. In fact, the British government (not English) can get all the men wanted, from all parts of the kingdom. They are volunteering for active service. The ones who are offered five shillings per day are colonials, able to ride, for Baden Powell's police force and other colonial forces that are being raised, but the regulars' wage is still the same.

The other mistake I hope you will rectify in future, because I hope to see an increased number of subscribers here ere long to your paper, and they would not be very well | January; the 27th I had meeting in my pleased to read of "England" and "English" being used where it ought to be "Britain" and "British." I am not aware that we are in subjection to Eagland. We are partners in the firm called Great Britain, and we have done our part in maintaining the integrity of the empire, and therefore don't intend to be hid under the name "England."

I have no prejudices against the English or England, and have many friends among them; but at the same time I do not like to see "auld scotia" put in the background. I want no apology, do not desire any; only, correct it in future, and I shall be satisfied.

Well, in regards to the work here: we expect great things this summer, but require more laborers. Bro. J. W. Rushton is a hustler, and no mistake; he won't let the grass grow under feet; always ready for the fight: but two could accomplish much more, as it is all outside work, and very hard on Yours in gospel bonds,

WILSON MUNRO.

[WE are pleased to give space to the following letter from one of our Lamanite brethren who is very much interested in the work. Come again, Bro. Karahoo; we are glad to hear from you.-ED ]

OTTAWA, I. T., Feb. 5.

Editor Herald:-This is the first time I have written to the HERALD since I have been in the work. I have been in this latterday work almost two years and four months, and every day that comes I rejoice because I know that the Lord and Master is in this great latter-day work and it is divine, and he has blessed me many times since I have been a Latter Day Saint. The more I do his will the more I know his doctrine.

About thirteen years ago, I believe, I worked at the U.P. shop at Armstrong. I got acquainted with an old man by the name of Mr. Steward. He was running a stationary engine in planing mill department. This old man would talk to me every time he got a chance. He would tell me where the Indians came from, and he said he had a book that was a history of the Indian race. I did not pay much attention to his talk. I was pretty wild then, and I only called him a "Mormon." But if I could meet him now I would ask him to forgive me, for I am in the same faith that he was.

A few years after that I left that shop, went west, and I was told that the Indians were nothing but dogs, and there were no good Indians except dead ones. Then it would bring to mind what this old man said to me. He told me that the Indians were God-chosen people, and I often grieved about it whether we were or not. I often wondered if there would be any redemption for us or not. But when I read the Book of Mormon I found peace to my soul, and the gospel was glad tidings.

In this part of the Lord's vineyard the work is going on, and God's word is spreading, not in word only but in power. I have not done as much lately as I desire. I have been working at home, building an addition to my house. I finished on the 26th of house, preaching by W. B. Hillis, presiding priest of the Fairland branch. Good effort made, "what we believe." Bro. W. E. Haden was also with us, and continued the meeting six nights. Fair crowds and good interest, and the result was one baptism, Mrs. Monden. I believe she will make a good Latter Day Saint. Much prejudice removed and light given.

February 3 we went over to Fairland. It was sacrament day. We found Bro. S. W. Simmons and Bro. J. T. Riley holding forth. The whole town is in an uproar. The general talk is of the "Mormon" meetings, causing many to go to hear, whether true or not; and when they go Bro. Simmons gives them Simmons regulator, and they have to take the medicine.

I was up to Mimai City a few days ago, and Bro. Peek is building a nice little church house. Will be finished soon. Bro. F. C. Keck has been holding also in the hall in Mimai, Indian Territory. The town has been stirred up.

I was walking down the street the other day, and saw about six or seven men in a bunch, and I stopped to see what was the trouble. One man said he was about to wear out his Bible; every time he would turn a leaf he would find a Latter Day Saint doctrine. Another man said those old Mormons who call themselves Latter Day Saints would all go to hell. Another man said if they would go to hell they would have a good speaker, that was F. C. Keck. Another man said if Bro. F. C. Keck would go to hell he wanted to go there too. He knew there would be no hell fire nor brimstone there; it would be a good place. I ask all to remember me in their prayers.

> Yours in gospel bonds, NOAH KARAHOO.

> > PAPEETE, Taniti, Jan. 21.

Editor Herald:—I have not written often from this mission, as it would doubtless not be as interesting as you are able to furnish to your readers from other lands and from other pens. A word now and then, however, may not make our names to appear too conspicuous, and may be acceptable to those who contemplate a mission to this paradise of the Pacific, as well as to those who have been here.

We are both in good health, and like the mission very much. We trained ourselves in America to pay no regard to discouragements, and openly and bravely face all difficulties; and we will try and meet every emergency undaunted, knowing that there is a hole through somewhere.

Since the last conference we have spent our time among the coral islands, teaching and instructing the Saints the plan of salvation and its logical conclusion. We have been well paid for our work, and feel to rejoice in the goodness of Him who "holds the reins in his own hands."

I suppose there are no brighter spots on this world, and perhaps on no other, than these white coral rings in the Pacific Ocean One almost feels like kissing the ground after a trip through Colorado and Utah, and worse yet, through Nevada. The green garden spot in California seems almost like a dream with the nightmare before and after. Land on one side and ocean on the other. On about twenty of these celestial spots in the "midst of the sea" live about two thousand Latter Day Saints. There we spend most of our time, as at Tahiti there are only two branches, with prospects of a third.

Immediately after the April conference we left Papeete to spend the year doing whatever good we could, building up the church and observing native character and its application to the gospel.

Shortly after we left Papeete the Master was pleased to give me the language, in consequence of which I have preached more sermons in that time than any period of the same length of time in twelve years' missionary experience. We have not visited so many islands as we intended, but it was not our fault. Nothing so nettles me as the extremely slow—well I'll just say everything, for that about expresses it. I hope to infuse a little more hustle into church matters here, or at least be found trying. I hope to follow Bro. Kelley's instruction, "Awake the sleepers."

Nothing could equal the kindness of these people. It is really phenomenal. One's heart goes out to them in great compassion. No wonder Uncle Mark wrote me, "I love that people." We have been kindly received everywhere, but at one place, and there our people are largely tinctured with Mormonism While we were shown no ill favor, yet there was not that cordiality existing elsewhere.

Some wonderful manifestations of the Spirit have been received this year. I heard one brother, who does not understand any English, deliver quite a prophecy in English, concerning the coming of Christ and the gathering. Many open visions have been received, pointing the Saints to the law of tithing; in consequence of which we have several hundred dollars surplus on hand. I mean surplus tithing, of course, not the surplus under certain conditions paid before tithing. I have organized four Religios on a simplified plan, suitable to the needs here. They are taking great interest in it. My greatest difficulty is to keep the older folks from crowding out the children. All four branches have petitioned me to allow older folks to become members of the totaleti (society). My wife spends all of her spare time with the Sunday school work. It is very lively.

I came to Papeete the first of January, the 6th I believe, to look after church matters and get off my reports in time for conference. I find the work in excellent shape here, notwithstanding it was prophesied that Tarona would go down. Of course it may do so yet, but the prospects are not running in that direction now. I counted over seventy Saints at church one evening. The grounds and buildings have been well kept. The city inspector told our people recently that we had the cleanest place in the city.

We expect a very large attendance at conference. We are now closing in our conference house with lattice work, but I believe it will be too small. Far away Hao and Amanu have chartered a ship to bring them to conference. Manihi has chartered another to bring every man on the island,—Saints, Catholics, and nonmembers. One district on this island, Tautira, where the Saints usually arrive at and depart from when going to the Tuamotus, have made the Saints promise to bring them to conference. The conference Saints, or nearly five hundred of them, were storm bound two months last spring at that place. Their conduct and conversation awakened quite an interest among the Protestants, and now they want to see our conference and hear more of the work.

We have only good news to report all along the gospel line. Many old difficulties have been settled, and others are being constantly agitated; though the marriage relationship is in a bad way. But we can only do the best we can. According to the law here, it is utterly impossible for many to get married; but they live very faithfully with their companions, many times, more so than those who are married. In such case it is not right to require impossibilities of them. Many of them weep like children when you talk to them about the matter, saving they "do not want to leave the church," but what can they do. I really feel sorry in my heart for them; they feel very sorrowful over their condition. I hope a change may come, and that God will work upon the hearts of the lawmakers to better arrange matters.

When I look out upon this great political world of ours, I cannot but ask, "Of what use is the world to the Creator, as it is now?" Politics here is in a very bad way. One can get neither beginning nor end, only we hear that something is wrong. I ventured to ask what the trouble was, and was promptly told, and that, too, by an American, "The less questions you ask of that nature the better you will be off." Another American told me that the Governor General wanted to do right and have things in proper shape, but the atholics on one hand and the Protestants and liberals on the other, kept up a continual struggle, and the Governor was becoming very tired of it. I hear that he goes home to France on this steamer. A report has been circulated, since the arrival of the steamer, "That a son-in-law of Mr. Cardella, mayor of Papeete, has been made governor." One son-in-law is the head of the Protestant church here. If he is the new governor, we cannot say as to the future. Another son-in-law is now in France, and is said to be a very nice man. He is but a young man, and many think him too young, and for that reason they doubt that he is the

We read with pleasure the congratulations extended to us in this mission, because of the appointment of several brethren to the local governorship. We thank you, Bro. Editor, for your mention and for your congratulations, but they were a little premature. I think about twenty years. I was of the same opinion myself. I had it from some of the brethren who had been called in to the governor's office and shown the list; but it never materialized after three elections. The Governor overthrowing the first and second, things were worse than they had been, i. e., fewer of our men had been appointed than last term. This I consider, however, to be a blessing to the church, as it leaves our best men free for the ministry; besides temptations in that office are very strong against righteousness and meekness. I think I reported the matter to the Church Historian, but he may expect to hear from me again next mail. Have not time now to report before the boat leaves.

Wish to say to all our friends that our mail, though much delayed, has arrived, and all letters will be answered in due time. I think we have not lost a letter since coming here. Our HERALDS, however, get lost. The last issue of October and all of November are missing. While we have lost no letters, we think occasionally some of ours are lost. One we sent to Bro. Kaler, of Australia, inquiring concerning the date of their conference, but we have received no reply. I am glad to see the HERALD enlarged.

The captain of the American steamer Australia called on us a short time last night to make some inquiries about the difference between us and the Utah people, and asked permission to look through our grounds and conference house. Had quite a pleasant chat with him. After he left, the natives told me that they had heard the captain was an old time Latter Day Saint, but left the church because of the exodus west. It may be true. I bespeak for our missionaries coming on his boat, kindly treatment, at any rate, whether he was or was not at one time a Latter Day Saint, as he appears to be a very nice man.

Our native Bishop's agent goes to America on the next boat, and will be in time for the next conference. I think he is the first native to visit the conference, and the first of the Sixth Quorum of Elders.

A WORD TO THE COMING MISSIONARY.

Some have written me concerning what would be necessary to bring to this mission in case of an appointment. Others who may not have written, and who may be appointed, would be glad to know, so I will say, Bring nothing but books, and subscribe for several good papers before you leave. Anything you have that you do not have to buy, and you think would be of use to you in a warm climate, bring along. You will have to pay heavy duty on anything new. Clothing is cheaper here than in America. Feather pillows cannot be bought here. If you have small feet bring along good shoes, a good mackintosh, umbrella, and rubbers. American money is at quite a premium here now since the election in America. If you have any money to spend, spend it here for what you see you need. Don't buy in San Francisco, as everything is very high. I paid eighty cents for a frying pan I could get on the ten cent counter in Clinton, Iowa. You can get English hardware here cheap, stoves and all. If you wish to buy in San Francisco, see Bro. Parkin or Bro. Lincoln in Oakland. or others. You will find as warm-hearted Saints in California as you ever met, at least so we found it.

With an eye open for the advancement of Zion's cause, I am,

Your brother in gospel peace, J. W. PETERSON.

SMITH-BAYS DEBATE.

Омана. Neb., Feb. 12.

Editors Herald:—It may be of interest to some of your readers, to know how the debate between Elder Heman C. Smith, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and Elder D. H. Bays, of the Christian or Disciple Church, is progressing. They have only finished one proposition as follows: "That the Book of Mormon is of divine origin, and contains a revelation of God's will to man." Elder Smith opened the debate for the affirmative, Elder Bays denying. A short synopsis follows:—

Elder Smith opened by showing that the Book of Mormon agrees with the Bible doctrinally and morally, arguing from this that corrupt men would hardly write a work so full of good doctrine and morals. Elder Bays admitted the morality of the book, and did not attempt to deny its doctrinal purity, but raised the cry of fraud, asserting he would prove that the whole thing was a fabrication and false. But the Bible, he said, was all right, and he expected to defend the Bible later on in the discussion.

Elder Smith now proved that to believe the Book of Mormon one must believe Jesus Christ and the atonement made by him. This was met by a little ridicule and sarcasm.

The Book of Mormon claims to be a record of Joseph the son of Jacob, and his descendants. The only argument Elder Bays offered on this was to assert that it could not be proven, and made a demand for Eider Smith to trace them step by step in their emigration to this country. He brought no proof in rebuttal. Elder Smith showed that the record was found in the land promised to Joseph, using Dauteronomy 33:13; Genesis 49:22; Genesis 48:8, to show where the land of Joseph was, and in whom the blessing centered. This also was met by assertion that it did not refer to geography or to America; but no attempt was made to show what it did mean. He continued to call attention to his belief in the Bible, and that he expected to defend it later. Elder Smith asked him, "How long since you were ready to defend the Bible as all right?" This brought out a lengthy explanation and a bitter accusation that the Reorganized Church had spread the report over all this western country that Elder Bays had turned infidel; but it was false; he never lost faith in God and his Son Jesus Christ.

Elder Smith said in reply, "If we have misrepresented you, Elder Bays, we are sorry for it, and are glad you believe in God and his Son; but we believe we had good reasons for believing you had lost faith, as I will show." He then read from Elder Bays' letter of resignation handed to the General Conference of 1892. This roused Elder Bays, and he confessed he did write that, and at that time he believed it. He was disturbed and all broken up in faith by "Mormonism." He then proceeded, and in the course of his remarks said: "I had been reading the higher criticism," and, turning to his Christian brethen, he said: "And you know how that will upset anyone in their faith." Then in the next breath he denied again that he ever doubted God and his Son, but claimed !

what he meant in his letter was he dcubted the plenary inspiration of the Bible. At this Elder Smith introduced a letter written to Elder C. Scott by Elder Bays, in which he stated that his doubts were of such a character as to strike at the very root of the Christian religion. This was the straw too much, and Elder Bays was ready to cry quits, but said he expected to meet that wherever he met the "Mormous" in debate.

He then said that nine out of ten of all those who left the "Mormon" church went into spiritualism, infidelism, or some kind of devilism. Elder Smith called his attention to the fact that the Christian Church occasionally caught one of these on the rebound. Elder Smith showed that three creditable witnesses testify that an angel presented before them the plates and the voice of God declared the record true. Elder Bays sought to discredit the testimony of these witnesses by trying to make it appear we had nothing but hearsay and nothing direct, arguing that because they left the church and went back on Joseph Smith their former testimony was false. Elder Smith answered him very effectually, using as one of his arguments that Elder Bays could hardly afford to take that ground, for if that was good logic the testimony Elder Bays had borne when in the church must be false as he, too, had leftthe church and gone back on Joseph Smith. To this there was no reply. His effort to destroy the testimony of the three witnesses failed completely. Eight other witnesses saw and examined the plates. This he did not notice; made no attempt.

Bro. Smith showed that the Book of Mormon claims concerning the language used was in harmony with subsequent archæological research, using Short and Baldwin in support of this claim. Elder Bays here made an attempt to answer this, asserting there was not a character on the fac simile sent to Prof. Anthon that had been found in South America. Elder Smith pointed out two, the Tau and Omicron. This seemed to settle him on that point. He made some farther play on language, but it accomplished nothing but his confusion. Elder Smith showed that the physical features of the American continent have been accurately described by the Book of Mormon. Foster and Baldwin were here cited in favor of this claim. Elder Bays' answer to this was that these changes and upheavals were brought about in the preglacial period. Elder Smith's answer was to show that these changes were contemporaneous with man's occupancy.

The claim of two ages of civilization made by the Book of Mormon were supported by Baldwin. Bays' only answer to this was to say there was a multitude of theories concerning this, and that in Yucatan was the earliest settlement in the world, using Atlantis as his authority.

The Book of Mormon claims the ancients were an agricultural people; confirmed by Foster and Baldwin.

Book of Mormon claims ancients mined ore. Baldwin does too.

Book of Mormon claims ancients built ships. Baldwin again.

Book of Mormon says horses here when settled. Foster and Winchell.

To the four claims above Bays argued that they did not prove anything for the divinity or truth of the Book of Mormon, and proceeded to argue that the finding of fossils of the horse proved nothing for us, as horses did not have time to fossilize since the Nephite period. Elder Smith argued that if they were here long enough before the Nephite period to fossilize, it was very evident they were here when the Nephites came to this country, and he did not claim that the particular horse that Nephi may have ridden was fossilized.

Eider Bays here presented another objection to the Book of Mormon claim of mining; he found an ore mentioned in Book of Mormon called ziff, and asked Eider Smith to tell us what it was. He had been asking for one Hebrew word all along; so Eider Smith told him he did not know what kind of metal was meant, but it was a Hebrew word meaning "brightness," also the name of the second month of the Jewish sacred year; and he wanted a Hebrew word and should be satisfied when he got it. That settled Bays on ziff and the Hebrew word too.

At this point Elder Bays read from notes he had from several authors to offset the archæological evidence presented, and to proveiron was unknown to ancient Americans. and then quoted from Baldwin, page 248, as follows: "Iron was unknown to them in the time of the Indians." He started to read just below the middle of the page, and only used one line, stopping at a comma, and calling the last word wrong, as it should be Incas instead of Indians. Following is the proper quotation as it reads: "Iron was unknown to them in the time of the Incas. although some maintain that they had it in the previous ages, to which belong the ruins of Lake Titicaca. Iron ore was and still is abundant in Peru. It is impossible to conceive how the Peruvians were able to cut and work stone in such a masterly way, or to construct their great roads and aqueducts without the use of iron tools. Some of the languages of the country, and perhaps all, had names for iron; in official Peruvian it was called quillay, and in the old Chilian tongue panilic. 'It is remarkable,' observes Molina, 'that iron, which has been thought unknown to the ancient American, has particular names in some of their tongues.' It is not easy to understand why they had names for this metal, if they never at any time had knowledge of the metal itself."

This whole passage was read by Elder Smith, and Elder Bays' effort to create a wrong impression by reading only a portion of a passage and stopping at a comma was exposed and made plain to the public, thus destroying all his effort of the night before at one short speech, and putting Elder Bays in a very unpleasant light before the congregation. To this he made answer that he read just as far as he wanted to, and had a perfect right to stop at a comma.

Elder Smith showed that the Book of Mormon account of working in cement was sustained by Short and Baldwin.

Mr. Bays' effort to set this aside was a very feeble one, about as follows: The Book of Mormon does not describe the houses nor tell where the plastering was done, so could not be true. That the ancients understood the art of making cloth, according to Book of Mormon is confirmed by Foster, Short, and Baldwin. Elder Bays made no answer to this.

Tower building for outlooks spoken of in Book of Mormon is supported by Short and Baldwin. This was also passed unnoticed.

Christian and idolatrous people mentioned in Book of Mormon. Short and Baldwin were used in support of this. Elder Bays mixed things on this quite badly, saying the Book of Mormon spoke of Christians only; afterward said he excepted the Lamanites.

Robber strongholds in mountains according to Book of Mormon is supported by Short. His answer to this fell in confusion with foregoing.

The American Anthropologist for October, 1899, vol. 1, no. 4, was here quoted which speaks of the Book of Mormon as a great anthropological, ethnological, and archæological work. Elder Bays met this a little sarcastically by saying it was a little irony, and he was sorry Elder Smith was so purblind he could not see it.

The Denver Republican for Saturday morning, June 9, 1900, was quoted to show that cities and fortresses have recently been found by Professor Compston, agreeing so exactly with Book of Mormon description as to be impossible to be accidental. To this Mr. Bays vouchsafed no reply, but he had laid himself open to the possibility for Elder Smith to literally bury him in evidence, from which he evidently saw he could not extricate himself, so he sought to dismiss it with the statement it was silly stuff, and he had wasted too much time on his archæology. Bro. Smith has archæology on the brain. Said he, it would not make good nonsense.

Elder Smith now introduced Ezekiel 37, the two records. Mr. Bays sought to explain this, and claimed it had its fulfillment. Elder Smith took this up, and soon showed his error on that, and Elder Bays let it alone. He now took up Mr. Bays' "good nonsense" argument, and told him he was not acquainted with any such article as good nonsense, so he would leave Mr. Bays to be the sole judge of that.

The writers of the Book of Mormon were in harmony with the customs of the Jews in writing on metallic plates, including gold and brass. This provoked a spirited contest by Mr. Bays. He rushed to the front with his array of three witnesses in his book, "Doctrines and Dogmas of Mormonism." only to meet one of the most crushing defeats during the proposition. Elder Smith now called attention to the contradictory statements of his witnesses, making them utterly unreliable; also showed by Mr. Bays' own book they had been prejudiced by the letter written to them before they gave their answers. He now introduced three witnesses to show Hebrews did write on brass plates, as follows: Horne's "Introduction to Bible," vol. 2, p. 47, footnote; "Union Bible Dictionary," article Book; "Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge," article Book; thus proving this point conclusively. Elder Bays strove hard to counteract this to the very close of the debate, but signally failed.

Isaiah 29 was now introduced by Elder Smith, with Psalms 85, and Isaiah 32, and a fine argument made showing the harmony between the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the restoration of the gospel and the land of Palestine to its fertility, all to be contemporaneous, making a powerful climax for the affirmative side. Elder Bays had been so very anxious to have Isaiah 29 brought out that he started to argue Elder Smith's side for him, when he was informed he had given up his license several years ago and did not represent the Latter Day Saints. He then dropped that, and accused Mr. Smith of fighting shy of the Bible; but he became so alarmed about his three witnesses on brass in his book that he forgot all about the Bible evidences, and consumed his time in an effort to bolster them up and fought shy of all the Bible evidences entirely. His closing speech was one of the weakest we ever heard in a discussion of the Book of Mormon.

All goes well so far. Bro. Smith well in body, and feeling well in spirit. Public opinion in our favor so far as we can learn.

February 15.—The second proposition was closed last night, which reads, "That the New Testament is the final and complete revelation of God to man."

Elder Bays claimed that the end of revelation was reached when Christ was revealed in the flesh, and that the end of revelation came when all authority was delivered unto Christ in heaven and in earth. Elder Smith met the foregoing by showing that Elder Bays contradicted himself and failed to bring anything to sustain him in either of his positions.

Because Christ was the author and finisher of our faith, we need no more revelation; so says Mr. Bays. Here Elder Smith asked some important questions; for instance, "Who is to perform the marriage ceremony?" "And how is the Lord's supper to be administered, and by whom?" "If the New Testament is final and complete, why were these things not provided for; and why was it necessary for A. Campbell to write a discipline." This was a bomb in their camp, and stirred things up in fine style, and the Christian people were full of wonderment as to what would come out of this. They were confident they had Elder Smith in a bad box, and so Elder Bays comes to the fray with seemingly more vigor and confidence than usual, and said: "This man says A. Campbell wrote a discipline. Now did any of you Christian people ever see a Christian Discipline? If you did, hold your hands up." (Not a single hand up.) Then, turning to his moderator, the pastor of the church, he said: "Bro. Hilton, did you ever see a Christian Discipline?" and got this reply: "No sir; never heard of one." Mr. Bays turned triumphantly to Elder Smith and said: "Now, sir, produce it in court, or you are impeached."

Elder Smith said quietly, "I'll do it, sir," and when he took the floor he picked up the 'Christian System," by A. Campbell; and, turning to page 85 of the edition he was using, read to them from the Christian discipline, and told what it taught. He then held it down for Elder Hilton to see, and told him never to say he had not seen one again. Mr. Hilton then said he had one at home and had read it a hundred times. Elder Smith told Mr. Hilton he was glad he remembered it.

The people were astonished; they evidently did not think it could be done.

Elder Bays came back on this by saying there were several Christian writers who had written chapters on discipline, and asked why Elder Smith did not quote them. Mr. Smith replied one was enough for him.

Elder Bays now claimed whenever God gave enough to save man the end of revelation had come. Mr. Smith here called attention to the thought that if that was true the New Testament was superfluous as enough had been given long before New Testament times.

Elder Bays said as Christ was the central figure no more revelation was necessary.

Mr. Bays' claim was now set up by assertion that the New Testament was adapted to the whole needs of man, therefore no more revelation would be given. He asked Eider Smith to point out something needed not provided for in the New Testament, which Smith proceeded to do, and called for answers to his former questions concerning marriage, Lord's supper, and others. Bays now made a claim that because types, feasts, etc., all pointed to Christ, it was impossible to receive more revelation, and defied Mr. Smith to show one type or feast that pointed to a further revelation. Elder Smith replied that he admitted that types and feasts pointed to Christ, but that was irrelevant, as no claim was ever made that types and feasts ever pointed to revelation.

Because the new covenant was perfect there could be no more revelations. Bays claimed that Christ was the great prophet spoken of by Moses, herefore there would be no more revelation after Christ came; and because Christ was the tried stone spoken of, that settled it. Unless Eider Smith could show some revelation higher than Jesus Christ and better than he was, his claim must go down. He then took the position that the law and the prophets were until John, therefore there could be none after him. Elder Smith now opened on him and showed that according to Mr. Bays' last argument he would shut out the Christ himself, as he was after John and we never claimed anything higher than Jesus Christ.

Christ's will was now probated, and the seal was broken on the day of Pentecost and therefore nothing could be added. To this Elder Smith replied that we were entitled to our legacies after the probating of the will, the promis s in God's will to the children of men; and one of these promises was the Holy Spirit (John 16) which would show us things to come, and take the things of God and show them unto us.

Bays claimed Christ taught his apostles to teach whatsoever he had commanded them; therefore there would be no further commands given. Also that Christ's life was the ideal life therefore there was to be no more revelation. He also said God's kingdom was an everlasting kingdom, therefore there would be no more revelation; and that law was perfect, therefore no more revelation. And because the scripture was able to make you wise unto salvation, no more revelation was necessary. (2 Timothy 3:16, 17)

Elder Smith took this up and showed clearly that according to Elder Bays' argument this destroyed his own theories, as they did not have the New Testament when that was written to Timothy, and Timothy had known them when a child, hence the New Testament was not needed at all, as sufficient had previously been given to make wise unto salvation.

Mr. Bays said gospel was the power of God unto salvation, therefore no more revelation; and that because the faith was once delivered to the Saints there would be no more revelation. He used Jude 3, the revised version, where it is stated: "The faith which was once for all delivered unto the Saints," the words for all not appearing in the King James translation. The reader can easily see he had built his hope upon assertion with little proof or attempt at it. He used Matthew 25:14 to show no communication or revelation from God after Christ ascended on high.

We now wish to show some of the rebuttal presented by Elder Smith on the negative side; and to our surprise Mr. Bays paid little attention to the things presented. Elder Smith was under the necessity of calling attention to the proposition nearly every speech, as his opponent seemed to forget it entirely. Here is some of the rebuttal evidence by Bro. Smith:—

Acts 20; all nations might feel after God and find him. No man knew the Father, but the Son, and he to whom the Son should reveal him. (Matt. 11:27.) Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold, and they shall hear my voice. (John 10:16) God would do nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants the prophets. (Amos 3:7.) On this he made a nice argument showing that it was an absolute necessity for us to have further revelation, and called Elder Bays' attention to the claims of his people. He said if the "New Testament is the final and complete revelation of God to man," then the claim of my opponent is a poor one, for God surely had nothing to do with the movement which Bays represents here tonight, and the great work of restoration they talk about must be of man alone, and not one word of sanction from God for their church or

Elder Bays had likened the gospel to the electric light and drawn a very nice picture of the possibility of getting into the radiance of that light and remaining there. Elder Smith now took up his illustration and continued it slightly agreeing with Bays, as far as he went. Mr. Smith now urged that to keep that light with all its power and brightness it was necessary to keep a current of electricity continually flowing from the power house to the light; but suppose the engineer at the power house should shut the current off, where would your light be? It would be darkness; and this is just what Elder Bays would have done,—shut off the current of revelation that has made the gospel of Jesus Christ shine so brightly and powerfully. This was plain, and had a telling effect on the audience, which was very evident to any one sitting where he could see the faces of the people.

Elder Smith now quoted John 15:14, the promise of Christ that his disciples were to be his friends, arguing from this that as friends communed together, so Christ would commune with his friends. Elder Bays sought to offset this by claiming that Mr. Smith would use commune and revelation synonymously, which was not proper nor correct.

A list of twenty books with references was given, mentioned in the B ble but not to be found, written by some of the same authors as some of the books in the Bible, and it was asked; Could the Bible be complete without these? Bays brushed this aside by saying we were dealing with canonical books only.

Elder Smith now read from the Christian Standard, for June 30, 1900. Mr. Neal of the Christian Church writes that a great message was to come forth, and Alexander Campbell got it from God and delivered it to the people. To this Mr. Bays chose to make no answer. Their theory of the Bible, and Bible alone, was completely upset by their discipline, and where Mr. A. Campbell declared that the church was not to be governed by the "written document alone," but by officers duly chosen. There was no reply made to these.

Mr. Campbell claimed that angels were and are still employed in the affairs of his kingdom to minister to those who are heirs of salvation, and that he wanted the old order of things back; hence the New Testament could not be complete nor yet final. No reply to this either.

John 16 was quoted, showing the promise of the Spirit of truth which should reveal the things of God to us. No attention paid to this.

Revelation 11 was now brought to show there would be two prophets in Jerusalem. To this Elder Bays assented; said there might be such things for all he knew; he did not know what that meant.

Revelation 14: 6, "I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth." Elder Bays said this meant a messenger, and the preachers sent out were the messengers. Elder Smith asked him if any of their elders ever flew "in the midst of heaven." The absurdity of his claim was made apparent to the congregation.

Joel 2, was now shown in its true light, and a fine argument made on it, completely upsetting Mr. Bays' claims that the end of all revelation had come and was complete in the New Testament. Mr. Bays answered this by asserting it was all nonsense, and he would not waste any time on that.

We were somewhat astonished when Elder Bays stated he knew there must be another revelation in order to the consummation of all things when Christ shall again reveal himself to his Saints. Elder Smith used this concession with telling effect, and completely snowed him under on this proposition. It was generally conceded that Mr. Bays was making a very poor fight on this proposition and was no match for Elder Smith.

F. A. SMITH.

CENTRALIA, Kan., Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—We are glad to get the HERALD and learn the profitable news which can always be found on its pages. We do not take the HERALD, but get it to read from my husband's mother. We are always glad to read the letters written by the Saints.

I joined the church about three years ago; was baptized by Bro. W. S. Pender, and have never been made to regret the step I have taken. Although at times we become discouraged by our own weakness and the prejudice manifested by some against our work, yet we know that there is nothing of which to be ashamed. It is my desire to ever press onward to the end. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints. With love for all of God's people.

Your sister in the faith of Christ, MRS. JOHN MCDOUGAL.

ROSTOCK, February 6.

Editors Herald:-Elder R. C. Evans has just closed a series of lectures here which lasted from January 27 to February 5, twelve in all. Although the weather was quite inclement, at times the attendance was good, and the angel's message was tersely told by the silver tongued orator. Error was exposed, the truth made to shine as gold tried in the fire, the Saints encouraged, and others brought near the kingdom. In the first lecture on infant baptism Eider Evans' position was that God never sent Jesus to teach infant baptism; Jesus never sent an apostle; an apostle never sent an elder; and there was not a scrap of evidence in the Bible to support infant baptism. He then gave the privilege to any gentleman in the audience to produce a passage in its favor. The Rev. Mr. Oldenburg, pastor of the Lutheran Church, Wartburg, arose, and made an effort to defend the creed of his church, and wound up by admitting three times, that there is no evidence in the Bible to support infant baptism. Yet upon that same day he performed that same ordinance, demonstrating the fact that he was following the precepts of men and not the teachings of the Christ.

Nothing prevents R. C. from performing any known duty. Storm, cold, mountains of snow, sometimes ploughing through snow clear over the horses' backs to reach the bedside of the sick, wading up to our middle in order to get the horse through the deep snow with the empty cutter. But that is nothing when compared with damp sheets and icicles in the bed chamber.

Rostock has its history. It is a small village surrounded by a beautiful farming country, settled mostly by Germans, industrious and well to do. Here is where the famous Ben Sam Krupp lived, famous in scandal and deception; but like those who preceded him, his folly has been exposed and the truth shines out all the brighter after the fray. Here too is where the Milverton Sun made its scandalous attack on Elder R. C. Evans claiming he preached favoring polygamy. Here the most contemptible trickery has been resorted to in order to injure the work of God. All has failed, and today the Saints have a beautiful brick church, dedicated. Elder S. W. Tomlinson preached the first sermon in the village, followed by Elder McGregor, then by the writer. Good work was done; Elder Dan McGregor baptized five, the writer eleven. So the good work moves on. I expect to go from here to Listomel, in company with Elder Fred Gregory, then on to Kincardine.

Yours in the struggle,

G. C. TOMLINSON.

WALLSEND. N. S. W., January 15. Editors Herald:-Since I last wrote a letter to your columns. I have been laboring in a new field, on the Richmond River, near the northern border of New South Wales. I found the walls of prejudice very stubborn, but succeeded in creating a little interest. I came home to attend our district conference, which has passed off very successfully, and in a few days I shall again leave for the Richmond River district, to follow up the work begun there. January 1 saw the birth of the Australian Nation, when amid the pomp and splendor consequent upon the expenditure of 500,000 dollars in decorations alone, the Governor-General, and Ministers of State for Federated Australia, were sworn in, in the presence of four hundred thousand people, in Centennial park, Sydney, N. S. W. What was once the Australian Colonies, is now the United States of Australia. We trust that the gospel may win its way better under the new conditions than it has done under the old.

The appearance of my pamphlet, "The Book of Mormon on Trial," has been the cause of some apprehension on the part of the "Campbellites" of New South Wales, for the successor to the "evangelist" who read Bays' book from house to house, lately had an article in one of their papers entitled "Latter Day Saint Doctrine Unveiled," written "for the benefit of any who may have been influenced" by the pamphlet. The article is composed of the usual "borrowed thunder" from Bays, Neal, and Braden. Here is a sample of his reasoning: "We are told that whosoever does not believe the words of Joseph Smith, Jr., shall be damned." We must quote the passage or they might deny it. "Verily I say unto you, they who believe not on your words, and are not baptized in water in my name for the remission of their sins, that they may receive the Holy Ghost, shall be damned."

Why bless you, Mr. Pond, that is nothing! I am prepared to prove by the same logic that you believe that "whosoever does not believe the words of P. J. Pond will be damned!" You claim that you have authority to preach by virtue of the Savior's command "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." Very well, then, whosoever does not believe your preaching "shall be damned," for Jesus said that they who believed the preachers should "be saved," but "he that believeth not shall be damned." Anyone who will read the Doctrine and Covenants, section 83, paragraph 12, will see that there is not one word about anyone being damned who does not believe the words of Joseph Smith. It refers to the whole ministry of the church, for it is Christ commissioning them to go into all the world and preach the gospel. If Christ gave such a commission as that 1900 years ago, is it wrong for him to give such a commission in this age? Argument is a rare article with people who put up a man of straw, and who look for the crowd to applaud when they knock the "straw nothing" down. One of these brave annihilators of "Mormonism" came to my first meeting at Lismore and threatened to open fire upon me with his big guns, but his firing has all been done with smokeless and noiseless powder. Afraid to risk anything by entering into a fair and honorable debate, he has gone around peddling the usual scandal, as well as putting a mass of filthy stuff into the paper which they print in the town. We have replied to it in the public press, but he is not the man to follow, and despite his efforts we have an honest few, who are interested in the angel's message. We shall continue the effort in that place until wisdom directs that our efforts shall be directed elsewhere. Ever praying for the success of the Master's cause,

I am yours fraternally,
WALTER J. HAWORTH.

WILKESPORT, Ont., Feb. 9.

Editors Herald:—I rejoice in reading the letters from my brothers and sisters. This glorious work and a wonder must surely be of God. It seems plainer to me the more I read about it. The more we seek for knowledge the more we will receive, for God will never turn us away when we seek him with our whole heart.

I desire to serve him more faithfully and be more worthy of his blessings. I sometimes feel weak in the faith, but when I go to my heavenly Father in prayer he strengthens me.

We as a little band of Saints have received many blessings in the past by administrations of those having authority to do so, but some of the blessed ones seem too weak to stand and testify of them, and I feel that they are to be prayed for that they may be strengthened. They will have to do their part first. I have been healed by the laying on of the elders' hands, of a lump in my throat that used to cause me at times to feel as though I was choking.

I feel to rejoice in this latter day work. I know the blessings follow those who believe. I long to see the day in this part of God's vineyard when the Spirit of God will flow from heart to heart that the Saints may rejoice. We have had great blessings promised us. Let us be up and doing our duty, and pray for one another. I ask that you pray for me that I may be guided aright to so live to bring these little buds of promise up that are around my knee into the way they should go, that they be shielded from the sins and temptations of the world. When I see my fellow creatures passing away it makes me feel sad to think of their hope on the other shore, I just think if they only had obeyed the commandments; but God's will be done. Ever praying for the welfare of the Saints and redemption of Zion, I am,

Your sister in the one faith,
MRS. JOHN SHAW.

SAN BENITO, Cal., Feb. 9. Editors Herald:-I received letters this mail informing me that Metuaore and perhaps Pai of Tarona in Papeete will leave that place on the 23d of this month, on the steamer Australia, and will land in San Francisco on March 7. After visiting a few branches in California will go on to the General Conference in Independence. It would be a great pleasure to them to meet the former missionaries to those islands in the south seas; Bro. and Sr. Devore, Bro. and Sr. Case, Brn. Forscutt, Newton, and Gilbert. I hope it will be so that all these can meet them, for doubtless it would be a joyful meeting mutually.

The islanders have for a long time desired to come to America to see the order of the church here, and to meet and get acquainted with the leading officers and members of the church, and to see Zion (the land-and the pure in heart), to see the printing house, the land of America with its wonderful railroads, and to travel two or three thousand miles without coming to the ocean. All this is almost incredible to them. They also wish to meet the Saints of America in branch and at home. And these brethren will note carefully what they see and hear, and upon their return will inform the Saints at their homes of all the wonderful things seen and heard in the wonderful land of America.

By reason of so many of our brethren being appointed governors in the Tuamotus, the Catholic and Protestants, being angry, petitioned the home government in France to remove them and reinstate the old governors; up to the present this has not been done, but the French governor, who appointed our brethren, has returned to France, possibly been recalled; not alone for that work of course, but because he was too friendly with foreigners; that is to say, Englishmen, and Americans, and others. The Boxer party is quite influential there as well as in China; and if the new governor favors that party strongly, they will try to make trouble for our church. But we hope, and we trust in God who rules among the inhabitants of earth sufficiently to bring to pass his righteous purpose.

Bro. Peterson is in Papeete making prepations for the April conference, which is expected to be a large one, Saints and outsiders coming from the Tuamotus and Tahiti. The Saints are much pleased with a new Matutu, or conversational dialogue, which Bro. Peterson has arranged for them, and they are all expecting a good time then.

Emma and I will accompany Metuaore to Emma and I will accompany Metuaore to Independence, and we probably will visit the Saints of the Northern California conference in Sacramento, and then go on south, through Los Angeles and so on east.

May peace be with all the Israel of God. J. F. BURTON.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

No matter though we cannot see
The dawn behind the clouds,
And though at first we're followed not
By fond, approving crowds,
Keep hope and let us travel on
In paths we know are right,
If the torch bearers we shall be,
More will behold our light.

EN VOYAGE.

Whichever way the wind doth blow, Some heart is glad to have it so, Then blow it east or blow it west, The wind that blows that is the best, My little craft sails not alone; A thousand fleets from every zone Are out upon a thousand seas; And what for me were favoring breeze Might dash another, with the shock Of doom, upon some hidden rock, And so I do not dare to pray For winds to waft me on my way, But leave it to a Higher Will To stay or speed me-trusting still That all is well, and sure that He Who launched my bark will sail with me Through storm and calm, and will not fail-Whatever breezes may prevail, To land me, every peril past-Within His sheltering haven at last. Then, whatsoever wind doth blow, My heart is glad to have it so; And blow it east or blow it west, The wind that blows, that wind is best.

-Selected.

SCHOOL CHILDREN AT HOME.

Read before the Patron's meeting, held November 23, 1900, at the High School building, Lamoni, Iowa, by Mrs. E. L. Kelley.

Take the child before it is of an age to enter school, and the training it receives then, is an important factor in the foundation of its character. Take the clay when it is plastic, the tree when it is young, the body, mind, and soul, of the child when it is fresh, clean, pure, and undefiled; when all its faculties are springing into life, 'tis then that the seeds of honesty, industry, frugality, cleanliness, sympathy, temperance, godliness may be sown never to be rooted out.

In this connection, let me state that the world will scarcely pay a greater tribute to Frederick Froebel than he justly deserves, for the system which he gave—not alone for the education of the youth—but for that which was intended for the conferring of such incalculable blessings upon the mothers of the land.

Give a child proper environments, where it is nurtured, shielded, and cultivated with a view to symmetrical development, and see how it will compare with the child who has been deprived of these advantages, and any teacher may readily tell you which one is ready, at the proper age, to enter school.

A San Francisco policeman is reported to have said: "If we could open more free kindergartens, we could almost shut up the penitentiaries."

A child entering school without proper preparation would be like a person entering an art gallery without a catalogue; they might see what was before them, but would fail to derive the benefits which would otherwise be obtained.

A number of years ago a little girl was told by her mother that the next year she should send her to school; after thoughtfully considering the matter a few minutes, she asked: "Mamma, what will you do for big dresses for me then?" Showing the child's idea to be that she was incapable at that time to enter the sphere of her older sisters, and must necessarily develop in some way, that of stature being her only way of expressing it.

Knowing that mother well, we heartily believe that as that child grew in stature, so also, were her mental faculties trained for the life which was before her.

The aims of the home and school are identical; for the school is but the broader home, seeking like it the good of the children.

Make the children feel this by keeping in touch with all their interests. Help to train to promptness and punctuality by urging that they are in school every day and on time, and especially urge that they do part of their school work at home.

If your child is taking lessons on the piano you invariably insist that he practice at least an hour each day, while you may never think it necessary that he read his reading lessons aloud to you at home, and yet it is considered the more difficult accomplishment of the two.

You may say "my children spend six hours a day in school, and I cannot think of having them study more than that," when sometimes a talk of five or ten minutes at home with a child about his lesson that he has spent perhaps an hour with at school and could not get, will overcome all the difficulty and he can then go on nicely. It is only helping to digest that which they are gathering to help build up their intellectual powers. No danger of falling victims to the cramming system so long as there is a hearty cooperation between the home and the school.

'The use we make of odd minutes," says Dr. Bateman, "determines whether we become wise or remain ignorant." It comes to me that if we rest by change of occupation, which I believe a correct principle, and if too constant application of the mind to abstract studies is injurious, then teach the children out of school to study along different lines—study by observation, by drawing—and in many other ways that the "odd minutes" may not be wasted.

Give the children plenty of physical exercise—it may be partly by work, for the right kind of work rightly done tends to concentrate the powers upon worthy ends—and partly in play or recreation, thereby resting or recuperating the tired and worn out faculties. The growth and development must be evenly balanced with discipline and training. Parents should indeed feel grateful for the incentive their children obtain somehow, somewhere, which makes them so interested in their studies, that they will apply themselves as if their very lives depended upon the excellency of preparation with which they come to their recitations.

There is one thing in connection with the student's life that will never be erased from a mother's memory, and that is the almost nightly request, "Mamma, call me at five o'clock tomorrow morning," suggesting that two hours at least must be put in at study, before appearing before the teacher for recitation.

Mutual interest and a hearty cooperation between teachers and parents in my judgment will give the most pleasing and useful results in the education of children, both in advancing them in their studies and in enforcing desirable disciplinary measures in the school precincts and at home. To obtain this cooperation there should be a cordial interchange of thought between the teacher and parents. Why should parents hesitate to become acquainted with the teacher who is to have the direction and shaping of their child's mind? On the other hand, it seems to me that after the teacher becomes acquainted with the temperament and habits of the parents, he is better able to judge of the disposition and demands of the child.

The school children at home, then, should be carefully cited to proper study and work at convenient times after ample exercise or physical labor, and at school they should be made to feel that they are under the supervision of a home government that has been established for their good, and that a failure to perform well their part either in study or conduct will surely be known and adjudged by the parents at home.

A DREAM.

In a conversation I had with a lady at Central, Missouri, a Mrs. Boss, a member of the Christian Church, this is what she said: This place got so wicked that religious interests were dead. People did all kinds of work on the sabbath, just the same as on week days, and were so wicked I began to fear. I dropped down on my knees and prayed the Lord to send a man here to preach. That night I had a dream that the Lord answered my prayer. I saw the man come up the street, carrying a package or grip in his hand, coming towards my house. He was a stranger; I had never seen him before. Several weeks later I saw a man come up the street, passing my house, carrying a small valise. I knew I had seen him before, but could not place him. At night I saw the same man in the pulpit preaching; still I could not place him. I kept looking at him, trying to think when and where I had seen him. A day or two afterwards, all of a sudden, my dream came to my memory, then I recognized him. The man I saw in my dream was Bro. S. D Love.

She wanted to be baptized, but her husband said she had been baptized once, and that was enough. She went to see Bro. S. D. Love baptize Sisters Marsh and Wyatt. She was almost heartsick. She said if only she was allowed to be baptized it would be the happiest hour of her life.

Another lady there belongs to the Church of God, says she wants them (meaning our elders) to show her when and where feet washing was done away with. That the beloved Jesus, after he had washed the disciples' feet, said ye ought to wash one another's feet. I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you, for the servant is not greater than his Lord. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them; and if it was only given to the apostles, so was also the breaking of the bread, and some other teachings given to the apostles. If one is for us to observe, the other is also; and if she gets a revelation that she is wrong, then she will be baptized by our elders, but not unless she has it revealed to her, she said.

By the Lord's directions Brn. Love and Baker did a good work at Central. They roused up the people from their religious sleep, or death. Although few have accepted as yet, it seems to be the topic of conversation. Central is a mining town between three and four miles from Blendsville, Missouri.

I have solicited and sent ten subscribers to the mission paper in Australia. If one or two sisters in every branch of like size would solicit and send in ten subscribers, it would only require fifty branches to make up the whole five hundred subscribers, which would gladden the hearts of our far away and needy brethren, and help to spread the blessed gospel in the island. May the Lord so work with us by his Spirit that we will realize our duty, is my prayer.

Your sister in faith,

MINNIE STOFFER. BLENDSVILLE, Mo., Feb. 4.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Sarah A. Morris, of Iowa Center, requests the faith and prayers of the Sisters' Prayer Union, that if it pleases God she may be healed of a long standing affliction.

NOTICE.

Secretaries of Daughters of Zion local societies are hereby requested to send to me as soon as possible after reading this notice, a full list of members, also stating changes in membership, and giving names of those lost and gained since last report. Address Mrs. Callie B. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Callie B. Stebbins, Recording Secretary.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

"A ROLLING STONE GATHERS NO MOSS."

The above quotation, when first we scan it, may seem but a very common, insignificant group of words, which nearly every schoolboy finds repeated so often in his copy book. Nevertheless, when we take time to consider its real meaning, it solves the mystery why so many persons have failed to attain success in any calling, simply because they were "rolling stones." The path of life is strewn with the wrecks of those who began, but after a lapse of time had fallen by the way-side. True, there are many whose names are recorded on the pages of history that appear as bright, shining stars; but when a comparison is made, we learn that the number that have failed far exceeds those that have been victorious.

IT IS NOT NECESSARY

that we be especially talented, or surrounded with altogether favorable circumstances; some of our most prominent men have, in childhood, been deprived of an opportunity of obtaining an education like the youth of today enjoy. Abraham Lincoln, when a boy, was very poor in this world's goods. He obtained an education from what books he could borrow and study during the evening after his work was finished. But he was determined to succeed, and by steady, persistent efforts he mounted the ladder step by step until he at last reached the top round.

"Heaven is not reached by a single bound,
We build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round."

The men whose names have been worthy of inscription on the scrolls of history have nearly all possessed a great amount of those that never deserted a purpose once deliberately formed. Among the military men, Hannibal, Alexander, Cromwell, and Grant were all such men; and their successes were won more by this characteristic than by anything else. Grant said, "I will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer," and he won. Great scholars have always had a great degree of steadfastness, otherwise they would have shrunk from the long days and nights of toilsome study, not always agreeable, by any means. Frances Willard, Clara Barton, and others too numerous to mention. nothing could entice to depart from their chosen life-work, and who will say that it was not a success?

STICK-TO IT IVE-NESS;

It must be admitted that the power of the will may go to the extreme, which must be avoided. It is then called obstinacy or stubbornness. But there are vastly more people with wills too weak, than too strong. Care must be taken in choosing an aim, but once decided upon, nothing should tempt us to leave it. Bear in mind the motto of David Crockett, "Be sure you are right, and then go ahead."

Though we may be surrounded by many discouragements and the world may seem bent on making us fail, we should remember that in the struggle of life it is always possible to turn one kind of a defeat into another kind of victory.

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS

is like climbing up a mountain side, the way may be rough and rugged, but on every hand are grand, magnificent views, which he who stays in the valley below will never see.

Nowhere is will power more needed than in the Sunday school. It may ofttimes seem that our efforts are in vain, but if we keep on with untiring efforts, we will finally be rewarded. Although our work which we may accomplish may seem but little, if we keep ascending instead of descending and bear in mind that "it is better to be small and shine than to be great and cast a shadow," life will be more worth the living.

Our work may seem but a discord,
Though we do the b st we can;
But others will hear the music,
If we carry out our plan.

VIOLA OLSON.

Angola, Kansas.

FREMONT.

Sunday school convention met at Shenandoah, Iowa, January 31. Time was spent in "introductory" by district superintendent and consideration of "normal work" in charge of C. Fry. All the district officers, and all but one school reported. Ethel I. Skank and Agnes Dunsdon were appointed secretaries pro tem. Officers elected for coming year: Charles Fry, superintendent; Emma Hougas, assistant superintendent; Emma Hougas, assistant superintendent; Ehel I. Skank, secretary; Agnes Dunsdon, assistant secretary; M. E. Pace, treasurer; Blanche Andrews, librarian. Delegates to General Convention: H. Kemp, I. M. Smith, C. Fry, Anna Kemp, E. Wilcox, W. W. and Laura Gaylord, William and Rachael Leeka, T. A., Emma D., and M. E. Hougas. A vote of thanks was tendered the officers of the district. Superintendent's suggestion that each local superintendent be requested to write a letter to district superintendent giving condition of his school at least once every quarter, adopted. Continuance of Bible study recommended. District superintendent was authorized to secure a Sunday school journal, the subscription to be paid out of district treasury. Superintendent's bill of $2.50 allowed. Question Box and Institute work given by the superintendency. Evening session was devoted to subject of "influence," consisting of "reading" by Ora Becksted, recitation by Mamie Pace, paper by M. E. Pace, and address on "Environments" by I. M. Smith; interspersed with appropriate music. Moved to meet at Farm Creek prior to next quarterly conference.

DECATUR.

Sunday school association of above district met in joint convention with the Religio association at Lamoni, Iowa, January 31 and February 1. The chief features were business, discussion of International lesson texts, and of our conventions, a newspaper, and a talk by J. A. Gunsolley. All sixteen schools of the district reported, showing a total enrollment of 1,287. The Sunday school work of the district apparently is in better shape now than ever before in the history of the district. There were 129 delegates chosen to represent the district in General Convention. Delegates were instructed to vote against the adoption of International texts, and also to cast a majority and minority vote in case they were divided on any question. decided to hold our business conventions but once per year hereafter, and instead of our summer convention to have a number of two day meetings at various places in the district, the time and frequency of which were left for the district officers to determine. The officers elected for the coming year are as follows: superintendent, F. E. Cochran; associate, D E Daniels; secretary, J. P. Anderson; treasurer, John Lovell; librarian, Callie B. Stebbins. The Religio's part in the Callie B. Stebbins. The Religio's part in the convention will probably be reported in the Autumn Leaves.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Sunday school convention will be held at Independence, Missouri, on Friday, March 8, at two p. m. Routine and other business, election of officers for ensuing six months, and of delegates to General Convention will take place. The evening will be devoted to papers, talks, and vocal music. Come all and let us roll on the Sunday school work and share the blessing following. Local secretaries will please send in reports and credentials three days prior to convention. All superintendents, and especially those not able to be present, please send to me written reports of your work. Programs will be sent to the school officials of the district.

MRS. ABBIE A. HORTON, Sec.

Conference Minutes.

FREMONT.

Conference convened February 2, at Shenandoah Iowa, with H. Kemp in the chair, andoah. Iowa, with H. Kemp in the chair, and C. Fry secretary. By motion Elder I. M. Smith and Bishop Wiliam Leeka were associated with Elder Kemp in the presidency of the conference. Branch reports were received from Thurman, Tabor, Shenandoah, Glenwood, Henderson, Hamburg, Riverton, and K-ystone. Ministerial reports were read from Elders H. Kemp, I. M. Smith, C. Fry, M. W. Gaylord, J. B. Cline, W. W. Gaylord, G. W. Needham. William Leeka, J. V. Roberts, G. Kemp, F. Becksted, James Comstock, T. A. Hougas, William Schick, N. L. Mortimore, D. Hougas, E. S. Wilcox, J. C. Moore, more. D. Hougas, E. S. Wilcox, J. C. Moore, and G. F. Walling; Priests J. Vinnerd, J. B. Lentz, R. S. Hillyer, J. Claiborne, A. J. Davidson, L. D. Frederickson, F. G. Dungee, F. L. Goode, Joseph Roberts, and L. C. Donaldson; Teachers W. Z. Moffet, George Skank, J. Goode, and C. M. Roberts; Deacons S. S. Clark and R. V. Greenway. Bishop William Leeka reported: Balance due church January 1, as reported to Bishop Kelley $566 10; received since $21 78; Total $587 88; paid out $40; balance due church February 1 $547 88. The secretary's report showed a total loss in the district of 26 and a total gain of 11, leaving a net loss of 15. A total of 261 sermons were reported, with much other work. A resolution was passed, directing the district officers to secure the enrollment of scattered members living in the district. A question was raised as to the manner of dealing with offending members who belonged to some distant branch, or holding letters and not belonging to any branch, which was referred to the presidency. Their report showed that in case of offense the law set forth in Matthew 18: 15-18, and Doctrine and Covenants section 42, paragraph 23, and also Rules of Order, section 161, paragraphs 1, 2, 3, must be complied with before action can be taken; and in case where the party offending does not belong to any branch of the church, the branch where ne lives has the right and is in duty bound, after the foregoing prerequisites have been complied with, to proceed against and deal with such member as though he were a member of said branch; and further, if the member offended be a member of some other branch other than the one where the offending party lives, he should proceed against the party offending, after having done as required in the law, before the authorities of the branch where the offending party lives. Signed Henry Kemp, William Leeka, Isaac M. Smith, committee." The foregoing "opinion" was adopted as the voice of the conference, and committee discharged. Missions were appointed as follows: Bartlett, W. W. Gaylord, A. J. Davidson; Glenwood, G. F. Walling; Shenandoah, J. B. Cline. E. S. Wilcox; Stennett, G. W. Needham; Mc-Paul, J. C. Moore, L. D. Frederickson. The following were appointed delegates to General Conference: H. Kemp, I. M. Smith, C. Fry, William Gaylord, Mary E. Pace, M. W. Gaylord, Philinda Gaylord, Lena Gaylord, William Leeka, Rachel Leeka, J. V. Roberts, D. Hougas, Mary E. Hougas, T. A. Hougas, Emma Hougas, A. J. Davidson, Lydia Davidson, F. G. Dungee, L. C. Donaldson, Delilah Donaldson, F. Redfield, Lucy Redfield, J. B. Cline, Frances E. Skank, Mary I. McClenahan, G. Kemp, G. F. Walling The Quorum of Twelve were petitioned to return the present missionaries to this district, and the present officers of district were reflected. Next conference to be held at Henderson, at the call of the presidency of the district. Bishop Leeka closed the business session with an address on the temporal law, which was timely and instructive, not omitting the interests of Graceland College. Preaching Saturday evening and Sunday by Elders I. M. Smith and H. Kemp.

EASTERN WALES.

Conference called to order at the Victoria Rooms, Nantyglo, by the president, Elder T. Gould; Moroni Bishop, secretary; Bro. C. Kalsey assistant. Branches reporting: Cardiff, Lydney, and Nantyglo. Elders reporting: A. N. Bishop, T. Gould, T. S. Griffishs, J. Jones, T. Jones, and H. Ellis; Priests J. Evans and E. J. Holford, Teacher C. Kelsey; Deacon M. Bishop. Spiritual report of Car-diff by Elder T. Gould. Licenses were called in for endorsement, and Elders T. Gould, T. S. Griffiths, and T. Jones formed a committee of examination. Bishop's agent and district treasurer's reports were read, audited, and found correct. Resolved that the officers of this district report formal work only. Carried unanimously that the president has no power to return licenses after such licenses have been handed in through transgression, except by vote of conference. The revelation of 1887 was brought forward and thoroughly debated. It was resolved that by the next conference each branch give a definition of the words strong drink. It was agreed that we retain the delegate system. The president of Lydney branch was sustained in the action he bad taken with regard to certain members. Elected officers: President, T. S. Griffiths; vice president, T. Gould; secretary, M. Bishop; treasurer, H. Ellis; Bishop's agent, T. Gould. A vote of sympathy was passed with Elder A. N. Bishop and family in his severe sickness and trouble; also, that Sunday, January 27 be set apart as a day of fasting and prayer on his behalf, he having been on his bed of affliction since December 28. All the spiritual authorities were sustained; also, E der A. N. Bishop, as missionary for Wales. The next conference to be held in Lydney, on Easter Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Our social gathering in the afternoon was a feast indeed. Twelve testimonies and five prayers were given, when our Father granted the gifts of tongues, interpretations, and revelation. Preaching at night by Elder T. Jones. All feel strengthened, and earnest desires were given to labor in the cause of Christ, according to divine laws.

CLINTON.

Conference convened at Coal Hill chapel, Missouri, February 2. District president, T. R. White, presiding, assisted by F. C. Keck; Vina H. Goff, secretary, assisted by A. C. Silvers. Ministry reporting: E.ders Swen Swenson, W. H. Lowe, C. Quick, T. R. White, A. Lloyd, G. W. Beebe, C. P. Welch, W. H. Mannering, H. L. Kinning, S. C. Andes, John Wood, A. A. Goff; Priests John A. Silvers, S. C. Williams, A. S. Leeper, J. N. Stephenson, A. C. Silvers. Branches reporting: Wheatland 55; Rich Hill 153 gain 4; Lebanon 37, loss 11; Nevada 60, gain 8; Lowry City 83, gain 4; Eldorado Springs 187, gain 3; Walker 24, loss 1; Veve 124 gain 1; Tebo 38, gain 6. Report of Bishop's agent George W. Beebe, read, audited, and found to be as follows: On hand last report $59 55; disbursements $266 33; balance on hand $63 65. District treasurer, G. W. Beebe, reported and found correct: Receipts $10.95; disbursements $12 61; balance due treasurer $1.66. The committee on location of next district reunion reported, and it was voted to hold said reunion near Wheatland, Hickory county, in accordance with the invitation of the Wheatland branch. Delegates to General Conference: F. C. Keck, John Burlington, M. J. Pnipps, George Swenson, Andrew Oglevie, T. R. White, D. Tucker, C. P. Weich, F. T. Baker, J. N. Stephenson, S. C. Andes, Iva Keck, Swen Swenson, A. Lloyd, A. C. Silvers, R. T. Walters, Wm. Mannering, Viola Mannering, A. A. Goff. Ollie Keck, Sherman Sigman, and H. L. Kinning. The majority of those present were empowered to cast the full vote of the district. Veve chapel was selected as the place for holding next conference, the time being June 1. Three preaching and two prayer services were held, the Sunday afternoon prayer service being the best had at the conferences for years. Several prayers were offered and fifty-eight testimonies given; the Spirit being present in a marked degree.

DES MOINES.

Conference convened at Des Moines, Iowa, February 9 Presidents, J. W. Morgan and D. M. Rudd; secretaries, H. A. McCoy and S. Armstrong. Branches reporting: Perry, Des Moines, Richland, Grinnell, Boonesboro, and Des Moines Valley. Des Moines Valley report returned for correction. Elders reporting: W. C. Nirk by letter, J. W. Morgan baptiz d 3, W. C. Earhart, H. A. McCoy, N. Stamm. D. M. Rudd baptized 5, W. H. Kephart, E. J. Clark, J. C. Crabb, W. H. Clark, M. H. Cook, and Samuel McBirnie; Priests W. W. Owens, W. T. Maitland, C. J. Carlson, and C. J. Peters baptized 1; Deacon J. Young. Committee on tent fund reported; report accepted, and on motion H. A. McCoy was added to the committee. On motion C. J. Peters, Jöseph Carlson, and H. A. McCoy were given district appointments until June conference. As Bro. J. W. Morgan was leaving the district indefinitely, it was moved that he choose an assistant. H. A. McCoy was chosen and ratified to act as assistant president. Delegates to General Conference: D. M. Rudd, J. C. Crabb, H. A. McCoy, W. H. Kephart, E. J. Clark, C. J. Peters, C. J. Carlson, J. W. Morgan, M. H. Cook, George Shimel, Bro. Christy, W. C. Earhart, Mattie Hughes, Anna Amos, Sr. Gray. Preaching Saturday night by George Shimel, Sunday forenoon by J. C. Crabb, in the evening by W. H. Kephart. Adjourned to Boonesboro, June 1, at ten a. m.

PHILADELPHIA.

Conference convened at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, February 2 and 3. G. W. Robley and G. H. Smith were chosen to preside; E. B. Hull, secretary. Ministry reporting in writing: Elder F. G. Pitt, Priest D. C. Carter, Teacher A. D. Angus, Deacon Ira W. Humes. Verbal reports: Elders G. W. Robley and G. H. Smith, Priest H. H. Bacon. Branch reports: Philadelphia 106; loss 1; Baldwin 59; gain 2. Treasurer's report: On hand last report, $3.51; collected $1.95; expended $4.50; balance on hand 95 cents. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $124.33; collected $579.75; expended $181; balance on hand $523.08. Officers elected for ensuing term: President, G. W. Robley; secretary and treasurer, E. B. Hull. John Zimermann was sustained as Bishop's agent. Motion prevailed that collections taken during this conference be divided with Philadelphia branch. G. W. Robley and F. G. Pitt to represent district at G-neral Conference. Resolution adopted sustaining all general authorities of the church. On Sunday morning a sacramental and social service was held, and in the evening Eider G. W. Robley preached from the text, "Canst thou by searching find out God." Adjourned to Baldwin, Maryland, the first Saturday in August.

NAUVOO.

Conference was held at Rock Creek, Illinois, February 2 and 3. James McKiernan was chosen president pro tem., Mark H. Seigfreid secretary. Branches reporting: Burlington, Montrose, New London, Rock Creek, Keokuk, Farmington, and Vincennes. Ministerial reports: James McKiernan, Daniel Tripp, John R. Evans, F. M. McDonald, Charles Brown, John N. Bauer, and J. W. Stobaugh. Report of G. P. Lambert, Bishop's agent: On hand last report $2 92; receipts $261 79; total $264 71: expenditures $181 61; balance on hand, $83 10. Report of J. L. Wright, district treasurer, read and accepted. Delegates to General Conference: James McKiernan, G. P. Lambert, John Head, and W. H. Donaldson. Election of district president postponed on account of so few being in attendance. Mark H. Seigfreid chosen clerk, and Bro. Albert Giesch treasurer. Conference extended a vote of thanks to Brn. J. L. Wright as outgoing treasurer, and J. W. Stobaugh clerk. Fivesessions were held: Two for business, two preaching meetings, and one social and sacramental meeting. Bro. James McKiernan spoke at both meetings, he being the only traveling missionary present. Adjourned to Burlington the first Saturday and Sunday in June.

Miscellaneous Department.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints in the State of Washington:—Please take notice that upon the recommendation of the missionary in charge, and other laborers in the missionary field in Washington, that Bro. Frank Holmes of Roslyn, Washington, has been appointed agent of the Bishopric of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in and for said State of Washington, and is duly authorized and empowered to receive and give receipt for tithes and offerings of the Saints and friends in said State who may wish to aid the work of the Lord under the auspices of this society. In making the appointment we trust the Saints of Washington will take pleasure in aiding the new agent in his work, and sustaining the interest of the church under his charge. Every member in the state should be enrolled on the books of Bro. Holmes. Please remember the name and address, and send him an offering of some kind with a heartfelt prayer, that the Lord may bless the gift for the good of his cause.

Very respectfully,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop. Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 13.

AUSTRALIA'S "ENSIGN."

At the annual conference of the church in New South Wales, Australia, it was decided to inaugurate a press and type fund, with a view to purchasing a printing plant with which to print the Australian "Ensign." Bro. John Kaler, of 128 Evans street, Rozelle, was appointed treasurer of this fund, and he was instructed to solicit subscriptions from the Saints in America, as well as all other parts of the world. So if you feel to help the work in this part of the world, send along what you can spare to Brother Kaler. A paper of our own is a real necessity in this land, and I feel that if the American Saints only knew the amount of good which could be accomplished by one, we would soon have the necessary money to purchase a small plant with which to print it. Some of the brethren think that by owning our own printing plant we can have our paper printed for half the price others would charge us to print it. Those who desire to assist us may send their donations to John Kaler, Rozelle, New South Wales, Australia.

Now a few words with reference to our former appeal for subscribers with which to resuscitate the Ensign: Up to the present we have received one hundred names from America, which, though not sufficient to warrant us in making a start is encouraging to us, and we again ask the Saints in all parts of the world to assist us by sending along seventy-five cents, for a year's subscription to the paper when it is started. Those who have already sent in their names may now send in their money if they feel so disposed, and we will forward them the paper as soon as it is issued; which we sincerely hope will be soon. Some have already sent their money for which we thank them.

Send all money for subscriptions to Walter J. Haworth, Wallsend, New South Wales, Australia, by international money order if preferable, or if a dollar bill is sent we will send you a copy of our pamphlet "The Book of Mormon on Trial" for the extra fifteen cents.

WALTER J. HAWORTH,

District President.

MEMORIAL FUND TO JOSEPH AND HYRUM SMITH, THE MARTYRS.

SMILL, LUE MARLIES.
Previously reported $	45.68
Isaac A. Monroe, Iowa	50
Henry A. Stebbins, Iowa	50
Mary A. Hiatt, Iowa	25
Vida E Elvin, Iowa	25
W. E. Clark, Washington	50
Emily A. Tidland, Minnesota	. 15
Noah N. Cooke, Missouri	1 00
C. C. Joehnk, California	1 00
Wm. Maddock, England	24
Wm. Sparling, North Dakota	1 00
S. Long and family, Kentucky	45
Callie Hollinghead, Kentucky	05
T. C. Kelley, Kentucky	25
M. K. Harp. Kentucky	25
Martha J. Harp, Kentucky	25
Sr. A. F. Robinson, Utah	- 50
Sr. A. C. Wilson, Utah	50
L. S. Gardner and family, Utah	50
Peter Anderson and family, Utah	50
Hans Larenson and family, Utah	50
A. D Penrod, Oregon	1 00
Sr. C. Eliason, Idaho	1 00
James Bowman, Idaho	1 00
Sr. M. H. Grant, California	1 00
Sr. C. B. Edson, Iowa	1 00
Mary Moline, South Dakota	50
Geo. W. Day, South Dakota	50
Jane Perchie, South Dakota	25
Martha Sparling, South Dakota	25
William Leitch, South Dakota	1 00
Thos. Leitch, South Dakota	1 00
John Thompson, South Dakota	25
Sr. R L. Goreham, Iowa	1 00
John Weaver, Utah	1 00
Sr. Sophia Slotterbeck, California	1 00
Elizabeth Snell, California	1 00
•

Presiding Bishop.

February 16, 1901.

REDUCED RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Reduced railroad rates to the coming General Conference and conventions of auxiliary societies, to be held at Independence, Missouri, April next, have been obtained over the lines of the Western Passenger Association. Other associations will be heard from in due time and further information given later. R S. SALYARDS, Church Sec. LAMONI, IOWA, Feb. 16.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Southern California conference will convene at San Bernardino, Friday, March I, and continue over Sunday. Two sessions the first day will be given to school and Religio work. School and Religio workers are requested to attend the opening day. The

The Saints' Herald.

( Established 1860 )

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price. $1 50 per year.

Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."

"Editors Herald."

Marriage, birth. and death notices: Marriages, $1 00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free. above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion. make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business manager.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as re-ceipts for all money received are sent within two ceipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E. Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.
Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as secondclass mail matter.
Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

respective organizations will send delegates. Brethren holding priesthood license are requested to report in writing, whether they have done any labor or not. We desire to hear from each one. Come, brethren, and let us make this one of the most spiritual meetings ever held. Delegates to General Conference to be selected. Other features of importance will necessitate action.

T. W WILLIAMS, Pres. 1322 Myrtle avenue, Los Angeles.

Far West district conference will convene at St. Joseph, Missouri, March 16 and 17, in the Saints' church, corner of Seventeenth and Faraon streets. Will the secretaries send branch reports, together with delegate credentials, in time a cording to resolution of former conference. Ministerial reports should be in hands of secretary of district one week prior to conference.

CHARLES P. FAUL, Sec.

SECOND QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

The secretary of Second Quorum of Priests desires the address of the two following members of said quorum. Edward Charlton and Charles A. Barmore. Any member who has changed his address since the circular letters were mailed last spring, please notify the undersigned at Lamoni, Iowa.

J. P. ANDERSON, Sec.

RELIGIO NOTICES.

Spring River district Zion's Religio-Literary Sunday school will meet at Webb City, Missouri, on Monday, March 4 The Sunday school convention meets on Friday, March 1, conference on March 2 We urge all Religians to attend, especially those of the district.

M. S FRICK Sec. Z. R.-L. S. Blendsville, Mo. 2226 Empire street.

Religio convention of Northern California district will convene at Sacramento, March 8. Secretaries are requested to send reports early as possible to J. V. Phillips, 2418 M. street, Sacramento, California.

CONFERENCE RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

At the regular business meeting of Independence branch it was decided to fix the rate of board for General Conference visitors at three dollars per week. Arrangements will be made, so far as possible, for the free entertainment of General Conference appointees. It is necessary that committee be notified be-fore your arrival. All parties desiring services of this committee will receive same, so far as possible, by notifying any one of our number, stating what accommodations are desired and when you expect to arrive. Persons accepting invitations from friends and making their own arrangements need not notify committee, but we will assist so far as we can in directing to places of board. Do not fail to notify committee early, that as many as possible may be assigned before convening of conference, thereby avoiding disappointment to yourselves and annoyance to committee.

LESTER BRACKENBURY.

Chairman.

J. J. LUFF, Secretary and Treasurer. ROBERT KEMP. R G SMITH. O L. JAMES.

BORN.

HAWORTH.-At Wallsend, New South Wales, United Australia, December 9, 1900, to Bro. and Sr. F. Haworth, a son. Blessed at Hamilton conference, Sunday, D cember 30, by E ders J Kaler and E J. Haworth, and called Frederick Alpha.

LEWIS-VARLEY -At Hiteman, Iowa, on the evening of February 7, 1901, Mr. Morgan Lewis and Miss Sarah Varley, both of Hiteman. Priest D E Daniels officiating. The ceremony was performed at the home of the groom, Bro. and Sr. M. D Lewis, and quite a number of relatives and friends were present. A rich repast was prepared by the groom's parents, and quite a number of beautiful presents were given, as a token of high esteem. May the blessings of God attend them in life's journey.

DIED.

DENTLER.-Clara B. Matson was born January 6, 1880, Nodaway county, Missouri; she united with the church June 10, 1893, at Fontanelle, Iowa She was married to David C. Dentler, September 20, 1899, and died at their home, near Fontanelle, January 25, 1901. Funeral services held at the Adventist church, conducted by Elder D. R. Chambers. She bore her suffering with the patience and fortitude of the true Christian, her trust being wholly in the promises of the risen Re-

FORD.—John Earl, son of Bro. Edward and Sr. Mary E. Ford, of Wirt, Indiana, February 1, 1891, one year old lacking 17 days. A bright and beautiful child. Funeral on Sunday, February 3. Brethren M. R. Scott, Jr., and E L. Kelley officiating.

PHILLIPS—At Lucas, Iowa, February 4, 1901, Antony Wayne, the only child of Mr. Antony and Mrs. Dean Phillips, being 2 months and 11 days old Funeral services held at the home. Elder E. B. Morgan spoke from Matthew 2: 18. Elder John R Evans and Priest Thomas Hopkins assisting other little bud of promise is taken from us and planted in the paradise of the blessed.

STAFFORD—Elder Edwin Stafford was born in Stockport, England, January 19, 1827, and died near Lamoni, Iowa, February 6, 1901, aged 74 years and 18 days. As a boy of eleven he was baptized when the first missionaries were preaching in England. Ramoved with his parents to Nauvoo in 1841 Passed through many experiences. United with the R-organization under Z H Gurley's hands in 1861, in Knox county, Illinois. Lived in Decatur county since 1875. He was constant in his faith. His wife died in 1890 Of seven children six yet live, and four were present at his funeral. Sermon by H. A. Stebbins, assisted by R. M. Elvin.

HALFHILL —Sr. Mary Jane Doods was born July 5 1850, in Calboun county, Michigan. In 1852 her parents moved to Dalaware county, Iowa. October 26, 1866, she was married to George Halfhill; to this union were born six children. In the fall of 1895, Sr.

Halfhill united with the church, and ever afterward lived a consistent, Christian life. 3r. Halfhill was stricken severely ill January 31, 1901, and on the evening of February 2 passed peacefully away. Funeral at the Wood schoolhouse, February 6, J. R. Sutton preaching the sermon. Interment in Edgewood cemetery.

NELSON.-Andres Nelson died February 3, 1901. He was born on the island of Bornhoim, Denmark, April 11, 1819. Had he lived till April 11, next, he would have been 82 years old.

The letter concerning this death was written from Lander, Wyoming, where we suppose the brother died-ED.

GREEN.-Elder George Frederick Green, second son of Elder George and Sr. Kezia Green, was born on July 16, 1866, in Chatham township, Kent county, Ontario; was baptized August 25, 1887, by Eder J. A. Mc-Intosh; was ordained a priest on October 6, 1887, under the hands of Elders J. A. McIntosh and A. Vickery, and Bro. Peter Mc-Brayne (priest). He was afterwards ordained an elder on June 11, 1899, under the hands of Eders A. Leverton, George Green, F. Gregory, and R C Evans, at the last Lindsley conference. He was married to Sr. Martha Ellen Brown, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Robert Brown, on November 9, 1892. Sr. Nellie died on April 26, 1894. He was afterwards married to Sr. Ester Ann McFadden, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Arthur McFadden, on March 4. 1896. To them were born two children, Frederick Moroni and Ila Ruth; little Ila departed this life on December 20, 1900 Only a few days before his death he requested a brother to bear his testimony to the Saints who had met at his home, that the work in which he was identified with was the work of the Lord; he had received many evidences of its truthfulness. Hadied on February 6, 1901, of consumption. Elder A. Leverton, assisted by Elder J. H. Tyrrell, conducted the funeral services. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends, who had come to pay the last tribute of respect. His remains were interred in the Louisville cemetery, to await the morn of the first resurrection.

HUTCHINGS — At her home, Woodland, California, January 19, 1901, Sr. Margaret I. Hutchins. She had been a long and patient Hutchins. sufferer, and no doubt she welcomed death as a relief from afflictions. For four years she had been afflicted with cancer in her left breast; operations were performed repeatedly, but with only temporary relief, and which subsequently affected her right breast. She was born in Kay's Ward. Ogden, Utah. December 26, 1854; came to California, Septemiber 10. 1860, with her parents, the late Owen and Sarah Dinsdale. Married to Bro. L. E. Hutchins, October 8, 1882; to them were born four sons and two daughters; three sons and two daughters, with her husband, are left to mourn. Was baptized October 6, 1883 and has ever sought to honor her profession faithfully until death. She loved the work; was generous hearted; a loving and dutiful wife; kind, and an affectionate mother; loved by all who knew her. Funeral service conducted by Rev. J. A. Van Anda, of M. E. Church, at her home, January 21, 1901.

Anderson — At Ellston, Iowa, Esther

May infant daughter of Bro. Joseph A. and Sr E J. Anderson. Was horn September 28, 1900; died February 15, 1901. Funeral services by Elder H. N. Snively.

COCHRAN — At Boonville, Missouri, February 15, 1901.

ruary 4, 1901, Sr. Ellen Cochran. Said sister was born September 26, 1826, in Belfast, Ireland; married to Mr. Samuel Cochran May 9, 1849; was the mother of eleven children. She was baptized September 24, 1893, and lived a faithful, consistent life till death. She leaves a husband, three sons, and three daughters, only one of whom belongs to the church—Sr. Cammie Cochran. Services were conducted from family residence, by Elder J. A. Tanner. WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS. Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1. 1898 Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162.781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All etters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa

STOCKHOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Ressevuie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eda D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

WANTO STOF

Using tobacco. Quit-to-bac makes it easy to do so. Three box-s postpaid, only $150 with positive guarantee to cure or the $1.50 cheerfully refunded! It cures others, why not you.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, Ill. 47-42 (U S. Postage stamps taken )

Or apply to Underwood Typewriter Agency, LAMONI. OWA.

NEW	TESTAMENTS. Inspired
	Translation.
173.	Cloth, limp	5	35
83.	Cloth sides, leather back		50
	TWO RECORDS. The Book of Mormon and the New Testament. Inspired Translation; large type, in one volume.
	Leather back and corners	2	00
	Seal grain russia
100.	Imitation morocco, gilt edges,	3	50
101.	Morocco, gilt edges	4	00

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Ad-THE PATRIOT Lamoni, dress,

A postal card brings a sample copy.

TRUE SUCCESSION IN CHURC
PRESIDENCY. By Elde	er .
H. C. Smith, Church Hi	g- :
torian.
152. Paper	. 35
153. Cloth	. 50

The well known Oculist and Aurist

FINDLEY.

Will be here again on 1 a... mary 28, at the Barr Hotel to cure diseases of Eye, Eat, Nose, and Throat with mind medicine—no sir ing medicines used in the eyes tout night the eye. All treatment painless. Crosseyes straightened in two minutes without pain. Cataracts guaranteed cired. Glasses perfectly fitted to cure all sights and guaranteed headache cured with glasses. Granulated lids, watery eyes, and ingrown eyelash s cured. Catarrh permanently cured by a new method. The Doctor would like to have his friends and former patients call February 28. Examination free. Do not misse this opportunity.

NOT IN THE CATALOGUE.

TRACTS

Trial of the Witnesses to the Resurrection of Jesus. Each 5 cents; per doz. 50 cents.

The Basis of Brighamite Polygamy.

Per doz. 10 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

SAINTS' HYMNAL. Words only.

115. Paper		15
Per dozen		60
116. Cloth, limp		25
Per dozen	2	70
117. Cloth		35
Per dozen	3	75
118. Flexible, gilt edges	-	50
	× , :
BOOK OF MORMON. Large type edition.
92. Cloth, leather backs and corners	1	50
93. Seal grain russia, gilt edges.	2	00
109. Flexible, gilt edges	4	00
	-	-00

COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI. - IOWA.

Solicits your D posits and pays

4 1-2 % INTEREST.

D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH THE SEER. Discoveries of Ancient American Records and Relics, with the statements of Dr. Lederer (converted Jew) and others.

184. Each 10c.; per dozen...... 1 00

HUMES FOR LAND SEEKERS.

Tract of 1700 acres in De Kalb county, Missouri, four miles from Amity, and five miles from Clarksdale; near line of Reck I-land railroad and switch station, can be had in one lot or divided to suit purchaser. Terms reasonable. Address, J. O. SOUTHARD, Mgr., Amity, Missouri, or. CHARLES P. FAUL, Clarksdale, Missouri,

Photo Buttons and Stamp Photos.

Send a good ph tograph, and get 25 stame photos for 25 cents, or 25 photos and one 36 lign photo button for 35 cents; extra buttons 10 cents ach. Large 60 lign buttons 35 cents, and extra buttons from same picture 20 cents. Your photograph will be returned Send silver.

W. M. KECK Photographer, 49-13t Lock Box 125, Joy, Illinois.

DR. E. S. SWEET. DENTIST.

Decoe Building,

WOODBINE,

IOWA.

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on investment.

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Iowa.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chicago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

Dates of sales, February 19, March 5 and 19, April 2 and 16, 1901, one lowest first class fare for the round trip, plus $2 00. Good for return 21 days from date of sale.

Cheap one-way colonist excursion rates to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego, California. Dates of sale February 12, 19, and 26, March 5, 12, 19, and 26, April 2, 9, 16, 23. and 30, 1901.

One-way second class settlers rates. Denver, Colorado Springs, and Pueblo. Ogden and Salt Lake. Bozeman, Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Grantsdale, Missoula, Grant Falls, Kalispell, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma. toria and Vancouver.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p m. South-Leave D s Moines 8:25 a.m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a. m. Trains daily | xeept Sunday; connect with C. B & Q at L. on.

THE SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John & 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord; for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 27, 1901.

NO. 9.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR.

JOSEPH LUFF CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEB. 27, 1901.

RESENTMENT.

Count Tolstoi, the Russian philanthropist and writer, wrote his work, "My Religion," basing it on the Savior's injunction. "Resist not evil," found in the Sermon on the Mount, Matthew 5:39.

Actuated by the spirit of this teaching as he construed it, one cardinal feature of his philosophy made him a nonresistant. He applied it to every condition of life.

But Tolstoi is not alone in this idea of nonresistance to injurious attack by which safety of property and person is endangered, nor is he the first to so teach. The Moravians and the Quakers of modern history had the idea of nonresistance embodied in some form in their creeds. Besides these sects many individual teachers and believers in Christ hold it to be a crime against the gospel teaching to resist any form of aggression. Possibly our Holiness friends so believe, but in their methods of propagandizing they are both aggressive and resistant. It may be, however, that they construe the saying, R-sist not evil," to apply to attacks upon personal rights and not to spiritual forensic dispute.

In the same verse in which this saying occurs is the injunction, "If a man smite thee on the one cheek turn to him the other also." Allied to this teaching is this, "Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." Whatever may be said from these texts in support of the extreme view, that of receiving injury and wrong to one's property, friends, family, and self, unresistingly and without effort to prevent such injury, or wrong, deeming it to be a virtue enjoined by Christ, one thing is certain; that there is an element of continual unrest and disturbance to the body of Christ through the too prevalent existence of the disposition in professed followers of the "meek and lowly Jesus." not only to resist evil. but to manifest and be exercised by spirit is so strong in some that they seem to be in a condition of turbulent exuberance of disposition to dispute, resist, resent, and fight.

These seem to construe the statement of Paul to Timothy, "Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints," to grant, if not to direct, a perpetual warfare upon every thing which does not agree with their opinion, whether its relation to gospel theory and fact is near or remote.

The visible effect of the exercise of this spirit of resentment is to make the one moved by it to be constantly on the watch for slights, impositions, and attacks upon his personal rights, real or imaginary; and when anything of this sort occurs, his disposition is to strike back at once. He is always in an attitude of defense, combative even to pugnacity. If long indulged, this spirit will make him finally to be a chronic fault-finder and opposer—an accuser of the brethren.

Another effect, not so readily seen, is that it causes the man's friends to grow chary of working in contact or association with him, resulting finally in distrust, for the reason that his condition of mind makes him liable to mistake them, what they say and do, however good their intentions may be; and, through his mistaking them he repels, retorts, or resents, hence they grow distrustful and reticent; the atmosphere of candor and cordiality is disturbed or lost altogether. No honorable man likes to be met in a spirit of resentment by a friend. From an enemy he may expect it and be prepared for it, but he does not look for it in a friend.

Again, this spirit of resentment unfits a man for exercising a proper judgment upon what the man sees and hears. Suspicion lurks near by in his mind, and discolors what otherwise would be harmless in word and deed. It distorts innocent words into offensive thrusts and well meant acts into hostilities; and by so doing forces the man into a defense against attack never intended to be made.

enjoined by Christ, one thing is certain; that there is an element of continual unrest and disturbance to the body of Christ through the too prevalent existence of the disposition in professed followers of the "meek and lowly Jesus." not only to resist evil, but to manifest and be exercised by the spirit of resentment. Indeed, this doer, or the one who assumes that he is injured, or that wrong has been done without just cause, the result of improper condition of mind through the influence of the spirit of resentment?

It seems that the disposition to throw one's self into an attitude of self-defense and to strike back, rather than to turn the other cheek, is quite too prevalent to secure that better peace which must result from the exercise of the injunction, "Love peace and insure it."

We once knew an aged couple who seemed to live peacefully and happily together. Both were by nature quick tempered, apt to speak sharp, and cross under provocation. Hearing one of them speak sharply to the other on one occasion, and noticing that the other said nothing in retort, we asked how it was that they who were so quick tempered contrived to live so quietly and happily together. Each looked sheepishly at the other for a moment and then one replied:—

When we were about to be married, we had a talk over our infirmity of temper and we entered into this agreement, that whenever one got angry and spoke harshly, the other was to keep still. So when I get cross and speak so, he keeps still, and when he gets cross I keep still, and in that way we don't quarrel.

It had served them as a compact securing peace in the household, through the heyday of young married life, through the busy, workaday life of middle age, and when years had cooled the fiery tempers to a great degree it still remained a compact of peace against any blaze that might be blown from the smoldering coals of past fires.

The lesson we learned from this episode of family life was one that had passed into a proverb years before, "It takes two to make a quarrel," "A soft answer turneth away wrath." If the spirit of resistance and resentment is not present, fostered, and active in the possible second party to a quarrel, there will be none. Is this what Jesus meant when he said, "Resist not evil?" And is it not possible that James' injunction, "Resistthe Devil and he will flee from you," may apply in the subject being considered, the overcoming of the spirit of mischief which is from the adversary of souls, that may be lurking in us, and thus prevent evil, or resisting his suggestion of resentment, turn away evil. We are strongly inclined to think so.

The Inspired Version of the Scriptures gives the statement found in Matthew 5: 40-43, in such form as to materially modify it as it occurs in the King James, or common version.

"An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." This contains the animus of resistance, resentment, retaliation.

resistance, resentment, retaliation.

"Resist not evil." This suggests the thought, "How may I avoid the evil to grow out of the blow I may receive." Revenge is additional wrong. Does the situation warrant it?

"If a man sue thee at the law and take thy coat, let him have it; if he sue thee again, let him have thy cloak also." "If a man compel thee to go a mile, go with him a mile;" if two miles, go with him two miles.

This is equivalent to saying that it is better to lose coat and cloak, rather than to contend, thereby adding to costs, misery and ill will. It is better to go with a man a mile or two miles, if demanded, than to risk the result of the quarrel that resistance and resentment would make sure.

There are occasions, of course, when resistance to the encroachments of the unjust exercise of power, or tyranny should be resisted; but these are public causes and the ideas expressed regarding the spirit of resentment are not affected thereby. The private life and the everyday warfare of a man desirous of the name and worth of a Saint are the things wherein one is to be guarded against the things that make trouble, hence this writing.

SEE BEFORE SETTLING.

One brother writing from one section of Missouri states that the country is good and invites the attention of the Saints to that part of the world, with a view to the making of homes. Another brother equally sincere, no doubt, writes up to us that he is well acquainted with the portion of the state referred to in the first brother's letter, and he advises Saints not to buy there until they have come and looked up the section for themselves; that it is not in his opinion a good country to settle in, etc.

Now, the mischief in this is that we are not well enough acquainted with the two brethren to discriminate as to which has the better judgment as to the suitableness of the country for settlement; and so we leave out the last noticed letter suggesting that the advice to not purchase lands in that part of the state of Missouri until you have visited the region and seen the facilities and resources of the country for yourselves, is good, sound advice and worthy of being followed, no matter how good or how poor the land and location may be represented by others. The HERALD has given this advice a good many times and makes use of the opportunity to reiterate and enforce it.

If anybody desires to write for information in regard to the different parts of Missouri, Brn. George Hilliard, and I. N. White, of Independence, are pretty well acquainted with the country over the most part of the state. Bro. Hilliard, being of the Bishopric, has paid especial attention to the "regions round about" for the purpose of the Saints.

It is still good advice, "Go and see for yourselves."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

F. C. Warnky, Virgil, Missouri, February 16:

Have been preaching here all this week to full houses. Quite a number are believing. Some who were bitterly opposed to the church years ago are now changing their expression, and rejucing in the truth. The prospect for an ingathering is good.

Bro. Daniel F. Joy, of Providence, Rhode Island, writing under date of February 18, sends us a clipping from the Boston Herald on the subject of archæology, which we are glad to receive, and which we may use later. In his letter, among other things he says:—

February 17 Apostle W. H. Kelley spoke to a good audience. The ordinance of baptism was administered to one candidate who was confirmed by Bro. Kelley. There are others here who are interested and may join our ranks later. The Massachusetts district conference convenes here next Saturday, and we are praying and hoping for a good time, spiritually. A large gathering of the Saints is expected.

I find strength and comfort in reading the letters from the different sections of the field, and look forward to the coming of the HERALD from week to week.

Bro. W. F. Clark writes from East Des Moines, Iowa, February 12:-

Our district conference was held here last Saturday and Sunday. It was my privilege to attend the first part of Saturday and all day Sunday. As to the business done, I cannot say; but a peaceful and spiritual feast was had Sunday,—that peace prevailed which makes one feel that it is good to be a Saint in latter days. Lately I have opened a new place here by request of a distant relative. This is strongly Coristian or Disciple neighborhood. Have preached three times with fair liberty, and have received urgent requests to continue. Have an appointment for the 17th again. Believe the chance for good is splendid.

Bro. A. P. Pelton, under date of February 15, writes from Dighton,

There is not a shadow of doubt in my mind in regard to the divinity of this glorious latter-day work. It is of God, and he is working with his people today as he did with the ancient saints; and if we do not receive the same blessings they did it is because we are not living up to our privileges. The sick are healed, devils are cast out, and the Saints speak with tongues and prophecy by the same spirit they did on Pentecost. These are facts and not fiction. My desire is to spread this glorious light. There has never been a gospel sermon preached in Dighton, our county seat.

J. F. Mintun, Magnolia, Iowa, February 28: —

Closed a two weeks' meeting at Moorhead, Iowa, on last Thursday, and despite the fact that nearly every family had sickness to contend with, a fair and apparently interested audience greeted me every night but one. Will remain here till after conference the 3d of March doing what I can, and seeking physical recuperation, while arranging home affairs preparing to make a change that we have concluded necessary to be made.

In a card to Bro. Heman C. Smith, dated February 12, Bro. Mark H. Forscutt says of the debate:—

As a deeply interested auditor in your controversy with Mr. Bays, permit me to offer my sincere congratulations on the positive victory you have gain d thus far. If ridicule, contumely, and half-fl-dged wit could demonstrate the correctness of your opponent's positions, the palm should be awarded him; but if evidences, the logic of history and facts, and the clear refutation of assumptive assertions, even if syllogistically affirmed, then the victory is indisputably yours.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A brother in Scotland wishes us to use the words British and Britain in referring to the governmental affairs of the United Kingdom of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales and not English and England. See Bro. Munro's letter in HERALD for February 20 We presume the brother is technically correct, and will try to remember.

We published, week before last, a letter, unsigned, from some young Saint. We learned it was from the pen of Sr. Vera M. Dalberg. of Akron, Onio, aged twelve years. She writes again this week.

We notice by a copy of the Denver News for Sunday, February 17, that the Saints of that city and district propose to ask Mr. Andrew Carnegie for an endowment for Graceland College, as we suppose, for the note of the conference proceeding states that it is to be for an educational institution at Lamoni, and Graceland is the only one of the church at that place. We hope the scriptural injunction "To him that asketh shall be given," may be in this instance verified. But, we may be pardoned if we suggest to our own people that "the Lord helps those best who help themselves," and, therefore, it is wise for us to keep up our diligence in raising the college fund, and not trust to the generous giving of Mr. Carnegie to be thus taxed, for he must be terribly bored by the countless requests for money he must daily receive.

Bro. George J. Reeves, of Santa Maria, California, writes that he is one of the isolated, but feels that by prayer he is blessed. He sends a clipping from a Los Angeles paper.

In the Malheur Gazette, of Vale, Oregon, of January 30, in the Malheur City items, is a paragraph noting the fact that Elder Chase had left for his Iowa home. It states that he left many warm friends, and that a petition had been signed by many asking for his return to that field Bro. Chase evidently gave satisfaction in his work in Oregon.

It will be quite necessary for those intending to attend the session of conference at Independence, the coming April, to carefully read and pay attention to the instruction given in Secretary Salyards' instruction in regard to railroad rates. If any fail to be benefited by the reduction in fare it will be the result of their own negligence, or carelessness.

Bishop Kelley, who has been bedfast for some days, was able to be up Monday, and he is improving slowly, but we trust surely.

Bro. Heman C. Smith returned last week from Omaha, where he held his debate with D. H. Bays, of the Christian Church. Bro. Heman feels well, and is encouraged over the outcome.

Bro. J. W. Whetley, of Bridgeport, Washington, under date of February 14, writes that though he has made several calls for elders, as yet none has responded. He is not discouraged, though, for he has received many bright testimonies of the work. He rejoices in the advance of the work, and is doing what he can to help it along. The field there is large, he says, and requests that when the brethren meet in General Conference that part of the country be not neglected. He says the brethren can reach that place by coming by the way of Spokane and Coulee City, Washington. He is well known in Bridgeport.

We have received from The Clipping-File Co., Cleveland, Ohio, one of their clipping files. It certainly is a handy article. In it one can file clippings just as they are cut from the papers, and they can be taken out and used as needed. Our men who have many clippings will do well to examine the merits of this file. It consists of large tag board envelopes or pockets, eight by ten inches, of special design, ten in each box or case and has a classified index for the volume. Address as above.

Bro. Enge, writing from Norway, sends good news of the baptism of two. A letter from him will appear next issue. The Scandinavian brethren will be pleased to note the fact stated. If any would like to correspond with Bro. Enge, address him at Hornbargsunds, Postoaneri, pr. Lillesand, Norway.

Bro. Peter Anderson writes very entertainingly of the situation in Utah. His letter will appear in next issue of HERALD.

You can never know a man's working qualities till he demonstrates them. -- World's Work.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION.-NO. 9.

BY EDMUND C BRIGGS. OF THE QUO-RUM OF THE TWELVE.

I remained in Nauvoo and vicinity until the fall of '57; worked a part of the time for Joseph on his farm; though he had moved into the city and his brother Frederick worked the place.

I became quite well acquainted with the Smith family. Frederick was prepossessing; in fact, a gentleman in his appearance, open and frank in his countenance, six feet high and well proportioned, and I noticed he was very affectionate to his mother, and often saluted her with a loving kiss and good morning or good-bye.

Everybody loved him.

Joseph was always cheerful, very respectful to his mother, always seemed to be busy. Alexander was always quiet around the house and doing chores. David was a handsome boy, modest and retiring in disposition, studious, and quite an artist; loved and admired by everybody who formed his acquaintance. Sister Emma was an exceptionally good woman whom everybody spoke of as an example worthy of imitation. In fact, the whole family were esteemed by all people who knew them as good, worthy citizens above reproach, having the reputation of being strictly moral and temperate in all things.

I spent most of my time in reading the Bible and history. I read the ancient history of the Egyptians, Carthaginians, Medes and Persians, Macedonians and Grecians, by Charles Rollin, and much of Josephus' History of the Jews. Sometimes I was lonesome and despondent in spirit as I contemplated the condition of the church, and realized how it once flourished in their city (I am told there were twenty five thousand Saints who lived in this city and in Hancock county), and thousands throughout the world joined the church every month. Elder James Blakeslee in 1846 when at our house told me that he had baptized one thousand in six months when he was preaching in the state of New York.

Elder John E. Page, of the Twelve, had preached in my father's house and our neighborhood. His wonderful memory and talent charmed my very soul while he expounded the gospel of salvation and proved beyond a doubt that Jesus was the Christ, and that the new covenant was indeed established again by the presenting the truth of the scriptures and proving it with historical facts and the archæological evidences of both the eastern and western continents, establishing the divine authenticity of the sticks of Judah and Ephraim, as spoken of by the Prophet Ezekiel, which were to be joined together just before the restoration of Israel in the last days, to build up their beloved Jerusalem. preparatory to the second coming of Jesus Christ, and that city must certainly be rebuilt before his second advent according to the scriptures, were truly grand and convincing to the thinking mind.

Also the eloquent elder, George J. Adams, was one of the most intellectual and fascinating ministers of the gospel I ever heard. It was a grand feast to the soul to hear him preach Christ and repeat the Lord's prayer. He was an elocutionist of the richest type in word painting I had ever heard in the pulpit, and when I realized what a high pinnacle the church was on, and contrasted it with the condition of things then in the city, I was amazed and felt so distressed in mind that at times I could not be comforted in anything around me. The excellent examples I had seen in so many of the elders were my themes of thought, being so very much in contrast with the appearance of the dilapidated city of Nauvoo, looking like a bleak and dreary plain in comparison with what it once was, teeming with its thousands of comforted, loving Saints.

The Temple, though never finished, was built and inclosed so it was an imposing structure of art to crown the hill overlooking the happy city, and the beautiful waters of the curved Mississippi river that more than half surrounded their loved homes. Oh, what a contrast! All was swept away except the three corners of the broken fragment of the Temple, like towers, which still stood as specters overlooking the ruins and ragged streets all grown up to weeds and sand burrs. Yes, all this change came to the church and city because of its sins, wicked persecutions, and Brigham Young's misdeeds and mismanagement.

But, say the enemies of the church, All this wickedness is the natural result and fruit of Joseph Smith's efforts in church building, and his personal sins.

I deny it in the most emphatic language it is possible to use! As well might we charge the early Christians with the black night and cruel apostasy that followed the martyrdom of the apostles of Christ. No more cruel voluptuousness of heart ever possessed the human soul than heavenly angel. His ecclesiastical characterized the long and weary knowledge and powerful manner of dark ages that succeeded the first century of the Christian era. Would anyone dare charge the Christ and his disciples with the treachery of a Judas? Rapine and all manner of corruption, and every form of iniquity are charged against the church until the Reformation in the days of Martin Luther in the sixteenth century, and millions of men, women, and innocent children were put to death by both the Roman Catholic Church and the Protestants, and many burned at the stake in the persecution of each other. One hundred thousand in Germany alone were burned alive at the stake as witches in the short space of twelve months. Twenty-two thousand were massacred in one day in France, and the Pope in Rome, soon as he heard of it, celebrated mass in honor of the great victory over the heretics. Henry VIII., the founder of a very popular church in England. who married six wives, divorced two, killed two, and was accessory to the murder of the third by celebrating the birth of an heir to the throne. burned at the stake both Protestants and Roman Catholics, and won the title of the great Defender of the Faith. Intolerance was the general

Were Jesus of Nazareth and his early disciples intolerant, and scandal-mongers? Not a sane man now living would so charge them. Even Thomas Paine, after discussing the tendency of the idolatry of the ancient mythologists, at the time in which Jesus Christ lived, and discrediting the account of his birth, says of him:—

Jesus Christ wrote no account of himself, of his birth, parentage, or anything else; not a line of what is called the New Testament is of his own writing. The history of him is altogether the work of other people; as to the account given of his resurrection and ascension, it was the necessary counterpart to the story of his birth. His historians, having brought him into the world in a supernatural manner, were obliged to take him out again in the same manner, or the first part of the story must have fallen to the ground... That such a person as Jesus Christ existed, and that he was crucified, which was the mode of execution at that day, are historical relations strictly within the limits of possibility. He preached most excellent morality, and equality of man; but he preached also against the corruption and avarice of the Jewish priests, and this brought upon himself the hatred and vengeance of the whole priesthood. The accusation which those priests brought against him was that of sedition and conspiracy against the Roman government, to which the Jews were then subject and tributary; and it is not impossible that the Roman government might have some secret apprehension of the effects of his doctrine as well as the Jewish priests, neither is it improbable that Jesus Christ had in contemplation the delivery of the Jewish nation from the bondage of the Romans. Between the two, however, this virtuous reformer and revolutionist lost his life. . . . He called men to the practice of moral virtues and the belief of one God. The trait in his character is philanthropy. Had it been the intention of Jesus Christ to establish a new religion he would undoubtedly have written this system himself, or procured it to be written in his lifetime. But there is no publication extant authenticated with his name. All the books called the New Testament were written after his death. He was a Jew by birth and by profession: and he was the Son of God in like manner that every other person is—for the Creator is the father of all. . . . One thing, however, is much less equivocal, which is that out of the matters contained in those books, together with the assistance of some old stories, the church has set up a system of religion very contradictory to the character of the person whose name it bears. It has set up a religion of pomp and revenue, in pretended imitation of the person whose life was humility and poverty.

And Robert G. Ingersoll, in one of his lectures, as represented by a paper clipping I have, says:—

And let me say here, once for all, that for the man Christ I have infinite respect. Let me say once for all, that the place where man died for men is holy ground; and let me say once for all to that great and serene man I gladly pay the homage of my admiration and my tears. He was a reformer in his day. He was an infidel in his time. He was regarded as a blasphemer, and his life was destroyed by hypocrites, who have, in all ages, done what they could to trample freedom out of the human mind. Had I lived at that time I would have been his friend, and should he come again, he would not find a better friend than I will be.

antagonism was mainly against the interpretation of what was accepted as the orthodox churches prescribed by the scriporthodox tures - without weighing the real internal evidence of the sacred volume, and with very slight criticism did they ever pass a remark on what Jesus himself said. These great agnostics never spoke against Jesus or what he really taught, neither did they ever persecute others, or advise anything to lead men to be intolerant to others. It was left for apostate Christians and Mormons to persecute their fellow men, and be intolerant to others because of their religious faith.

The winter of 1856-57 was a long winter to me in some respects while I stopped in Nauvoo, and the foregoing thoughts occupied my mind.

Joseph Smith's teachings, without a single exception in every word, line, or sentence on the subject of religion ever teaches the highest morals and purest Christianity, and he wrote thousands of pages, and examined and controlled many thousands more written by his followers in his lifetime, and these pages of literature on the subject of religion ever smack with the purest of motives and highest morals, declaring ancient Christianity restored again to better the world, promising gifts and blessings of the Holy Ghost to every one who would continue in the word by which they might know of the doctrine, whether it is of God or man. By a careful study of the scriptures and Elder Joseph Smith's writings I could see he was indeed a thorough, true Christian, and he had enstamped his very life upon his affectionate, innocent wife and children. Could all this be done and Joseph Smith be a bad man? Jesus says:—

Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things.—Matt. 12: 34, 35.

The people, in and out of the church, about Nauvoo, who personally knew Joseph Smith before he was murdered, spoke of him with respect, and declared he was a good, honorable man. a worthy citizen, and declared the scandalous stories circulated about him were base misrepresentations put in circulation because of religious intolerance or by his political enemies. At the same time, the new comers into the city after the death of Smith who spoke against him were rabid in their denunciation of him, and delighted in telling extravagant stories about him, though they never had seen him. This thought impressed me as very singular and strange, that in this enlightened age a man who had done so much to stir up the whole religious world, in the very place where he lived and was murdered, should be spoken so well of by his old neighbors, though they did not believe in his prophetic calling or his religion, and his enemies who were not personally acquainted with him should tell all manner of evil things about him, that he preached and practiced polygamy in Nauvoo. But all who personally knew Joseph Smith, in and out of the church, denied in the most emphatic manner that Smith ever taught or practiced polygamy in Nauvoo.

Mr. R. H. Loomis, who was an honorable man and well acquainted with Joseph, said: "I believed Mr. Smith was honest and conscientious in his religion, and did not teach or practice polygamy."

And Sr. Emma, in speaking of the condition of the church after her husband's death, said to me, "I was threatened by Brigham Young because I opposed and denounced his measures and would not go west with At that time they did not know where they were going themselves, but he told me that he would yet bring me prostrate to his feet. My house was set on fire several times, and one time wood was piled up at the side of the house and set afire. It burned the siding considerably and went out before we discovered it. It was either set on fire or by accident or carelessness caught afire a number of times and went out of itself when we did not discover it and put it out, but I never had any fear that the house would burn down as long as the Inspired Translation of the Bible was in it. I always felt safe when it was in the house, for I knew it could not be destroyed."

She spoke very affectionately of Joseph and said, "I never had any reason to oppose him, for we were always on the best of terms ourselves, but he allowed some others to persuade him in some measures against his will, and those things I opposed. He was opposed to the destroying of the press of the Nauvoo Expositor, but the council overruled him by vote, and he told them they were the cause of its destruction, but he would be held personally responsible for it; and I often heard Joseph contend against measures in council, and sometimes he would yield to them."

I said, "Those were city councils?" She replied, "Sometimes, and other times in councils of the church, which were often held in our house. For the last eighteen months or two years before his death it seemed the best elders were kept away from him as much as possible on missions, and the worst characters in the church hovered around him all the time."

When Sister Emma made the above statements it was a real revelation to me. I had not realized before how the church came to so soon run into such a horrible apostasy. She spoke so endearingly of Joseph, in confi dence, tears filling her eyes, that I could see she reverenced his very memory, and had full faith in Joseph's inspiration as a prophet of God, and she always denied to me in the most emphatic language that he taught or practiced polygamy. Again, she said several times in conversation with me that the Utah Mormons had by their acts since the death of her husband made true all the slanders and vile things charged against the church. I was also present when my brother, Jason Briggs, asked Sister Emma in relation to the purported revelation on polygamy published by Orson Pratt in 1852, and she again denied that her husband ever taught polygamy, or that she ever burned any manuscript of a revelation purporting to favor polygamy, and that "the statement that I burned the original of the copy Brigham Young claimed to have, is false, and made out of whole cloth, and not true in any particular." My brother was quite particular in his inquiry when she said, "I never saw anything purporting to be a revelation authorizing polygamy until I saw it in the Seer, published by Orson Pratt." Several were present at the time, and I shall never forget the candid manner of her expression when she, without a single hesitancy, with honesty and truthful ness marking her countenance, gave the lie to Brigham Young's assertion on the 29th of August, 1852, in Salt Lake City when he said, "The original of this revelation was burned up. . . Sister Emma burned the original. The reason I mention this, is, because that the people who did know of the revelation, supposed it was not now in existence." Mark the thought: Mark the thought: "The people who did know of the revelation, supposed it was not now in existence." Brigham Young at the very instance when it was introduced claimed that no one else on earth except himself knew of the existence of this purported copy of a revelation which is sweeping in its character. It is called "a new and everlasting covenant, and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned; for no one can reject this covenant, and be permitted to enter into my glory; for all who will have a blessing at my hands, shall abide the law which was appointed for that blessing, and the conditions thereof, as was instituted from the foundations of the world; and as pertaining to the everlasting covenant, it was instituted for the fullness of my glory; and he that receiveth a fullness thereof, must, and shall abide the law, or he shall be damned saith the Lord God."—Deseret News, extra, September 14, 1852, pages 25-27, the first publication of the blasphemous production called a revelation.

Which shall we believe? Sister Emma, the 'Elect Lady" and prophet's wife, or the bold, unsupported statement of Brigham Young? Is what the Book of Mormon calls the "grosser crime," now what Mr. Young calls the "only means of exaltation and glorification," and all this great change to rest on the uncertainty of a purported copy of a purported revelation burned by a woman? It is too absurd, and a rebuke to good common sense. It cannot be entertained by an honest-thinking, logical mind for a single moment.

The great English author and traveler sums up his evidence against the introduction of the accursed, soul destroying practice of polygamy in this strong language of logic and truthful-

THE GREAT SCHISM.

This dogma of a plurality of wives has not come into the church without fierce disputes and a violent schism.

George A. Smith, cousin of Joseph, and Historian of the Mormon Church, tells me from the papers in his office, that about five hundred bishops and elders live in polygamy in the Salt Lake valleys; these five hundred elders having, as he believes, on the average, about four wives each, and probably fifteen children; so that this very peculiar institution has come, in fourteen years, to affect the lives and fortunes, more or less, of ten thousand persons. This number, large though it sand persons. This number, large though it seems, is but a twentieth part of the following claimed by Young. Assuming, then, that these five hundred pluralists are all of the same opinion;—in the first place, as to the divine will having been truly manifested to Joseph; in the second place, as to that manifestation having been faithfully recorded; and in the third place, as to that record having been loyally preserved.—there must still be room for a very large difference of opinion. The great body of male Saints must always be content with a single wife; Young himself admits so much; Only the rich, the steadfast, the complaisant, can be indulged in the luxury of a harem even now, when the thing is fresh and the number of female converts is large enough to supply the want. As nature itself is fighting against this dogma, the humble Saint cannot hope to enjoy in the future any of the advantages which he is now denied Many, even among the wealthy, hesitate, like Captain Hooper, to commit themselves forever to a doubtful rule of family order, and to a certain collision with the United States. Some protest in words, and some recede from the church, without, however, renouncing the authority of Joseph Smith.

The existence of a second Mormon Church of a great schismatic body, is not denied by Young, who of course considers it the Dovil's work. Vast bodies of the Saints have left the church on account of polygamy; twenty thousand, I am told, have done so, in California alone. Many of these non-pluralist Saints exist in Missouri and in Illinois. Even among those who fondly cling to their church at Salt Lake City, it is apparent to me that nineteen in twenty have no interest, and not much faith, in polygamy. The belief that their founder Joseph never lived in this objectionable state is widely spread.

Prophets, bishops, elders, all the great leaders of the faith, assert that for months before his death at Carthage, the founder of Mormonism had indulged himself though in secret, with a household of many wives. Of course they do not call his sealing to himself these women an indulgence; they say he took to himself such females only as were given to him of God. But they claim him as a pluralist. Now, if this assertion could be proved, the trouble would be ended, since anything that Joseph practiced would be held a virtue. a necessity, by his flock. On the other side, a pluralist clergy is bound to maintain the truth of this hypothesis. For if Joseph were not a polygamist, he could hardly, they would reason, have been a faithful Mormon and a Saint of God; since it is the present belief of their body that a man with only one wife will become a batchelor angel, a mere messenger and servant to the patriarchal gods. So, without producing much evidence of the fact the elders have stoutly asserted that Joseph had secretly taken to himself a multitude of women, three or four of whom they point out to you, as still living at Salt Lake in the family of Brigham Young.

Still, no proof has ever yet been adduced to show that Joseph either lived as a polygamist or dictated the revelation in favor of a plurality of wives. That he did not openly live with more than one woman is admitted by all or by nearly all; and so far as his early and undoubted writings are concerned, nothing can be clearer than that his feelings were opposed to the doctrines and practices which have since his death become the high notes of his church. In the Book of Mormon he makes God himself say that he delights in the chastity of women, and that the harems of David and Solomon are abominations in his sight. Elder Godbe, to whom I pointed out this passage, informed me that the bishops explain away this view of polygamy, as being uttered by God at a time when he was angry with his people, on account of their sins, and as not expressing his permanent will on the subject of a holy life.

The question of fact is open like the question of inference. Joseph, it is well known, set his face against Rigdon's theory of the spiritual wife; and it is equally well known that he neither published the revelations which bear his name, nor spoke of such a document as being in his hands.

Emma, Joseph's wife and secretary, the partner of all his toils, of all his glories, coolly, firmly, permanently denies that her husband ever had any other wife than herself. She declares the story to be false, the revelation a fraud. She denounces polygamy as the invention of Young and Pratt—a work of the Dayil—brought in by them for the destruction of God's new church. On account of this doctrine, she has separated herself from the Saints of Utah, and has taken up her dwelling with what she calls a remnant of the true church at Nauvoo.

The four sons of Joseph—Joseph, William [Frederick], Alexander, David—ail deny and denounce what they call Young's imposture of plurality. These sons of Joseph are now grown men; and their personal interests are so clearly identified with the success of their father's church, to the members of which their fellowship would be precious, that nothing less than a personal conviction of the truth of what they say can be honestly considered as having turned them against Brigham Young.

As it is, these sons of the original seer have formed a great schism in the church. Under the name of Josephites, a band of Mormons are now gathering round these sons of the prophet, strong enough to beard the lion in his den. Alexander Smith has been at Salt Lake while I have been here, and has been suffered to preach against polygamy in Independence Hall.

Young appears to me very sore on account of these young men, whom he would gladly receive into his family, and adopt as his sons, if they would only let him. David he David he regards with a peculiar grace and favor. "Before that child was born," he said to me one day, when the conversation turned on these young men, "Joseph told me that he would be a son; that his name must be David; that he would grow up to be the guide and ruler of this church." I asked Young whether he thought this prophecy would come to pass. "Yea," he answered; "in the Lord's own time, David will be called to this work." I asked him whether David was not just now considered to be out of the church.

"He will be called and reconciled," said Young, "the moment he feels a desire to be led aright."

This schism on account of polygamy-led, as it is, by the Prophet's widow and her sons is a serious fact for the church, even in the judgment of those bishops and elders who in minor affairs would seem to take no heed for the morrow. Young is alive to it; for in reading the Chicago platform, he can see how easily the Gentile world might reconcile itself to the Prophet's sons in Nauvoo, while waging war upon himself and the supporters of polygamy in Utah.

The chief-almost the sole-evidence that we have found in Salt Lake City in favor of Joseph having had several wives in the flesh is an assertion made by Young.

I was pointing out to him the loss of moral force to which his people must be always subject while the testimony on that cardinal point of practice is incomplete. If Joseph were sealed to many women, there must be records, witnesses, of the fact; where are those records and those witnesses?

"I," said Young, vehemently, "am the witness. I myself sealed dozens of women to Joseph."

I asked him whether Emma was aware of it. He said he guessed she was; but he could not say. In answer to another question, he admitted that Joseph had no issue by any of these wives who were sealed to him in dozens.

From two other sources we have obtained particles of evidence confirming Young's assertion. Two witnesses, living far apart, unknown to each other, have told us they were intimate with women who assert that they had been sealed to Joseph at Nauvoo. Young assures me that several old ladies, now living under his roof, are widows of Joseph; and that all the apostles know them, and reverence them as such. Three of these ladies I have seen in the Tabernacle. I have learned that some of these women have borne children to the second Prophet, though they bore none to the first.

My own impression (after testing all the evidence to be gathered from friend and foe) is, that these old ladies, though they may have been sealed to Joseph for eternity, were not his wives in the sense in which Emma, like the rest of women, would use the word wife. I think they were his spiritual queens and companions, chosen after the method of the Wesleyan Perfectionists; with a view, not to pleasures of the flesh, but to the glories of another world. Young may be technically right in the dispute; but the Prophet's sons are, in my opinion, legally and morally in the right. It is my firm conviction, that if the practice of plurality should become a permanent conquest of this American church, the Saints will not owe it to Joseph Smith, but to Brigham Young .-New America, by William Hepworth Dixon, editor of the "Athenæum," and author of "The Holy Land," "William Penn," etc. Third edition. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott and Company. 1869. Chapter 30 entire, pages 220-225. (Continued.)

HIGH PRIESTS TO PRESIDE.

I can hardly bring myself to think that the mere fact of one being elevated to a position of trust is a sufficient guaranty of competency for a specific work. Yet it is possible for me to be unduly elated, attributable to undue love for some particular hobby or fondly cherished dogma. More's the pity. It seems difficult to practically demonstrate a gospel mod-The realm of extremes at times, mixed with a bit of policy, seems quite inviting for present advantages. What shall the harvest be? Who shall abide? Alas for mere vacillating, presumptuous humanity!

In his advocacy of the organic structure of Christ's church, Paul says:-

From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.—Ephesians 4:16

I make no special claim to extraordinary endowment evinced by an absolute accuracy in the division of truth. But I think I may try as far as the method of trying may be legitimate, for I can't learn that any integral part of the body of Christ (church) is called to be only a cipher or to make himself unduly officious; but I have been led to think I am slow in finding and pursuing the requisite medium between these two horrid extremes. Gospel modesty is so precious a jewel, reflecting such a luminous light, that its absence places one in such a predicament as to make his steps uncertain, and his procedure suspicious and profitless. O for a gospel modesty! Suspicion created by our own procedure would indeed be difficult to obliterate.

From the above quotation we learn: 1. The compactness of the body fitly joined is perpetuated by that which every joint supplieth. 2. That the culmination attendant upon this supply is the body edifying itself in love.

If this be a fact, it follows as a logical sequence that a failure on the part of the joints (parts) to supply, must retard the perpetuity of this compactness with a corresponding hindrance to the body (church) in establishing itself in love. Then if evidence is lacking of the body establishing itself in love, despite our protestation to the contrary, the body must be retrograding, or cause and effect will have ceased.

Nothing could be more effective in establishing the essentiality of due and godly diligence of every joint or part of the body than the plain and authoritative manner in which God has been pleased to reveal the duties and prerogatives of the several joints or parts composing Christ's church.

I find no evidence that the infinite God so formulated and revealed his saving plan in a manner to evidence to the Bible student that this saving method was to be at any time modified, revised, or changed to meet un-What man or foreseen exigencies. society would then dare to assume to walk in such a God forbidden path? And yet it is made to appear that the day for fools rushing where angels dare not tread is not altogether past. More's the pity. Alas for poor, blind, presumptuous humanity, who, dressed in a little brief authority, cuts such fantastic tricks that makes the heavens weep!

But the reader may think me digressing. Doctrine and Covenants 107:42 instructs the student regarding the Quorum of High Priests as follows:-

Which ordinance is instituted for the purpose of qualifying those who shall be appointed standing presidents or servants over different stakes scattered abroad, and they may travel, also, if they choose, but rather be ordained for standing presidents. This is the office of their calling, saith the Lord your God.

High priests were appointed, to whom important work was committed in the incipient stages of the church, to which I will not pause to refer.

If a branch, or district be large he who is chosen to preside should be an high priest, if there be one possessed of the spirit of wisdom to administer in the office of president; or if an elder be chosen who may by experience be found qualified to preside, as soon as prac-ticable thereafter he should be ordained an high priest by the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the one ordaining, and by direction of a high council, or general conference, as required in the law.-D C. 120: 2.

The instruction given in the event of ordaining an elder to the office of high priest is strikingly compatible with the solemnity and importance attending (or that should attend) the work of ordination by and through which men are elevated to positions of trust to deal with the souls of men. The Spirit of wisdom and revelation is to guide in the solemn work of ordination which, as I think, is preclusive of the thought that in the absence of this wisdom and revelation the ordination could be acceptable to God.

In these matters there is no conflict in the law.—D. C, 120: 6.

In my understanding, the above has force, meaning, and significance; therefore I think it is preclusive of an act on my part to so explain and define the meaning of one revelation to conflict with another revelation. Nor can I bring myself to believe and teach that resolutions passed by any council, composed of members of the body, carries the same binding force as a "Thus saith the Lord," only in so far as such resolutions are in harmony with given and accepted revelation.

Directing labors of high priests. Resolved that it is the opinion of this council that high priests, when needed for missionary service abroad, may be appointed by the first presidency or the twelve or both jointly, and should labor after such appointment under the direction of the twelve, the same as seventies.—Joint Council of 1894, D. C. 123: 15.

After mature consideration I am led to think that this resolution recognizes rights and prerogatives of the high priests not provided for in their ordination, and the question arises in my mind, Is this permissible? Is it authoritative? Is it right?

The seventy are to act in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the twelve, or the traveling high council, in building up the church, and regulating all the affairs of the same, etc.—D. C. 104: 13.

Which ordinance is instituted for the purpose of qualifying those who shall be appointed standing presidents or servants over different stakes scattered abroad, and they may travel, etc.—D. C. 107:42.

If prior to the revelation of 1841 there was any doubt as to duties of high priests, it seems to me all doubt should have been eliminated and a proper understanding obtained.

I have not a remote wish to provoke controversy or criticism, but shall not object if the latter comes. I think as a citizen of the body I am guaranteed the right of asserting my individuality. I but think and act for myself—and think it no way humiliating if reason exists sufficiently potent to think I have erred, to concede. Should a greater blaze of light break forth, I shall try to get within the precincts of its radiance.

I see nothing in Doctrine and Covenants 120:2 to warrant hasty ordinations of elders to the office of high priest. No, nothing; rather a due consideration of the subject matter in Doctrine and Covenants 17:12 which if it reflects any significance provides for the ordination of men "according to the gifts and callings of God unto him," or them. And the fact being so definitely stated that high priests are to be standing presidents or servants over different stakes, etc., affords a warrant for belief that evidence of executive ability in view of the fact of a high priest to act as a standing president, dealing with the souls of men is a necessity, which ought to be effective in precluding the thought of ordaining as a compliment, etc. What more important position could men hold than presiding over a large body of men and women?

In view of these facts, I cannot see how in the ordination of men to the office of high priest and sending them forth to act as seventies can possibly meet the requirements of Doctrine and Covenants 107:42.

Since the body grows by the supply of the several joints or parts, the necessity of these several joints or parts essaying to supply in or from their legitimately appointed spheres, is quite apparent. In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

Letter Department.

LUVERNE, Minn., Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:-We closed our series of meetings here last night with a full house. Good interest was manifested. Some of the best people of the place were out to hear, and the best of attention was given. Elder Wight spoke upon the subject of reward and punishment, and all seemed to be interested. Much good has been done. Prejudice has been removed, and a much better understanding of our faith is had than when the debate began. We have held meetings in the courthouse since the debate closed, and the first night had upwards of one hundred, while Elder Walker only had from four to six out to hear him at the Christian Church. This speaks for itself. We think that an ingathering will be had if this is followed up with a tent when warm weather comes.

We leave here today; Bro. Wight for Mondamin, Iowa, and I for the north.

The work is onward in this state, and all are hopeful for final results. For the truth and right.

E. A. STEDMAN.

HEPWORTH, Ont., Feb. 11.

Editors Herald:—I felt it my duty to write this morning to the HERALD; for I am young and weak in the faith, and I would like the prayers of the Saints that I may come up higher and obey the commands of our Father. I have been three years enjoying my new life, for we are as new creatures in this world today, for I feel that if we do what our Master has said in his word, to obey him and love him, we are his children and it is cheering to think that we are his children. I thank our heavenly Father that I ever had the privilege of hearing the true gospel. I love this latterday work more every day.

If we look around we can see things transpiring that are fulfilling the scriptures. There are very many who love the pleasures of this world more than their soul's salvation.

I ask the Saints to pray for my mother, as she has been afflicted the last two weeks with heart trouble. We had Elders Shields and Gerrie, of our branch, administer to her, and the blessing followed shortly after the administration. We sent three times for Elder Shields and got him each time, and the blessing followed as before. We give God the praise. He is merciful to us, ever ready to hearken to our cries. Mother is very poorly again, so we need your prayers and faith.

I am fourteen years old, and I am going to try to live nearer to our Master than ever before. We may look for trials and temptations, for the end is drawing near. Satan knows his time is short, and he is trying to make the best of it. What a glorious day will the end be to those who love and fear God and obey his commands. Let us so live, dear Saints, that we may be able to wear a crown. I read in God's word that if we follow Christ we must deny ourselves and take up our cross and follow him; that is, to lay away all earthly pleasures and follow Christ. If we do but little we shall receive a small reward; so let us not be sleeping, but be up and doing for our Master. I desire to press onward and upward in this glorious work of God, for the time is not far distant when the Son of man will come. So let us watch and pray and beready to receive him with joy and not with Your sister in Christ, grief.

PHILINA G. BARNES.

CHICAGO, Ill , Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:-I feel more than usual in a state of rejoicing tonight. This afternoon I attended the usual monthly communion and prayer meeting of our little band of Saints on the west side. I write this letter in the hope and desire of imparting faith and strength to others. I contracted a very severe cold during the week which I tried to overcome with the usual simple remedies, but with only partial success, till the cold developed into pneumonia and I began to suffer. I do not trust in the arm or wisdom of men. Their experiments in alchemy, chemistry, drugs, etc., may be tested on others; but as for me, my soul craves for the pure and righteous oil from the giver of life. I love to feel the elders' hands on my head, for they feel as the very hands of God. Of course the fever left me almost instantly, and I came home with a ravenous appetite. I do not write boastingly, but in reverence and adoration to my Father and yours. This is by no means the first blessing I have received. All my life is full of accounts that are wonderful, and I have well proven to myself that I can obtain those conditions that the world calls miraculous if they were necessary to my salvation. Therefore it is not needful to write all in detail of cases of instant healing, etc., but to urge the weak ones to learn the true attributes of a very kind, indulging, and loving Father, and go to him with even the faith of a little child; and according to the degree of faith you exercise to that extent will you be blessed, for surely the Lord is always true to his promises and loves his children with a love that an earthly parent cannot fathom. He knows your trials and sees your difficulties in the world, and they come to develop us; do not become conformed to this world or those ideas that are natural in the minds of men, for they are at enmity to the will of God.

Oh, how my soul longs for that day when we all shall overcome this world, when the Saints will take God at his word and we see eye to eye with him. Do you think our ideas will then be the same as the dying and unregenerated world? No, for that would offend the Holy Spirit and we could not live in Zion. May Zion arise and put on her beautiful robes of righteousness! God speed the day; I am tired of present conditions, for I have caught a glimpse of better things. The appearance of sin is a burden to us. Do you not all tire of the profanity of man, of the great lies of the daily press, of the hypocrisy of society, and all the abominations of desolation? I beseech all to trust in the Lord and follow him, to meditate on the pearls of his law and admire the gems of his gospel, for truly he is watching "his sheep in the valleys," and his arm is very strong, and no wolf can take them away.

Our little flock looks small and weak, statistically, but men have not added the names of the Saints enrolled on the book of life. The kingdom is ours. Thy kingdom come! We have a noble band of Saints in this city, and if I should mention one I would have to mention all. All are workers except myself, and I only want a few years more to set my house in order when I hope to take a stand in a bold and fearless manner for the work.

No, the ark does not need staadying. If the Saints will continue going up higher, the Reorganization will shine above all of earth's glory, and the just and righteous will press into it; but it shall grind to powder the abominable and the wicked. When God desires the infirm and aged to come to rest or to send others on a grand mission in death, why selfishly pray their retention? It is a very desirable thing to pass the door of mortality and be with Christ. May his love there and give all faith, and may we overcome is my prayer.

ARTHUR W. GORBUTT. 343 East Fifty-fifth stree:

PIPESTONE, Minn., Feb. 11.

Editors Herald:—Left home in company with Bro. Est Hayer, about January 10, he for his field in Minnesota, and I for mine in South Dakota.

We made a stop at Head Grove, Iowa; held eight meetings with fair interest, and found a good band of Saints there. I will long remember my visit to Head Grove.

Leaving there January 18, took train for Hills, Minnesota. Held two meetings at the home of Bro. Midgorden, and from there we went to Magnolia where we held six meetings. While there we were domiciled with Sister Premo. Her home has been the home for the elders for a long time. May the Lord bless her in her declining years.

We also had the privilege of attending the debate, between our people and the Christian Church, Bro. Wight being the representative for the Latter Day Saint Church. With the help of God he nobly defended the angel's message. Sometimes the audience was moved to tears by the power of God's Spirit. There was much good done. After the debate Brn. Wight and Stedman continued to hold meetings in the courthouse. Bro. Hayer and myself stayed with them the first three nights, and helped them to sing.

We came to this place February 9; held two meeting yesterday, and will continue till Wednesday. Then Bro. Hayer goes to Correll, Minnesota, and I go to Waubay, South Dakota. I find Bro. Hayer to be a kind and humble companion in gospel work.

Ever praying for the final consummation of all things, Your brother in Christ,

GEO. W. THORBURN.

KINGSTON, Mo., Feb. 18.

Dear Herald:—After the two days' meeting at Wakenda, I made a short visit, with Bro. Elany Craven, to Richmond, Missouri. Took some orders for the HERALD and came to Kingston, February 1. Found Bro. H. C. Bronson laboring in the old way. Stayed over Sunday, and on Tuesday following organized a Religio, with twenty-four members, to meet Sunday, at three p. m.

Assisted Bro. Bronson until Sunday the 17th, when, on acount of bad roads we closed the meetings for one week.

I had the privilege of visiting with the Religio two sessions, and feel very much encouraged.

While in Kingston I took several orders for the church publications. I am sometimes surprised at the lack of interest some people take in our publishing house.

I was well treated here, as I have been throughout this mission,—thanks to kind hands and hearts. I go to Cameron today.

Ever in the gospel cause,

WALTER W. SMITH.

CRANBERRY SLES. Me., Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:-I read your pages each week with great pleasure, and desire the brethren and sisters to pray for me that I may be able to overcome the trials of this life. I have been isolated from the sound of the gospel for seventeen years; have only heard eight or ten sermons in that time. Last September I went to Stonington to visit the Saints, and there I heard the pure word preached by our worthy brother, G. H. Eilliard; and truly it was food to my hungry soul, for I had long desired to hear the word preached once more in its fullness; and at that time I heard things long to be remembered. While there I invited some prethren to come to this place and preach. In about four weeks Eiders J. N. Ames and S. G. Cunningham came to our rescue. They held five meetings at that time, which set people to thinking more seriously in regard to the teaching of the gospel. Later S. G Cunningham came again and held a series of fifteen meetings, with good liberty and much power and demonstration of the Spirit. There is a great deal of commotion at present, as you will see by a letter of a non-believer that I shall send with this, and hope it will find place in the HER-ALD although I am sure he made some converts to the faith; so much so, I don't think they will ever join any other church, even if they never join this; but I sincerely hope in the near future there will some unite with the church; and should those unite that have acknowledged it to be true, they will be able workers, no doubt.

We found in Bro. Cunningham an able defender of the gospel; his illustrations were decidedly grand, and so plain that even the small children could understand and say, Why don't all preachers preach like that? Truly the Spirit of the Lord was with him to own and bless; and may it ever be, is my prayer. I ask the prayers of all the Saints to help me to bear up under the burdens of this life. Your sister in the one faith,

MYRA G. STEELE.

Rev. S. G. Cunningham, an elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, who arrived here December 12, and held a series of fifteen meetings in schoolhouse No. 2, left January 7 for Stonington, where he is now holding a series of meetings. The meetings at this place were on the whole largely attended, and every discourse was listened to with rapt attention, and some who went there to scoff and find flaws came away silenced, if not convinced. The man claims that last April he was called of God to preach, as was Aaron. All the writer can say after attending the entire series of meetings is this: He is no ordinary speaker, and his expounding of the scriptures for the common people is clear, concise, and impressive; and the words found in the last clause of Mark 12: 37, seemed very applicable; and if he has not been called by the good Spirit, he surely has by the evil spirit, for he has not a common school education, and men nor institutions of learning could have had aught to do in teaching him to expound the scriptures so clearly for the common people to understand.

Whatever may be the final outcome of his four weeks' stay at this place, no one can foresee; but at present commotion runs high; and if ever certain portions of scripture were applicable to express the sentiments of the people who listened to his teaching during the two periods of time he has been here, surely the topic of D-cember 16 for the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor found in Matthew 10: 32-40, is justly applicable, even though undesirable.

CENTER CHAIN, Minn., Feb. 13.

Editors Herald:—I herewith forward you a translation of an article I found in a Danish paper, Foike-Vennen, published in Chicago, January 31, 1901, which to some extent pleased me, because it shows more liberty in thought and speech than has been customary in the state church of Denmark. I thought perhaps it might interest others so I send it. It is as follows:—

Lately many reports has been abroad that Pastor Jensen of Harbcóre [a little island between the North Sea and Lemfjorden, not far from my home. S K. S.], who has publicly stated that he did not believe in everlasting hell punishment, would for this reason be discharged from his service in the state church. Bishop Frederick Nielson, in Aalborg, has lately issued a pastoral and from the expressions made therein the impression is had that there is a possibility for Pastor Jensen to retain his position. The pastoral says in part: Here and there various Christians have not been able to get away from the thought that the course of the world will end with the restoration of all things. Such men we cannot set outside the Christian church just because they 'entertain the hope' that all will at last come to a knowledge of the truth."

This to me seems to be a hopeful sign of getting nearer the truth.

In gospel bonds,

S. K. SORENSEN.

LITTLE SIOUX, Ia., Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—This is the first time I have attempted to write to you, and will offer no apology except my great desire to do do right. I have been associated with the church since I was ten years old, but cannot feel that I have been of benefit thereto, but trust I have been no detriment. Have always tried to do right, but the power of the adversary has always held me back. I have always felt that the Lord had a greater work for me to do, and that only through some fault or faults of my own am I hindered from doing that work.

I never read the letters in the HERALD without feeling the force of the command to "come up higher" applied directly to myself.

Earnestly desiring the prayers of the faithful Saints that I may do so, I am,

G. FRED SKANK.

BELLFLOWER, Mo., Feb. 14.

Editors Herald:-This finds wife and I at my old home, Montgomery county. While in my field, Oklahoma, I received word from here they would like for me to come home awhile. I felt impressed to go. Having consent of missionaries in charge H. O. Smith and I. N. White, we arrived January 21. Appointments were out for me at the Christian church in Bellflower, commencing next night. Quite a crowd greeted me the first night, mostly through curiosity to see and hear "the boy preach" what some thought was Mormonism. I preached thirteen times at that church, with the best of interest. Left quite a number believing. Some became interested who had never been in that church before and didn't care for religion. Said there was something in this. Received many favorable comments.

We thought we would close for awhile, give them a rest and accept an invitation to preach awhile in the M. E. church three and one half miles north, nearer my old home. We commenced Monday night, February 4, and have been occupying ever since with very good and improving interest. We have been here twenty-three days and have preached twenty-three times, assisted in two others, performed one marriage, and the end not yet.

I can see the hand of God in all this move. The gospel never was preached here before. God certainly blessed me with liberty. Those who labor in this part of Missouri had best make note of this place, for there are some here to be brought into the kingdom. I have preached the gospel plainly and letother churches alone. That's the way I believe in doing. When we show the church in its organization, doctrine, and practice, they can make the application and see they haven't it. I consider a man's religion dear to him; and when we attack it we are on precious ground; and if we follow the rule, "Do unto others as we would have them do to us," we will be careful, and have love for them.

Truly yours,

W. M. AYLOR.

SMITH-BAYS DEBATE.

OMAHA, Neb.

Editors Herald:—We entered upon the discussion of the third proposition with pleasure, hope, and much confidence for the final outcome. The proposition reads as follows: "The church to which I belong, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is identical in its doctrine, teaching, organization, and ordinances, with the church established by Jesus Christ."

Elder Smith opened the affirmative on this question by introducing the Epitome of Faith, and presenting each article of faith with references. This was all done the first night.

Elder Bays said he could agree with Elder Smith on most all he said until he got to laying on of hands; here, he said, was the parting of the ways, and he must oppose Elder Smith. The laying on of hands was not an ordinance and not used for ordination, and was not commanded anywhere in the Bible for the gift of the Holy Ghost. The manifestations spoken of in Acts 8 and 1 Corinthians 12, were given to Gentile churches only; they needed something extraordinary to establish the church among them.

To this Elder Smith replied that if his argument was good, it proved that we needed them now, as we were all Gentiles, and the Christian Church which Elder Bays represented needed them too, for they were Gentile churches.

Elder Bays now took refuge behind the statement that these miraculous gifts were never given to any Jewish church, and defied him to show one instance.

Elder Smith found little difficulty in showing that the Samaritans were a class of mixed Jews. Elder Smith claimed the laying on of hands was a practice of the apostles, and they would not practice anything of this character without the divine sanction of God himself. And in Acts 8:20, showed Peter calls the power to lay on hands for the gift of Holy Ghost a gift from God. Acts 9 was also quoted to show that it was used for this purpose under the direction of Christ himself.

Bays now turned his attention to the Book of Mormon, saying we believed it contained a fullness of the gospel, and demanded Elder Smith to show where it said one word about laying on of hands for Holy Ghost; then admitted it spoke of it in one place.

Elder Smith called his attention to four places in the Book of Mormon where it taught laying on of hands; two for ordination, and two for the Holy Ghost, and read them before the audience, giving page and book; yet this man Bays comes up in his summary and says not one word in the Book of Mormon for laying on of hands for Holy Ghost; his peculiar faculty for denying a thing in one breath and then admitting it in the next, and finally coming up with some entirely new theory concerning the matter, is remarkable.

The next point of controversy was on the call, by authority of God, to preach, and being ordained by those having authority. E der Bays here denied that Acts 13: 1-3 referred to ordination; they simply laid their hands on them to recommend them to the people; declared no man ever laid hands on Paul for ordination; he was preaching three years before this so-called ordination in Acts 13: 1-3.

Elder Smith showed that Jesus was reported in John as saying, I have called you and ordained you, and he then pointed out where Paul wrote Timothy concerning his gift of God which was given by laying on of hands of the presbytery. This was one of the hardest fought points by Elder Bays in the whole proposition, but Elder Smith had no difficulty in showing the weakness of the man's efforts. On this point Bays was lamentably lame.

The next point of attack was on the organization. The apostles now came in for their share of investigation, and here Bays informed us that having apostles in the church was no sign of identity, as the Irvingites, in London, had apostles long before we did. The Brighamites, the Strangites, and many others had apostles, so they must be the Church of Christ. He now took a turn that was unique. He tried to show by history, using Tullidge's History, that the apostles of the Reorganization were not chosen according to the Bible plan, and hence no identity here. He laid himself bare, with not a single guard for the next proposition. But the feature most prominent was his glaring misrepresentations, by his constant custom of reading only a part, not only of the history, but some of the Bible evidences, which, when shown up by Elder Smith, recoiled on him with telling effect. It seems almost incredible that a man who knew, as Elder Bays must have known, would be so bereft of honor, that he could resort to such miserable and transparent trickery as he indulged in along this part of the investigation.

Elder Bays now undertook to show that there could be no succession in the apostolic line, as they were witnesses of Christ, and to be an apostle one must see and hear Christ, citing many passages to show where the apostles of the New Testament both saw and heard Christ, and demanded of Elder Smith to show one of the Reorganized Church apostles who ever saw Christ or heard him.

The controversy now took on a lively turn along this line, and Elder Bays made so little progress that I fear it would hardly be interesting reading. One point on the circumcision of Timothy, by Paul, should be noted. Elder Bays argued that as Elder Smith claimed practice of laying on of hands by the apostles was sufficient to guarantee the laying on of hands as a divine ordinance, he would have to believe in circumcision, as Paul practiced that.

Elder Smith here showed by Acts 15 that in conference assembled, circumcision was declared against, but laying on of hands never was declared against. And one point in regard to apostles being eye witnesses of Christ should be noticed. I think, Eider Smith used Matthew 16: 17, where Jesus tells Peter that flesh and blood had not revealed the Christ unto him, but by the revelation of God the Father. He also quoted John 15: 26, that the Holy Ghost should testify of the Christ. Acts 1:8, that "ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you;" and you shall become "witnesses unto me," etc., clinching his argument with 1 Corinthians 12:3, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost," making the apostolic witnesses dependent upon the revelation of God by the power of the Holy Ghost, and not by the sight of the eye nor the hearing of the ear; for if that could have been sufficient, then all Judea would have been apostles, and it was evident it took more than the seeing and hearing of the eye and ear of our physical body to make them witness for Christ, in the apostolic sense. This settled the question with Bays. He never touched it again, but let it alone.

Bays' position was that the apostles were ambassadors to other nations and no others have ever been commissioned to go to other nations; but Paul came back on him hard when Elder Smith let the light in showing that if that was true we could not send the gospel to foreign nations nor establish the work in any new places. The poor fellow seemed to be rattled, and tramped on his own toes in his desperate efforts to get out of the way of the persistent and relentless fire of evidence that Elder Smith kept pouring into him.

Eider Bays now took a turn at miracles, and denied ever seeing any miraculous demonstration of God's power while in the Mormon church.

Elder Smith read one extract from the SAINTS' HERALD-a letter from Elder Bays. which Bays sought to fix up, but upon the second reading he hauled off and gave that up. Elder Smith gave him a case of healing from one of his favorite authors, "Haden's History of the Disciples in the Western Reserve," which Eider Bays did not question. but denied we had them, and also quoted 1 Corinthians 13: 8, to show that these things should cease, and then he got desperate and demanded a sign, pointing to Elder Smith. If this inspired apostle has the power to work miracles, let him show it here, by smiting me with palsy or paralysis, so my tongue cannot wag, like Paul did to Elymas the sorcerer in Acts 13: 8-10; for, says Mr. Bays. I am striving to turn deputies from the faith, and then we will all believe in his church is the miraculous power.

Elder Smith, in answer to this, said, I can hardly believe E der Bays would put himself in the place of Elymas the sorcerer, for see how it reads: "O, full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the Devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord." What did you put yourself in that place for? (Elder Bays: I wanted a sign.) Elder Smith said: You must have wanted a sign bad to have put yourself in this man's place before this people.

Eider Bays was not satisfied on the question of miracles, so came up on that point again, and said Elder Smith quoted from "Haden's History," that a miracle was recorded as performed by Joseph Smith. We acknowledge "Haden's History" as good authority, but that is no proof that it was done by divine power. I presume there are fifty in the house that could testify to some of these wonderful healings; but that all can be accounted for upon the ground of psychology—a science now quite common in the world. Mentioned that the Christian Scientists, Free Methodists, Dowieites, Brighamites, Strangites, and others performed the same things.

Elder Smith went after him now, and drove him to the wall again. He told us psychology was a Greek word, meaning soul, mind. And according to Bays, Latter Day Saints, Free Methodists, Dowieltes, and those having these things had more soul and mind power than the Christians, and he was not disposed to question him, as he liked to agree with his opponent when he could, and thanked him for his confession that these miraculous things were in the church today, a confession we were hardly looking for; also admitting that it might be possible to get fifty witnesses right there in the house.

Now we must not fail to notice his final and great effort (using his own language) to crush Elder Smith right to the floor. When we came in the last night on this proposition, we found the blackboard, that is in the church, covered with a sheet, and all were expectant to see what was under the cover; and in the closing part of his last speech for new evidence, he asked to have the cover removed. and then with his walking stick for a pointer he rose to the occasion, and with great energy and many a flourish of the cane, he went at it. He had on the board two parallel columns of officers supposed to represent the way we teach it, and the way it really is; but both were wrong, and his first attempt at explanation gave his whole case away. He said he never heard a Mormon preacher teach it that way in all his life, and then he wore himself out in his attempt to make it a final blow, and finally came back to the pulpit panting for breath, and from this on he was through. He soon had time called, and sat down.

E der Smith now turned his attention to this new departure of his, and oh how the Christians hung their heads. Their hopes were dashed to the ground. The blackboard knock-out went the wrong way, showing Elder Bays' own statement contradicted what he had on the board, and covered him and his board with shame, as he said he never knew the elders of the Mormon Church to tell the truth and all the truth—not one of them in all his life.

Elder Smith turned this on him, by stating to him that as a preacher in the church for twenty-seven years, he must have been a party to this false representation, and could not escape the consequence of his own actions. Elder Bays sought to fix the matter up now by seeking to make it appear that this false representation was when preaching to a new audience; but this fell with poor effect upon the audience.

In his last speech Elder Bays said he did not care anything about time, and seemed at a loss to know what to use to fill up with. He said, in his summary, Joseph Smith came to his place by invitation of Jason Briggs and Samuel H. Gurley; and thank God, Samuel H. Gurley is now a member of the Christian Church.

Elder Smith said, I guess not. S. H. Gurley died several years ago in Davis City, and a member of the Reorganized Church.

Eider Bays seemed confused and surprised. He did not fill out his time, making a very poor closing speech, ending in confusion.

Elder Smith's closing speech was a telling one, and set forth our position very nicely; and in his summary showed twenty points of identity, and fifteen of them were admitted by Elder Bays without contention; the balance were proven very clearly; as also that Elder Bays had utterly failed to move the proof that was presented by Elder Smith in support of his position as a whole, giving Elder Smith a fine victory. Elder Smith in support of his contention, stood upon the ground that there were things in the New Testament that were not clear, and hence the necessity of revelation from God, and this would explain why we have high priests and patriarchs as other parts of the organization which they were not able to come to some proper understanding upon from the New Testament alone. This argument was made so very forcible that Elder Bays could do nothing with it, and could not offset it.

We feel well, and so far it has been as complete a victory as we ever won. To God be the glory. We realize his help in this.

F. A. SMITH.

CANTON, Ill., Feb. 14.

Editors Herald:—My traveling companion, Bro. Adams, being detained at home, I have been working alone; yet not alone, for the Master has been with me to support, encourage, and qualify.

About the middle of January we went to Peoria, the home of King Alcohol. We confess we almost grow faint hearted when we think of the thousands who pay so little heed to call of the gospel. Then we reason, 'tis God's work and not man's and he is abundantly able to care for it. That which is most perplexing to me is, "Will I be able to do my part successfully?"

Arriving here on Monday night we found the Saints anxious for a series of meetings. Accordingly, we got out announcements, met in prayer service on Wednesday eve, and began preaching on the following night, continuing till Tuesday, February 5. Attendance light at first but it improved. We were blessed and are convinced that lasting good was done. One, a young woman who has been investigating for some time, was enabled to see the truth, and given courage to make the sacred covenant with her God. We delight in seeing the young accept the angel message. May God help them.

Saints here did not forget that there was a test of discipleship, viz, "They shall feed you and clothe you and give you money." God will surely bless, for such is his promise. Our efforts were seconded by the Saints and God knows who to credit with "good works." Bro. Clarence Clark is in charge of he branch, and is doing well. Is a careful student of the books, though his time for study is limited. Bro. Ordway, teacher of the branch, was unable to attend the meetings owing to illness in his family. They did their part, however.

From here we go to attend our district conference at Kewanee, February 9, 10. Then with Bro. Roth to this place, stopping at Galesburg a couple of days. Bro. Roth expects to remain here for some time, the writer going to Fairview to make an effort there.

Trusting that in these days of trying times we may "in patience possess our souls," I remain, Yours for truth,

F. A. RUSSELL.

PERSIA, Iowa, Feb. 13.

Editors Herald:-Last Sunday night we closed a ten weeks' series of meetings at Sandy Point, near Mondamin. We were assisted part of the time by Brn. J. C. Crabb, J. M. Baker, submissionary, and J. A. Donaldson, assistant district president. appreciated their wise counsel and kind assistance. Of the ten weeks we spent two in Missouri Valley, with good interest. Baptized two into the kingdom of God, and left the Saints in better spirits. Then we returned to Sandy Point. We held meetings the first two weeks in the United Brethren church, when at the end of the two weeks their minister came on the scene, and the church was closed against us, and we went to the schoolhouse.

Our meetings were as good as we could ask. The families of Brn. Wm. Coffman and John Pratt, and other Saints, assisted nobly to make the meetings a success. Sister Wm. Coffman was there every night to preside at the organ, and Bro. Parley Gamet assisted with his horn, and Bro. Wm. Moats, of the Christian Church, a blind brother and a professor of music, assisted in the singing, and he seems like a brother indeed, and all he lacks of being a Latter Day Saint is the washing.

We had the pleasure of leading fifteen precious souls down into the cold waves and baptizing them into the kingdom of God. Five were of the Mondamin Sunday school so you see that the Mondamin Sunday school is alive. This is where the Williams and Bays debate was held, and Sandy Point is only six miles away. We say to our Sunday school workers, Do not be discouraged.

The last brother we baptized was Bro. Louis Myers, last Saturday. He helped Bro. James Wood cut the ice, and as we stood at the water's, brink, just before we baptized him, as he looked into the cool waves, he said: "There are not many men who help dig their own grave."

Well, dear brothers and sisters, the good Lord blessed us in our efforts, and our heart was made glad. There are that many more near the kingdom, and those who have obeyed and those near the door are among the best of Sandy Point.

Last Sunday night was our farewell sermon for the present, and there was hardly standing room. Bro. Geo. M. Scott, our disrict president and Bro. Geo. Shearer, of Little Sioux, were present, and as the crowd gathered Bro. Scott said, "Where does this crowd come from?"

The Saints and friends at the above place have raised nearly money enough to buy a church, that stands near their place and move it and fix it up, and it seemed like leaving home last Sunday night when it came to the good-bye, and may be forever. I am at home with loved ones at this writing.

Your brother,

W. A. SMITH.

The second secon

AKRON, Ohio, Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—The evil one is trying hard to overthrow the work, but we must hold to the rod of iron and we shall come out conquerors. Everybody knows mistakes will happen.

About twelve members from Akron are going to be present at conference, and the people here are very anxious for the time to come. Three little girls from here are going to take part in the exercises, Monday evening.

Bro. Manchester is our president here, and he is a faithful worker in this grand and glorious work. We hold our prayer meeting every Thursday night, and the Spirit is always present with us. Nearly every member takes part. We are all interested in the little work begun here. Every one turns out on Sunday to Sunday school and prayer meeting, and also church in the evening. Pray for us, brothers and sisters, that we may be ever faithful.

Your sister in gospel bonds, VERA M. DALBERG.

823 S. Main street.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 30.

Bro. Joseph:-I have been led to write a few lines about the colored people in Chicago who do not know the meaning of Latter Day Saint. They are seventy years behind the white people; and when I see this blessed gospel as it is, it sometimes puts me to a stand still, and I wonder. God has said, Be not hasty in ordaining men of the negro race to offices in my church. Surely the church has not been hasty in ordaining the negro. Now if the time has come to ordain men of the colored race, should there be a colored line between the white and the black? I was asked, a few years ago, by one of the elders of the church, if where a dozen or more colored people belong to a branch when administering the Lord's supper we should not have the colored people sit behind the white, and have the black ones served last. What do you think of that? What says the word of God? Let us see the general epistle of James and ask him about this matter. (See James 2: 1-6) "My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons." Do not rich men oppress the poor black man in his wages, and murder and burn him at the stake?

I hope and pray I may live to see all in this church lay down respect to persons, and live faithful to God and the law of the church, and earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the Saints, "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Jhrist;" and that we may not be found false, deceitful workers, transforming ourselves into ministers of righteousness, whose end shall be to be burned. Let no man think we of the black ministry have no knowledge of God on account of our color, though otherwise yet ignorant. Let us all labor together as ministers of Christ. "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly. nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful" (Ps. 1:1).

Dear brethren and sisters, let our delight be in the law of the Lord, and let us meditate upon these things day and night, and then we will bring forth in his season, and our leaves shall not wither: and if faithful, whatsoever we do we shall prosper. Then it does not pay to be ungodly. "Therefore, the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the ungodly shall perish" (Ps. 1:5). Besides this may we add to our "faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity" (2 Peter 1: 5-7).

These things are not chewing tobacco nor drinking beer and strong liquors.

The colored work in this city is onward. My colaborer, W. H. Fuller, and the writer teach the people this winter from house to house, and I think we will be biessed in our labor in the Lord. I baptized a very nice young colored man January 6-one in this year for a starter. May God be praised. Bro. Fuller thinks he will have five or six soon. If we had money to open out a large mission in the spring we could reap a harvest in getting souls into the kingdom of God. I hope this General Conference will help us in money matters to sustain this work. I would like to meet in General Conference this year, but have no money to come on. I am having success in teaching my two Bible schools on the west and south sides of the city, in private houses, which the Lord has opened to me; and Bro. Fuller is doing the same.

My poor wife's health is very bad this winter.

If ye fulfill the royal law according to the scriptures, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well; but if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors." (James 2:8,9) In James 2:15, 16, we read: "If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what does it profit?"

I feel strong in the faith, and hope to fight on till the end, so when Jesus comes "with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed." They are hard sinners, murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and having a mouth, speaketh great swelling words. Those men are twice dead, plucked up by the Your brother in Christ, roots.

G. H. GRAVES.

No. 508, 37th Street.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 13.

Editors Herald:-We have now nearly forty members in the Louisville branch and the work is moving along. Brn. J. M. Scott and J. W. Metcalf are at work here, and many people are ready for baptism. May the Spirit of God be with the brethren in power in the city of Louisville in breaking down opposition.

Bishop Kelley was with us two nights; also G. A. Smith, Will Kelley and wife, D. Miller and wife, Richard Scott and father, Thomas Bell, and Sr. Wheeler, from Indiana. The Spirit of the Lord was with us.

Bro. J. W. Metcalf is presiding here, and he is a power in God's hands, and the promise is that he will be instrumental for greater good.

Bro. J. M. Scott has done good work here, and he is holding meetings here and at King's schoolhouse in the country. We have very good cottage meetings also. My prayer is that they may be blessed, and that God will send more laborers into the vineyard.

This work is of God and is going to stand forever. I love to have the people ask me about this great work of God. Pray for me that I may do good. Yours in the one faith,

WILLIAM N. HANNER.

KEWANEE, Illinois, Feb. 13.

Dear Herald:-While your columns are ever laden with the precious fruit of the restored gospel, it may not be amiss for your readers to learn somewhat of Kewanee's past in the blessed cause of our heavenly Master. Our conference February 9 and 10, was somewhat cheering and soul-reviving. Considerable business of a beneficial nature was transacted. Very true, like boys in a family, "confabed" with each other a little, becoming somewhat warm in expressions; but all soon subsided in peace and goodwill as the wisest methods were unanimously adopted. It is not the intent of the writer to make mention of all business done only the change of Bro. Adams to Bro. Clark as our district president, and Bro. Smith to Bro. Patterson for vice president, with Sister Clara Johnson, of Rock Island, for our secretary; also to tell of our prayer and preaching services. To say they were grand and glorious would be speaking mildly.

On Saturday eve Elder W. E. LaRue presented the wonderful words of life in a very able manner, considering his youth. May the Lord of Israel bless such characters, that they bring souls into the garner of our Lord. Sunday morning and evening Elder J. S. Roth seemed not to leave a stone unturned in his subject matter, showing that loafers, loungers, or idlers were of no use whatever in the cause of Christ, and the sooner they turned over the leaf of activity the better. It is the minute man, the daily "doer" of Christ's will, who will eventually win the prize at the end of life's bitter conflict. In the evening he proved in a masterly manner the all-importance of Christ's church being one, in the full sense of the term. The Bridegroom when he comes will not recognize a people who are at variance with one another; hence, adopted Israel must be up and "doing," as the coming of the Master is fast approaching.

It is useless for me to attempt to describe the noble and wise effort made by Elder E K. Evans, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, editor Glad Tidings. In brief, his effort on the subject of "Apostasy by the early Christian church" was beautifully and wisely portrayed. He seemed wrapt in the Holy Spirit as his language flowed like pure, healing oil, soothingly assuaging our thirst. He touched also, but very briefly, upon the eleventh hour gospel restoration by the angel to our beloved, martyred prophet, Joseph. The writer must not fail to mention the beautiful singing of Zion's choristers, led by Bro. Russell.

Our little brick church building is now our own, paid for by the honest pennies of the industrious, cheerful toilers. We intend soon to dedicate it. We thank our heavenly Father for all favors bestowed in that line, with others. The church building, with all things connected thereto, will surely give us prestige in our prosperous city That is, if we direct ourselves more fully to our soul-saving, Christ-assigned missions. So might it be.

In love,

JOHN D. JONES.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 19.

Editors Herald:-The Smith-Bays debate is now an incident of the past. I have neither the time nor ability to write a synopsis of their respective arguments, but wish to state one particular point that was made very clear to my mind, and well repaid me for all the time I spent in listening.

Elder Bays divided revelation into three periods; starlight, the time of the patriarchs; moonlight, the time of the prophets; sunlight, the time of Christ. He compared it to an electric arc light, that when we were distant from it, or in the starlight, things were dim. As we drew nearer we got into the moonlight, and when under the arc light we were in the light of Christ and we could have no better light than that.

Bro. Smith showed from Scripture that people were saved in his period of starlight and moonlight as well as in the times of Christ. He also pointed out very clearly that if we were in the sunlight we were entitled to the same blessings that those who lived in the time of Christ enjoyed, that God was no respecter of persons, and did not confine his good things to a particular place or time. He seemed to captivate the audience by his elequent portrayal of the fact that he believed the majority of all people in the various churches were honest in what they believed, that they were just as good as he very fact that they all used the same Bible and came to different conclusions in regard to what it meant, was the strongest argument why it was necessary for the Holy Spirit to guide us into all truth and reveal the things of the Father to us; and that so long as man refused to accept present revelation they could not understand the Scripture alike.

To me it is another beautiful flower plucked from God's garden of love; and still plenty more are growing, and we can have them if we will only believe the promises of our dear

I believe the Saints were comforted and made stronger in the faith because of what they saw and heard.

> Your brother in gospel bonds, EDWARD RANNIE.

> > BLACKFOOT, Idaho, Feb. 12.

Editors Herald:-Perhaps an occasional word from this spiritual desert would be of some interest, even if no especial encouragement or flattering conditions are portrayed. A few Saints are scattered over quite a radius of country in this great Snake River Valley; and since in November I have been kindly cared for by them while traveling in the settlements breaking the bread of life to them and their neighbors.

A hearty response to a call for Saints' meetings has been met with all through the winter. As an example: on Thanksgiving Day we met at Bro. Hansen's house, the Saints coming six and nine miles on either side. A good meeting enjoyed. Eight little girls, all granddaughters of Bro. Hansen, were blessed. About thirty Saints and friends partook of food for the physical man at his table before Elders Grimmett and Wheeler have aided me some in these parts, and financial aid has been cheerfully furnished by Hansen's, Larsen's, and Heaton's families, and Sr. Shoemaker of this vicinity, and the Jennings families, near Iona, thirty miles north, Bro. Smith and family of Taylor, and Sr. Bennett, of Idaho Falls, have kindly cared for us, also.

Bro. A. J. Layland unexpectedly came to our rescue about the first, and has added his testimony to ours at four or five points where we had openings.

Some are investigating, and if the work can be continued in the spring no doubt some will be baptized who are deferring it at present because of the ice.

We have had some sharp shooting with the "Mormons," especially at Riverside, Iona, and Blackfoot. One Carl Fackarel essayed to reply to me at Riverside, and though they had freely indulged in asking questions and bearing testimony at each of my meetings, I was refused the privilege of a question at the close of his sermon or the use of the hall to reply to him. However, the schoolhouse was allowed me, and their unfair methods and attacks were shown up somewhat. Elder Fackarel speaks highly of our prophet, who, he says, treated him with great courtesy; but he thinks some of our elders can "spit venom" and call Brigham was, and as anxious to serve God. And the Young names, especially the chief of the second Seventy. I don't know how my reputation stands by this time. I understand "the Josephites" has been the chief theme there the last two Sundays.

Elder E D. Wilson of that place is among the very few we have met who claims our church doors have been closed against them. He says he met with such experience at Rich Hill, Missouri.

I had desired meeting Bro. Albertson at Hagerman, this month, to do some work among the Saints and people there; but the openings here seemed to demand first and continued attention, so if we get through here and do some work at Pocatello and points enroute home before General Conference it will be all we can hope.

Owing to lack of time and demands of the work, Bro. Layland and I have occupied at different points largely since his arrival, so we have not enjayed each other's society as we should have liked. There is need of many more laborers in this field. Many points where an elder should be stationed are left entirely without workers. Saints become discouraged sometimes, and many right near the door go other ways, sometimes for lack of one with authority to baptize just at the opportune time. Praying that better conditions may soon prevail, I remain, in bonds,

S. D. CONDIT.

GUY, Oklahoma, February 11.

Editors Herald:—Was at place appointed for debate with Seventh-day advocates on January 24. Preached to crowded house. He sent telegram that he would begin the 26th. Preached the 25th to a full house on the atonement of Christ and final destiny of man. My opponent being present, invited him to take part, which he refused.

Began debate Saturday night, 26th, I affirming first day rest. I am assured he intended to quit the debate the first night, as I have had six others do heretofore. Elder Sturgeon, his colaborer, met me in Miami, Indian Territory, in 1897. He would not debate, but would reply to my argument, each to have his own time Saturday afternoon; good audiences. I spoke two hours, and he took notes. He then packed up his armful of books and left abruptly, without a word, and left the town without preaching another sermon, so I heard. Elder Howard would allow only fifteen minutes speeches, and after my first speech declared if I referred to any chapter again in the Bible as evidence where the first day was not mentioned he would not reply but would at once quit the debate. I replied he could not get off so easy; I would ask his consent before I would quote from any chapter.

Eight two hour sessions were occupied. Thirty-three manifest contradictions of scripture I summed up, and he could not disprove one of them.

Seven, as I learn here, turned away from them since I went there last spring; and about a dezen left, and I think many of them are troubled. One Advent lady believes with all her heart, and says her husband will come with her before three months.

I remained two nights after debate closed, and people were so tired I went south four miles, where Bro. Moore lives; preached in large, fine schoolhouse two evenings. First evening had a Wright Smart audience; that is, Mr. Wright and Mr. Smart. Preached to them two hours, as they wanted to hear. Loaned them Voice of Warning.

Next night had eleven; but was so exhausted from fifteen public speeches, and two to three hours each day to individuals, that I came home.

Am to begin for a week where the debate was held February 23 Light moon then. Presented the Inspired translation publicly and privately, with wonderful effect. Two school-teachers among the interested, one buying my Book of Mormon and borrowing the Inspired Translation until I return. Near a dozen families asked us to visit them. A very good prospect, and I feel that our gospel tent, which is stored in this part of the country, ought to go to the place where the debate was, as the schoolhouse is small, and they have nowhere else to go.

My wife renders me valuable aid, and many tell me she is a better preacher than I. Her whole heart is in the work, and some tell me if I do not bring her I need not come again. Many sisters do not realize what a wonderful influence for good they can exert.

Eiders R M. Maloney and Brown and several of the Saints attended the debate, and were well received, being entertained by the Christian minister and Advent friends. They are impressed with the importance of helping with the work in that place. Distributed numerous tracts, and have thirteen copies of the Voice of Warning loaned there and elsewhere. The older I grow (am now sixty-seven) the more I rejoice in the great latter-day work.

Your colaborer,
D. S. CRAWLEY.

MOUNTAINVILLE, Maine, Feb. 10.

Dear Herald:—Bro. S G. Cunningham came here on January 15, and held a series of very interesting meetings. A goodly number of very attentive listeners were present. Mr. Sawyer, the post master, loaned us his organ, his wife and daughter volunteered to play and sing, and his son-in-law did not forget that the lamps needed oil. Bro J. J. Billings was with us January twentieth to February third, and gave us good instructions on Sunday school work.

As to the work in Maine, I agree with Bro. H. J. Davison, it's not dead: and it will not die as long as we have such men in the field as Eders Cunningham, J. J. Billings, Ames, and Davison. They are able defenders.

There is an interest in this place for good, and if the work is looked after, ere long there will be others gathered into the fold. I can see that there is a decided improvement in our brauch. The officers and members are more faithful to duty.

Our Sunday school is progressing finely, and I see no reasons why it will not be a success. If we do the Lord's will he will bless us in our efforts for good.

J. E. EATON.

GOODWIN-BRAMBLET DEBATE.

CONDON, Oregon, Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—I was baptized by Elder John Davis, September 15, 1895, and confirmed the same day by Elders John Davis and Goodwin of this place. Have tried to live a life worthy the name I have taken upon myself, although I have had many trials and temptations. At times it seemed I would fall and give up to the enemy. However, by the aid of the Spirit, I have to a great degree been able to overcome, and now I can rejoice and thank my heavenly Father that I was led to obey the true gospel as restored in these the latter days.

We have now a neat and commodious little church, all complete and paid for, with a two hundred and fifty pound bell that peals forth the joyful invitation to all honest souls to come and partake of the good things God has in store for all those seeking the truth. Come one, come all, saint and sinner, and know whether we teach the doctrine of Christ, or of men. The invitation to all is, Come.

We are somewhat zealous because we have the first and only Latter Day Saints' church building in the state of Oregon. We have a branch membership of fifty-five, or will have when all receive their letters of removal and hand them in. We have preaching every Sunday at 11 a. m. and at 7 p. m.; Sunday school at 2 p. m., and prayer meeting every Thursday evening. It is a great pleasure to meet with the Saints on these occasions, to learn from the word and to cheer each other along the rough path of this life. Bro. D. L. Harris, submissionary in charge of the Pacific Slope mission, came here on the 7th of last December and on the following Sunday completed the branch organization which was partially done by Bro. J. C. Clapp in 1895, and since known as the Condon branch. On the following Sunday, December 16, our little church was dedicated. Bro. A. B. Moore preaching the dedicatory sermon, and Bro. D. L. Harris effering prayer. A large and attentive congregation was present, and all present were edified.

The debate held between Elder W. A. Goodwin and Rev. Bramblet, a Baptist preacher, is a thing of the past. A great deal of good has been done and many friends won to our cause. Each disputant affirmed that his church was in faith, organization, doctrine, and practice in harmony with the apostolic church of the New Testament. Elder Goodwin in his opening speech showed what the church of Christ was, the officers in it, and the spiritual gifts and blessings it possessed, also of the falling away and the apostasy, and of the restoration of the gospel. To prove his position he gave scriptural proofs in a very forcible manner.

Rev. Bramblet followed by saying all these gifts and blessings were given only to the apostles and after their death were done away and no more needed; that the heavens were sealed and no more revelations given. The New Testament was all and sufficient for us to have for our salvation. He then said John the Baptist, the forerunner of Christ, was a baptist, and baptized Christ into the Baptist Church; therefore Christ was a Baptist preacher; tried to establish a succession of the Baptist Church, but gave no proof other than his own theory and say so.

In Elder Goodwin's second speech the house seemed to be filled with the Spirit of God. The congregation was spellbound under his burst of oratory. His knowledge of the scriptures is keen, and the way he explains them is remarkable. Afterward some remarked, that he must be inspired of God, for no man could have this knowledge of himself.

On the second night Rev. Bramblet could hold himself no longer, and sprang to his feet and began a tirade against "Old Joe Smith," as he called him. Called Smith thief, liar, humbug, vagabond, drunkard, polygamist, deceiver, etc. He raved, jumped around on the rostrum, got down on his knees, and hallooed and howled until he was completely exhausted, and out of breath, the perspiration running from his face. He said "Oh, if had more breath."

Elder Goodwin quoted from Isaiah 29:9, "Stay yourselves, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry: they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink," showing there would be a time when just such a condition would be, and the display the Rev. Bramblet made was in fulfilment of that prophecy.

In the discussion Rev. Bramblet read from Doctrine and Covenants, section 17, paragraph 10, and thereby tried to blacken the characters of all the women that belong to the Saints' church. For shame! that a man professing to be a minister of the gospel of Christ should stoop so low! Elder Goodwin followed with such a cutting and deserved rebuke that he (Bramblet) must have felt the rebuke in the extreme. He never referred to it again.

Rev. Bramblet's next pull was demanding a sign. "Show us a sign and I will be a Mormon and preach the Mormon doctrine." Then he produced a bottle containing carbolic acid and demanded Elder Goodwin to drink it, and thereby show his power, and if it did not kill him then he (Bramblet) would believe and be a Mormon the rest of his life. Elder Goodwin said in reply: "Sir, you demand of me a sign, you be the subject, and I will show you and this congregation a sign." Turning to Rev. Bramblet he said: "Sir, you drink that deadly poison, and if it kills you, then I will raise you from the dead." The congregation could hold no longer, and burst out in a strain of applause.

On the last night of the discussion Rev. Bramblet jumped forward on the rostrum with a wild "Whoppe! whoop!" just like some Comanche Indian on the war path, holding the Inspired Translation in his hand, and said, "Joe book! Joe book! ha, ha! Joe book." Called it the most spurious matter that ever was bound into a book. Said it should not be allowed to pass through the mails, etc.

Elder Goodwin met him with logical scriptural proofs on all points that he (Bramblet) could not meet successfully, no matter how he tried. To God be the praise.

Yours in bonds, J. R. CLARK.

Original Poetry.

THE ANGEL MESSAGE.

Tune.—"I have found a friend in Jesus."

I have found the glorious gospel that was taught in former years,

With its gifts and blessings all so full and free,

And my soul is thrilled with gladness, and banished are my fears,

Since the precious Angel Message came to me.

My former teachers told me if I only would believe,

That pardoned all my sins would surely be; But I found they were mistaken, no more can they deceive,

Since the precious Angel Message came to me.

I wandered long in darkness, yet sought the narrow way,

And my life was like the surging of the sea; But now I am rejoicing in this the latter-day, Since the precious Angel Message came

Now for celestial glory, in the presence of the Lord.

I will work, and watch, and humbly bend the knee;

No longer faith, but knowledge, in true and sweet accord

With the precious Angel Message brought to me.

January 1, 1901.

JAMES L. EDWARDS.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Curved is the line of beauty:
Straight is the line of duty:
Walk by the last, and thou shalt see
The other ever follow thee."

BURIED BIBLES.

During the persecutions of the Christians in Madgascar under the bloody Queen Ranavalona I., seventy copies of the Bible were buried to preserve them from destruction. The Hova Bible had been translated with much toil and persevering labor by several missionaries and native helpers, and the prospect of seeing the precious result of such self-denying zeal swiftly obliterated was what opened a grave for these cherished Malagasy Bibles,—from which grave, indeed, they were to rise again in the future unharmed and luminous as with a resurrection halo.

But Bibles need to be unearthed today, not in heathen lands where they may have been deliberately buried for preservation, but in Christian lands where they are thoughtlessly overwhelmed by the débris of hurrying, over-full days. Bibles, today, are buried in our land, not by the shovelfuls of actual earth thrown upon them, but by masses of other printed matter, and particularly by the voluminous Sunday newspaper. How many pages of the Bible could be printed on the vast surfaces and myriad leaves of the Sunday press alone! Under these the Bible is practically buried! If these must be read first, there can be little time left, and probably no appetite, for the holier, heavenly writing.

Christians need to unearth—to exhume—their Bibles! The Bible must rise from the dead into a new resurrection life, if private Christians are to have vitality and are to be empowered with a practical ability to preach and to live the gospel.

The fact is clear that the Sunday paper and the Bible are not compatible. One will sooner or later drive away the other, and bury it out of sight. The tendencies in the case reveal a latent hostility between them. We do not see the earnest Bible-student, who values Sunday as a day of unusual leisure for the study of God's word, spending his time on the secular matters that inundate him all the week; and, conversely, the man whose mind is absorbed in the novelties and sensations of the Sunday press is not eager in his effort to make time for Bible-reading and study. It will be found, on observation, that these two things tend to exclude each other. One buries the other. Which shall become the defunct and buried thing for the Christian? His Bible? If so, his spiritual life is as surely interred!

It will require increased determination, as the world-wide news and sensations of a single day increase in volume and intensity, for young Christians especially, to make time for Bible study. They already live in a world of such rapid sensations, and adjust themselves so quickly to the new moods and phases of our mobile and easily influenced American life and society, that not only their time but their powers are absorbed almost involuntarily in the pressing demands of an environment which would have seemed inextricably complex to their forefathers.

Were even the inveterate readers of the Sunday press, however (we speak of those professedly Christians), to hear that by a voyage across the Atlantic they might, even for the briefest time and with the greatest difficulty, come into the presence of one of the old Hebrew prophets, hear his trumpet tones, arousing sensations they had never experienced in the most tumultuous and spirit-stirring epochs of their lives, and lighting up for them the whole inward drama of their individual existence,—heaven and hell revealed in dazzling light and paralyzing darkness,—there are many who would traverse the widest seas for such an eternal irradiation of life

Or, if one should tell us that across the sage-plains and the Rocky Mountains of the west, the divine-eyed St. John was traveling slowly eastward, with his hand ever pointing to the Light of the World, and his lips ever speaking golden words about "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," should we not set out alone or in companies, that at least we might catch a few words about the Christ from him who had lain in His bosom? How short the distance to this direct communication with the Son of Man!

Just to take the cars and in two or three days and nights to be in the presence of the eaglevision and the tongue of flame—to be assured that we have eternal life, and to hear the testimony of him who saw the manifested Life!

Or, if Paul were again protesting, pleading, persuading in the classic cities of the world, should we not by even some tremendous effort, get within hearing of that sublime logic by which he forced and drove men's hearts to the heart of the Christ?

Or, being convinced that God so loved the world as to send his Son to save men, even though we held that inestimable truth in all too hazy and lazy a way, yet even in such vagueness of belief, should we not long to hear some of the words that fell from this very Redeemer of men himself? If we knew the darkest crypt in the world, where, blazoned on the black rock, these words sparkled in their inherent, divine lustre, should we not reach that most inaccessible spot by shaft or ravine or most toilsome effort, and read and see for ourselves those shining, soul-saving, transcendent words?

But if the writing or speech of a man is the essence of himself, if in his written word John told out the best, the deepest, the truest knowledge that he possessed of his Lord, shall we not, if we have even the faintest interest in the religion of Jesus, read the book which contains the ultimate result of John's intercourse with Christ? Shall we not receive the same instructions which he received at first-hand from the Master? Could he tell us more if we met in any great city of our West? Could Paul use words to persuade us more convincingly, or hold up Christ more evidently crucified before us, than in the words which already show forth the texture and being of his soul? Can the heights and the depths of the human spirit, its longings, its impotence, its power to dare and to endure, its insatiable need of God, be set forth on any modern stage more searchingly than in the words of the Hebrew bards and seers?

The counterpart of the heart is the Word of the Lord. The revelation of God to man is in that Word. How can we bury it deliberately? We do bury it, if, for any reason whatsoever, we do not read and study it. If thoughtlessly it is lost under the mass of secular matter-the Sunday press, the sensational novel, or even the splendid heaps of facts of recent psychical research and sciences -it is practically buried. Let us keep our Bibles lifted above the maelstrom of the ages, above the débris and earth-clods of human things which are as dust to dust and ashes to ashes. Something every day from the Bible we must have, some thought, some precept, some inspiration to love of God and man. Let us unearth our Bibles. Let us roll back the avalanche of other reading-matter, and come at once to the heart and source of all of it that is best in our Bibles, in the living impact of God in his Word upon our souls.

Carlyle says of Cromwell's time: "I account it the culminating point of Protestantism; the most heroic phasis that 'faith in the Bible' was appointed to show us here below." And the sad thought intrudes itself, What if it should be that the real reason which causes the burial of our Bibles is not, indeed, that which is impossible, the death and decay of the incorruptible Word, but the death within us of our own faith in the Bible as the word of the living God?—Christian Endeavor World.

PROGRAM FOR MARCH MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

Opening hymn, Saints' Harp 371. Prayer. Scripture reading, 36 Psaim. Discussion of select reading in Home Column. Roll call. Business. Closing hymn, Saints' Harp 236. Dismissal prayer.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Myrtle Curtis, of Minersville, Kansas, asks the faith and prayers of the Prayer Union and of the church, that if it be God's will, he may restore to her the spiritual light and faith she has lost, and that she may be more willing to obey the Lord.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa,")

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

"Time and tide for no man wait;

Be quick and prompt or you will be too late.

Better an hour early and stand and wait,

Than a moment behind the train."

I wonder how many of us have missed the train-just arrived in the depot to see the train pull out, or hear the whistle in the distance? As far as the train is concerned, we think it is better to be on time, or a little ahead is better. If you will take careful notice you will observe that some people are invariably late at Sunday school, church, and other gatherings, and others are always prompt unless an accident occurs to the street car, the horse runs away, or something to that effect. We hope all our young people will follow the example of the prompt people, as we think it is largely a habit whether people are early or late. If a wedding or something out of the ordinary is to take place, usually all people are on time, but let us remember what is worth doing at all is worth doing well.

"Lost yesterday between sunrise and sunset two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes: no reward is offered, for they are gone forever."

How many of us in wasting some of our time realize that we shall never have that time to use again? Have we ever come to Sunday school without studying our lesson and tell our teacher, "I really did not have time to study my lesson, I just had so much work to do all the time"? Is that a good excuse for us? You answer. Remember, we cannot regain lost time.

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun, Finds no kind deed nor good act done."

Have we intended to do some good, call on the sick, or possibly send some flowers, and then put it off until some other time, when it would be more convenient? Possibly we would hear the next day that our friend had died, or left the city. Let us improve the time while the day lasts, and not neglect opportunities for doing good.

"Let us gather up the sunbeams,
Lying all around our path,
Let us keep the wheat and roses
Casting out the thorns and chaff.
Let us find the sweetest comforts
In the blessings of today,
With a patient hand removing
All the briers from our way."

Some days we are cross; we think people do not treat us right, and we decide to treat them just as they treat us, the result is we have a miserable day. We are disgusted with every body but most of all with ourselves, and our faces may look as if we never smiled. Now if we cannot have things just as we want them, let us make the best of it and do our duty just the same. Let us not say, "Well, if that is the way they are going to treat me, I will not do a single thing." We have enlisted in the army of the Lord, at least most of us, and if the soldiers acted that way in the army of the United States, what a pleasant time the officers would have indeed. Let us realize that the little we can do will help the work along, and if we refuse it will hinder. We meet some people who are always pleasant, and we are made to feel better just as we pass them on the street, while there are others who always look so sour and sad we feel sorry for them. Let us endeavor to find our pleasure in taking advantage of all the good things in our life, and remember the Golden Rule. One thing, let us endeavor not to fret or worry. If trouble comes let us meet it bravely, and not get discouraged, remembering that "There is a silver lining to every cloud."

"Lives of some men remind us
We can make our lives the same,
And departing, leave behind us
Nothing but a tarnished name."

We hope that none in this audience tonight will ever have that said of them, but as we note the newspapers of the day we shudder to think how many are making for themselves such a record, and possibly we can find them among our friends and relatives. Who is to blame? Some one has said, "Our lives are just as we make them," and think this is true to a certain extent. Misery and trouble on all sides of us, will we make the world better or worse by our living in it?

"Lives of great men all remind us We can make our lives sublime, And departing leave behind us Footprints on the sands of time."

Is it worth while to make sacrifices so people will love our memory? We would say yes, but not just for this. Let us do right because it is right, not fearing that we will not be complimented if we do not, or just because we always want people to speak well of us.

"The heights by great men reached and kept Were not attained by sudden flight, But they, while their companions slept, Were toiling upward in the night."

It is a common expression in the world when people are occupying prominent positions to say, "Oh, they are lucky men. They never had any bad luck like the rest of us."

But we wonder how much there is in luck. We will admit that some possess superior talents, but does it not depend a great deal on the persons themselves? Do you think our people who occupy the foremost positions in education today wasted their time while young, and did not spend the evenings in hard study?

Do you suppose that when they were attending college they spent part of their evenings attending dances and card parties? We think not. Many of us can recall when we wanted to finish a certain course in school or college we felt that we could not waste any time, but must bend all our energies to accomplish our object. We believe that there is "No excellence without great labor."

So far we have given quotations from a worldly standpoint, or we might say temporal, but we think they can be applied to our Christian lives as well. As we look over the world today and note the statistics of the Christian churches, some of them losing ground instead of gaining, we wonder what is the trouble. Some people will tell you the world is growing better, but do you believe it? As we learn about the Latter Day Saint Churches over the land, some having a membership of over two hundred, but if you are looking for workers, come out to the praver meetings and be astonished at the number you will find there. We do not say that all who are absent have not a good excuse for remaining away, but why is it so few are obeying the Lord in that respect? Sometimes the thought occurs that we are simply playing at religion, and having a very nice time, living at home with our loved ones and friends. Do we ever compare our lives with the missionary in a strange land, all alone, sometimes, endeavoring to preach the gospel, when place after place is closed against him, and in despair he writes to the church papers soliciting aid? How many of us respond? You answer. How many are willing to wear our old clothes another season for the sake of sending a few dollars to a missionary struggling for the gospel's sake in a land beyond ours? This I believe, Saints, is sacrifice, and if some must sacrifice home, loved ones, and all, are we not to make sacrifices also? The expression of the world, "If you want to test a person's friendship, touch his pocketbook," I believe is also true of Saints by name, but are we really Saints in word and deed, if we do not consider that "The laborer is worthy of his hire"? We have the Savior's words, If ye will not take up your cross and follow me, ye are not worthy of me. Also, If ye abide in me and I in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be given unto you.

We think of one quotation, which applies very nicely here.

"Heaven is not reached by a single bound, We build the ladder by which we rise From the lowly earth to the vanited skies. And we mount to its summit round by round."

How are we building? Are some rounds of the ladder so weak and faulty that we will drop to the ground some day? Is our foundation the rock, Christ Jesus, and are we using precious stones in the rounds of the ladder. so in that great and terrible day, when the straw and stubble shall be burned our works will stand the test? We have our opportunities. Will we take advantage of them? Remember, "Faith without works is dead"

-Alice E Swartz, for the Northern Nebraska district convention

NORTHEAST MISSOURI.

Convention met at Bevier, February 10. M. J. Rudkin, assistant superintendent, in charge; George A. Tryon, secretary. Reports were had from Bevier and Higbee schools. Superintendents' reports were read from D. Robert Winn and M. J. Rudkin; also from W. C. Chapman, librarian. Treasurer's audited report: Balance last report, $11.93; receipts $2.56; expenditures. $4.92; balance February 6, $9 57. Election of officers: M. J. Rudkin, superintendent; Mary Burnham, assistant; Nydia Thomas, secretary and treasurer; D. L. Morgan, librarian. Delegates to General Convention: Louise Palfrey, F. T. Mussell, D. L. Morgan, F. J. Chatburn, Ngdia Thomas, W. Summerfield, J. A. Tanner, G. A. Tryon, J. T. Williams, and Annie Williams. A motion was passed that all active workers in the district, who may not be members of local schools, be considered ex officio members of our district conventions. A demur of action was then raised on the grounds of mover not being a member of this convention, and it was announced that action would be taken at our next convention. Adjourned to meet at same place as district conference, and on day previous.

GENERAL CONVENTIONS.

General Convention of Zion's Religio-Literary Society will convene at Independence, Missouri, at 7:30 pm., Tuesday, April 2, and continue over the 3d. The General Sunday continue over the 3d. The General Sunday School Convention will open at the same place at ten o'clock, Thursday, April 4, closing the evening of the 5th.

It is practically certain that reduced railroad rates will be secured with time limits that will accommodate all who wish to attend both conventions, and the following General Conference. Notices will be given as soon as arrangements are completed with the passenger associations, and all should watch for these notices and study the accompanying instructions given by our Church Secretary very carefully. This may save you some inconvenience.

There will be matters of very general interest to come up in both conventions, and we trust all will make an effort to attend We hope for and fully anticipate the most interesting and most largely attended conventions of the societies. Further notices will be given as to program of business, work, etc.

T. A HOUGAS,

Supt. Gen. S. S. Ass'n.

J. A GUNSOLLEY. Pres. Z R. L. S.

DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

As many of the district conventions of the General Sunday School Association will be held in February and others the early part of March, I call your especial attention to the necessity of making out complete itemized reports promptly and sending them in to me, so that I may be able to compile the general report of the association for the coming General Convention. I will be pleased to have you send in the reports just as soon after the district conventions are held as is possible, so that I may have all of them by not later than March 15. These reports should be a com-pilation of the various reports of local schools, as outlined in the general blank furnished by the association and secured at the Herald Office, especially including the number of schools in each district, the present total membership, the number of classes, the number of books in libraries; together with the names of the officers elected for the ensuing year.

Sunday schools not in district associations should also send in their reports of the last year's membership, sessions held, classes, officers, number of books in libraries, etc. I also desire a list of the delegates selected to represent the district or the school at the coming convention. Be sure and provide me with this list at the same time you send report. By giving prompt attention to the above, you will confer a favor upon your coworker and well-wisher.

W. N. ROBINSON, Gen. Sec.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Convention of the Northern California district Sunday school association will be held at Sacramento, March 8. Reports will please be sent to the district secretary as soon as possible, care Baker and Hamilton, Sacramento, California.

EDGAR H. SMITH, Sec.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN INDIANA.

Conference met at Byrneville, January 26. Conference met at Byrneville, January 26. G. A. Smith and M. R. Scott jr., presiding; John T. Scott, secretary. Branches reporting: Eden, New Marion, Leavenworth, Union, Piainville, Byrneville, and New Trenton. Ministry reporting: M. R. Scott jr., George Jenkins, W. H. Kelley, T. J. Bell, M. R. Scott sen., J. P. Sappenfield, P. A. Flinn, J. J. Boswell, S. M. Scott, and D. Hurbaugh. Bishop's agent's report as corrected by auditing committee. On hand and rected by auditing committee On hand and received since last report $332.75; expended $272 20: balance due church $60 55. Recommendation from Leavenworth branch that Bro. P. A. Flinn be ordained to the office of elder was adopted and ordination provided for. M R Scott jr., and G A. Smith committee to fix a boundary line between this and Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district. Motion adopted, giving district clerk authority to grant letters of removal to all members of disorganized branches who are in good standing, and against whom there is no charges pending or complaints filed. On motion this conference requests General Conference to send Elder J. H. Lake back as missionary in charge of this mission. Delegates to General Conference: M.R. Scott jr., T. J. Bell, J. M. Scott, W. C. Marshall, G. Jenkins, J. T. Scott and wife, J. P. Sappen-H. Kelley and wife, W. W. Kepley and wife, W. H. Kelley and wife, T. F. Wheeler and wife, D. Hurbaugh, D. A. Kiethley, J. J. Boswell, P. A. Flinn chosen assistant district president. Eight sessions were held: two business, two social, four for preaching, beside one priesthood meeting. Preaching Bishop E. L. Kelley, and G. A. Smith. journed to Union branch, first Saturday in September.

OREGON.

Pursuant to a special call by G. T. Griffiths, missionary in charge of the Pacific Slope mission, met at Drain, Oregon, February 2 and 3, 1901. February 2, 10:30 a.m., after song and prayer, the conference was called to order by D. L. Harris, sub-missionary in charge of Oregon. Chairman instructed the conference concerning the laws governing organizations of districts, after which the following resolution was presented and carried. Resolved that we organize the Saints of the State of Oregon into a conference district, to be known as Oregon district. Signed, J. R. Clark, C. E. Crumley. On motion, J. R. Clark was chosen secretary pro tem., after which the name of C. E. Orumley was presented, and by a unanimous vote was chosen president of the district. R. A. Cribbins' name was presented for district secretary and treasurer, and on motion that the secretary be instructed to cast the entire vote for secretary and treasurer, the secretary then east ten votes for R. A. Cribbins for secretary and treasurer of said district. Moved and carried that Alma Morris be sustained as Bishop's agent for the district. Moved and carried that the chair appoint an anditing committee to audit the books of the Bishop's agent. The chair then appointed Charles E. Crumley, J. R. Clark, and Guy Buell. The following were presented and chosen to represent this conference district at General Conference: Charles E Crumley, D. L. Harris, G. T. Griffiths, and A. M. Chase. The name of Charles Cason was pre sented for ordination to the office of an elder. It was moved and seconded that Charles Cason be ordained to the office of priest, subject to the approval of the missionary in charge as to his further ordination. Moved and carried that when we do adjourn we meet again subject to call of the proper authorities. The meeting then adjourned to meet Sunday, February 3, at three p. m. Called to order by D. L. Harris. After song and prayer, the auditing committee's report was accepted. The branch known as the Hope branch, located at Drain, Oregon, was de-clared disorganized by D L Harris, and the district president and secretary were authorized to issue letters of removal to all members; the branch being disorganized on account of all the officers moving away. A vote of thanks was extended to the Saints of Drain for their entertainment and kindness. Moved and seconded that we now adjourn as per former resolution.

GALLAND'S GROVE.

Conference met at Deloit, Iowa, February 16. C. E. Butterworth presiding, C. J. Hunt assisting, Nellie Rudd sceretary. Branches reporting: Deloit 165, Galland's Grove 285, Dow City 116, Harlan 70. Auburn 65, Pilot Rock 28, Benan 50. Union 79, Salem 63. No report from Coalville. E. ders reporting: C. E. Butterworth, C. J. Hunt, D. Brewster, J. M. Stubbart, James O. Sheldon, U. V. Sheldon, B. Salisbury, R. Wight, C. Derry, O. E. Holcomb, John Pett, J. R. Rudd, W. A. Carroll, A. R. Crippen, J. L. Butterworth, A. Jackson, J. W. Chatburn: Priests J. C. Carlson, A. H. Rudd, F. B. Shumate; Teachers George Juergens, T. F. Jones; Deacon O. Salisbury. Reports showed a total of 426 sermons preached. Bishop reported: On hand and received $968.48; expended $910.60; balance on hand $57.88. Tent fund on hand $25.18. The appeal case of H. M. Daniel was taken up and the conference sustained the branch. The bishop's council, consisting of C. J. Hunt bishop, D. Brewster and James O. Sheldon counselors, reported having held four sessions as a quorum; report will perhaps be published hereafter, so we omit. The present district officers were sustained for the coming year. Bro. Pearsall was requested to cröperate with Bro, Kibler of Little Sioux district, and they form a choral society to assist at the next reunion. Preaching by J. W. Wight, I. N. Roberts, C. Derry. Adjourned to meet at Dow City, Iowa, June 1, at 8:45 a. m.

OHIO.

Conference of Ohio district convened at Limerick, Ohio, February 2. Bro. G. T. Griffiths, chosen to preside, James Moler associate. Branches reporting: Vinton 102 Liberty 59, Creola 46, Milton 47, Columbus (new) 17. Byer and Davisville branches withdrew their reports for correction. Bishop's agent's report: Received since last report, $151 70; on hand last report, $9 68; total $161 38; expenditures, $145 30; balance on hand, $16 08. Elders reporting in person: J. L. Goodrich, V. M. Goodrich, T. J. Beatty, James Moler,

S. J. Jeffers, and A. B. Ervin. By letter: A. B. Kirkendall, O. B. Thomas, A. W. Kriebel. A communication from Eder H. E Moler was received, and a committee consisting of V. M. Goodrich, J. L. Goodrich, and T. J. Beatty was appointed to draft a letter and send a copy to Elders W. H. Kelley and H. E. Moler. Report of elder's court in regard to Sr. Philadephia Roush was read, and the sister was cut off from the church for apostasy. Moved that the conference provide for the ordination of S B Kriebel to the office of a priest. The committee on reunion reported as favoring Columbus, Ohio, as being the better point for holding a re-union. Time and place for next conference and reunion left to the reunion committee and the district officials. Moved that district officials provide letters of removal to the members of the Liberty branch in case of its disorganization. Moved that the report of committee on Bishop's agent's report in 1890, wherein an error was thought to exist be expunged from the record as it was found to be a cierical error. Elder S. J. Jeffers elected president, V. M. Goodrich associate, E. E. Long reflected secretary, and S. J. Jeffers sustained as Bishop's agent. James Moler, G. T. Griffiths, W. H. Kelley, T. J. sustained as Bishop's agent. James Moler, G. T. Griffiths, W. H. Kelley, T. J. Beatty, Martha Beatty, J. L. Goodrich, V. M. Goodrich, S. J. Jeffers, O. B. Thomas, A. B. Kirkendall, delegates to General Conference. Moved that a committee of three, one from each branch, be appointed to consider the advisability consolidating the Byer, Bierly, and Liberty branches, and report to the missionary in charge at earliest moment. A vote of thanks extended to saints for hospitality.

VICTORIA.

Conference held at Queensferry, New South Wales, December 29 and 30, Bro. C. A. Butterworth presiding. Statistical reports: Hastings, referred back for correction. Queensferry, no change. Geelong, no report. Bishop's agent's audited report: Balance last conference £5. 63. 94.; receipt since £5. 4s. 4d.; expenditures £5. 6s. 9d.; balance due £5. 4s. 4d. Branch reports: Bro. J. H. N. Jones reported Hastings in full working order and fairly satisfactory condition. Priesthood reports from Brn. Butterworth, McIntosh, and Jones. Committee report: Bro. Butterworth reported nothing Committee done re building of church at Goelong. After discussion of above, when Brn. Woolley, Jones, and McIntosh spoke in favor of hiring halls, it was moved that Bro. Butterworth be discontinued as committee re church building. Moved that the district president be ordained to office of high priest and appointed bishop. Resolution to be forwarded to First Presidency. Moved that a fund be started to sustain preacher in Melbourne. Delegates to General Conference: J. W. Wight and G. R. Wells. Officers for ensuing term: Bro. McIntosh president, Bro. Read secretary. Moved that Bro. Kippe be recommended as Bishop's agent for Victoria, and that all moneys be paid to him till his appointment by Bishop Next conference at Hastings. by Bishop Next conference at Hastings, April 6, at three o'clock, or at call of president. Preaching in afternoon and evening by Brn. Hailey and Butterworth. Sacrament Sunday morning. Moved Bro. McIntosh be recommended as missionary for Victoria, and that Bro. Butterworth forward to proper quarters. Bro. Millard appointed collector for Melbourne fund.

Plants need a good deal more water as the days grow longer and warmer than they do in midwinter. They should be given all they can make use of. Watch the surface of the soil and whenever it looks dry give more water. Do not make watering a matter of three times a week and so much to a plant, as many do, but be governed by the evident needs of the plant as shown by the soil.—

March Ladies' Home Fournal.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

To the Ministry and Membership of Decatur District, Greeting:—Under the providence of God, and the choice of the people, I am your pastor for the ensuing twelve months, and desire to greet one and all in the grace, peace, and Spirit of the Divine Teacher.

Allow me to urge and exhort all to give diligent heed and willing obedience to the commandment: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so. Amen."—D. C. 104:44.

It is clear from this that it is the will of our heavenly Father that all those who have submitted to an installment into the priesthood are expected to work in the particular office whereunto they were ordained, and I do not believe, neither do I understand that it was the intent of the all-wise that those bearing any part of the priesthood are to abide in ignorance of their duty, nor are they to sit in idleness "in the marketplace" and excuse themselves with: "Because no man hath hired us." For the injunction, "now let every man learn his duty," carries with it most assuredly the requirement to perform the labor imposed upon that individual in that particular office of the priesthood, and the principle for learning was that he should know how to work in harmony with his fellow workmen, and in acceptance to the law-giver. All should be admonished, and with a cheerful and willing spirit seek the Holy Spirit, that they may be able to make the needed sacrifice to comply with the following, with the humiliation that will receive the approval of God: "Behold, I sent you out to testify and warn the people, and it becometh every man who hath been warned, to warn his neighbor; therefore, they are left without excuse, and their sins are upon their own heads. He that seeketh me early shall find me, and shall not be forsaken."—D. C. 85: 22.

The force of the above is this: all those who have heard the gospel, complied with its conditions, received the love, light, and peace that can only be attained unto through the ministration of the Holy Spirit, are to tell this gladsome story unto their friends and neighbors, and thus they acquit themselves of a religious responsibility and duty, while those that are warned are stripped of the opportunity of an excuse; and if they turn a deaf ear to the heavenly invitation, will suffer loss in this life, and at the day of judgment will be told: "depart from me, ye that work iniquity." The ancient prophet put it thus: "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me. When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die, and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity: but hou hast delivered thy soul."—Ezek 3:17-19.

O, dear Saints, receive this in spirit and in truth, for God said, April 15, 1894: "And further the Spirit saith unto you, that with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day." Thus we learn that God changeth not in his purposes and that God changent acdealings with men. I desire that this my pastoral shall be in spirit and harmony with the law of God, namely: "And again I say unto you, I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded. And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness. And go ye out from among the wicked. Save yourselves. Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord. Even so. Amen."—D. C. 38: 9.

In your ministry, cultivate a cheerful and pleasant manner of address, and you will be full of light and a blessing to the people. We are to be sober and truthful, but not of a sad countenance or voice, as if attending the funeral of a dear friend, every time we occupy the pulpit; neither should we be harsh of expression, for a religious conviction is a tender and sacred possession of the soul. Earnestness, with meekness, will always be attractive. We should always avoid association and companionship of the will-fully wicked. The command: "Save yourselves," is a positive instruction that we violate not the laws of righteousness, and that last clause, "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord, is of paramount importance to every priesthood bearing member of the church. I hold that the true test of all is that of membership in good standing.

Again, follow this: "See that ye love one another; cease to be covetous; learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires; cease to be idle; cease to be unclean; cease to find fault one with another; cease to sleep longer than is needful; retire to thy bed early, that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated; and above all things, clothe yourselves with the bonds of charity, as with a mantle, which is the bond of perfectness and peace; pray always, that you may not faint until I come; behold, and lo, I will come quickly, and receive you unto myself. Amen." —D. C. 85:35. Fellow-servants, shall we be of the number that will be received by the Master when he comes?

Another most pungent word reads as follows: "The elders and men of the church should be of cheerful heart and countenance among themselves and in their intercourse with their neighbors and men of the world, yet they must be without blame in word and deed. It is therefore not seemly that they indulge in loud and boisterous speech, or in the relating of coarse and vulgar stories, or those in which the names of their God and their Redeemer are blasphemed. God, who bear the vessels of the Lord, be ye clean in your bodies and in your clothing; let your garments be of a sober character and free from excess of ornamentation. Avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example."—D. C. 119: 3.

Some have been wont to apply the foregoing to missionaries only, but to the under-signed it is equally applicable to the entire male membership of the church, for to me it is unreasonable that God should have more than one rule of righteousness for his children, and I can assure you from long years of observation and experience, that in those localities where the Saints honor the law of God in all particulars, and in their dealings with their fellowmen, they follow the rule upon the high plane of the gospel of Christ, there the minister may preach without fear or shamefacedness, and declare the word with greater confidence and freedom, and under a higher endowment of the Holy Spirit, than it is possible for him to enjoy in localities where carelessness and indifference of daily and moral life is the rule of action. truth of the matter is, all Saints, like Cæsar's wife, should be above suspicion.

Will the priesthood bearing members please take note that section 104 tells us that "he that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand;" that is, will not be worthy to retain the office to which he was ordained. And as late as May 4, 1865, the Lord said: "Be ye very careful, for many elders have been ordained unto me, and are come under my condemnation, by reason of neglecting to lift up their voices in my cause, and for such there is tribulation and anguish: haply they themselves may be saved (if doing no evil) though their glory, which is given for their works, be withheld, or in other words their works are burned, not being profitable unto -D. C. 116: 2.

All in this paragraph that will apply to elders who neglect their duty, will likewise apply to every other officer who neglects his The assurance of salvation to those who hold office, and neglect to magnify their office, is not very flattering; and to say the least, those who can, and do not fulfill the obligation of their ordination are standing on a sandy foundation.

Dear brethren, I realize that advanced age, infirmities of either mind or body, or prolonged illness of family, or obligations of business, are to us reasonable excuses for the non-performance of duty, and with him who grants to man priesthood authority must the final settlement be made.

All those who have done labor within the limits of the district, both missionary and local laborers, are respectfully requested to report to Bro. Duncan Campbell, Pieasanton,

It is not my province in this pastoral to instruct you in regard to your sustaining the cause with your tithe offerings; but to me it would be quite gratifying to learn that during this year of our Lord, every member of the district would have his name entered upon the book of such accounts, and all that so desire to comply with the law should send to William Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa.

Personally, I do not expect to be able to accomplish much until after the General Conference, and I can assure the missionary force that so far as is practicable, will seek to comply with the instruction pertaining to standing ministers, as found in Doctrine and Covenants 122: 7; also, 120: 7.

As the shepherd of this great flock, allow me to entreat one and all to enter into their very life and being the sentiment and spirit of the following: 'There should be no con-flictor jealousy of authority between the quorums of the church; all are necessary and equally honorable, each in its place."—D. C.

The wants of all, both branches and scattered Saints, will receive due consideration when presented.

With a gospel salutation in the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, with becoming regard for one and all, and malice toward none, I am your bumble servant in the Lord

ROBT. M. ELVIN, District President. LAMONI, IOWA, Box 224, Feb. 18, 1901.

REDUCED RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

WESTERN PASSENGER ASSOCIATION.

The Western Passenger Association has granted the usual reduction of one and onethird fare, round trip, on the certificate plan, to the General Conference and General Conventions of Auxiliary Societies, Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, to be held at Independence, Missouri, April 5-20, 1901.

The reduced rate is granted on the terms heretofore advertised, under which the attendance of one hundred persons holding certificates showing purchase of tickets costing more than fifty cents is required; cept that where parties or clubs traveling in a body purchase round trip tickets to the place of meeting from stations from which the local one way rate is more that fifty cents and at not less than the rate announced on the certificate plan for the particular meeting in question (instead of one way tickets at regular rate) and present to joint agent a certificate from the selling agent to that effect, they will be counted by the joint agent in reckoning the attendance at any meeting." Parties must obtain a separate certificate with every ticket purchased. No certificate will be honored which was issued to cover the sale of more than one single trip ticket.

Ministers or others who travel on clerical or half fare permits, or commutation tickets of any description, are not entitled to this reduction, nor to be included in computing the number in attendance at any meeting.

Tickets on the going trip may be purchased from April 2 to 8 inclusive, on any of those dates. "Under the method usually observed the passenger pays full fare on going trip, and on presentation of certificate to that effect and other conditions named complied with, he is entitled to a return ticket to starting point at one third the regular fare, by route traversed on going trip."

"Where the journey is made over more than one line, it is usually necessary for the passenger to purchase separate local tickets of each road's issue, between points traveled thereon, and procure certificates thereof for each of the lines in this territory over which he travels in going to the meeting, as through tickets are not always sold, and it is not always practicable for the various lines to honor each other's certificates. Passengers should, therefore, ascertain from the ticket agent what portion of their journey can be covered by the certificate obtainable from him, and procure certificate filled out to correspond with the ticket purchased."

"Failure to procure or present certificate invalidates any claim for reduction in return fare.

Tickets for the going passage may be either limited or unlimited, according to the rate paid or the regulations in effect on the line over which it reads; but the return tickets sold at the reduced fare will, in all cases, be limited to continuous passage.

Return tickets at one third fare may be purchased any time after the necessary one hundred have been secured and certified to, until April 24, except that-

A joint agent of the Passenger Association will be present to stamp and return certifi-cates to delegates personally on two days only: namely Tuesday and Wednesday, April 9 and 10: hence all parties must have their tickets in the Church Secretary's hands promptly, before those dates, in order that they may be filled out by him beforehand; and parties must be present on the 9th or 10th, to receive certificates from the joint agent.

Special attention is called to the necessity of making the trip from Kansas City to Independence on the regular lines of railroadeither the Missouri Pacific or the Chicago and Alton, thus completing the journey to destination over regular lines. The local electric or steam line running between Kansas City and Independence is not included in list of lines granting reduction.

The Western Passenger Association includes the following lines of road:-

cludes the following lines of road:—
Atchison. Popeka, & Santa Fe; Burlington & Northwestern: Burlington & Western; Burlington. Cedar Rapids, & Northern; Chicago & Aton; Chicago, Burlington, & Quncy; Chicago & Northwestern; Chicago, Burlington, & Quncy; Chicago & Northwestern; Chicago, Great Western; Chicago, Riwankee, & St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific: Chicago, & St. Louis; Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific: Chicago, Peoria, & St. Louis; Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific: Chicago, Tanta Burling & St. Joseph; Kaneas City. St. Joseph, & Council Bluffs; St. Louis, Keokuk, & Northwestern; Illinois Central; Iowa Central; Jacksonville & St. Louis; Kaness City, Ft. Scott, & Memphis; Kaneas City Southern; Keokuk & Western; Minneacolis & St. Louis; Missouri, Karsas, & Texas; Missouri Pacific; Rock Island & Peoria; St. Louis & San Francisco; Stoux City & Pacific: Wabash; Wisconsin Central; Burlington & Missouri River; Colorado Midland; Denver & Rio Grande; Fremont, Elkhorn, & Missouri Valley; Rio Grande Western; St. Joseph & Grand Island; Kaneas City & Omaha; Union Pacific
R. S. SALYARDS,

R. S. SALYARDS,

Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 21.

Church Secretary.

DEDICATION.

The Davis City branch have appointed Sunday, March 3, at eleven o'clock, as the time for dedicating their house of worship. Elder Heman C. Smith will preach the ser-

The Saints' Herald.

( Established 1860 )

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price. $1 50 per year.

Subscription price. 51 30 per year.
Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."
Marriage, birth. and death notices: Marriages, $1 00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, $100 words frag above that number 50 cents per 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business mana-

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as re-ceipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E. Lamoni. Decatur County. Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

mon and Elder Henry A. Stebbins will offer the dedicatory prayer. Saints of Lamoni, Greenville, and other branches, and the pubhe in general, are cordially invited to meet with us.

JAMES MCDIFFIT, Pastor.

DIED.

JENNERJAHN - Martha J. Jennerjahn was Outagamic county, Wisconsin; was baptized November 29, 1899, at Appleton, Wisconsin, by Elder C. H. Burr; died at Appleton, Wisconsin, February 11, 1901. She leaves a husband, three children, father, mother, three sisters. and three brothers to mourn their loss. Funeral sermon by Elder W. A. Mc-Dowell. Funeral conducted by "Royal Neighbors of America." She was loved by all who knew ber.

KUYKENDALL - Absalom Kuykendall was born August 25, in Tennessee. Bro Kuykendall was baptiz d by E der John A. McIntosh in Pottawattamie county, Iowa, July 5, 1860; ordained an elder the same day. His life was full of vicissitudes, but he remained faithful to his covenant until death, which occurred January 2, 1901, at San Antonio, Texas. His remains were laid in the Oakwood cemetery on the Medina river, January 4. Funeral sermon by Elder Hyrum O. Smith, February 3, 1901, at San Antonio. May his rest be peaceful and his resurrection be glorious.

SMITH -At her home, 2816 Lyon street, St. Luis, Missouri, February 9, 1901, Sr. Emma, daughter of Elder J. G. Smith, at the age of 16 years, 9 months, and 24 days. She was born in St. Louis, Missouri, May 16, 1884; baptized April 3, 1895. She goes to meet her mother and other loved ones. Leaves her father, stepmother, four brothers, two sisters, many relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Funeral services were held at home in charge of Priest G. F. Bar-raclough, February 10.

HARRIS - 3r. Nancy Harris, member of Faicview branch, West Virginia, died January 21, 1901. She was born May 13, 1824. United with the church August 24, 1867. She was the wife of Aaron Harris, who came into the church about the same time. She was a faithful sister, an affectionate wife, kind mother, and loved by all who knew her. She leaves two daughters and two sons, grandchildren, and many friends to mourn. No elder being present at the time of burial. a chapter was read and prayer by a friend of the Christian faith. Funeral sermon will be in the near future.

ROUSH. - At his home near Fulton, Iowa, Bro. L-vi R ush passed from earth life, February 13, 1901, at the age of 57 years, 9 months, and 26 days. Funeral service held in the church, which was attended by a large number of sympathizing neighbors and friends, the Odd Fellows attending in regalia. Bro. Roush leaves a sorrowing wife and one son, Eider John B, of Denver, Colorado, who was present, also an adopted daughter. Roush was baptized in 1888 Funeral sermon by Elder J. M. Terry. Services in charge of Bro John Heide and the Oud Fellows' lodge of Fulton. "Farewell, brother."

KING -Susannah Mary Mills was born in York county. Octario, July 27, 1878: came to Applegate, Michigan, with her parents in 1883; was baptized by Elder E C Briggs, June, 1893; was united in marriage with Frank N. King, November 16, 1898 She Frank N. King, November 16, 1898 She died February 6, 1901, leaving a little babe one day old. Her husband, father, mother, three sisters, two brothers, and a large circle of friends mourn her loss. Funeral at the Baptist church in Cash. Interment in Washington cemetery Funeral sermon by Elder E. J. Goodenough.

EWING—Hannah A. Ewing died at Smithland, Iowa, January 31, 1901, at the age of 64 years, 8 months, 6 days She united with the church about six years ago, ever expressing her satisfaction with its principles Funeral services were held at the M. E church in Smithland, February 1, in charge of Eider F Mintun, who preached from Proverbs 14: 32 and 1 Corintbians 15: 19.

LILES. - Alexander Liles departed this life February 9 1901, at his home in Council Bluffs, Iowa, after a protracted illness of pneumonia. He was born in Calloway county, Kentucky, March 20, 1832. Came to Iowa in 1842, and to Mills county in 1851. He was married to Frances Richards in December, 1853 Seven children were born to this union, four of whom together with the wife, survive him. He joined the Reorganized Church in August, 1864, and remained a faithful member thereof until his death. was a devoted husband, and a loving father. As a neighbor he had many friends for he was always ready to help anyone in need. Funeral services were held at the home. Elder Mark H. Forscutt preached the sermon to the friends gathered there. Other services were held in Henderson, Iowa, the town of his former home, conducted by Elder D. Hougas, assisted by Bro. John Lentz. Many of his old friends and neighbors followed the remains to the cemetery on the hill where they were peacefully laid to their final rest.

The March number of the Delineator is admirably suited to the various needs of every woman. There is something in it of a practical character for every woman who has household cares or who wishes to understand the tendency in modern styles One of the most valuable articles is on "The S-rvants We Do Not Keep," by Prof. Ellen H Richards of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This is a subject that should interest every woman who has troubles with the domestic problem.

The current World's Work has three terse, timely articles which carry much valuable information. J. D. Whelpley outlines and explains the action of the Washington legislators over the Canal Bill and prophesies results. There is an interview with Horace Plunkett, in which the methods and ends of cooperation in Ireland are shown, and George Iles describes the growth of the libraries which travel from book centers throughout the rural districts, showing that the city library, like the postmaster, is at the farmer's door.

In the World's Work for February is a sketch on pressed steel car industry and its designer, Mr. Schoen. Mr. Schoen's slight education, early marriage, his start in a cooper's shop in Philadelphia, the idea of the use of pressed steel and the growth of the industry are told with interesting detail.

'It was uphill work at first," Mr. Schoen is reported to have said of the beginnings of that great business. "The force consisted of four. I used to draw the red-hot plates from the furnace and pass them to my son and nephew, who were mere boys, and to another man to handle."

There is also a story in the current World's Work of the life of Sir William Van Horn apropos of the new railway in Cuba. report of the progress of the month in "Among the World's Workers" grows in interest with each issue of the magazine.

How, then, can the American girl get and keep her own soul aglow? Next to pure religion one of the greatest spiritualizing agents is good literature. Mr. Howells has aptly said that in America civilization comes largely through books. One business of the American girl, then, is to teach herself to appreciate literature when she sees it, and to reject the mass of tawdry imitations with which we are at the moment flooded. The way to know good literature is to first familiarize one's self with the best .- George W. Georig, in the March Woman's Home Companion.

Though this remarkable addition to the New York University has been made known throughout the world by the comments of newspapers, yet Chancellor MacCracken and those in the secret have steadily declined to announce the name of the donor of this building, which cost over $200,000. According to Sarab K. Bolton, the biographer, the giver was Helen Gould. This is stated by Mrs. Bolton in the March Delineator, in an article on Helen Gould and her gifts.

There are nearly 50,000,000 acres of national forest reserves in this country, and for their conservative management Uncle Sam's Forest Bureau is making working plans. The states are taking a most active interest in the matter, especially New York, in whose behalf the Bureau is preparing working plans for about 1,250,000 acres. In addition, the about 1,250,000 acres. In addition, the Bureau has applications for similar working plans for 2,500,000 acres belonging to private owners.

From 20.000 000 to 40,000,000 acres of Goverament forest in the Philippines require attention, and the office in charge of forestry work at Manila, under Captain Ahearn, of the Ninth Infantry, is anxious to obtain the service of competent experts in this line.-The Saturday Evening Post.

The leading article in McClure's Magazine for March will be a character study of Edward the Seventh, written by George W. Smalley, the American correspondent of the London Times, and illustrated by a remarkable collection of photographs.

Life Portraits of Queen Victoria will be a feature in the March issue of McClure's Maga-The series is made up of reproductions from photographs and paintings, and it is of notable historical value. They cover the life of the queen from infancy to old age and are accompanied by descriptive text.

ADDRESSES.

Joseph Arber, 47 Monkfort Road, Pitsmoor, Sheffi-ld. England.
J. A. Grant, Glover, Bay County, Michigan. W. S. Macrae, Saltillo, Faulkner county, Arkansas.

James Craig, Glen Easton, West Virginia. S D Goostree, Iuka, Illinois (permanent address).

Arthur Allen, mission address, church corner of Glasgow and Dickson streets, St. Louis, Missouri.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER, Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS. Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162.781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All etters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa

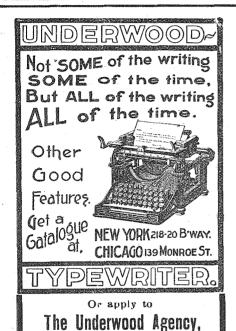

STOCK HOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Ressevuie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eda D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

UWANTO STOP

Using tobacco. Quit-to-bac makes it easy to do so. Three boxes postpaid, only $150 with positive guarantee to cure or the $150 cheerfully refunded! It cures others, why not you.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, Ill.

47-42 (U.S. Postage stamps taken)

Translation.
173. Cloth, limp		35 50
THE TWO RECORDS. The Book of Mormon and the New Testament. Inspired Translation; large type, in one volume.
98. Leather back and corners	2	00
99 Seal grain russia
100. Imitation morocco, gilt edges,	3	50
101. Morocco, gilt edges	4	ÜÜ

LAMONI 'OWA.

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Address, THE PATRIOT Lamoni, Lowe

A postal card brings a sample copy.

	SUCCESSION IN CHURCH PRESIDENCY. By Elder
	H. C. Smith, Church Historian.
152.	Paper	35
153.	Cloth	5(
		THE PERSONNEL PROPERTY OF THE PERSONNEL PROP

NOT IN THE CATALOGUE.

TRACTS.
33. Trial of the Witnesses to the Resurrection of Jesus.
Each 5 cents; per doz. 50 cents.
47. The Basis of Brighamite Polycamy.
Per doz. 10 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

SAINTS' HYMNAL. Words only.		15
115. Paper	_	-
Per dozen	1	60
116. Cloth, limp		25
Per dozen	2	70
117. Cloth	- COD	35
	Ġ
Per dozen	3
118. Flexible, gilt edges		50
BOOK OF MORMON. Large type
edition.
92. Cloth, leather backs and cor-
nore	1	50

	Seal grain russia, gilt edges Flexible, gilt edges
141.	PENDIUM OF FAITH. Clotn	75 50

GOSP	EL Q	UAR	TER	LIES
	Publis	shed	by	$_{ m the}$	General
	Sunda	y S	choo	l Ass	ociation.
					Sabbath school	wo	rk.	Issue	ed quar terly.

73.	Senior Grade, per quarter
	Per year, in advance
74.	Intermediate Grade, per quarter
	Per year
75.	Primary Grade, per quarter
	Per year

•
INTERMEDIATE	QUESTION
DOOK.
76 Limp, 25c. ea	ch, per dozen 2	50

PRIMARY QUESTION BOOK.
77. Limp, 15c. each, per dozen... 1 50
The office will procure for its patrons
any book that is obtainabl

COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI, - IOWA,
Solicits your D posits and pays

4 1-2 % INTEREST.
D. F. Nicholson. Cashier.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH THE SEER. Discoveries of Ancient American Records and Relics, with the statements of Dr. Lederer (converted Jew) and others.

184. Each 10c.; per dozen...... 1 00

LADIES' KID GLOVES.

AGENTS WANTED — These gloves comprise all the qualities of fit, style, comfort, and comony, perfectly made and thoroughly reliable. We want a lady or miss to act as our home agen for these gloves, in every city and town in the United States and Canada. Liberal inducements. No capital required. Address with stamp. CENTURY PUBLISHING CO, 94t SI. Joseph, Missouri, U. S. A.

BRING YOUR LAUNDRY TO

South Side Barber Shop.

For every five dollars worth of Laundry you receive a

HANDSOME SHAVING MUG. SHOOK & KLINE, Props.

DR. E. S. SWEET, DENTIST.

Decoe Building,

WOODBINE, - - IOWA.

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on investment.

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Iowa.

05 15

05

15

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chicago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a m following morning.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS.

Dates of sales, February 19, March 5 and 19, April 2 and 16, 1901, one lowest first class fare for the round trip, plus $200. Good for return 21 days from date of sale.

Cheap one-way colonist excursion rates to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego, California. Dates of sale F-bruary 12, 19, and 26, March 5, 12, 19, and 26, April 2, 9, 16, 23, and 30, 1901.

One-way second class settlers rates. Denver, Colorado Springs, and Pueblo. Ogden and Salt Lake. Bozeman, Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Grantfalls, Kalispell, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma. Victoria and Vancouver.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North—Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a. m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a. m.

Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C.

B. & Q. at Leon.

SAINTS' -I

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31,32. "Hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, MARCH 6, 1901.

NO. 10.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH EDITOR. FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR. Joseph Luff D. W. Wight Corresponding Editors.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 6, 1901.

APOSTASY-WHAT IT IS.

Apostasy, n. An abandonment of what one has voluntarily professed; a total desertion or departure from one's faith principles, or party; especially, the renunciation of a religious faith; as Julian's apostasy from Christianity.

Apostate, n. One who has forsaken the faith, principles, or party, to which he before adhered; esp., one who has forsaken his reliagion for another; a pervert; a renegade.

Apostate, a. Pertaining to, or characterized by, apostasy; faithless to moral allegiance; renegade.

We beg the pardon of the HERALD readers for again presenting some thoughts upon the subject of apostasy; the following from the Deseret News is the excuse.

APOSTASY.

The editor of the Lamoni SAINTS' HERALD, in the current number, has an article on "Apostate—Apostasy," the chief aim of which is to prove that one who adheres to the articles of faith of a church cannot properly be termed an apostate. The reasoning does not appear sound. To apostatize means not only to stand away from, or depart from, a declaration of faith once adopted, but also to separate from the body that holds this Apostasy may be theoretical or practical, or both. A man or woman may apostatize from the faith and yet remain to all cutward appearances a member of the church that is declaring that faith; or may continue to adhere to that faith, and yet apostatize from the church. A soldier enlisted for a certain cause can turn traitor in more than one way. He can remain in the ranks, following the main body and yet render all the aid in his power to the enemy. Or he can refuse to march on with the main body and gather around him other stragglers, professing to fight in the original cause, while refusing to follow the properly constituted commander. In either case there are treachery and desertion. It is apostasy, if applied to a church, no matter what form it assumes.

We do not wish to be understood as making any personal application of this self-evi-dent truth to the editor of the Lamoni HERALD, or his friends. It is not for us to pronounce judgment. But the general prin-ciple he treats on is of much importance and should be well considered. In ancient Israel, when it was rumored that "certain men, the children of Belial, are gone out from among you, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying. Let us go and serve other gods," inquiry was to made and if the rumor was true, those separatists were to be treated as apostates. Under the Christian dispensa-tion, those who became "offended," because of the persecutions that raged, and commenced to "betray one another" were certainly apostates.

The great apostasy predicted by the first apostles of the Lord was wonderfully well hidden under the pretense of adherence to the original faith. In fact, the true church was condemned as a body of heretics and was driven into "the wilderness," while the master spirit of the apostasy claimed divine authority and power, and entered into a compact with paganism, for the oppression of the faithful Saints.

Many have thought that they could preserve the faith pure, even if they left the ranks of the church, "offended" perhaps at real or imaginary wrongs. But we believe the experience of every true Saint is, or will be, that in order to preserve the faith, it is necessary, not only to be one with the people of God, but also to perform the duties implied in membership. Those who neglect their prayers, the study of the word of God. the companionship enjoyed in meetings of wards and quorums, will soon find themselves sur-rounded by the darkness of doubt and unbelief. The sight grows dim. Knowledge once enjoyed passes away. It is only by faithful application to duty that the Spirit of the Lord can be retained—that Spirit which gives light, peace, and joy. Without that Spirit, the soul will soon be in the dark, and apostasy will be the result.—Desert Evening News, Jan. 19, 1901.

Accepting the News' statement that it does not wish to be understood as making any personal application to the editor of the Lamoni HERALD or his friends, as being made in good faith, we give the nouns apostasy and apostate, and the adverb apostate, as Webster's International Dictionary gives them and their meaning.

It will be remembered that we made our former article quite personal, having been charged with being an apostate from the faith of Joseph the prophet, father of HERALD editor. We thought that we showed pretty clearly what the faith of the church was at the time we became a member of it. So if we continue in adherence to that we have not in any sense departed from that faith.

As to separating from the church, or dropping out of the ranks. The citation of the apostasy of Julian is not in parallel, for he revolted from Christianity as a whole. This we have not done; but held to Christianity as the same was revealed in the coming of the angel and the Book This book contains a of Mormon. declaration of the faith and doctrine which the church was to accept and follow. We have found the faith and doctrine as given in the Book of Mormon to be the same as stated in the Epitome, or Articles of Faith offered 1842 by Joseph Smith. They also agree with the doctrine and faith stated in the revelations of the Lord to the church, accepted by church, and published by the church for the guidance of the members and the information of the public, friendly or hostile; as found in the Doctrine and Covenants published in the lifetime of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and for thirty two years after the death of those two men. This included the years from 1844 to 1876. during which period there was no change in the published rule of the church, of any faction, regarding the marriage relation; the first introduction into the Book of Covenants of the dogma of plural marriage occurring in 1876. All other editions, issued prior to that date, both American and European, contained the monogamic rule adopted by the church in 1835 and published thereafter until 1876.

It is a well-known axiom in law that no change of faith and practice can be introduced into a church against the consent or the membership, and that should any attempt be made by any, few or many, to bring about a change of faith and practice any number of the members, however few, may refuse to accede to the innovation, and will be entitled to the name of the organization and the property, if there be any, and will be recognized by the authorities in both ecclesiastical and secular courts as the church. The charge of apostasy will not lie against those remaining loval to the original faith, nor will the charge of separating from the body hold as against them. Those who introduced the innovations of faith and doctrine will be adjudged as apostate, no matter how many there may be of

Take the case in point. A number of men who were baptized into the church between the years of April 6, 1830, and June 27, 1844, under the church organization effected during that formative period, and under the official rule of Joseph and Hyrum Smith as leading men, and the general ministry sent abroad by the church. The declaration of faith, or the articles of faith as formulated by Joseph Smith in 1842 and published in the organ of the church, was the faith of the church, that which those men above referred to embraced, the docto the public in the church organ in trine to which they gave heed, as being formulated from the Bible. Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, officially declared to contain the fullness of the gospel, and by its publication and their adherence to it they became its believers, advocates, and defenders. Any addition to this faith so accepted by them which in its nature subverted, changed, repealed, contradicted, or made void the whole of such published faith, or any part of it, could not be made a part of the church faith and polity binding upon them without their consent thereto, no matter by whom of the officers and members such change was offered or sought to be effected, and while they remained steadfast to their original profession of faith and belief they would be of the church and in case the proposed change was forced upon them they would be the church.

The son of the Prophet Joseph Smith was one of those so baptized. His acceptance of and adherence to the faith and official legal adoption into the church, while it made him a member of the body, made him such only on the basis of the faith and practice of the church at the time obtaining; but did not make him an adherent to, or responsible in any wise for what should be afterward introduced into the church by which the original organic structure of faith, doctrine, and organization was changed or controverted; he could not without his consent be made a part of that portion of the church, however numerous it might be, which should adopt doctrines, practices, or dogmas controverting, or making void those of the church to which he by the act of baptism into the church gave his consent and adhesion. If it were otherwise than this no man's spiritual standing with God and fellowship with the church of Christ, the body of Christ finally triumphant, would be safe for an hour. He would be at the mercy of man, fallen and corruptible man. This has been the law moral, ecclesiastical, and secular, since the church, or a church, has had an existence. What follows? This; there was an innovation of dogma and practice. radical change in the faith and practice of the church in regard to the marriage relation was introduced by somebody, by which the rule, 'One husband and one wife living at one time," solemnly and formally adopted by the church at an assembly held at Kirtland, Ohio, August 17, 1835, and published in the recognized standard works of the church up to, and beyond the time of, the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, was changed and a system of celestial, spiritual, plural, or polygamous marriages became a rule with a large portion of the church membership in direct disregard of, and contrary to, rules of faith and practice obtaining at the time the son of the prophet and thousands of others were baptized and became members of the church.

These departures justified the son of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and all others who at an earlier or later date than his action, declared their continued fealty to the original articles of faith and their refusal to accept of, or to be compromised by the changes so introduced?

No amount of argumentative sophistry can effectively dispose of this plain statement of the case in favor of the son of the Prophet and his asso-They were never inciate friends. volved by a voluntary adhesion to the changes of dogma and practice from the original faith sought to be introduced into the church and were not in affiliation with the promoters of that changed polity. How could they then drop out of the ranks, become cowardly traitors to comrades and cause, renegades, apostates, to the body, the church. It is known that the Master builder, the one who gave the original commandments which the martyrs Joseph and Hyrum and their associate ministers built the church, has repeatedly recognized the sons of the Prophet and his friends and coworkers in their church movement and work by acknowledging their labors and giving the Spirit, by which disciples are enabled to cry "Abba, Father," in token of their acceptance with Him.

PRAYER MEETINGS.

The following questions regarding prayer meetings and the conducting of them are a sample of many of similar import. We reply to them not because we think there is anything difficult in them, as we think the answers should be readily suggested to the mind of the average Saint.

- (a) If the Saints assemble for worship and there be no officer present, would it be right for a lay member to open the meeting? (b) If no brother present can do so, would it be right for a sister who is able? (c) Or if a sister's husband be present, who is a good man, and well capable, but belongs to the Christian Alliance, would it do for him to open the services? (d) Or had they better do without any?
- (a) If the Saints to the number of two, or three, or more meet at a stated time for prayer, no officer being present, any member present may take charge, either by tacit consent or by vote of those present, open the meeting at the proper hour, and close it when the time comes to separate, all in good order, and without controversy.
- (b) Either brother or sister may so open, conduct, and close, brother preferred if present.
- (c) Yes, if those present should request him to do so.

(d) They should hold their meeting by all means, if they can do it without a controversy, or wrangle over who should take the lead.

If the president of the branch will not act, and says he cannot because he lives too far away, what can the branch do, if they cannot get him to meet with them? Can they elect another when he is not present?

If for any good cause the one chosen to act as presiding officer of the branch cannot meet with the Saints and act with them, the branch may take action at any regular, stated meeting and proceed to choose another to preside, due notice of the contemplated action at said meeting having been previously given. They can act whether the then incumbent is present at the meeting or not. It is proper that he should be notified of the meeting so that he may be present if he so desires. If the time for which the president was chosen to act has expired, that fact is sufficient ground on which to proceed to choose another, or to reëlect the one already chosen. as the branch may elect.

Is there any rule of the church against our members taking the sacrament with any other good people?

There is no specific rule of the church forbidding members so doing; but the scriptural injunction requires that when one takes the sacrament he should "eat and drink discerning the Lord's body," which is the church. If a member of the church can partake with other bodies of worshipers discerning in them the Lord's body, we suppose they might then so partake; if the members, however, discern in the church the Lord's body, we hardly think they can consistently partake with other persons.

The rules of the church provide that none shall be permitted to partake of the emblems unworthily, for by so partaking they bring condemnation on themselves.

It is for this reason the church is what is called "close communion." The same reason that would prevent the officers from offering the emblems to none but members would apply in preventing members from partaking with other churches, or organizations; not because they may not be good people, but because of the principle involved.

Is it necessary, in order to hold prayer meetings, that one of the priesthood be present?

No; see answers to questions stated above.

How often should prayer meetings be held?

As often as the officers and members of a branch, or body of neighboring Saints may agree. Many of the branches hold one on Sunday afternoon and on Wednesday evening, which is probably enough for ordinary branches.

POLYGAMY IN PARIS.

In another part of the HERALD will be found a letter from Bro. Peter Anderson, in which it will be noticed he speaks of the qualified manner in which the Utah people speak of the "practice of polygamy" when referring to the suspension of the practice in this country. The following dispatch from Paris, dated February 16, to the New York World and the Chicago Chronicle will probably throw some light on the matter:

A Mormon sect has just been discovered in Paris with a temple in a private house. Among the male members are sixteen owning fifty-eight wives. One man has seven, with just one child each. Another has three wives, with sixteen children. All Paris Mormons are respectable, industrious citi-

Although the authorities have been informed of this, it is said that no prosecution is intended, the marriages being strictly religious, with no civil formality, the extra wives being viewed by the state as concubines whose children, however, can be legitimatized without entailing marriage with the mothers.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

By letter from Bro. N. C. Enge, at work in Norway, February 9:-

I stated in one of my letters to Bro. Kelley that I would write you after I had visited Denmark, but since the good Lord has this day given me the pleasant duty of leading two into the Skagger Rack waters of baptism, I felt that you would rejoice with me on receipt of such, therefore I have written from this place. Those baptized are husband and wife, in the fifties in age, and the same who kindly cared for Bro. Hansen during his illness at their house in Arendal. They moved from Arendal soon after Bro. Hansen's death and are now living ten miles north of Grimstad, near a lake. The place is thickly settled all the way from Grimstad, and there are about fifty houses in the immediate neighborhood of their house. I have preached sixteen discourses in their house, three in a house near by, and two half way to Grimstad. I have had an average number of earnest listeners, from twenty to forty. There are several heads of families who are earnestly studying our claims, and when the lake is clear of ice there may be some of them who will obey. A young man, who has lately bought a house in Grimstad, has offered us two large rooms on the first floor, so there will be no rent to pay. The minister at the Lake church unwittingly accused me before his audience of being a Mormon, and that we had several thousand members both in Norway and in Denmark; that the Mormons were heathens, etc. After the audience had been dismissed I walked up to him in the aisle and shook hands with him and told him with as much meekness as I could command, that we had nothing to do with those people he spoke of, whereupon he confessed his ignorance. We parted with a mutual smile and I paid him a visit at his mansion the second day. He received me kindly, read my license and letter of appointment, and promised to announce his mistake. I am not aware that he has done so, but he has left me to pursue my work in peace—the Lord bless him for that.

It is now my intention to go to Aalborg in Denmark, and send Bro. Hansen's trunk, and preach a couple of weeks if we can secure a house or hall. But I mean to return here, and begin operations in Grimstad. I am trying my best to plant a station there. It is seven miles east of my birthplace, where I am now writing. Those people walked eight miles to be baptized in the sea, and returned to their home satisfied.

Axel, my boy, is assisting me with his guitar. I thank you for your intercession. Letters of encouragement are earnestly sought. Please remember me to Brn. Kelley, Salyards, Anderson, and the Saints in general whose confidence I shall strive to merit.

Hoping that we all may retain the Lord's favor, I am your brother and colaborer.

Bro. Fred A. Smith, who began a debate a week ago last Monday at Decatur, Nebraska, with an elder representing the Utah church, under date of February 27, wrote to Bro. H. C. Smith:-

We are getting along very well here. Bro. H. N. Hansen is with me.

In a letter to Bro. R. S. Salyards, dated at Dow City, Iowa, February 28, Bro. J. M. Stubbart writes:—

I am holding meetings near Galland's Grove, with good success so far as getting out good crowds and securing their attention is concerned. Generally I have been having good liberty. I hope to continue in the good work as long as the Lord gives me ability to

In a note to Bro. R. S. Salyards, February 26, Bro. T. W. Williams, San Bernardino, California, wrote:-

We raised about $600 00 by subscription recently in Los Angeles towards paying off the church indebtedness. The branch in Los Angeles is in much better condition than I have ever known it. Difficulties of years standing have been adjusted, and everything looks propitious. I am now holding forth at San Bernardino. Our conference convenes here March 1.

By copy of bill sent us, we notice that Brn. Alma B. Hanson and Emslev Curtis are advertising their meetings by using handbills, inviting people to come out to hear the Latter Day Saints on gospel themes. Bro. Hanson says:-

Bro. Curtis and I are having good crowds and interest.

Bro. Joseph Thompson, under date of February 1, writes from Adamstown. New South Wales:-

I love the HERALDS; they are a great help to me and to any Saint whose eye is single to the honor and glory of God. I am glad to see in the HERALDS how the people in America embrace this glorious gospel. It is not so in Australia; the people here do not want to be disturbed, do not want any conversation on Bible subjects. How I can see the spiritual darkness the churches are in! The Lord has told us there are thousands to be gathered into his kingdom in this island of the sea. My prayer is that those in the fold may have wisdom to walk worthily. I am satisfied that this work is of God. May the Lord prosper it in all nations!

In a letter to Bro. R. S. Salyards, Bro. N. C. Enge writes from Aalborg, Denmark, February 20:-

I am well and hopeful. Just received a letter from those I baptized the 9th inst. Since I left, the ministry and others are using a great deal of slander, and it will necessitate my hasty return to make an effort to quiet them a bit. Axel was well when I left.

In making his report to Secretary Salyards, Bro. J. T. Riley writes from Webb City, Missouri, March 4:-

I feel well in the work-never better than at the present time. Hope to continue in the work which is so grand!

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Mrs. V. C. Wesley, under date of February 2, writes from Dawson City, Yukon Territory, and desires to know the address of Bro. William Edwards, who lives, she says, in Kansas City. She desires to have him send his address to her or her daughter, Laura Smith, at Seattle, Washington, as she will be there the coming year, though at Dawson City when she wrote.

In HERALD for February 20 will be seen a notice by the reception committee appointed by the Independence The committee desires to branch. have the attention of the HERALD readers again called to that notice, and also to the fact that while they announced that so far as possible the General Conference appointees would be entertained free, as matters now stand they can entertain free only those who are so notified by the committee, "as the places have about all been taken." We have this from the secretary of the committee, Bro. J. J.

According to a number of the daily papers a new star has been discovered by Dr. Anderson, of Edinburg. In honor of the discoverer the star is being called Anderson's star. It is in the constellaton of Perseus, and its magnitude seems to be variable, to quite an extent.

On February 28 a prominent figure in American history passed away. William M. Evarts died on that date at his home in New York, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. At times in his life he has held the positions of Attorney General of the United States, Secretary of State, and United States senator. While he discharged the duties of these offices in a statesmanlike way, his most remarkable record has been made as a lawyer, having been considered one of the ablest lawyers in the country. He was especially well versed in constitutional law. It was while he was acting as Secretary of State that the foreign countries were asked to prohibit the immigration to this country of converts to the "Mormon" Church, as polygamy was unlawful in the United States.

On February 24, the Teutonic, while on its way from Liverpool to this country, was struck by a tidal wave, and was badly used, its iron work being bent and smashed, and some of the passengers injured enough to require medical care. The wave came without warning, completely overwhelming the ship; but fortunately nearly all the passengers were at breakfast, hence very few were on deck. This probably accounts for the fact that no lives were lost, though some persons were injured.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION.—NO IO.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUORUM OF THE TWELVE.

The facts are, dear reader, I have not enlisted in the interest of the church without a full and free investigation of its claims from every moral, religious, and political standpoint, and weighing, as far as possible with my limited knowledge, the evidence on either side of the subject; and at my baptism I resolved that by the grace of God I would discountenance wrongdoing in the church. When I heard Sister Emma's statement as before published, I believed her testimony, and I reaffirmed my vow for I could plainly see that through evil-minded men the church had been brought to shame and its final rejection as an organization, hence the necessity of a reorganization of the church. I felt thankful to God that the prophet's wife had never been deceived, was in the church, and had the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures left in her hands for safe keeping while the church was passing through the dark and cloudy day of apostasy.

I had learned many things while I was in Nauvoo, and to illustrate how I was taught one principle of the gospel which had bothered me more or less in relation to the punishment of the wicked I will relate one incident. One day I was very much cast down and lonely. A feeling of utter despair and distress came over me, and I threw myself on the bed and exclaimed, "Hell can't be any worse than this world, and if there is a Devil. I wish I could see him now!" Instantly the Devil rushed to my bedside and leaned over me and said, "Here I am." I was frightened and covered my head in fear and could only say, "Jesus, Jesus!" and while I struggled to pray and could only say, "Jesus, Jesus!" all of a sudden I saw an eye, and a happy, peaceful, calm, joyous sensation came over me. It looked bright as fire, yet beautiful, with an expression of love and kindness defying description; and I heard these words: "Thus saith the Lord, I have permitted you to have only a taste of the pains of hell so you may know something of the distress of the damned in hell, and the joy and happiness of the blessed ones in heaven, in contrast with the suffering of the wicked in hell."

This manifestation was so real and convincing, and led to so much thought upon the subject of the punishment of the wicked, that I pondered over it for days, and I was led to the idea that if the withdrawal of God's protecting influence and comfort of the Spirit was merely a taste of the pains of hell, what was that in comparison to the doomed who would be banished in the prison house until they had paid the uttermost farthing and hell should give up its dead? The Psalmist David seemed to hold the same view when he said,

The sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell gat hold upon me: I found trouble and sorrow. Then called I upon the name of the Lord: O Lord, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.—Psalm 116: 3, 4.

I was very watchful all the time to gather any expression from Sr. Emma in which she reflected any feeling concerning the latter-day work. One evening she said, "If anyone will follow the instructions as laid down in the Proverbs of Solomon and the Psalms of David they will come out all right." But Joseph said, "David was not raised from the dead when the righteous came forth at the time of Christ's resurrection, because he put Uriah to death, and the crimes of polygamy and murder always go together."

I had a desire to lead her out in conversation concerning her expectations of Joseph ultimately taking his father's place in the church, but she always avoided any conversation on that subject. I had a dream or vision. in which I was talking to her about it, and Joseph appeared in front of a window in the door, looking at us. We both saw him at the same time, and his mother stopped talking and observed, "Joseph would rather I should say nothing about it." I had this manifestation of the Spirit, I felt perfectly satisfied that Joseph and his mother both believed that he would in the due time of the Lord take his father's place in the church, and all my anxiety to talk with them about it left me.

I then had a great anxiety to know just when he would be called to take his father's place as the prophet in the church, and for this purpose I set apart a certain day with a resolution that I would neither eat nor drink until the Lord would reveal to me the day that Joseph would take the presidency of the church. I abstained from food and water all day, and just as the shades of evening came on I was kneeling in prayer, and the Holy Ghost rested on me in mighty power and said, "It is none of your business to know what any other man will do. It is enough for you to know what you ought to do without reference to anyone else, saith the Lord;" and the statement found in the Gospel according to John, chapter 21, verses 21, 22,

Peter seeing him [John] saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou me, came to my memory with great force, and so suddenly was I shocked by the Holy Spirit that my whole being at first trembled with fear; but soon the hallowed influence of the Spirit comforted me with such an assuring peace and joy that all doubt left me, and I never had any more anxiety over the matter. I felt assurance that Joseph would be the president of the church, as a decree from the almighty God had revealed it to me by so many varied maifestations that all seemed to rush into mind in an instant of time. My comfort of mind was such that I could say indeed I had realized the promise of Jesus.

Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.—John 14: 27.

But to return to my narrative. While I was yet stopping at Bro. Joseph's farm, I passed the evening at one of his neighbors, James Richardson, and about nine o'clock I started from his place, and the Holy Spirit in great power, more so than I had ever felt before, rested on me, and I fell to the ground, and a person stood over me and said: "Truly men are creatures of circumstances over which they have no control; but if they are prepared, it will do them no injury. You are a creature of circumstances over which you have no control, and like John who was in the wilderness, not a forest of trees, but like ancient Israel who were in the wilderness, not knowing the source from whence deliverance came, so are you in the wilderness of scattered latter day Israel, who do not know the source from whence deliverance comes. And if I now send you into the northern part of this state, will you continue on your mission, or will you run away and go home?"

I answered, "I will do just what you say."

He then said, "Go into the northern part of this state and call on my servants William Marks, Israel Rogers, and James Blakeslee, and tell them what you know and most assuredly believe, and then you will be directed to visit others."

That this was a heavenly messenger sent to me I had not a single doubt. That it was now my duty to commence my missionary work to the Latter Day Saints in earnest was made plain to me by an angel of God, and that I could tell all the Saints without doubt that the church would be fully organized, and that the gospel of Christ is unchangeable, the only means by which salvation can be obtained by mortal man. Ah! my gladness of heart cannot be described by pen and ink, while the still assuring voice of the Spirit gave me comfort of soul and confidence in the gospel of Christ as taught in the three records. I do know that messengers who are greater in power than mortal man minister to men on earth, and like the apostles and prophets of old I can testify I know the gospel of Christ is true and the power of God unto salvation to all who obey it. The power that rested on me at this time was similar to the manifestation I had when I fell on the floor at Bro. Blair's, and a train of thought filled my mind as I pondered over this glorious revelation, bringing to my memory so very many of the manifestations I had received from the Lord by his Holy Spirit that my confidence was unshaken in the divine plan of redemption of mankind through Jesus the Christ.

I soon started on my mission to visit Brn. William Marks, Israel Rogers, and James Blakeslee. as instructed by the angel. I went by Amboy and called on Bro. W. W. Blair. He was now firm in the faith and hope that Joseph would be divinely called to the presidency of the church, and that God had indeed truly commenced to organize his government and kingdom again on earth, and he informed me that after we left him. about Christmas, he went up to Zarahemla to visit the Saints, and was much pleased with what he saw and heard, and was baptized by Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, Sen.

Bro. Blair took me in his carriage to visit Brn. William Marks, who then lived at Shabbona Grove, and Israel Rogers, on the Fox River (near Sandwich, Illinois). Both were very much interested in the gospel and church work and received us very kindly, expressing hope that our mission was all we claimed for it, and that Joseph would indeed take his father's place in the church, and that they were waiting in faith that God would in his own time revive his church. Bro. Marks was indignant and disgusted over the pretensions and preposterous claims of Brigham Young and James J. Strang, and said, "I stand in the faith of the gospel of Christ just as I received it in Joseph's days." Bro. Rogers had obeyed the gospel when he was a young man, in 1840, in the state of New York, and was still a firm believer that Joseph was a prophet of God, but had never had any confidence in the pretended prophets and leaders of the church who had arisen since the martyrdom of Joseph. He gave me much encouragement and I thought he would soon be with us, for he said he had believed for some time that little Joseph might yet be called to take his father's place. He was so full of business he could not talk very much with me, but manifested to me that he was not aware there was so much written in favor of lineal priesthood and Joseph's blessing. Sr. Rogers seemed more alive and interested in my mission than he was at that time.

Sr. Marks bore a very strong testimony of the gospel and of the wonderful power of healings and gifts of the Holy Spirit she had often witnessed in Nauvoo. She said, "O, I did not have to call for the elders to minister to my children. Often I would anoint them with oil when sick, and they would immediately be well." Bro. Marks was all alive to the interest of the gospel and latter day work, and as proof that he had great confidence in the prophet Joseph, and knew that he was a man of God, said: "Just before his death I had quite a long talk with him. I had been feeling badly about the rumors that were being circulated about polygamy, and those old stories started by John C. Bennett concerning spiritual wives, and I was fearful that Joseph was mixed up with them in some way. But in his conversation he denounced all those things in the strongest language possible, and I became satisfied that Joseph was not abetting the crime of polygamy in any sense or form. In fact, he told me he would go on the stand the very next Sunday and denounce it publicly, and also advised me to look up the matter in the most thorough manner, and if I found anyone in the church who was teaching spiritual wives or any form of polygamy to bring charges against them, and he would help me to prosecute them until the church was cleansed of all such characters. His language was in such earnest solicitude for the welfare of the church. and against evil in any direction, that I was much encouraged, and was determined to stand by him to my utmost ability."

I then said, "Brother Marks, do you know anything of that purported revelation concerning polygamy as published in the Seer by Orson Pratt?"

He replied, "I never saw any such thing until I saw it in Pratt's paper, nor did I ever hear of it during Joseph's life. It was evidently gotten up by Brigham Young and some of the Twelve after Joseph's death."

I had such confidence in Bro. Marks, knowing he was the president of the stake at Nauvoo, that I was very particular in asking him on this matter. He said: "I think Joseph had been deceived in some men who were hovering around him, and that he was not aware of their real character until just before his death. In fact, since then I have been led to believe that it was hidden from Joseph until just before his death so those wicked men could fulfill the scriptures in their apostasy in the latter days, and it was to be, or the Bible would not be true in its predictions in relation to those referred to where the Apostle Paul says,

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron (1 Tim 4: 1, 2), and Jesus Christ says of them:-

"Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not. -Matt. 24: 26.

"I tell you, Bro. Briggs, this latterday apostasy was to be, and the Utah Mormons are fulfilling it to the very letter."

When Bro. Marks made the above statements to me I could not help seeing the force of his application of those sacred passages to Brigham Young and the Mormons. And when I connected it with the prophecy of Jeremiah 17: 5, 6, where he says.

Thus saith the Lord; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh fiesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord. For he shall be like the heath in the desert [great American Desert] and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited (until the Mormons went there), it did seem in very deed that all these things were to be so that the scriptures might be fulfilled, and also to teach all men that they should not be led by their fellow men, but indeed be taught by the Holy Ghost, which will lead into all truth, as the Savior taught his disciples nineteen centuries ago; and if they would not learn by precept, they must be taught through suffering and disappointment, as we now hear through the wail of disheartened, scattered Latter Day Saints who have been led to and fro in the land during the dark and cloudy day of apostasy.

I then went alone to visit Bro. James Blakeslee, who lived at Batavia. He was then associated with Charles B. Thompson in what was known as Baneemyism. He at first opposed me quite vigorously, but I had the Spirit to expound the law of lineage and the promises to Joseph and his seed as found so abundantly in the scriptures, and also the gift of prophecy, in which I declared these words:-

Thus saith the Lord, The time is near when the hope of Baneemyism and Charles Thompson's deception will come to naught, and you will be a witness of its overthrow and shame.

At my first visit with him he did not give much encouragement, though he treated me very kindly. He remembered being at my father's home when I was but a small boy.

I then went up to Beloit, Wisconsin, and visited Brn. Samuel Powers, Henry Pease, William Hartshorn, Otis Bass, and some others of the Saints, and with Samuel Powers, of the Twelve, went to Beaverton, Boone county, Illinois, where Bro. Zenos Whitcomb and wife lived. They had joined the church in Canada in 1839, and were firm in the faith of the gospel of Christ, and had never been deceived by any of the false prophets who had arisen since the martyrdom of Joseph. At this place Bro. Powers had been holding meetings some little time, and much interest was manifested to hear the word.

From Beaverton I went to Burlington, Wisconsin, where I found Brn. William Aldridge, John Gaylord, Chester Smith, Moses Nickerson, and others in the vicinity of Vorce, where James J. Strang once had his headquarters. These brethren all denounced Strang as an impostor, and had never embraced his philosophy and teaching. but were real Latter Day Saints, and hoping that the church would again arise and shine as in the days of Joseph, and were really expecting some of Joseph's children would ere long be called to take the lead of the church. But when I informed them of our hope in the Reorganization, the law of lineage, and bearing testimony of the gifts of prophecy and revelation that had been given to the Saints in Zarahemla concerning the coming forth of little Joseph (as he was then called) to take his father's place as prophet of the church, they soon had evidence of the Spirit to the truth of my mission, and joined the Reorganization.

I also went to Rochester, Wisconsin, and found Bro. Lyman Hewitt and his brother. They had formerly been Presbyterians. Lyman soon received my message of good news, for he had been patiently waiting to hear of the rise of the church once more. They were also from the state of New York and had received the gospel soon after the church started, and after the church was rejected in Nauvoo they moved into Wisconsin.

Then I went to Waukesha and met with many of the old Saints there, but they had been very much tried in their faith th rough what they called William Smith and Joseph Wood's philosophy of church building, and some of them were investigating modern spiritualism. A cousin of mine, Sr. Emaline Welch, was then a firm believer in spiritualism, but most of the old members of the church were firm in the gospel as taught by my brother Jason before the death of Joseph, but were now inactive and waiting, as little Joseph had not yet made a move, as they had been led to believe he would through the hope held out by the Reorganization for some years, as they were among the first to receive Jason's revelation of November 18, 1851, and some of them attended the conference of June 12, 13, 1852.

Here I met one of my uncles, Riley Damon, who never belonged to any religious denomination, and, as I had

Christian religion. But one evening after supper he drew his chair close to me and said, "Nephew, I want you to tell me all about your faith, hope, and what you are doing." I accordingly delineated my hope in the gospel of Christ, explaining my faith in the doctrine as taught by Jesus and his disciples, and illustrated it by the examples they left for us to follow. How that Jesus himself was baptized and commanded his disciples to baptize, and they taught baptism for the remission of sins, and the signs and gifts of the Holy Ghost followed the obedient in Christ; that none were baptized except they were old enough to be taught faith in God, repentance, laying on of hands, and the resurrection of the dead. There would be yet in the future two resurrections, and eternal judgment, and that all men, the race of Adam, would have the offer, and would hear the gospel. Some, who are termed the first fruits, would be obedient in this probation or life; others who were not fortunate enough to obey the gospel in this mortal existence, would die without a life in Christ Jesus that makes them free from sin and death, and all such would be consigned to what is termed the lower parts of the earth, other passages of scripture terming it the prison house, where Jesus descended before he ascended far above all heavens, and then gave gifts unto men, as on the day of Pentecost, and as the Apostle Peter says, Christ went and preached the gospel to the spirits in prison, to them that were dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit. But those who did not avail themselves when they had the opportunity to obey the gospel in this life, would not in the general judgment have part in the glory of the sun, but would be judged worthy to inherit some of the mansions in lesser glories in the kingdom of God. That the church and kingdom of God on earth established by Jesus Christ and his apostles eighteen centuries before, suffered violence from the days of John the Baptist. The forerunner of Jesus was beheaded, Christ crucified, and all the apostles of Christ suffered martyrdom, save John, the Lord's brother, and within three centuries ten universal persecutions were waged against the church of Christ, until the time of Constantine, when the corruption of the world swallowed up the church, and the dark ages intervened. During this time of persecution, millions of the Saints and professors of religion were put to death, many of them by being burned at the stake, and such violence did the church suffer that no one on the whole earth held to and advocated the docsupposed, was indifferent to the trine of Christ in its entirety. All dollars and cents, which is nothing in the churches in their fragmentary organizations held to some little smattering, in a broken manner, of the principles of the gospel, but had all lost the authority to administer the ordinances of the church of God, and hence the necessity of having the authority again sent by the hand of an angel of God, as foreseen by the Evangelist John on the isle of Patmos as recorded in chapter 14, verses 6, 7. I then gave him a concise history of the rise of the church in our day with its wonderful progress for fourteen years, during the life of Joseph the choice seer; of the apostasy through Brigham Young, James J. Strang. Gladden Bishop, J. C. Brewster, and others, and now of the promises left to us that little Joseph would in the due time of the Lord be called to take his father's place as president and prophet of the church. I was very much led out in testimony. nearly three hours we thus canvassed and conversed over our hope, and when we were through talking my uncle said:-

"Nephew, I believe you are on the right track, and I believe the gospel of Christ is true, and the Latter Day Saints the true church of God, and all I have to say to you is, Do not allow anyone to spoil you. I have been watching the church for years, and have seen so many fall through flattery, and some because they would get heady and think they were the ones who were doing the work instead of giving God the glory. You continue just as you are, humble and devoted, and you will come out all right.'

I answered, "I am surprised! Why, uncle, I did not know that you had any interest or faith in the gospel of Christ. I thought you were a skeptic or favored infidelity."

He continued: "No, I have believed the gospel ever since I first heard it during Smith's life, but the apostasy of Brigham Young and others kept me out of the church. But you go ahead, now, and you will come out all right."

"But," I replied, "will you not come with us and help us, and also secure your own salvation?

He answered, "O, I do not know what I will do, but you go on and do all the good you can."

The second time I saw him was in the spring of 1859 in company with Elder Blair. He was much interested in our hope. I plead with him to be baptized. He said he knew he ought to, but he continued, "If I should make a start and fail, like so many others have, I would never get over it, it would kill me."

I said, "You are a business man, and would not neglect your business where it involves only a matter of comparison with the welfare of souls. How can you neglect so great an interest as the worth of a soul, and lose prospect of gaining the celestial glory in the first resurrection, and sonship as a joint heir with Christ?"

He replied, "I do not know, but it seems hard, somehow, to make a start," and his last inquiry was, "Will you come back this way?"

I said, "Will you be baptized if I

His answer was, "I do not know." I left him, feeling very sorry for his ondition. Though he was then a condition. hale, hearty man, in six weeks he was dead and buried, and I have never visited that neighborhood since.

(Continued.)

GRACELAND.

The article. "Endowment for Graceland," in HERALD for February 20, would have been much better if the author had left out the reflections implied on those who see the college question in a different light from himself. To insinuate that those who refused to act on the Board of Trustees last spring were lacking in courage or fortitude, to talk for Graceland in such a manner is very unkind to Graceland, indeed, as it is not a manner calculated to make friends; and besides, it is very unwise, for only those who truly are cowards would be scared, or bluffed, or derided into changing their attitude or acting contrary to their convictions. It would be much better for the object for which the brother wrote to grant that those who acted differently from the way he thinks they should were conscientious in so doing, and could they see differently, as they may, or may not come to do, they would be courageous enough to act, and not hesitate because difficulties stood in their way if they had faith that the Lord was on their side.

With that part of the article that says, "Let us now give a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together to pay the original debt according to the Bishop's plan of last April," I heartily agree. The plan is such an encouraging one. While it is hard for many to give a subscription, when we consider that the success of this plan will erase that burdensome debt, it is a strong incentive to sacrifice. I would hate to see the plan abandoned, and yet, after reasonable time has been given, it will have to be if it is not accomplished, I suppose, for money is being held, now, waiting for the announcement that the number required has been secured, while the interest is going on all the time, and the Bishop is not receiving what he would otherwise, perhaps.

That the debt has to be paid is a very practical fact; we can all under | set aside as a fund for that purpose, stand that. Then let us treat it in a practical manner, and be brisk to improve the time that we yet have before the opportunity runs out. How good it will seem, how glad and free we shall feel, to have that debt paid; and then we shall be all the better able to consider what is best to do about the college in the future. Let us, truly, "all pull together," now! By a Sister, and Another One OF THE THOUSAND.

P. S.-Wish we knew how many subscriptions are lacking to make up the thousand.

LOOSE THE SHACKLES.

I was much pleased with the thoughts expressed in the article in the HERALD a few weeks ago, entitled, "Shackles Fettering the Book of Mormon." I have heard people condemn us for keeping the book in the background, saying that we preach from the Bible to make converts, but in reality give the Book of Mormon first place. A gentleman asked me why it was, if we considered it the word of God, that we did not make it more convenient for the people to get. "Why," said he, can we never find one at the book stores? I should think they would publish them cheaply, and supply the book stores."

I replied, If I were keeping book store I certainly should keep it; but the main reason it was not kept was the prejudice against the book and its translator. The merchants were too prejudiced against it to keep it in stock; the people were too prejudiced to ask for it; there was absolutely no demand for it, only as an interest was aroused by the ministry or the membership of the church.

I loaned the same gentleman my copy of the Book of Mormon, and I asked him after he read it, as he said, carefully, "Did you find anything objectionable in it?

"Well, no, I found nothing objectionable in it as a book."

"You found it was not responsible for the abominable doctrine of polygamy, didn't you?"

"Yes, I found it was not responsible for that."

But there are many Saints who are firm in the faith, but have not a copy, because not convenient for them to get, and not being rich in this world's goods can hardly spare the money, while it is so high priced, and hard to obtain. Until we show something like the zeal in its dissemination that the sects have shown in scattering the Bible, it will not do much to convince either Gentile or Jew that Jesus is the Christ, or to the intent that they may believe the Bible. Would it not be well that a certain per cent of the tithing, if even a small per cent, be and let anyone who feels led to do so give an offering for that purpose? Let the fund but be started, and as soon as possible, a large edition of the work cloth bound be sent out for the ministry or for any one who will, to sell, and let any Saint be free to act as agent for its sale, and I feel that many would rejoice in the increased light that had come to them, and would feel like adding their mite to "keep the ball rolling.

The Utah editions of the Book of Mormon are much more convenient, as they are divided into verses, after the manner of the Bible. So also are their editions of the Doctrine and Covenants. Cannot we have these books arranged in the same manner, with references as is the Bible, not only to other parts of the books, but to the Bible and to Doctrine and Covenants? Then the earnest seeker for truth could much easier see the agreement of the three books. It would be a task, but one worthy of the effort it would take.

If indeed it is the word of God, why should any elders have any scruples about launching it out? Is not that the bondage of fear? and shall not the truth make us free? We are not free, while in fear of what the world may say, or of what the results may be, should we openly proclaim our faith in the book, and advertise its claims as being the word of God, and quoting freely from its pages whenever occasions present. Surely its maxims are worthy of a place in our treasure box of memory along with the gems from the Bible, both being the word of God; and if money will unloose the shackles, let them be unloosed. Though I have not much to give, let the fund be started and I will try to spare my mite. Meanwhile I will give these few thoughts for what they are worth. A. R. CORSON. 3829 Fourth street, Fulton, Richmond, Va.

WHO SHALL PRESIDE?

In considering this important question, it will be well to remember that the "president of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses." He is "to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet, having all the gifts of God which he bestows on the head of the church."

As seer, revelator, translator, and prophet, he has no counselor; he does not need any. In these holy offices he is under the inspiration of the Almighty, independent of the opinions of men. Neither are these holy prerequisites and qualifications conferred by the ordinations of men. In the light of these facts, we understand the revelation received at Kirtland, Ohio, December 1, 1832. read:—

Thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the presthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers [Joseph Smith was of the seed of Abraham] for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flish, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God [reserved to stand at the head of the "dispensation of the fullness of times"]: therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.—D. C. 84:3.

The Lord chose a family to stand at the head of this dispensation, as he did in Abraham's time.

The "president of the high priesthood must be ordained by direction of a General Conference or high council." The president of the high priesthood is president of the church, and as such he has two counselors to assist him in presiding over the church. It is not their privilege to receive revelations for the church. They are not necessarily seers, revelators, translators, or prophets.

The mode of descent of the priesthood is lineal, from father to son, not from president to counselor, as some would teach.

R. WARNOCK.

717 Y street, Atchison, Kansas.

Letter Department.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 22.

Editors Herald:—On October 23, 1870, I was ordained an elder at Newton, Iowa. Eagaged in mercantile business with my brother Alfred White, in August, 1871, and soon moved with our business to Edenville, Iowa. But few young elders ever felt the importance of their calling more than did Alfred and myself. We kept a small Bible on the counter, which was marked and crayoned till it became a curiosity to our customers. While we did not attempt to crowd "our doctrine" on the people unwisely; yet we always were ready to give a reason why we were Latter Day Saints.

The presence of this Bible invited many pleasant talks upon the gospel, also many invitations to "come to our schoolhouse and preach for us." To be ministers and merchants too, we felt that we could not deviate from the old adage, "Honesty is the best policy." I wrote a placard: "We will give sixteen ounces for a pound, and thirty-six inches for a yard; can we not make a success in business by strictly following this motto, we will quit business." I asked Alfred if he could indorse this? His answer was, yes. This card was tacked up underneath and on the inside of the counter, just under the grocery scales, where the merchant could see it, but not the customer. This was always our motto, let others say of us what they may. We seldom missed a Sunday in occupying in some schoolhouse in the regions round about. Brother and I generally alternated in conducting these meetings, one having to remain at home to care for the store, etc., as we often had to remain with our appointment till late on Monday.

The calls soon became so numerous that Bro. Alfred and I had several conferences over the matter to determine how we could meet them. It now looked like one of us must devote his whole time to the ministry and the other one care for the store. Which one should be the minister was the question. This was canvassed pro and con, but not so readily determined. One morning, early, before time to open the store. Alfred came to my house and said: "Bro. I. N., I dreamed last night that Christ came to and said: 'It is my will that your brother Isaac shall go into the ministry continually, because his manner and ways are more winning, and he will have greater influence with the people than you; notwithstanding I have called you the same as I have called him, and I have a work for you to do, that no other one can do." This settled the question as to whom should be permanent minister. We wrote our brother, D. C., to arrange his affairs and come and clerk for us, taking my place in store. This he did. Alfred agreed to stand one half of the clerks' hire, and one half of my traveling expenses while in the ministry. I-at once took the field, lone-handed, a young and inexerienced elder.

I had scarcely been in the field six months till I had a debate crowded on me; and trials and opposition had to be met on all hands. Then things came so thick and fast that I felt too weak to cope with them. Other debates now commenced to be arranged for and I felt unable to meet such learned opposition.

At this juncture, I came home for a few days; and the more I thought over what was before me to meet the worse I felt my inability.

I retired to my front room, and while alone I sought God in earnest prayer, and told him I was not qualified to cope with the learned opposition. I asked that he would deliver me from such, or would open some way whereby I could be made able to meet it. On a sudden I heard a voice saying: "Go and read section 71 in Book of Covenants." I arose, got the book, and read: "Now, behold, this is wisdom; whoso readeth let him understand and receive also; for unto him that receiveth it shall be given more abundantly, even power; wherefore, confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you, both in public and in private; and inasmuch as ve are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest. Wherefore let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord. Verily thus saith the Lord unto you, There is no weapon that is formed against you shall prosper; and if any man lift his voice against you, he shall be confounded in mine own due time; wherefore, keep my commandments: they are true and faithful. Even so. Amen." The Spirit rested upon me and testified, "This is for you."

This was the commencement of my public life as a debater. How near this revelation has been verified in my case, probably God alone knows. Some have thought I was unnecessarily aggressive. Others thought not. God must be the judge whether or not I have been obedient to the revelation named by the "voice" that commanded me to read it. It has been my lot to meet but few Christian gentlemen in debate. Some peculiar things have taken place with some of my opponents, soon after I met them in debate. Whether the Lord had any hand in remembering them, time alone must solve the secret. I shall name a few of these peculiarities without mentioning any names, except the last

I met one man, and soon after it was reported of him that he "skipped the country with a young lady-leaving his wife behind him." Another one I met, demanded a miracle of me in such an unchristianlike spirit, that the Spirit rested upon me to say unto him: 'God's hand will be upon you, and you shall be afflicted in your eyes for your impudence." Shortly after the debate the man lost one eye. I met another man twice in debate, and he said some hard things about our people. He returned home and took suddenly ill and died. I am told he never preached another sermon after the last debate. Another man I met in a written debate, and shortly afterwards he was going from his barn to his house and dropped dead. Another man I met, and while in debate he told me in great wrath: "If I cannot whip you in debate, I will shoulder my musket, and will be one to drive you and your people out of this country at the point of the bayonet." Soon after this sickness entered his family, and his wife and grown daughter and son died; two being buried in the same grave. Another man I met got so defeated that his own people went back on him, he quit the active pulpit and went into secular pursuit, and after some time took sick and died.

At no time did I ever feel a spirit of hatred towards any of these men. When hearing of some of their deaths, felt sad and sorry that they were called away so suddenly.

My last three debates were with the Rev. Clark Braden; though I have met him in four, the first at El Dorado Springs, Missouri. The next at Orchardville, Illinois, in July, 1899. Next in November, at Alma, Illinois, where he was president of the Alma Christian College; but soon afterwards he quit the college altogether. The fourth and last debate was at Vircqua, Wisconsin, in February and March, 1900. Ten years ago the 27th of next September, the Chicago Inter-Ocean, made Hon. Moses Hull, of Detroit, Michigan, say of Braden: "He is a libeler and is disreputable in his methods. . . . No honorable man will meet Braden; I can only meet in a court of justice with him in the dock, a prisoner, and twelve honest men to decide his case."

That the truth in this very statement, is being verified by Braden's own wife, is apparent from the following statement found in the "Cass County Democrat," for December 13, published at Harrisonville, Missouri, Braden's home. It says:

"A divorce suit of considerable interest to the community was recently filed with Circuit Clerk, Chas. Bird, and it will probably come up for trial at the next term of circuit court. It is docketed Sophia L Braden vs. Clark Braden, and the plaintiff's petition alleges all sorts of indignities as a cause of action. The couple were united in marriage December 13, 1894, and lived together as man and wife until July 11, 1899, when the husband left and his whereabouts are not known at present. Mrs. Braden states that her husband, who is a Christian minister, struck, kicked and beat her, and upon one occasion kicked her out of bed and severely hurt her. That he cursed and abused her, called her vile names and was guilty of the most intolerable language, as well as angry, rude and insolent conduct. He also failed and refused to provide for her support and maintenance; collected and squandered her money, and appropriated to himself large sums of money belonging to her. He absented himself from home without cause for long periods, and in the meantime she had no knowledge of where he was or of what he was doing. Other indignities and intolerable abuse are also mentioned. Mrs. Braden asks for the restoration of her former name of Ragan. D. C. Barnett is her attorney."

It may be possible, as Mr. Hull said, that "Twelve honest men" may have to "decide his case." It looks much that way now. "How are the mighty fallen!" How true God's statement to us in the book, "And inasmuch as ye [you] are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest." We have waited God's "own due time," and feel happy in the thought, He has adjudged us "faithful" to the word received in an early day, through that "audible voice," that "no weapon that is formed against you shall prosper; and if any man lift his voice against you, he shall be confounded in mine own due time."

Hopeful, trustful, and ever desiring to be found humble and true to this latter-day work, which is of God,

I. N. WHITE.

ROCKY F RD, Colo., Feb. 25. Editors Herald:-The Des Moines district conference of February 9 and 10, is now a matter of record. All items and features of our convention considered, it compared well with other conferences of the district, and in some respects showed improvement. The branches were as well represented by delegation as usual for winter sessions; anincrease of spirituality seemed visibly stamped upon the conduct and general deportment of the participants, both in the business and in the worship of conference sessions. The preaching in the main was on the line of duty of the Saints. More of that kind of doctrine is what we need, for we find wherever we go that the zeal of Saints is to see others accept the principles as they have, and because of this zeal, too often without knowledge, they forget or lose sight of the born again of the further work of perfection. At the close of conference D. M. Rudd requested the priesthood to meet him in council on the eleventh, at Saints' chapel, to discuss and arrange agreeable for action and labor in the field of missionary struggles. Let none be too anxious for any cause to reach a favorite place as to deprive them of attending such council when so called. The prayer services were well attended, and the little church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and many bright faces and sparkling eyes seemed to glow with an inward peace that spoke in no uncertain tone of a zeal and hope unwavering and unfading. I will long remember the picture! It gladdened my heart, and a retrospect now cheers and comforts, and the effulgence of its brightness will only fade when the goal of earthly hope is reached.

On the morning of the 12th I boarded train at Des Moines for Rocky Ford, Colorado, and after a wearisome and fatiguing siege of being jostled in a cramped position for twentysix hours in a crowded car. I found myself at Pueblo, the first chance to get out of a dense throng of pleasure and home seeking people and freely quaff the bracing and refreshing breeze of a climate of higher altitude than I ever experienced. It did me good! So on the 13th I arrived safely at Rocky Ford. From about the first of January my health so failed that I was obliged to return home and was just able to attend conference. As my trip here to Colorado was considered a thing of experiment, and my return uncertain, Bro. H. A. McCov was chosen assistant presidente of district, and ratified by unanimous vote of the conference; so he has temporary charge of district until next conference of June, when the annual election of district officers will take place. To my many friends of Des Moines district and elsewhere, let me say that I already feel benefited in the short space of two weeks and I am hopeful. I rode out about twenty miles on a wheel looking for a place to hold preaching service, and obtained a schoolhouse about five miles distant. where I will try to dispense the good and wholesome doctrine of the latter days and try the experience of inflating my lungs with Colorado air from the sacred rostrum tomorrow evening.

And to all who are troubled with lung or throat disease let me sincerely say that I believe this place a desirable one and beneficial. Fuel is higher than in Iowa, and harder to get. Water has to be bought, but is cheap and of a good quality. Afflicted Saints are settling in here, and say they are benefited. The land produces well when properly irrigated. In bonds,

J. W. Morgan.

GOOSE CREEK, W. Va., Feb. 23.

Saints' Herald:—We are doing business at the old stand, preaching in the counties of Marion, Harrison, Doddridge, Ritchie, and now have opened the work in Wirt county. The Saints at Adamston and at Joy, in Doddridge county, are preparing to build houses of worship. This has become absolutely necessary because experience testifies that wherever branches are organized and this is neglected the work proves a failure. And the result is that more harm than good is done in such a locality.

Saints who think they can do good by contributing to the churches in West Virginia will please send donations to Bro. F. L. Shinn, Adamston, West Virginia, and to Sister Miss Clara Williams, Joy, West Virginia. The Harmony branch neglected this work—commenced to build and neglected to complete it. And they now suffer as a congregation for the want of a meetinghouse. It is hoped, however, that they will again make the effort, as they are a faithful and zealous people.

We have made a new opening for the work in Wirt county, near Newark, on the Little Kanawa river, about four miles from the county seat, Elizabeth. Mr. Thomas Jones invited the preaching there. Had two children destroyed by accident with kerosene, a very unfortunate and lamentable circumstance. Bro. Jones' wife is a daughter of Bro. C. G. and Sr. Victory Ruly, of Cabin Run, Doddridge county, branch of the church, whom we baptized in years agone. Sister Jones was baptized, I think, by Bro. L. R. Devore. Bro. Jones and wife enjoy the confidence and respect of the entire community and are said to be among the best. I was rejoiced to find them so highly respected and well to do.

Bro. Godby was there some few months ago preaching the funeral of their children, and the envy of the "sputers" was excited, and a challenge to debate came from one Elder Bush of "Restored Church of Christ" of latter day disciples. The time was set for the fifteenth of the present month. Bro. Godby prepared to meet the issue, though he was far from being well. Bush got about as far away as safety required and then sent a characteristic letter calling Bro. G. a crawfish. The debate was a failure simply because the Campbellite champion took refuge at home. No doubt when "the Mormons" are gone he will spring forth with his sleeves rolled up. Instead of the debate we had a splendid meeting. We spoke seven times, giving Bro. Godby a chance to lay by and suffer out the effects of venturing out too soon. On the 21st inst. we left him to continue the work over Sunday. From present appearances a number of those who heard will obey in the near future.

The Saints at Goose Creek are about all at home. They still live, and move, and have their being. Since they have recovered from the effects of the anti-tobacco riot raised by Elder McDowell last October.

Your humble servant is not a user of tobacco since eight o'clock a. m., January 2, 1883; but he holds that there is more harm done by that which cometh out of than there is by that which goeth into the mouths of the Saints. If people obey the gospel from the heart, and are accepted of God, they are good enough for me, let them chew what, when, and where they please. It is none of my business.

We have found in our travels among the Saints to our astonishment, some recently made tracts on Weltmerism, but have never as yet overtaken the monster. His work is not done in the name of the Lord, but he works through the hands and tongues of men sent forth in the name of Jesus Christ! May his shadow grow dim, and may the places that know him now, know him no more forever! and may the elders preach only "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ." And may the dear Saints learn, before it is too late; that all signs and miracles not done in the name of Jesus Christ are of the devil, or of men not in the service of God.

This work will go on in the world, but not in the church. It is, to us, only a sign of the near approach of the day of the Lord, which takes place "after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders." (Ephesians 2: 9, 10, 11.)

"Let no man deceive you by any means." Satan is today the same as he always was, a tempter, and will tempt your teachers as he did your Savior into an apostasy. God save D. L SHINN.

DARLINGTON, Mo., Feb. 27.

Editors Herald:-Bro. Frank L. Sawley and I came to this place the 21st inst., and obtained the use of the Christian church, and have been holding services up to date, and expect to continue a few evenings more. Mr. E. C. Pomroy, the presiding minister, attended our meetings, and his two daughters assisted in the singing, and one as organist. The average hearing has been very good. The crowd on Sunday evening was near two hundred. I spoke Sunday, at eleven a. m., on the "laying on of hands." At the close of the meeting one of the local elders wanted me to take poison or raise the dead, or stop preaching. "These signs shall follow them that believe." I shall do neither. I had no hand in making the Bible or giving the commission. On Monday evening this same man told us the doors of the church were closed against us. He is only one among four elders who gave us permission to use the house, and we expect to stay with them until next Friday evening. Brother and Sister E. A. Bray are alive to the work, and making everything pleasant

We go from here to Ravenwood. Success to the work. D. C. WHITE.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 19.

Editors Herald:-I am in Seattle doing what I can to get the work before the people and encourage and instruct the Saints who are scattered over quite an expanse of country.

The Saints at Castle Rock were building a church while we were with them. Brn. Davis, Allen, and the writer assisted the greater portion of a week on the building; the size, as near as your correspondent recollects, is 30x46 feet. The floor at the entrance is elevated about eighteen inches, so that it will give those who occupy the back seats an opportunity to see the speaker. This building, the writer is informed, is the second in the state belonging to the Reorganization.

We left Castle Rock, February 4, for Tacoma, after holding twenty-two meetings, with fair interest, arriving in the latter place the same evening. Bro. Davis (the "funny man") went on up north, and the writer took to the country to a schoolhouse near Eatonville, twenty miles distant from Tacoma, where he held five meetings with rather poor interest. Returning, met our worthy brother from the north, who is on his way back to General Conference. How the writer wishes he could a pretty country around here. Seattle is beautifully located, and is a growing city. Traveling is cheap by water, and there are many places the missionary can reach by hoat.

February 17, left Tacoma for this point, arriving here at 2:30 p. m., after a pleasant journey of two hours on the Sound. This is in our own midst who are not converted."

The writer, on leaving Tacoma presented his license to the purser, asking if they favored ministers with passage for half fare. and was answered in the affirmative, so it cost only twenty-five cents to travel thirty miles. Wish I had the General Conference credentials so I could travel on the railroads for half-fare; as it is, am somewhat hindered in my movements. Will do the best I can under the circumstances until after conference convenes.

I shall be very glad to hear from old friends, and especially from the Saints of this state. For Zion's weal.

ALMA UPTON.

310 Union avenue.

PLEASANT GROVE, ILiah, Feb. 23. Editors Herald:-Acknowledging the note of "a Latter Day Saint" in a late Herald, I wish to say to the sister that it is all right, that I have only the kindliest feelings toward her, and that I esteem her very highly for the step taken.

Referring to the Utah elders sent out to represent their church, I would ask that all our elders and members treat them kindly and see that they return home favorably impressed with the Reorganization. When they start out many of them are very ignorant concerning the gospel and the history of the latter-day work, and some are being sent out to undergo a reformation. They are really not calculated to turn the world "upside down," and what little they may do should cause us no alarm.

When Pres. B. Young and helpers effected the organization of the Utah Church, in 1847, and later, the seeds of disintegration and dissolution were sown within it, because they did not act, nor have they since acted, in harmony with the law of God in the Doctrine and Covenants: and their church is hastening to its downfall. This, I believe, is becoming more apparent to many of its members.

The nine years that I have been absent from this mission have wrought a wonderful change. The people are becoming more liberal minded, are losing interest in their religion, and are gradually going into infidelity. This may be considered an improvement, for I have always contended that the people of Utah were better than the religion furnished them by Brigham Young. A number refuse to pay tithing because the leaders never give an account of the use to which they put the tithing. Dances and theaters are the main attractions here, and not long ago I heard one of their elders admonish the old and middle aged to join with the young in their parties. Often dances are held in order to raise money to aid missionaries to get to their fields.

One of the bishops said in a meeting in my h aring a few Sundays ago, "We send ou" hundreds of elders to preach what we call the only gospel, and yet we have thousands

Political and financial questions are causing disturbances right along, all having a tendency to cause inquiry on the part of the people; and it is my belief that the leaders of the institution have considerable rough sailing ahead of them.

Might it not be that one of Heber C. Kimball's predictions with regard to the sons of the prophet will be more completely fulfilled in the near future to the honest in heart among the people in the mountains? He said, on June 29, 1856, "At present the Prophet Joseph's boys lay apparently in a state of slumber, everything seems to be perfectly calm with them, but by and by God will wake them up, and they will roar like the thunders of Mount Sinai."-Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 6. As to Kimball's standing with Pres. B. Young as a prophet, let me quote the testimony of the latter: "I am not a visionary man, neither am I given to much prophesying. When I want any of that done I call on Bro. Heber-he is my prophet, he loves to prophesy, and I love to hear him."-Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 132.

Whether or not the above prophecy was made at the "call" of Pres. Young, it seems to harmonize with the statement of the Prophet Joseph Smith, "I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence." In my opinion, "innocent" people have never been "injured" to a greater extent than when the leaders of the Utah church fastened polygamy upon them, some of those leaders themselves being the witnesses.

Listen to Pres. J. M. Grant: "We have women here who like anything but the celestial law of God; and if they could break asunder the cable of the church of Christ, there is scarcely a mother in Israel but would do it this day. And they talk it to their husbands, to their daughters, and to their neighbors, and say they have not seen a week's happiness since they became acquainted with that law, or since their husbands took a second wife. They want to break up the church of God, and to break it from their husbands and from their family connections."-Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 50.

It will be noticed that the sisters did not take to this order of things willingly, that they preferred "anything" else to this socalled celestial law; and yet, in the face of all this opposition from them, and in spite of all the misery and unhappiness caused thereby, these leaders persisted in the practice of polygamy. In order to stop this opposition and complaining, Brigham made the sisters a very liberal (?) proposition: "It is more particularly for my sisters, as it is frequently happening that women say they are unhappy. Men will say, 'My wife, though a most excellent woman, has not seen a happy day since I took my second wife;' 'No, not a happy day for a year,' says one; and another has not seen a happy day for five years. It is said that women are tied down and abused: that they are misused and have not the liberty they ought to have, that many of them are wading through a perfect flood of tears, because of the conduct of some men, together with their own folly. . . . I am going to give you from this time [September 21, 1856] to the 6th of October next, for reflection, that you may determine whether you wish to stay with your husband or not, and then I am going to set every woman at liberty, and say to them, Now, go your way, my women with the rest, go your way. And my wives have got to do one of two things; either round up their shoulders to endure the afflictions of the world, and live their religion, or they may leave, for I will not have them about me. I will go into heaven alone, rather than have scratching and fighting around me. I will set all at liberty. What, first wife, too? Yes, I will liberate all. . . . I wish my women, and Bro. Kimball's, and Bro. Grant's to leave, and every woman in this Territory, or else say in their hearts that they will embrace the gospel—the whole of it. Tell the Gentiles that I will free every woman in this Territory at our next conference. .. Now recollect that two weeks from tomorrow I am going to set you at liberty. But the first wife will say, 'It is hard for I have lived with my husband twenty years, or thirty and have raised a family of children for him, and it is a hard trial to me for him to have more women; then I say it is time that you gave him up to other women who will bear children."-Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, pp. 55, 56.

Nothing small about Brigham.

The above is a rather lengthy extract, but I have quoted it to show that according to their own testimony those unfortunate women did not willingly submit to polygamy, also to show the kind of sympathy these same women, "unhappy" as they were, and "wading through a perfect flood of tears," received from those pretended prophets, seers, etc.

Polygamy is being practiced yet, a number of unfortunate little ones in houses where plural wives reside being in evidence; but it is claimed that no such marriages are performed any more "in the United States." This "admission" was made to Bro. R. C. Evans and me, last fall, by one of the leading men of the church, as also the statement that "it is our understanding that there is no law in this state [Utah] against a man living with a plurality of wives." Thus I have reasons for believing that some enter into polygamy outside of the United States, mainly in Mexico; but the younger element, as a rule, do not take to the "celestial order," and I think that it may be truly said that the system of which Brigham Young prophesied that it would "triumph over all opposition," and of which Elder Jenson, of Boston Common fame, said to Bro. Evans and me that it was "the only principle by which the world of mankind would be regenerated"-is being forced to the wall, and abandoned.

Several families left Utah the other day and returned to their homes in the southern states, having resided here only a few months; and others would be glad to go, could they but dispose of their property here. I am informed that the Southern Star. a paper published in the south, has been discontinued, that when it was started there were five hundred missionaries in the southern states. Now there are but three, and the number is being diminished right along. Even the southern mission is failing, and those people returning after becoming dissatisfied with Zion will not make it more flourishing.

In a speech some time ago B. H. Roberts advised the Seventy that a mission to the Orient would be undertaken, and a short time ago Apostle Heber J. Grant was appointed to Japan. Elder Grant is a man of business, and ought to make a success of it over there if any one can. He has for many years been in various kinds of business in Salt Lake City, such as real estate, insurance, mercantile, banking, also acted as director of the famous Salt Lake theatre.

Among the questions presented to me in one of my meetings lately, a lady asked how it was that "If your church is right, you are increasing so slowly, while we are increasing rapidly?" In replying to this question I took occasion to read an extract from Elder George Q Cannon's speech at the conference in Salt Lake City last fall, as follows:-

"Our Elders spend two years or more in the missionary field and they baptize on an average not exceeding four souls or about two a year. I would not dare to tell you how much money is spent as well as time to do this. I will tell you another thing connected with this, inasmuch as it occurs to my mind. Many of those who are brought into the church under the present system of preaching with purse and with scrip, instead of without purse and without scrip, have not the faith to stand as they would have if they entertained the elders and furnished them with what they needed, as God has commanded. I do not believe we are getting so good a class of converts under this system as under the old system which was followed by the early elders of this church."-Conference Report, p. 66.

I made the statement that our elders did better than that, and that, if there was any argument in it, it was in favor of the Reorganization. It will also be noticed that Pres. Cannon recognizes the scarcity as well as inferior quality of their converts, and also refutes the claim made by many of their elders that they travel "without purse and scrip." There are many good people in Utah, and it is my conviction that our opportunities were never better in this state. Should the "sons of the prophet" visit this mission in the near future, they would find many openings and many eager listeners who could not be obtained years ago. Many seem glad to obtain our literature. I have gone from house to house distributing tracts, and find that people not only read but lend them to others.

In bonds.

PETER ANDERSON.

CANTON, Ill., Feb 17.

Editors Herald:-I have lately had the opportunity of attending the quarterly conference of the Kewanee district. While there are many encouraging things at gatherings of this kind, there are also many discouraging things to meet. We so often hear exare, if only the right word could always be in a national organization, and for some expressed in the right place. But there come times when the tongue is unruly, when great caution must be manifested. Whenever and wherever we as Latter Day Saints assemble, if we could but place these words before us, good would result:-

> "Speak gently,-it is better far To rule by love than fear; Speak gently,-let no harsh word mar The good we may do here.'

We should diligently strive to cultivate our dispositions so that we can truly and earnestly manifest that forgiving disposition which all Latter Day Saints should possess.

As Christ died that we all might live, we should live in peace and harmony one with the other at all times.

What a glorious work this latter-day work is! How brighly its truths shine forth! Never a night so dark, but that to me there is a glimmer of light shining forth somewhere from this great work. Then knowing as we do that we have that great light that surpasses all others, how careful we must be to let that light guide us to the end.

Let us not grow weary in well-doing, but live so that peace and love may be ours at all times.

Elder J. S. Roth is with us, sounding the gospel trumpet, and there is seemingly an interest shown by outsiders and a good degree of the Spirit is manifested at all the meetings thus far. Hope God will continue to bless his humble servant in his efforts to spread this glorious gospel and at the end find rest, sweet rest. Your sister,

IDA L. JONES.

SMITH-BAYS DEBATE.

We entered upon the discussion of the fourth and last proposition with Bro. Smith a little hoarse, otherwise feeling well and in fine spirits. This proposition reads as follows: "That the church to which I belong, the Christian or Disciple Church, is identical in doctrine, teaching, organization, and ordinances with the church established by Jesus Christ."

Elder Bays opened the affirmative by a long list of things they believed, but presented one or two only of their own peculiar theories. One was, they believed in the Holy Spirit through the word and the word only. This Elder Smith met at once, showing that the Holy Spirit was not given to the Samaritans in Acts until after they had received the word and were baptized. Elder Bays did not attempt to remove this at any time.

The other was that there was no organization of the general church, or central organization, but each church was independent and interdependent, and the church was composed of all these different churches independent and yet interdependent. Elder Smith showed the inconsistency of such a thing, and also showed that there was a general organization, using Acts 15 to prove it. To this Elder Bays made only assertion, and did not change the position of Elder Smith in the least nor weaken his argument.

Mr. Smith now read from the "Christian pressions like this used, and how fitting they System" and showed that there they believed reason Elder Bays dared not or would not oppose Mr. Campbell on this point at least.

The question of the Bible alone now came in for an airing, and when Elder Smith showed they had the discipline in their work, and that Elder Bays was opposed to Mr. Neal of their church upon this point through their papers, he showed very clearly that they were not silent where the Bible was silent, thus bringing a conflict among themselves. He also showed by the papers in which they wrote that Elder Bays and Elder Garrison were not at an agreement. Elder Bays admitted they were not silent where the Bible was silent, but said where the Bible was silent they were at liberty to speak; but it was only his opinion, and his opinion was not worth that (snapping his fingers). This caused a little ripple of merriment. Elder Bays was evidently disconcerted.

Elder Smith urged Elder Bays to bring his church out in the light so we could get a look at it, but he was very careful to keep it back as long as he could. So Elder Smith began to urge objections to his church, calling attention to their practice of receiving members from other churches, no matter what their baptism had been for, so long as it was by immersion, although they claim it is for remission of sins. Elder Bays rallied on this and sought the sympathy of all denominations by claiming any of them could come in their church and believe what they would. If the soul-sleeper wanted to come, all right, just so he did not make his belief a matter of contention. Said they were broad and liberal in their church, and sought to make it appear that this discussion was between Christianity and Mormonism, as he chose to call it. Elder Smith very soon let the light in on this; read from their "Christian System" again and gave them to understand we were not opposing Methodists, Baptists, etc.; that they had no part in signing the propositions nor in securing Elder Bays to defend them, but it was this little Christian Church he represented and it only, and we were now after that church and that one only.

Elder Bays now claimed they had apostles in their church—the apostles that lived in the days of Christ and saw and heard him, and like Abel of old, they spoke by their words to the church. Then they ruled in person, now by letter; and that elders, evangelists, and deacons were given to the church and should continue in the church, and were all that was needed after the church was fully established. Elder Smith showed that they had dead apostles in their church and asked Elder Bays why dead evangelists, elders, and deacons would not no just as well as dead apostles. When the light was turned on it looked as if some one was in desperate straits to show some point of identity, as Elder Smith had repeatedly insisted on his showing some points of identity not common to all other Protestant churches, and he seemed either unable or determined not to do anything of the kind, and did not do it to the end of his proposition.

Elder Smith asked them to show how they organized a church, but they refused, so he read from Haden's History of the Disciples in the Western Reserve to show how they organized a church in Austintown, and asked them if it was right. Elder Hilton, Bays' moderator, answered it was a good way, but they did not always do it that way. Mr. Smith then showed it was not in harmony with the Bible pattern, nor was there anything in the Bible to even hint at any such way.

Elder Smith showed they were not in harmony with the Bible in rejecting present revelation, also that Bays did not agree with their own works on this point, nor with their other ministers; also that they did not agree with the Bible in their officers, as they did not have apostles, prophets, seventies, priests, and teachers in their church; also that they were out of harmony in rejecting the laying on of hands for ordination and gift of Holy Spirit, showing clearly that it was a principle of the doctrine of Christ, and then used 2 John 9 with telling effect, also in the same connection Galatians, first chapter.

In Elder Bays' last speech for new evidence, he introduced a blackboard to show their harmony, and of course he had apostles and prophets, etc., on it, but they were all dead. This did not accomplish much for him. It was plain to be seen that there was no shadow of indentity, and the people could not help but see defeat staring them in the face long ere the end came. In one of Elder Bays' speeches he essayed to answer and explain the difference between him and Mr. Garrison concerning the organizing the church at Pentecost, and he got so badly mixed that the audience saw his confusion and blunders, and laughed. This seemed to irritate Mr. Bays and he lost his temper and said, "Now what is the matter?" in such a way as to stir their mirth still more, when he exclaimed, "You must be light in your upper stories!" and the laughter increased. This angered Bays still more, and he said, "Just because I said church, a lot of idiots laugh." This caused a continued laugh and served to confuse Mr. Bays worse than ever.

Elder Bays in his last speech took occasion to draw comparisons and said: The church these men represent started about the same time the Christian Church started and they (Latter Day Saints) have about forty-eight thousand members, and we (the Christians) have about a million and a half members. Why, one of our young men down at Des Moines just closed a series of meetings and baptized three hundred twenty, and if it is not because we have the truth, how would you account for such wonderful growth? He then grew enthusiastic on the point for a few minutes. There had been some applause to both speakers, and as it was the last night, there had been no great effort to check it; so when Mr. Smith got the floor and reached this point he turned to Mr. Bays and said, We have heard about prosperity politically, and now we hear about prosperity religiously. But my opponent wants to know how to account for it, if it is not because their church is the true church. Why, that is easy. I read in this man's (Bays) discipline (pointing to the blackboard), the New Testament, somewhere, that Jesus said, Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, that leadeth to life, and few (long and hearty applause) there be that find it (continued applause). Because broad is the way and wide the gate that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in thereat. (Continued applause.) Elder Bays now sat and went through the motion of clapping his hands, as if to applaud, and with the evident intention of confusing Elder Smith if he could. There was considerable confusion from now on, and much cheering. It was very evident there was a concerted effort on their part, but that could not cover up the defeat they had met, nor the chagrin of many of their members. They were evidently disappointed in Elder Bays.

Professor Moshier, of the Omaha Commercial Business College, acted as our chairman moderator with great credit and fairness. Thus ended one of the greatest debates we have held for many a day. We feel that it is one of the great victories we have won in this western country. In fact, it is impossible for anyone to properly express it in writing. You must have been there and seen and heard to fully appreciate what was actually done, and we are convinced that having once been a member of the church does not help a man in his efforts to oppose it, but it may prove a detriment to him.

Elder Smith was invited to sneak to the students of the Omaha Commercial Business College by Mr. Moshier and the proprietor, Mr. Rosebaugh. Bro. Smith made one of his best efforts, and it bore every evidence of being highly appreciated. Mr. Rosebaugh, commenting upon it, said they had had many lectures, but none better than Elder Smith's. We were then invited out to lunch with Mr. Rosebaugh, Mr. Moshier and wife, and Mr. Savage, all of the faculty, and a very pleasant time was had. Most of these were at the debate, and freely expressed themselves that Elder Bays had made a dismal failure. We also learned from what we deemed good authority, that Elder Hilton had intimated he was sorry he did not debate the last proposition himself, but he did not make his wishes known to us.

The Saints of Omaha are feeling strengthened in their faith and encouraged to go on. Some are making inquiries and coming to the church as a result of the debate, and have so expressed themselves.

This debate was the outgrowth of a series of lectures by Elder Hilton, pastor of the North Side Christian Church, against the Mormons and Mormonism. At the close of one of his lectures the elders of Utah asked to reply to him, and he told them if they would agree to sign propositions and discuss them, they could; but they declined to do this, and Mr. Hilton wrote out propositions and read them in one of his lectures and challenged for debate. Bro. Ballard went to him at the close of his lecture and asked for a copy of the resolutions. Elder Hilton gave him the ones read that night. We then got together and came to an agreement and the debate was the result. We rejoice in the outcome and are hopeful for much good coming from it. Bro. Heman made many friends. and left us with the confidence of members and outsiders, and we can but give God the praise for his constant care and the light of the gospel which has shined upon us in this day of skepticism and unbelief, and hope and pray that it may grow brighter and brighter. May God sustain his servants in every time of trial and need.

OMAHA, February 27.

F. A. SMITH.

JAMISON, Iowa, Feb. 22.

Dear Herald:—In the issue of February 13, is an article by Bro. D. MacGregor, which is responsible for me writing a little of my experience which seems to me to have a general application. That the situation may be rightly understood, will say that I moved into this section of Iowa about five years ago. Our faith was entirely new to the people and prejudice against it was strong. On becoming acquainted, and after preaching some, ere we were scarcely aware of it, we found that we had many warm friends. Of course, in our intercourse with the people it became known that there were books used by us other than the Bible.

In December one of my friends asked me if I would loan him the Book of Mormon, to which I responded, "Gladly, sir." In an incredibly short time I heard in different places of his defending the book for its morals as well as its doctrine, claiming if a man believed in the Bible he must also believe in the Book of Mormon, as they taught the same things.

About one month after he got the book I met him and his wife. His wife spoke to me and said: "I want to read your book of Doctrine and Covenants." This surprised me, but I answered her by saying that I would bring it to her the first time I came that way. I did so; but I was troubled, and found myself praying all the time about it. It seemed to me that the meat in the book was too strong for them. While in this condition, the following manifestation came to me:—

I dreamed of being in the present president's house. It seemed like a very substantial building, well finished. In the center of a very large room stood a thrashing machine, builded entirely of steel, and running more smoothly than any I ever saw, and humming as I had never heard one hum before. On looking into the elevator I discovered it was not cleaning as it should, so went around and as expressed in threshing parlance, "regulated the wind," and it cleaned the wheat perfectly. I also went and looked into the bin, where they were putting the wheat, and discovered that we were threshing two kinds, spring and fall.

As I awoke from my dream this interpretation came to me. "My word will gather all the wheat; you regulate." In other words, correct wrong impressions which often occur when read by the people of the world. Now be it far from me to make any unnecessary flourish of the church books; but I feel certain that this manifestation shall influence me, and I shall not fear to introduce God's word wherever wisdom may dictate it. I hope this may throw some light upon the subject to others, who, like myself, might have doubted the wisdom of giving the books to the world. Whether the reading of these books at this time will bear fruit to the glory of God, we know not, but hope and trust so.

We have been called on quite a number of times this winter to conduct funeral services, and have preached in the M. E. church in the little village of Jamison, quite a number of times, to good congregations, of attentive hearers, so, with little to encourage us so far as planting God's work here at this time, we struggle on hoping to so live, labor, and build that we may appear at the judgment seat of Christ conscious of having done our duty in all things, and faithful to the work committed to our charge. Ever praying for Zion's weal,

Your brother in bonds,

CHAS. E. WILLEY.

BEVINGTON, Iowa, February 28.

Editors Saints' Herald:—I came to this place by invitation of Dr. Jones, and began a series of meetings in a union church. Had a fair hearing.

Last Sunday the United Brethren preacher. Elder Long, who preaches here twice a month, and who has preached by invitation in our churches at Davis City and Lamoni; came and said we were not orthodox, and prevailed upon two of the trustees who belong to the United Brethren church to shut me out. The preacher who came with him, Elder Wright said, so I am informed, that I might have a dozen wives, and for them to look out for the stranger, The doctor who is president of the school board told me to see the rest of the board, and if they were willing, to preach as long as I wanted to do so. By the consent of them, except one who is a Catholic, and he did not seriously object, I began two nights ago. Last night the house was full. Had announced the evening before that I would expose Utah "Mormonism." I proved from Journal of Discourses that Brigham Young had taught Adam-god worship, rascality, the repudiation of honest debts, and blood atonement (murder). Showed that the Queen's Court of Canada had called us Christian, and then referred to two court decisions in the United States. showing the apostasy of Brigham Young and that we were teaching the same doctrine taught by Joseph the Martyr. This was an "eve-opener" to the people so I am told, and put our vilifier in an unenviable light.

Continuing I felt led to present the revelation on the Civil War, and quoted Acts 2:17, 18, that in the "last days" God's servants would prophesy. I then called attention to Acts 19:6, where Paul had laid his hands upon twelve and they spake in tongues and prophesied. I called their attention to the eighth verse, where Paul disputed and persuaded the things concerning the kingdom of God and argued that when Paul baptized these Ephesians in the name of the Lord and laid his hands upon them that they might receive the Spirit he was persuading things concerning the kingdom of God, and that when we find the kingdom of God these things will be practiced there. I told my auditors that these were some of the principles taught to Joseph Smith by the angel who came in fulfillment of Revelation 14: 6, 7; and hence keeping the commandments of God he was entitled to the Spirit which enabled him to prophesy. In this connection I called attention to what Peter and John did when they imparted the Holy Ghost to the Samaritans, Acts 8:14-17; I asked: Why do the ministers today pray that the Holy Ghost might come upon the newly converted and yet repudiate one of the very "principles"—fundamental truths—through which the Spirit of God was given?

I felt to praise God at the close that I could represent something that would bear the test of severest criticism. A few complimented me at the close of the effort and said that almost the entire community was against Long for closing me out and that he had hurt himself so badly that he need not expect to do any good when he came back. Even the doctor's wife, who is a steward in the United Brethren Church, said last evening that he was not welcome at her home any more. I heard yesterday that Long was coming to start a series of meetings in a few days, and I said to the Doctor: "Perhaps I had better give way." He replied: "O, no, no, no! you are here and started, keep on preaching the gospel." His wife said: "Stay and see who gets the crowd."

Elder Long told some of his members at Brush Ridge, three miles from here, to leave the Latter Day Saints alone, as they are a "shrewd set of men."

Quite a number are interested at Brush Ridge, where considerable preaching has been done, and are talking of building a Union Church for us to preach in, as we ask no salary. One man said he would give the best acre of land he has for the church to be built upon.

There is an opening in Hanley, three miles southwest of this place.

Hopefully, JOSEPH CARLSON.

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark., Feb. 23.

Editors Herald:-I went to Ravenden Springs, Arkansas, December 23, to serve as moderator for Bro. D R Baldwin while he and Prof. J. L. Fry of the so-called Christian Shurch engaged in a six days' public discussion, which was to begin at ten a.m., the 24th. They had secured the use of the M. E. church for the occasion; had it published in the Hustler, and all necessary arrangements made to begin at the appointed time. But when we arrived we found some of the Methodist folks dressing a tree in the church, preparing for a Christmas entertainment, so that crowded the debate out for that day. Next day at the appointed time we, the disputants and moderators, met at the church, and inside of an hour about a dozen others came and the discussion began, we thinking perhaps the interest would increase; but the people of the town, especially the Methodists, organized against the debate, consequently the attendance was very light, and at the end of four days, by mutual consent, we postponed it indefinitely, feeling satisfied that we had done our duty. Bro. Ralph Baldwin went with me to Bro. John Lock's, in the vicinity of Center, a distance of about twenty-five miles from Ravenden Springs. The next day I went to the Flat Woods, and announced to begin meeting at the Flat Wood schoolhouse, January 4. I had held a meeting in the same house about five years ago, and many of the people in that settlement attended the Ward King debate that we held at Center four years ago last January, and some of them became interested; and when I went to my appointment I found the house nearly full of eager listeners, and the crowd increased each evening at the close. There is a little "Barlow" preacher, of the so-called Christian Church, who moderated for Elder King during the debate we had at Center, who lives near the Flat Woods, and he did all he could to discourage some of his members who were taking deep interest in the meeting, but made his attacks from "ambush" and never came to the meeting himself. His efforts to break the interest were in vain. I closed with a full house and many invitations to come again; and to show their appreciation of the meeting they made up a purse for the preacher, which was very acceptable indeed. May the good Lord bless the donors!

I went from there to Bald Knob, and on the way was attacked with the "scourge," la grippe. I was becoming worse instead of better, so stayed at Bald Knob only one day, when I took train for West Plains, and stopped at my sister's house until able to ride home on the hack. I was unable to do anything for three weeks. The scourge also struck my family, and at this writing Mrs. Ward and two of my children are prostrated. About one half the people here are sick.

I shall start towards the conference in a few days. Expect to meet Bro. W. S. Macrae at Martin Creek, and then to Flat Woods, Arkansas; Pomona, Missouri, then to conference.

JOSEPH WARD.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Feb. 22.

Editors Herald:—Eider T. S. Brown and myself have been holding a few meetings in the town of Hemet. We kept "bach" in a vacant dwelling, and held meetings in a vacant store building rented and fitted up for that purpose. Our chief difficulty in the one instance was the dish washing; in the other, lack of attendance. The people were mostly unable to come. We are sure of that, because many of them assured us with their own lips that they would come if they only could. One man had married a wife and another unfortunate had a boil on his left hand which permitted him to come to town by day but became very painful about 7:30 p.m. Others were sick, some being almost doubled up with severe spasms of prejudice, some very low with chronic indifference. One man who had made a study of the laws of supply and demand informed us that we were not wanted there anyway; and in fact it did seem that we were not indispensable.

The M. E. minister from Winchester was down and visited all his members the day we began our meetings. He evidently warned his little brood, and then broke for shelter. What brave, noble men these are! Veritable Paul Reverés! or equals to the man who gave the warning in Johnstown!

Yet while our attendance was small, good was done, and we felt repaid for our trouble. The principal of the high school, with his wife, was out and became deeply interested. They are nice people, members of the Quaker Church, unprejudiced, and easily the bestread people of the town. They questioned us by the hour, freely admitting the reasonable position of our people on spiritual gifts and present revelation. They were also specially interested in the archæological proofs of the Book of Mormon story. They are investigating, and will defend us, we are confident, if our faith is attacked in their presence. Their Quaker blood was "riled un" at the treatment accorded us by some.

One meets with amusing experiences that prompt a quiet chuckle when he comes to reflect upon them. A cousin of ex-governor Gear, of Iowa, was out to one of our meetings. The next day he complimented Bro. Brown's effort very highly. Said he, "If I could preach like that I would travel. I tell you, I enjoyed that sermon!"

"Well," said Bro. Brown, "I suppose you will be out again."

"Well-n-o," neither was he.

We rejoice that our cause bears investigation. Give a man sincerity and sense to see an argument, and he cannot help being impressed. ELBERT A. SMITH.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

HOPE AND EFFORT.

Hope is of the valley; Effort stands
Upon the mountain top, facing the sun;
Hope dreams of dreams made true and great deeds done:

Effort goes forth, with toiling feet and hands,
To attain the far off sky-touched table lands
Of great desire; and, till the end is won.
Looks not below, where the long strife, begun
In pleasant fields, met torrents, rocks, and sands.
Hope; but when Hope bids look within her glass
And shows the wondrous things which may befall,
Wait not for destiny, wait not at all;
This leads to failure's dark and dim morass;
Sound thou to all thy powers a trumpet call,
Aud, staff in hand, strive up the mountain pass.

HUMAN AGENCY AND OTHER THINGS.

The subjects of heredity and environment have been much discussed, of late, through the Home Column. Much of penetrating thought is manifested in the efforts to probe these mysteries, but it is a question whether all the practical truths found by their study may not be reached by a more direct route. It is a question whether these studies may not be a waste of effort, so far as the development of ourselves and our children is concerned.

Now, in the matter of heredity, the die is cast for those already born; the time for affecting its influence upon their characters is past, except as that influence may be resisted or encouraged by their own will; those unborn can be harmed or benefited by heredity only by the degradation or improvement of the characters of their parents. The whole matter then, in application, is a matter of treatment of character; and character may be treated as intelligently and effectually by those who do not know that there is such a fact as heredity as those who are versed in all the real or imagined facts in relation to it. True, a belief that our children may be ennobled or deprayed by our own acts may furnish an incentive for purifying and strengthening our own characters; but even this is not a strong point in favor of the necessity of considering the science of heredity. Few, if any, parents care to leave to their children what they do not love for themselves. So if one does not love a true, pure character enough to seek to develop it in himself for himself, he will hardly develop such a character, just to transmit it to his children.

One of the evils of this gospel of heredity is the tendency to make men shirk the responsibility for their own mistakes which may be ascribed to inherited evil tendencies. For example, I know a man of many excellent qualities, whose usefulness is greatly crippled by the exercise of certain perverse qualities. When admonished in this matter he thinks the ground entirely covered, and himself excused when he says, "I can't help it: heredity and prenatal influence are responsible for these characteristics." The gospel of Christ holds each person responsible for his deeds; that of heredity furnishes him an opportunity to blame his fore parents for his shortcomings. They are not few who are ready to avail themselves of this opportunity. The same reasoning applies with equal force to the preaching of environment. When King Saul disobeyed God in the matter of punishing the Lord's enemies, he plead as excuse that "the people" (his environments) influenced him to do wrong. But for this God rent the kingdom from him, thus holding him responsible for his deeds, regardless of exterior influences: and this is but one among many similar illustrations.

There are so many of such remarkable exceptions to the influence of either or both heredity and environment, that many thinking people doubt the truths that are claimed to be deduced from the study of these branches of human science. Here is an example in point-a living question mark staring in the face of the claims of these sciences; the parents in question both smoked tobacco, and the father chewed it also. They began this habit before marriage, and continued it until the youngest son was thirty years old. Both grandfathers were also users of the weed. In spite of these grand opportunities for the perverse work of both heredity and environment, the three sons have never used tobacco or became addicted to any similar form of indulgence. They have no bad habits, and are men of exceptional morals, The youngest is now, I believe, forty years old. If these principles have such a terrible fatality, I cannot understand how these men and many others like them, escape their baneful influence. If the preachers of the principles undertake to explain all the exceptions to their influence, their time will not be idled away, if it is wasted. Here I brand as simply false the opening statement of an article in the Home Column of the HER- ALD of December 26, as follows: "The two factors determining what we are and what we make of ourselves are heredity and environment."

In this statement is ignored a third factor, more potent than either of these, and which may triumph over both of them-the agency of man. Neither does it consider those factors which a beneficent Father has introduced into human life, when that life is lived, upon a spiritual plane. These are many, among them the word of God and the Spirit of God. While these may be exterior to man, they may also be within him, hence cannot properly be reckoned among his environments. The agency of man may be variously analyzed, but it may be properly separated into two simple elements: the ability to know good from evil, and the ability to choose between them. We will grant that in many cases neither of these abilities is as large as the sphere of the individual's operation; but at the same time we claim that in no person are these faculties absent save in the case of those deprived of reason. Like other faculties of man, these enlarge or diminish as they are used or neglected, and proportionally the agency of the man expands or grows less. Now if every soul is impressed with these facts, and at the same time shown the "beauty of holiness," and made to believe in the aforementioned helpful providences of God, what more can be done? Such a soul is in a position to overcome heredity, and rise above environments, if he be considered as a child. If viewed as a parent, he is in a position to do all for his children, born or unborn, that can be done. Nor need either of these, parent or child, know anything of the laws of heredity or environment.

I do not wish to be understood as denying that there is truth discovered or discoverable in these sciences. Indeed, if one has the time at his disposal, he may be profited in their study, the same as in the study of astronomy, geology, or phrenology. But the contention is that to make them essential in the education of the parent and child is going too far; and that the moral and spiritual benefit derived from their study may be reached by a shorter way-that is by the way God designed. God designed that all intelligences should put themselves into communication with his intelligence, unto the end of the formation of right characters-characters like his own. If we are forming characters in his way, we are doing all we can. So the study of the word of God, and the seeking of the Spirit of God, with the constant examination of self, will answer all purposes for the making of good children, parents, grandparents, great-grandparents, etc., ad in finitum.

Were it possible by scientific research to discover and apply every law of heredity and environment, there might yet be a great lack of perfection. If we could by such processes build characters with the precision of fine machinery, we might still neglect the first great essential of true character building. Our model might be only an imagination of our own heart. The true pattern is in the mind of God—it is his mind. Christ was the perfect image of that pattern. But how many of us, children or parents, comprehend the Christ character? Saints of God, children of your parents, parents of your children, we exhort you, look closer at the Christ character as the model for human character building. Seek the light of heaven to shine upon that character and your own, that your deficiencies may be made manifest and corrected. Never mind what your parents have been, take care of yourselves. Teach your children to take care of themselves, regardless of what their parents are, or have been; to look to your model, and to you only so far as you are like that. Do all that the word of God requires of you as a parent, and heredity will take care of itself, and your children will be stronger than environments. And finally, be careful lest science lead you to forget God. ADAM J. KECK.

PLANO, Ill., Feb. 20.

WITH the general tenor and sentiments of the above article we have not the least fault to find. We are pleased to know that a man of the fine character and ability of Bro. Keck is so closely watching our work, even though he seemingly does not see things just as we see them. We say "seemingly," because satisfied that a five minutes' talk face to face would have given the brother assurance that our views in the main do not differ.

In the statement branded as "utterly false" by Bro. Keck, we think he does not give sufficient scope or breadth to the meaning of the words-heredity and environment. Take from us all we inherit and all by which we are surrounded, and to our mind it would be a difficult problem to know just what remained. We are born into a world governed by a wise and loving Creator, and his will made known by and in the revealments of his word is certainly one of our many environments, and in this environment is plainly embraced the free agency of man. There is nothing-no agency which from the cradle to the grave is brought to bear upon us-which may not properly be termed environment.

If there be people in the world so weak and foolish as to think they can screen themselves, their follies or their sins, behind the law of heredity, it is surely because they are not acquainted with the law of the Lord; and if in any of our work we have, even apparently seemed to divert the mind of anyone from the written law while we were endeavoring to examine and in a measure to understand the unwritten law of our being, we are thankful to have our attention called to the fact, for while we would do the one, we certainly do not desire to leave the other undone, for we feel that we have need of every help God furnishes us with, whether it come from revelation or nature, to fight successfully the battle of life. Sin and ignorance are the foes of God and his righteousness, and knowledge consecrated to God is a weapon much to be desired.-ED.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

I write in behalf of Sr. E. J. Crow, who is afflicted with a tumor in her side. She suffers a great deal, and desires the Saints to fast and pray for her on Sunday, March 10, that she may be healed without having to go through an operation.

Yours in gospel bonds,
RUTH GIFFORD.

Sr. Thirza Chapman, of Persia, Iowa, requests the prayer of the Sisters' Prayer Union in behalf of her mother, Sr. Martha Spauswick, that if it please God she may be healed of her severe affliction.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

SUGGESTED BY THE 169TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS BIRTH.

BY MINA PERKINS KEARNEY.

Could our brave, noble Washington Once more his country look upon, Would his true heart be filled with pride. As, gazing 'round him far and wide, He sees the land for which he fought And with the blood of thousands bought, In all its glorious splendor rise Before his wonder beaming eyes? The million gems of modern art Which beauty, glory, strength impart To this fair land, while nature showers Her wealth of grains and fruits and flowers Upon the country God has blest Above all others, east or west; Amidst its wealth, its arts and fame, Think you he'd find no cause for shame? No blush would mantle his brave cheek When rich and strong oppress the weak? When millions of his country's poor No treasures gain from out her store? Think you his faithful eyes would be So dazzled that he could not see, Midst all its wealth, the widow's tear, Nor yet the orphan's pleading hear? Ah, Washington, the great and good, Who for our country's freedom stood, Not all is here for which you sought, And by the blood of thousands bought.

-Lowry City Independent.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

ECHOES OF A CONVENTION.

In our last district Sunday school convention in the Clinton, Missouri, district, the close observance of the constitution and bylaws, together with the Book of Rules, gave rise to several perplexing questions.

"Who has a right to vote?" was asked, and in order to answer this, another question was asked: "Who are members of the association?" To answer this, reference was taken to the constitution; article 8, district associations. It was the wish of those present to abide by the law, and wherein it is at fault lend our influence to remedy it, so only delegates and ex officio members could be allowed a vote.

Next the question, "Can those not members be chosen to represent the association?" Consistency would necessitate a negative answer, no matter what the interest might be, the same that a foreigner could not be chosen a representative of the people in our legislature.

It was intended to keep in absolute harmony with the by-laws; but after the election was over it was discovered that three out of four officers were not members of schools, therefore could not be members of the association.

It is claimed that the Sunday school is an appendage to the church; or in other words, a nursery. If it is a nursery, should all the authority and government be vested in the nursery, or should the older ones have the right to let their influence be felt? What would be the result if the children took full control of themselves and told the parent to "stand aside," that they did not know the ways of the children, therefore did not know what was for their good?

It has been the decision of the General Association that the elders cannot be allowed a vote unless they are elected delegates. On the other side, when the missionaries are sent out they are requested to work in the interest of the Sunday school and organize schools, and on their report blanks appear places to report the number of schools they have organized.

Now, this is the situation: The ministry is not allowed a vote unless elected delegates, and at the same time asked to help with the work as organizers, although they are not members. . . .

At a convention, when electing delegates, the first thing to do is to determine who are intending to go to General Convention, as the association is not able to defray the expenses if the ones most fitted to represent are financially unable to go. No difference who are going, they are elected to represent, irrespective of qualifications and the ministry, although recognized organizers, are not considered competent to vote intelligently.

It seems that it would be better to make all conference appointees ex officio members, for they are all expected to be interested, and are interested; and if this is done it cannot but make them feel a greater interest. They are equally as well qualified to vote on any question that may arise as the average delegate; and as they have a right to a greater degree of the Spirit than the laity, they should be better prepared, that is, if God recognizes the Sunday school work, as we believe he does.

I regret that it is now too late to propose an amendment to the constitution to make all conference appointees ex officio members of the association; but I trust the coming convention will extend this courtesy.

We as Sunday school workers need the sympathy and assistance of the ministry. We cannot afford to be without it. We consider this the Lord's work and he can only work with us to the extent that we are in harmony with his will.

The Sunday school is a work that influences the whole church, and we should all advance as a united body of workers, allowing nothing to hinder its progress. The ministry feel the need of the Sunday school, and the Sunday school should feel the need of the ministry just as much.

May the Lord bless this work; and may a spirit of unity and good will never before known be manifest at the coming General Convention, is the prayer of,

Your sister in the work,

MRS. A. C. SILVERS.
For the Clinton, Missouri, district convention.

WE wish to call attention to the above paper, not to controvert it in particular, but to consider a few thoughts expressed by many or the writings of a few of which this paper is a fair representative. This paper is not probably intended to attack the delegate system, but that is in reality just what it does. Let us gather together a few thoughts.

Article 2 of the constitution for the General Association gives as one of the objects of the organization, "to consolidate and unify the forces engaged in Sunday school work." Note, it is not to consolidate those who were at some time past but not now; or those who would like to be but could not or would not; but those "engaged in the Sunday school work." And is that not a very common sense object?

Do I hear some one say that this one or that one would like to be in the work but circumstances are not such that he can? This may be true; but does the fact of his being isolated from the work make him a fit representative of the work? Can his privation qualify him for the work? Surely it cannot. Why should any one wish to help to legislate in matters about which they are in a degree at least ignorant?

Again, others urge that we may be able to interest some one by making him a delegate to convention and thereby secure his services in the Sunday school. This might be. We might in the same way interest some one and get him into the church by making him a delegate to a conference. But does the church recognize nonmembers as delegates? No. Why should the Sunday school recognize non-Sunday school members as delegates? We do not see any legitimate reason therefor.

Right here occurs to us the thought so often expressed that we are asking the missionaries to help us in the Sunday school work and then will not give them the right to voice and vote. We know of no rule or law that debars them from the same rights enjoyed by all others, to become members and be appointed delegates to conventions. One brother asked the question: "How can I become a member when I am moving about almost all the time in new fields where there are no schools?" The constitution says, article 3, of by-laws for Sunday schools: "Persons may become members of the school by enrollment, but shall have no voice or vote in the affairs of the school until they shall have been in attendance four consecutive sessions, except in the organization of new schools.' These missionaries should enroll in a school before starting out in their work. And few there are that are not at home the necessary four weeks sometime during the year. An "absence of three months without sufficient cause will forfeit membership," but being absent on missionary work is sufficient cause and will, therefore, not forfeit membership.

There is no rule to prohibit the assembly voting to give them "voice" in the deliberations of the session, but the right to vote cannot be thus delegated or extended.

The Sunday schools of the church are no less than protracted and organized missionary efforts. The work is effective. It is voluntary. We, therefore, feel that we have some claim upon those whom the church sends out as missionary leaders. We are only asking them to help us to help their work along. We say "their work" and we mean it only in the sense that they are the chosen or appointed representatives of that work. All have a certain amount of missionary power and missionary duty, and any one who does not acquit himself in this line is falling short of doing his whole duty.

But back to the question, "Why ask them to help us and not give them the right to vote?" Any organization, whether it be of the church or of the world, to have any degree of permanency about it must be controlled by its membership and not by nonmembers. We know it is true that there are nonmembers of the Sunday school that could give us good advice and would cast their votes on the right side; but where will you draw the line? It must be drawn somewhere. If you admit Brother A because he is interested and wishes to take part, who will say that Brother B, who holds the same position in the church, shall not be admitted? And if you start, where will you stop? The only safe place to draw the line is where all organizations that I know of draw it, where God draws it, between members and nonmembers. It seems almost strange to me that persons who so willingly submit to the laws and instructions of God, and who recognize the principle of membership control of the several branches, districts, and quorums of the church; yes we say it seems almost strange that they should question this right of the several Sunday school associations. It may debar them from taking an active part in the work of legislation; but does that fact in any way affect the principle? I am very much interested in the deliberations of the several quorums of the church, but I am debarred from taking any part therein. Could I consistently complain? And do I not help them in their work as much as I can? They have a right to ask me to assist them and it is my duty to do so whenever it is practicable for me to do. But there is nothing that gives me a legal right to participate in the deliberations of any quorum, branch, or district but the one in which I hold my membership.

We often wish that we might extend the right of franchise to our brethren, and so do we often wish that we might extend salvation to some of our dear friends who for some reason have not availed themselves of the ever open privilege of admission into the kingdom till it is too late. But God has fixed certain requirements based upon wisdom and principle as we believe with which that dear friend should have complied. I cannot help that dear friend, because the law is an eternal one and not in my power to change. Nor can we give our brethren the right of franchise, because the law or principle is not ours to change.

Whenever our notions seem to conflict with established rule or law, let us examine our case and see if we are not wishing to make the law conform to some peculiar case or to our own convenience. It is hard to get a rule that will seem to do justice in all cases. The rule may not be at fault, but the fault may be in our interpretation of the rule or in our preconceived notions of right or wrong. And we often condemn a good rale or law because it conflicts with our notions of what should be. Probe to the bottom when studying on principles and see that the case you have most plainly in mind is the rule and not the exception to the rule. Do not allow yourself interest or your enthusiasm or affection for others to warp your judgment of general principles.

We were at one time in favor of creating "honorary members" of the General Sunday School Association. But upon further consideration and after much observation, we are convinced that it would be a mistake. We are not working for worldly honors, and that is the most that can be made of honorary membership. The only ones to be benefited thereby would be the very ones who should be examples in all works for good and take hold and lead the way for others to follow. The commissioned representatives of the work carry with them an influence that is felt wherever they go. If that influence is for a work it will draw others to it. But if that influence does not seem to be in favor of a work, even though it be not against it, said influence will militate against the work. We believe that every individual whose name is found on the "Lamb's book of life," as well as many others, should and can be members of the Sunday school. They should be, for the influence they would have upon others if for no other reason. May that time soon come!

POTTAWATTAMIE.

Sunday school convention convened at Crescent, Iowa, February 22. Superintendent, D. R. Chambers, in the chair; Jennie Scott, secretary. Schools in district reporting: 'Crescent, Underwood, Carson, Hazel Dell, Grand View, Wheeler, Loney Creek, and Fontanelle. No report from Council Bluffs and Ransom. Total enrollment of district 546, an increase of 80 members in the past year. Officers elected for the year 1901: J. A. Hansen, superintendent; Petrus Peterson, associate; Jennie Scott, secretary; J. C. Lapworth, treasurer; Julia Hansen, librarian. Delegates to General Convention: D. R. Chambers, H. Kemp, J. R. Lapworth, P. M. Hanson, H. N. Hansen, A. E. Madison, C. McIntosh, J. S. Strain, J. C. Lapworth, Eva Hale, Lizzie Lapworth, Blanche Andrews. The delegation present were authorized to cast the full vote of district. A vote of thanks was extended to Bro. D. R. Chambers for his faithful service as superintendent the past two years. Adjourned to meet the Friday previous to conference, and at the same place.

Conference Minutes.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

Conference convened at Sandwich, Illinois, February 2. Bro. J. Midgorden, vice president of district, presided; Bro. H. E. Moler, assistant; James F. Keir, secretary. Ministry reporting: Henry Southwick, J. Midgorden, J. M. Terry, J. T. Hackett, N. L. Blakely, G. H. Graves, Adam J. Keck, E. M. Wildermuth, H. E. Moler, C. G. Lanphear, E. J. Lang, T. Hougas, G. F. Howard. Branch reports: Chicago 190, Plano 185, Mission 129, Sandwich 76, Wilmington 63, West Pullman 53, Ladd 28, D.Kalb 53, Piper City 23 Bishop's agent's audited report: Receipts and balance last report $626 99; disbursements $477 83; on hand $149.16. District treasurer's report read and received. Paper from De Kalb branch relative to ordination of Milo B. Ewing referred to a committee consisting of T. Hougas and J. M. Petition from Ladd branch relative to ordination of Thomas Turner to office of elder referred to committee on ordinations. Paper from Plano branch relative to ordination of Bro. W. Newton to the office of deacon referred back to branch, with power to act. Sarah J. Smith appeals to conference to have her name changed on records from Sarah J. Boswell to her true name, Sarah J. Smith. Matter referred to Ladd branch. Resolution to petition the twelve to return Bro. F. M. Cooper to this district adopted. Resolution instructing delegates to General Conference to vote against any form of suppression of General Conference record, or portion of it, adopted. Paper from members of Chicago branch relative to organizing a branch at the Lang Mission, referred to missionary in charge and district president with request to so organize as soon as in their judgment it was wise to so do and to report to the conferwas wise to so to and to report to the conter-ence their pleasure in the matter. Delegates to General Conference: H E Moler, A. J. Keck, E M. Wildermuth, Davis Rogers, F. M. Cooper, J. M. Terry, Charles Burr, J. T. Hackett, T. Hougas, Joseph Lear, N. L Blakeley, W. La Rue, George Howard. J. T. Hackett elected district president. J. Midgorden assistant. James F. Keir secretary. Midgorden sustained as Bishon's agent. Next conference to convene Saturday and Sunday previous to full moon in June, at Mission, Illinois.

SOUTHWESTERN TEXAS.

Conference met at San Antonio, February I. Elder J. A. Currie, vice president, in the chair; W. H. Davenport, clerk. The chairman announced that each one that so desired make speeches relative to the occasion, whereupon Elders J. A. Currie, Davenport, and H. O. Smith responded. On Saturday, prayer meeting nine a. m. San Antonio branch reported 64 members; I death, I baptized. No reports from Bandera and Medina City. Ministry reporting: Elders H. O. Smith, J. A. Currie, T. J. Jett, and W. H. Davenport; Priest C. N. Powell. General Conference delegates: I. P. Baggerly, H. O. Smith, A. J. Moore, T. J. Sheppard, and Heman C. Smith. Those present of the delegates elected are authorized to cast the whole vote of the district. Prayer meeting on Sunday. Preaching by Elder H. O. Smith during conference. The conference will meet on July 12, 1901, at Pipe Creek, Bandera county, Texas.

EASTERN COLORADO.

Semiannual conference was held at Denver, February 16. The president, John B. Roush, being absent, the meeting was called to order by the secretary. E. F. Shupe was elected chairman pro tem. Communication from the president was then read. Ministerial reports read from J. B. Roush and C. R. Duncan of the Seventy, Elder J. F. Curtis, and Priest A. B. Hanson of the missionary force. E. F. Shupe, high priest, baptized one; Elders James Kemp, G. F. Johnson, J. W. Gilbert, E. Curtis, and K. Seli; Priest F. D. Bullard; Teacher A. E. Tabor. Branches reporting: Denver, Wray (formerly Laird), Colorado Springs (formerly Mount View), Fair View, Highland, Eustis, Cottonwood, and Rocky Mountain. The request of Eustis (Nebraska) branch for release from this district was referred to a committee, and the committee was authorized to arrange for the transfer of that portion of the district in Nebraska to a Nebraska district. Committee: J. B. Roush, C. R. Duncan, and K. Seli. The Bishop's agent reported: On hand last report $27.23; Receipts $521.73; expenditures $463; amount on hand $85 96. A memorial to General Conference was adopted, asking that a committee be appointed to visit Mr. Andrew Carnegie to explain our religious faith to him, and to solicit a donation for Graceland College and the Saints' Home of $50,000 each. Officers elected for ensuing six months: President, J. B. Roush; vice president, K. Seli; secretary, A. E. Tabor. Delegates to General Conference: J. B. Roush, A. B. Hanson, C. R. Duncan, Bell B. Roush, J. F. Curtis, and Adjourned to Fishburn. Springs, August 23.

TEXAS CENTRAL.

Conference convened with Philadelphia branch, Harlanville, February 23 and 24. E. W. Nunley presiding, H. O. Smith secretary protem. No changes in Cook's Point, Pailadelphia, Texas Central, or Elkhart branches. President and secretary of district made report. Ministry reporting: Elders S. R. Hay, B. F. Spicer, Jr., T. L. Veal, J. W. Bryan; Priests B. F. Spicer, Sen. J. M. Nunley, and John Hay; Teacher E. W. Herron. The former Bishop's agent, Bro. Bates, having moved from the district. Bro. S. R. Hay was by motion recommended to the Bishop for appointment as successor. Brn. E. W. Nunley, H. O. Smith, J. W. Bryan, E. L. Hensen, and W. Sherrill General Conference representatives, and were empowered to cast full vote of district. The Sunday school association reported. A vote of thanks was extended to the school committee for use of schoolhouse. Prayer meeting at 9:30 a. m., Sunday, was in charge of S. R. H.y. Preaching by E. L. Henson, H. O. Smith, and S. R. Hay. Sunday afternoon sacrament services were held. Services were quite well attended and liberty enjoyed by the speakers. Adjourned to meet at the call of the president as to time and place.

POTTAWATTAMIE

Conference met with the church at Crescent, Iowa, February 23 and 24. The district president, D. R. Chambers, assisted by Elders J. W. Wight and H. N. Hansen, presiding. J. Chas. Jensen, secretary. The credentials of delegates from all branches, except Fontanelle, having been tabulated by the secretary, were approved. Reports were read from all the branches, including Carson, organized since last conference, giving a total branch enrollment of 767, in addition to 88 on the scattered list. Reports were read from the secretary and the following ministers: J Caffail, C. A. Beebe, J. P. Carlile, Henry Kemp, D. R. Chambers, H. N. Hansen, I. M. Smith, S. Butler, J. J. Christiansen, D. K. Dodson, J. H. Bohn, P. C. Anderson, Levi Graybill, D. Parish, J. S. Strain; Priests C. C. Larson, P. M. Hanson, S. Harding, M. F. Elswick, C. D. Oglevie, S. J. Roberts, S. C. Foote, L. G. Wood; Teachers John Adams, P. T. Anderson, H. M. Liles, A. E. Madison, P. W. Frederickson. Bishop's agent, J. P. Carlile, reported: Amount on hand last report $30.35; received since $577.20; total $607.55; paid to Bishop E. L. Kelley $500; the ministry $64.00; poor $4.00; total $568; balance on hand $39.55. Approved by auditing committee and conference. Delegates to General Conference: H. N. Hansen, C. A. Beebe, H. Kemp, D. R. Chambers, J. P. Carlile, C. G. McIntosh, J. S. Strain, A. C. Riley, P. M. Hanson, J. R. Lapworth, J. C. Lapworth, C. Carstensen, D. Parish. Joshua Carlile, R. McKenzie, Eva Hale, Lizzie Lapworth, Angeline Beebe. On motion, the branches were requested to take up collections to help pay expenses of delegates. A collection of $1.85 was taken up in the conference to meet a bill of $1.10 for postage, presented by the secretary. A motion prevailed authorizing such of the delegation as are present at the General Conference to cast a majority and minority vote. The conference adopted the following: Resolved, that it is the rule of the district conference that all members of the church living within a branch are subject to the discipline of the officers of that branch. On motion those of the priesthood offering their service to the district for the coming quarter were referred to the district president. The conference continued the following officers: D. R. Chambers, president; H. N. Hansen, associate; J. Chas. Jensen, secretary. Sustained J. P. Carlile as the Bishop's agent. Speakers during the conference were Elders F. A. Smith, J. W. Wight, H. Kemp. Adjourned to meet at Boomer, Iowa, at ten a. m., May 25.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.

Conference convened at Inman, February 22. Levi Gamet in the chair, W. M. Rumel secretary. Branches reporting: Clearwater, Meadow Grove, and Inman. Elders reporting: James Caffall, C. W. Prettyman, by letter; W. W. Whiting, Levi Gamet, J. H. Jackson, E. Downey, J. B. Williams, W. M. Rumel; and Priest C. N. Hutchins, in person. A petition was presented from Pleasant Valley branch, South Dakota, asking that they be attached to this district. It was referred to the district president and missionary in charge. Bro. William Kester of Clearwater branch was ordained a priest. Bishop's agent reported: On hand and received, $343 07; paid out, $341.98; on hand, $1.09. Delegates to General Conference: Levi Gamet, Sr. E. X. Gamet, C. W. Prettyman, E. Downey, C. N. Hutchins. All district officers were sustained except the secretary, who requested to be released, as he expected to enter the missionary field. Sr. Emma X. Gamet was chosen in his stead. Preaching by. J. B. Williams, W. M. Rumel, and W. W. Whiting. Adjourned to meet at Meadow Grove, sometime in August; date to be given by the president. A very excellent spirit was enjoyed by the Saints; the Lord spoke words of comfort, and all were cheered. We are safe in saying it was the best conference enjoyed for several years.

Miscellaneous Department.

SECOND QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

Dear Brethren:—Please send brief reports to our secretary, for the closing conference year, closing them not later than March 10. It is essential that we may have a summary of labors for our record, and that we may know who are ready for General Conference appointment. Send these reports to Bro. H. E. Moler, Independence, Jackson county, Missouri, care Bro. R. J. Parker.

C. SCOTT.

President of Second Quorum of Seventies. LAMONI, IOWA, February 28.

QUORUM OF APOSTLES.

Notice is hereby given that the Quorum of Apostles of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Chris of Latter Day Saints will meet in Lamoni, Iowa, on the 20th day of March to take under advisement matters directly affecting the quorum, and also consider the business committed to them relating to the coming session of the General Conference.

Meet at the Herald Office on the day thus mentioned, when the permanent place of meeting will be announced. A full attendance of the members is desired.

The 10th day of March is suggested as a day of fasting and prayer by the quorum, to the end that the Holy Ghost may be present at this assembling, with increased light and wisdom to direct.

All matters intended for the quorum may be sent to the chairman, Wm. H. Kelley, or the secretary, Heman C. Smith, Lamoni, Iowa. Wm. H. KELLEY, President of the Quorum. BRCOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 21.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

I have mailed a blank report to each member of the quorum to fill out and mail to me; if anyone snould fail to receive it, please inform me, and I will mail you another. Address: 2422 Wabash Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

F. C. WARNKY, Sec.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints and Friends in the Texas Central District:—Please take notice that Bro. E. Bates, former agent of Texas Central district, has changed his place of fresidence out of said district, and Bro. S. R. Hay, of Hearne, Robertson county, Texas, has been duly appointed Bishop's agent in place of Bro. Bates

The Bishopric extends thanks to Bro. Bates for his work and faithfulness in the office in the past, and desires that the Saints will give united and earnest support to Bro. S. R. Hay in his efforts as agent in the district. Bro. Hay comes recommended by the Central district and former agent, as well as missionary in charge, and we trust that he will labor earnestly for the advancement of the temporal interests in the district.

Very truly and respectfully in behalf of the Bishopric,
E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

CHURCH LIBRARY.

In behalf of this department of church work I thank the following-named for volumes donated: Bro. C. D. Norton, Bible Readings for the Home Circle. J. F. Burton, Te Bibilia Mo'a Ra and E Buka Himene. G. J. Waller, Ka Buke A Moramona. J. M. Booth, The Great Controversy. Robert M. Elvin: Why God Does not Kill the Devil. He is Just the Same Today. Joseph Smith; Who Was He? Discipline of the M. E. Church, 1888. Personal Experience of a Physican, and a scrapbook of the Independent Patriot's report of the Braden-Kelley debate held at Lamoni, May, 1891. J. Stafford, Presidency and Priesthood. A. D. Greer, Paley's Theology. Maggie Frye, Steps to Christ. Charles Barr, Adventism Unveiled. Sr. M. Clements, The Beautiful Life of Frances E. Willard. Sr. E. Seichrist, Women of Israel, two volumes. A. Haws, The Problem of Human Life Here and Hereafter.

PUBLICATIONS DESIRED.

The Library wishes to obtain, by donation, if possible, the following-named periodicals, bound or unbound: The Saints' Herald, 1860-1876 inclusive; especially 1860-1870; and more especially 1860-1865, whole or parts of volumes, or even separate numbers. Times and Seasons, volumes 1-6; anything from single numbers to whole volumes acceptable. Evening and Morning Star. Messenger and Advocate. Olive Branch. Zion's Reveille. Voree Herald. Millennial Star, volumes 2, 3, 6, 18, 20-61; volumes not named gladly received. Journal of Discourses: Any and all volumes of this publication will be thankfully received. We especially desire volumes 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 17, 22. The Truth-Teller.

Zion's Watchman. The Seer. The Restorer. The Pearl of Great Price. Preparation News and Ephraim's Messenger. The Saints' Advocate. Sandheden's Banner. In brief, any and all other books, pamphlets, and periodicals not named, issued by the church from 1830-1844, or by any of the factions from 1844 to date. Also tracts issued in the early days by the church or its ministry. We are convinced that there are many of these now in the hands of our people which will be lost unless preserved in this department of the work.

"ANTI-MORMON" WORKS.

We desire contributions of any and all books, tracts, pamphlets, and articles published against the Latter Day Saints or any of the factions. Just now we especially desire the following: Utah and the Mormons, B. Ferris, N. Y., 1854. Geschiete der Mormons, Busch, Leipsic, 1870. An Englishwoman in Utah, Stenhouse, 1880. New America, Dixon, 2 vols., London, 1867. History of Illinois, Moses, 2 vols., 1892. Who Wrote the Book of Mormon? Patterson, Philadelphia. New Light on Mormonism, Dickinson. Illinois, Davidson and Stuve, 1874. Die Mormonen; oder Die Heiligen vom jungsten Tage bis auf die Gengenwart, published at Coln and Leipsic. Voyage au Pays des Mormons, 2 vols., Paris, by Jules Remy, E. Dentu Librarie-Edituer Palais-Royal, 13 Galerie D'Orleans, 1860. Will the Saints please be on the alert for this class of books; also histories of counties and states, school histories, etc., containing chapters on, or references to, the Latter Day Saints; also secure and send to the Library copies of magazines containing articles on the Saints. If you see works of this description which are not obtainable by donation, please carefully make a verbatim copy of the title-page, including author, publisher, and year; or if magazine of newspaper article, title, author, and name and address of publisher, and send to the Librarian.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL WORKS.

The following titles represent a part of our needs in this direction: An Inquiry into the Origin of the American Aborigines, John Delafield, Jr., with Boturini chart. American Antiquities, Josiah Priest, first edition especially desired. Travels in North America, London, 1854, 2 vols. History of Ancient America, Jones, London, 1843. In short, any and all works on these or allied subjects, especially books out of print. Also articles by standard authors in magazines, etc., upon these topics.

These are some of our special needs. In addition to these, the library will gladly receive any donations you may make. We need an Encyclopedia Britannica. A good reprint would answer nicely. Also works of both prose and poetry by standard authors.

HOW TO SEND BOOKS.

These instructions are only for the present. The Library will be represented at the coming General Conference by either the Librarian or his representative. Who, will be announced when conference is in session. If you have volumes to bestow, bring them with you, or send by Saints and friends who are coming. This representative will receive and receipt for all books, and deliver them to the Library. This will save expense.

If you have any of the books before named

If you have any of the books before named to donate, and cannot send to conference, please correspond with the Librarian.

In bonds, your servant, F. E. COCHRAN, Librarian. LAMONI, IOWA, March 4, 1901.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

St. Louis district conference will convene on Saturday evening, March 23, at seven o'clock, in the Rock church, Glasgow avenue and Dickson street, St. Louis, Missouri. J. G. SMITH, Sec.

The Saints' Herald.

( Established 1860.)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price, $1.50 per year.
Address communications for publication to "Editors Herald."

"Editors Herald."

Marriage, birth, and death notices: Marriages, $1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 50 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words free above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business mana-

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as re-ceipts for all money received are sent within two ceipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all binds of Ensign Publications.

orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

DIED.

WOODING -At Burlington, Iowa, Sr. Mary Brooks Wooding, who was born July 31, 1826, in England, and was there baptized in the old organization. Came to Burlington about thirty years ago. She was married to Daniel Joseph Wooding in 1855. To them were born five children. The daughter Eliza died in 1876, and the father in 1891. At the ripe age of 75 years Sr. Wooding passed to rest February 22, 1901, from her home, No. 921 South Garfield avenue. Funeral at the chapel, Twelth and Locust streets, Elder James Mc-Kiernan, of Farmington, Iowa, preached the sermon. Interment at Aspen Grove ceme-

GUNN —Charles P. Gunn was born in Nau-voo, Illinois, October 23, 1855 — He was married to Sr. Jane Tripp, February 9, 1884, and was baptized in February, 1886. He leaves a wife, babe aged one week, six other children. two brothers, and two sisters to mourn. He died in gospel hope, February 18, 1901. The funeral services were held at his home, No. 3105 Shawnee street, Fort Madison, Íowa, Eider James McKiernan in charge, assisted by Elder J. H. Lambert. Interment at the Atlee cemetery, West Fort Madison.

SCHMID -Ina Florence, daughter of Bro. M. L. and Sr. Edna Schmid. Born near Olathe, Colorado, May 24, 1896; died at Fruita, Colorado, November 5, 1900, after an illness with typhoid fever of thirty days. Funeral services held at the Congregational church by their pastor, who was our near neighbor and friend, after which her loved form was tenderly carried and laid to rest in Ash Mesa cemetery, near Olathe, near the side of her grandmother, who preceded her scarcely a year, where they await the resurrection morn.

FREEL -Goldie Gladys, daughter of William and Meriam Freel, and granddaughter of Bro. Freel, of Wirt, Indiana, was born November 27, 1894; died February 8, 1901, aged 6 years, 2 months, and 12 days. A bud of promise, a beautiful child. Funeral at the Saints' chapel, Union branch, Wirt, Indiana, Brethren T. J. Bell and George A. Smith officiating.

BINNEL.—Sister Susan Lick, who of her son-in-law, Mr. H. B. Johnson, near Dow City, 20 1901. aged 75 years, 1 BINNEL.-Sister Susan Lick, wife of Mr. Iowa, February 20, 1901, aged 75 years, 1 month, and 2 days. She was baptized in 1847, and has been a believer in Christ ever since. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Elder C. E Butterworth, February 23, and the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Manteno, to await the resurrection of the just.

BLACKMAN —The death of George J. Blackman occurred in Woodbine, Iowa, February 19, 1901. Mr. Blackman was born in Canada,

April 15, 1828, and was nearly 73 years of age. Was respected and esteemed by this entire community, and was without an enemy; of a social disposition, always genial and kind, and the world is better for his having lived in it. He was a faithful member of the church. Funeral was held at the residence, Elder J. W. Wight in charge of service. Many old residents and friends gathered to express their sympathy and esteem for one whom they respected and loved.

LEAVETT -Levi Leavett, born August 6, 1823, at Chatham, Canada; died at Sandwich, Illinois, February 22, 1901. August 6, 1845; married Miss Elizabeth Brundige, with whom he lived for over fifty-five years. In 1849 they came to Illinois, and in 1861 to Sandwich. Was many years a member of the church, always faithful in service and in attendance until he could no longer walk to place of worship. Leaves a widow, who has been his faithful and devoted companion during the many years of their married life, two sons, and one daughter. Funeral services in the Saint's church, Sandwich; Elder Charles H. Burr officiating.

PROVOST -- Miss Mary Lovina Burgess was born at Rattlerun, Michigan, April 13, 1869. She was married to Bro. Ambrose Provost, October, 1887; was baptized during the winter Monona county, Iowa, February 26, 1901. She leaves a husband, four children, father, mother, brothers, and sisters to mourn. Funeral services were conducted at the schoolhouse by Elder C. E. Butterworth. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery on the hill near the town, to await the resurrection of the just.

LEIGHTON.--Nettie Richardson Leighton was born October 21, 1871; baptized December 31, 1899. She was married March 12, 1900, to Mr. Wentworth A Leighton. Her death occurred February 24, 1901. She had pneumonia, and her infant child preceded her to the land of rest. She was graduated from Castine normal school in the class of 1895 Funeral from the Saints' church at Jonesport; sermon by Elder W. W. Blanchard. A large crowd followed the remains, and the beautiful floral tributes mutely attest the appreciation of her worth. She leaves her husband and one sister.

RICHARDSON —Capt. John Richardson was born October 6, 1841; baptized June 30, 1879 He was married December 20, 1867, to Miss Mary J. Kelley. Three children bless their union. Bro. Richardson was ordained to the office of priest, D comber 21, 1898. His death occurred February 16, 1901. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and a good citizen of the church and town. We shall miss him.

WHO ARE THE FRIARS?

"The Friars in the Philippines seem just now to be the victims of a storm of accusations. There is evidently a concerted movement on the part of the press, secular as well as Protestant, to defame them in the good opinion of the honest people of this country. Let us above all things be honest. Who are the Friars? They are men who from their youth have sought the higher life. They have prepared themselves for the Catholic priesthood by years of study, prayer, and service. They have cast behind them the service. They have cast behind them the luxury of civilization, the sweet companionship of their own, and have crossed the seas to bring the glad tidings of the gospel to the heathen. They are men of high ideals, and it is presumed that they make a diligent effort to attain them. It is inconsistent for anyone who knows aught of human nature to think that such men should be corruptionists, libertines, or despoilers of men's hearts. The accusations brought against them are vague generalities. It is necessary to specify names, dates, and accusers, if any evidence is to hold before any judicial tribunal. These have been sadly lacking in all the accusations brought against the Friars in the Pollippines. 'They are wealthy,' it is said. When did it become a crime in the eyes of the American people to be wealthy? They are not wealthy. They are men who are vowed not wealthy. They are men wno are volude to noverty. They do not possess in their own right the clothes they wear or the beds they sleep on. Even if the various orders as a corporate whole possess considerable property, they have come by it legitimately, and the revenues of their landed estates are not used for their personal luxuries, but for religious and educational purposes. Not one of the accusations against these men can be substantiated. It is absolutely true that 90 per cent of the people in the Philippine Islands do want the Friars to remain among them.

"If the American government is going to stay in the Islands it would seem to be the wiser policy to conciliate the Friars and not to antagonize them. In the many islands of the archipelago they have great influence over the people, and if the people are ever going to be reconciled to the American rule it will be largely through the influence of the Friars."-Catholic World Magazine.

It is plain, then, that to plow deep "fur-rows in our brains" we must let our thoughts travel backwards and forwards over the same field many times, and perhaps we cannot start these trains of thought better than by trying to look at old facts in the light of new ones. For instance, when we study the Greek theater, let us compare it with those with which we are familiar. What would most surprise Æ chylus if he could attend a performance of "Hamlet"? Would Pericles's ideas of democratic government make him a good mayor for one of our cities? Is the nearest modern type of Socrates a minister, a college professor, a social settlement worker, or what? Are any statesmen of the Themistocles type in foreign politics today? Did Greek oligarchies resemble modern trusts in any way? Was there anything resembling our Balkan question in the days of the Persian wars? Let us try this plan, and see if it does not make some of the most far-away facts of history interesting and significant.— From C. L. S. C. Round Table, in the March Chautauauan.

THE HOUSE OF DO AND THE HOUSE OF DON'T.

After making mention of the recent criticism of ex-Presidents Harrison and Cleveland upon the colonial policy of the present administration, The World's Work, true to its often stated gospel of action, remarks-

Most men cut a respectable figure when they are earnestly doing something, but few men appear to advantage when they are telling how ill other men do things. Hedge it about with whatever trappings you please, depreciatory criticism is an ignoble business.

Yet, just as ex-presidents in retirement are shocked at the "headlong heedlessness" of a President in action, who in fact lacks the recklessness that at least one of them displayed, so good men who would reform politics still think that they can affect politicians by abusing them, and learned men think that they can affect literature by criticising it.

The dwellers in the House of Don't hear the cheerful racket in the House of Do, and are sure that its inmates are gone mad. The are sure that its inmates are gone mad. dwellers in the House of Do pity the despondent prophets of the House of Don't, and wonder why they moan. Neither understands even the other's language. And, when a man moves from one House to the other, he straightway forgets the life that he used to Many railroads, including the Chicago. Great Western, and the Chicago and Alton, and Erie Railroad, have ceased to permit news agents and peddlers upon the trains.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres.

W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier,

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1. 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, 2133,032.34; April 1, 1900, 8162.781.07.

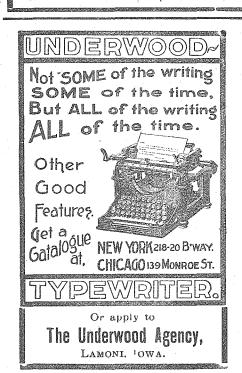

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All etters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa

STOCK HOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Eda D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

UWANTO STOP

Using tobacco. Quit-to-bac makes it easy to do so. Three box s postpaid, only $1.50 with positive guarantee to cure or the $1.50 cheer fully refunded! It cures others, why not you.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, Ill. (U S. Postage stamps taken )

	TESTAMENTS. Inspired Translation.
173.	Cloth, limp		35 50
	WO RECORDS. The Book of Mormon and the New Testament. Inspired Translation; large type, in one volume.
	Leather back and corners Seal grain russia
100.	Imitation morocco, gilt edges, Morocco, gilt edges	3	50

Have you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Address, THE PATRIOT Lamoni,

A postal card brings a sample copy.

TRUE SUCCESSION IN CHURCH PRESIDENCY. By Elder
H. C. Smith, Church Historian.		_ :
152. Paper		35 50
NOT IN THE CATALOGUE.		-
TRACTS.  33. Trial of the Witnesses to the Resurrection of Jesus.  Rach 5 cents; per doz. 50 cents.  47. The Basis of Brighamite Polygamy.  Per doz. 10 cents; per 100, 60 cents.
HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LAT- TER DAY SAINTS. By President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. In three volumes. Volume 1.	·	-
119. Cloth	$\frac{2}{2}$	50 00 50 00
186. Cloth	$\bar{2}$
190. Cloth	1 2 2 3	00
GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.  Published by the General Sunday School Association.  Designed for use in Sabbath school work. Issued quarterly.	-
<ul><li>73. Senior Grade, per quarter</li><li>Per year, in advance</li><li>74. Intermediate Grade, per quar-</li></ul>		08 25
ter	1.	05 15
75. Primary Grade, per quarter Per year	- :	05 15
INTERMEDIATE QUESTION FOOK.
76. Limp, 25c. each, per dozen PRIMARY QUESTION BOOK.	2	50
THIM THE MOTIOTION DOOK.

77. Limp, 15c. each, per dozen... 1 50

The office will procure for its patrons

any book that is obtainabl.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI. Solicits your Deposits and pays

> 4 1-2 % INTEREST. D. F. NICHOLSON. Cashier.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH THE Discoveries of An-SEER. cient American Records and Relics, with the statements of Dr. Lederer (converted Jew) and others.

184. Each 10c.; per dozen...... 1 00

ADIES' KID GLOVES.

AGENTS WANTED — These gloves comprise all the qualities of fit, style, comfort, and economy, perfectly made and thoroughly reliable. We want a lady or miss to act as our home agent for these gloves, in every city and town in the United States and Canada. Liberal inducements. No capital required. Address with stamp. CENTURY PUBLISHING CO, 94t

St. Joseph, Missouri, U. S. A.

BOOK OF MORMON. Large type edition. 92. Cloth, leather backs and corners ...... 1 50 93. Seal grain russia, gilt edges. 2 00 109. Flexible, gilt edges..... 4 00

DR. E. S. SWEET, DENTIST.

Decoe Building.

WOODBINE. IOWA. 17Oct 00

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on investment.

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Iowa.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chi-cago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS.

Dates of sales, February 19, March 5 and 19, April 2 and 16, 1901, one lowest first class fare for the round trip, plus $200. Good for return 21 days from date of sale.

Cheap one-way colonist excursion rates to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego, California. Dates of sale February 12, 19, and 26, March 5, 12, 19, and 26, April 2, 9, 16, 23. and 30, 1901.

One-way second class settlers rates. ver, Colorado Springs, and Pueblo. Ogden and Salt Lake. Bozeman, Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Grantsdale, Missoula, Grant Falls, Kalispell, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma. Victoria and Vancouver.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North-Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a.m., arrive at Leon 11:45 a.m. Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C.

B. & Q. at Leon.

THE SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, MARCH 13, 1901.

NO. 11.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - EDITOR.
FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR.
JOSEPH LUFF
D. W. WIGHT
CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 13, 1901.

IN VINDICATION.

The following letter from Bro. U. W. Greene, though not for publication, offers an opportunity for an explanation and vindication that we feel we are entitled to under the circumstances.

NEW CANAAN, Conn., Jan. 16, 1901. PRES. JOSEPH SMITH; Dear Brother:—

In "Succession in the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," by Elder B. H. Roberts, second edition, published 1900, pages 135, 136, I find the following:—

"It is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, not the 'Reorganized church,' which has been constantly assailed, ... some of our 'friends' of high standing in the 'Reorganization' joining in the hue and cry against the saints of God and aiding in the work of misrepresentation."

"*Referring to this the Reply says: 'We challenge the proof that we have aided in the work of misrepresentation.' Well, here is the proof: On February 22nd, 1882, in the course of a speech against The Church in Utah, Joseph Smith, the president of the Reorganized church said:

"There were many men in Utah who were single because they had no assurance they could find for wives women who were not contaminated. They might go to the farmhouses to choose wives, but could not feel tertain that some of the bishops had not been there and robbed the daughters of their wirtue."—The Chicago Daily Inter-Ocean, Feb. 23rd, 1882.

"The Chicago Times' version of this part of the same speech, under the caption 'A Lusty War Cry,' (issue of Feb. 23, 1882) is as follows: "'There are hundreds and thousands of

"There are hundreds and thousands of Mormons in Utah who will not marry wives because they do not know where to get wives that have not been contaminated. They do not know what houses have escaped the invasion of lecherous bishops who have robbed hundreds of women of their purity. The men cannot afford to take the risks that marriage means."

"Many vile and vicious things have been said of the Saints in Utah, but it was reserved for Joseph Smith, the president of the Reorganized Church to say at once the most untruthful, the lowest, the most contemptible, cowardly and vicious thing that ever was said of a much maligned and misrepresented people. And what makes it so utterly inexcusable is the fact that the speaker knew better; for he had been in Utah, and had been among the people sufficiently to know that no such conditions as he describes in that speech existed. It was malicious, wilful misrepresentation. He bore false witness against his neighbors. At the time of the speech I noted down the misrepresentations, not from the Chicago papers, but from other papers, for the false statement was widely copied, and I think made a dispatch to the press of the country. Recently I sent to the Chicago papers and had the above quotations verified."

Believing that a gross injustice is being done you in the above quotation, and desiring to know the facts, that we may properly defend both the work of God and yourself, his servant, as we meet the emissaries from Utah, I inclose the above extract from Roberts. If not asking too much, can I hear from you concerning the above.

May this find you in health and Zion's cause prospering is my prayer.

Respectfully,

U. W. GREENE.

19 Sherlock St., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

We are very unjustly misrepresented in the quotation from the Inter Ocean and Times, of Chicago, offered by Elder B. H. Roberts in his book "Succession in the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints." Second edition.

The two versions do not agree; and the Tribune of the same date had a different version still. The fact is I used no such language in the speech referred to. I have heretofore specifically denied* using the language attributed to me in the quotations referred to and do now again disclaim having used such language in reference to the women of Utah at the time and on the occasion referred to, or at any other time or occasion.

The speech from which it is claimed these obnoxious paragraphs were reported was delivered in Farwell Hall. Chicago, Illinois, February 22, 1882, at a meeting over which Hon. C. H. Caton presided.

In one part of that speech I was showing to the audience the fact that the United States census gave to the population of Utah an excess of males at marriageable ages; that this condition of difference in population was nature's physical protest against plural marriage. From this I argued that when one man married two, there was one man deprived of his chance for a companion; if he married three, then two men were so deprived; and that for each wife that a man took in excess of one, some other man was deprived of his opportunity to marry.

*Saints' HERALD for June 1, 1882.

As an item in evidence I stated that while I was in Utah in 1876, I met an unmarried man some thirty-nine years old, who in reply to my question why he had not married stated that he did not know where to go to get a wife. In my ramble that morning I had seen at a farmhouse near the confines of the city of Salt Lake, a number of young women seemingly from fourteen to twenty-two, or more years of age. I suggested to him that a man ought to be able to find a wife there, and that there must be many such places in the Territory. To this he replied, "Yes, that may be, but suppose I should go there to seek a wife I might be told that the young women were not at liberty to marry." He said that it was not easy to find young marriageable women who were not already married into polygamous families, or were bespoken for some Bishop.

I used no language on that occasion reflecting upon the virtue of the women of Utah. I only stated what I was told in conversation upon the subject in question. The man himself used no coarse or unbecoming language. He simply stated what to him was a condition. He further stated that he was not alone in being unmarried, but that there were hundreds like him in this respect in the territory, and presumably for the same reasons.

In writing or speaking upon the subject of plural marriage, and the church in Utah I have always used respectful terms, giving the men their proper titles when I knew them, treating of doctrine, dogma, practice, and principles as such, avoiding improper references to men. I have not in public or in private called the virtue of the women of Utah in question; do not now. To me the question is one of principle. To me the doctrine of plural marriage, polygamy, or celestial marriage, applying the terms to mean that system which has been practiced in the church in Utah, was a grievous error, wrong in conception, wrong in practice; no matter by whom introduced or by whom practiced, radically wrong and productive of evil results. Upon this belief we have spoken and written, withholding nothing because it was alleged that Joseph Smith taught this, or practiced that the main question being, Is it in ac cordance with the word of God, and his will?

DRUNKENNESS NOT AN EXCUSE FOR CRIME.

In a late case before the Supreme Court of Louisiana, in which one Haab was charged with having shot and killed one Whitaker in a drunken debauch, in a New Orleans saloon, the District Court sentenced Haab to four years in the penitentiary. The plea for the defense was that Haab was in the delirium tremens stage of drunkenness, and therefore insane and not responsible. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court upon the point that the plea of the defense was valid and the defendant should not be held.

After the case was heard the decision of the court was to the effect that where a man otherwise sane went of his own free will into a drunken debauch he was not legally excusable for homicide if committed during said period of drunkenness, though at the time such crime was committed he might be incapable of distinguishing right from wrong; and, still further, if it was a continuous carousal, if the party engaged in it was sane when it began the length of time the debauch continued was immaterial. "Drunkenness," said the court, "for a week no more excuses a homicide committed as its immediate and direct result than would drunkenness for an hour."

This decision of the Louisiana Court is to our thinking an eminently just one, and a step in the right direction looking to the safety of society and the enforcement of proper regard for life

The pleas of drunkenness and emotional insanity as excuses for those committing different sorts of crime, including murder of every degree, have become so frequent and escape from punishment for crimes has been made so easy that justice is mocked and trials are being made a travesty.

Dr nkennessisitself a crime against society. And as such it should be punished, if any reformatory measure could be devised adequate to the crime itself. But when the crime against society and the individual who becomes drunken is made to do duty to shield a criminal from just punishment for a secondary crime in the commission of which property is endangered, the rights of person are outraged, or life taken, the plea of drunkenness as an excuse is a farce; and it is only a matter of wonder that the courts have not long since put an effectual stop to such pleas being made in defense of crime.

The decision of the Louisiana Supreme Court is a step in the right direction. We trust it may be made the text for other courts and be respected by an adoption of the principle involved. Drunkenness is not a sufficient excuse for the commission of crime.

PROUD OF HIS PROGENY.

In the Millennial Star for February 21, 1901, appears the following:—

Elder A. M. Musser, of the Historian's Office, Salt Lake City, who says he is 71 years old, writing on other matters, incidentally gives an interesting memento of old time conditions, which we reproduce that it may be enshrined in the Star, although we ask his pardon for the liberty we take:—

"I have four missionaries in the vineyard, all on the Pacific Islands. My sons take readily to missionary labors, which gives me great joy. I have a Kanaka grand-son, a Filipino grand-son, also a Ute grand-daughter, born to me last year, three different grandmothers."

The Utah people may have abandoned the practice of polygamy, and it may be a "dead letter;" but such items as the above, and others continually appearing in their publications, rather indicate that they are only awaiting an opportunity to resume their unholy practices.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. M. Lane writes from Columbus Junction, Iowa, March 2:—

Have a place in which to hold meetings after the 8th or 9th, of this month. Have written to Bro. J. S. Roth. Hope some one will come and occupy, as I have the promise for two weeks.

Brn. L. G. Gurwell and E. H. Ebert are awake to the interests of the work, as is indicated by some handbills which they have had printed and are using. Bro. Gurwell, in sending us a copy of the bill, says, in a letter dated at Dighton, Kansas, February 25.—

Bro. Ebert and I are holding meetings in the Christian church. This is our introductory effort here. A good crowd out to hear last night. The people seemed to be in a state of thought and surprise. I pray for the hastening of the work.

Dighton is the county seat of Lane county.
In a letter to Bro. R. S. Salyards,
Bro. John Shields writes from Oliphant, Ontario, March 1:—

Much sickness has prevailed here this winter and many deaths have occurred among those not of the church, while many blessings and some remarkable cases of healings have been manifest to the Saints. Considerable interest exists in these parts, but the deep snow, said to be over three feet in the woods, and the storm have interfered with the attendance at meetings.

Bro. E. F. Shupe writes from Denver, Colorado:—

Our district conference passed off very pleasantly. The weather was fine. Bro. J. B. Roush was not present, being called to Iowa on account of the sickness and death of his father. Bro. Roush resigned as branch president, and at a special meeting of the branch, Wednesday the 20th, the writer was again chosen to preside. We are considerably disappointed that the Patriarch did not pay us a visit while in the west.

Sr. Lizzie Campbell, wrote from Wallaceburg, Ontario, the 17th ult.:—

It will be seven years next June since I obeyed this glorious gospel. I have received much light since I was baptized, and especially this last month. There was one thing which always puzzled me, and that was, I thought our elders did not preach with the same power of spirit as the elders used to in olden times. But we were all made to rejoice when Elder T. A. Phillips, of St. Thomas, came in our midst. He was here four weeks, and such plain gospel truths I never heard before, and we all felt to say with one accord, Surely he is a man of God. Even our branch president, who has had to labor under trials and difficulties, feels strengthened and encouraged. We all feel strengthened, and our hungry souls have indeed been fed. Yes, I believe he is like the disciples of old. He preached his last sermon here for this time last Sunday night, and left both Saint and sinner in tears under the Spirit of the beautiful gospel of Christ. Pray the Lord of the harvest that he may send more such as he into his vineyard. Dear sisters and brothers, let us never cease to pray for those who have to leave home and loved ones and face a frowning world. May we ever be faithful, watchful, and prayerful!

Bro. George H. Hilliard wrote from San Jose, California, March 2:—

We are now attending the Central district conference at this place, and next week will attend the district conference at Sacramento, then on to Ogden, Salt Lake, and Denver on our way to General Conference. Bro. Blakeslee is doing good work, and I think practice in our line will make him a strong man. He gave us an excellent talk last night, and Bro. Burton a most excellent one today. Hope this may find all in fair condition. May the Master direct you and the Bishop, as well as all others in their holy calling in his work. Love and best wishes to all!

In a recent letter to President Smith, Bro. U. W. Greene writes from Connecticut:—

We are much encouraged at the outlook for the work at Scott's Corner and vicinity in New York, about four miles from this place. People come for miles to hear the word. Present indications point toward an ingathering in the near future. Just enough opposition from the Methodist minister to fulfill the prophecy that "wherever this work goes, there will persecution abound." So far his every effort has reacted upon himself. My heart has rejoiced many times while declaring the word to note the peace of mind and the clearness of thought attending the efforts. God be praised for another promise fulfilled while opening new places, which work is in harmony with my calling.

Bro. A. J. Layland, writing from Raymond, Idaho, March 5:—

The good work goes on in these valleys of the mountains and if the "Mormon" people continue to examine the books that contain the laws of God to his church and people, as they have been doing in their Sunday schools and in some of their church services for several years past, I believe that many of them will eventually see things in a different light. And if we as a church can manage to send more missionaries to the Rocky Mountain mission I believe we would be able to preach the gospel of salvation to many more of the people, and not have to preach the gospel of condemnation to so many. By this I mean that many more would accept the teachings of the Reorganization and thus avoid being condemned. The outlook is brighter as it appears to me than ever before.

Bro. Peter Anderson writes from Murray, Utah, March 6:-

Perhaps the following might interest the readers of the HERALD. A few more good people have been added to our church in Salt Lake City. A brother living in the second ward opened his house for meetings. A neighbor, becoming interested, was going to do likewise, and a meeting was appointed at his house for this week; but a few evenings ago the bishop and his counselors appeared upon the scene, in the character of teachers, the bishop informing the brother belonging to their church, that the leading men of the church had instructed the bishops that ro meetings should be held in their wards without their consent; and that he objected to him having meetings in his own house. I was present and had a lengthy conversation with them. They defended polygamy to the best of their ability. Whether this instruction from the leaders extends to all the church and concerns all kinds of meetings, or is confined to Salt Lake City and the Josephite meetings, I do not know; but it serves to illustrate the kind of religious liberty a Brighamite enjoys in their Zion.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We call attention to the fact that Bro. W. H. Kelley, President of the Quorum of the Twelve, has changed the date of the meeting of the quorum from March 20 to March 27 and the place from Lamoni, to Independence.

In the Wheeling, West Virginia, Register, for March 4, is a reported interview with Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, in which he clearly sets forth the difference between us and the Utah church. He does this by giving a concise history of the church and the leading away of a portion of the church by Brigham Young and his followers.

Bro. Jacob Waltenbaugh, of the Fourth Quorum of Priests, would like to know what has become of their president and secretary, as he has not heard from them since last conference and no blanks have been received. Quorum officers should keep in touch with the members.

The preachers of the ministerial union, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, have agreed to refrain from officiating at the marriage of a divorced person, "except" in the case when "they" solemnly believe such person to be the innocent victim of a marriage which has been really dissolved on scriptural grounds; and also except that "they may remarry those who have been divorced from each other."

Bishop Kelley has sufficiently recovered from his attack of sickness to be at his desk again.

John Farson, a banker of Chicago, has agreed to conduct a two weeks' revival in the church of Pastor Brushingham, and agrees to make fifteen converts or forfeit one thousand dollars. Mr. Farson claims that the pulpit methods of the modern preacher need reforming, and he is going to show how revivals should be conducted. The revival was to begin March 1.

The Rev. H. L. Derr, a minister of Lebanon, Illinois, has originated a "school of prayer." His school is to be a department of Ewing College, a Baptist institution of Franklin county, Illinois. It is his intention to make it a two years' course. He is working to secure a $10,000 endowment.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION.—NO. II.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUORUM OF THE TWELVE.

The winter of 1857-58, Bro. W. W. Blair and I met with the Hedrickites in conference at Bloomington, Illinois. They treated us very kindly, though they would not extend to us the privilege of presenting our views and the hope of the Reorganization. It seemed to us that Elder Granville Hedrick was the sole adviser and leader of their society. His claims for himself were extraordinary, and he took peculiar positions as regards the reputation of the choice seer. In my life I have heard many hard things said against Joseph the Martyr, but never so many things clustered in a threehour discourse as did Mr. Hedrick in a talk at their conference. He even resorted to the silly stories of the money-digging and the black sheep to charm the hidden treasures, as published in some unreliable literature of the present age, and told them as facts, with all seriousness. Bro. Blair listened for about an hour and a half, then took his hat and left. He was gone about an hour, and returned in time to hear the close of the onslaught.

Their claims were singular. They honored Joseph as a true prophet in 1833, claiming that while in the midst of giving a certain revelation, he fell. They accepted a part of the revelation as from God, and rejected the other part as from Satan.

We were entertained with hospitality by Elder A. C. Haldeman, and I will mention a little incident that took place while at his table. I think most of those who attended their conference were sitting around the table, upon which was a bounteous supply of the comforts of life, both with substantials and delicacies. As the waiters inquired of each one which they would have, tea or coffee, all, from the quite elderly to the youngest, replied, "I prefer water," or, "I would like a glass of water, please." I was a little surprised to see the goodly, happy company all around the large table refuse tea and coffee, and I thought when they came to my turn I would respond. "I will have a cup of tea, please." But when they reached me I, too, answered, "I guess not, but would prefer a glass of water, please." From that day to the present it has never been inconvenient for me to go without tea or coffee. Before that time I had so acquired the habit that it was quite a cross to refuse the unnecessary stimulant that is in fact an injury to the human system. So, really, the Hedrickite conference in Bloomington was a blessing to me. I was much pleased by the manner and devotion of the members generally. I thought they were sincere. Bro. Adams, David Judy, and Jedediah Owen were present. They all seemed to wish to be friendly to us, and I thought by their expressions and manner they wished, as much as possible, to make us feel at home and welcome in their midst.

In the winter and spring of 1858 I visited several of the Saints in Bureau county and northern part of the state. Bro. Israel Huffaker and several in his neighborhood were influenced by the claims of Sidney Rigdon. As but few know what his claims were, I will briefly add here that he did not claim at first to be the president of the church, or even claim his right to preside by virtue of being one of Joseph's counselors; but in his blindness he claimed to be a guardian of the church, and as the church was fourteen years old, it had the right to choose its guardian; and as he was one of the First Presidency, he presented himself as such guardian. But as the church did not know such an officer in the priesthood, they of course refused to sustain him as such, and he did not have light enough to know what to tell the people. They in turn could not help him, and refused as a body to follow him. Yet there were a few who still held to him as a Bro. Huffaker, of Bureau county, was one of those few who were claiming that Rigdon should be the president. The passage which says,

Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 104:11, was often quoted by them to sustain their position. The forty - second paragraph of the same section, they overlooked. It reads:—

And again, the duty of the president of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses. Behold, here is wisdom, yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet; having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.

And they never quoted section 17: 12, which says:—

Every elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains bim.

They also lost sight of Doctrine and Covenants 99: 6, which says:—

The president of the church, who is also the president of the [high] council, is appointed by revelation, and acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church; and that the promise pertaining to the president of the church which included all those blessings, having all those blessings which he bestows on the head of the church, were gifts truly lineal in their descent from father to son, as is surely declared in the following terse language:—

Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God: therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began. Therefore [as much as to say, In consideration of these facts], blessed are ye if ye continue in my goodness, a light unto the Gentiles, and through this priesthood, a savor unto my people Israel. The Lord hath said it. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 84:3, 4.

The highest, the most important gifts pertaining to the priesthood, certainly are those required as "a light" and "a savor unto my people Israel." These belong to the Moses man, who is always president of the church, and are, indeed, blessings which are absolutely necessary to bring about the restoration of all things spoken by all the prophets since the world began. Let us see, now, where that blessing belongs by lineal descent:—

And now I say unto you, as pertaining to my boarding house, which I have commanded you to build, for the boarding of strangers, Let it be built unto my name, and let my name be named upon it, and let my servant Joseph and his house have place therein, from generation to generation; for this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him; and as I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, In thee, and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed. Therefore, let my servant Joseph, and his seed after him, have place in that house, from generation to generation, forever and ever, saith the Lord, and let the name of that house be called the Nauvoo House; and let it be a delightful habitation for man, and a resting place for the weary traveler, that he may contemplate the glory of Zion, and the glory of this the corner stone thereof; that he may receive also the counsel from those whom I have set to be as plants of renown, and as warchmen upon her walls. — Doctrine and Covenants 107:18.

The blessing of the president here is declared fixed or established by an oath, as God swore by himself as he did to Abraham by an oath:—

For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee. And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise. For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath.—Hebrews 6: 13-17.

So the blessing and anointing upon Joseph, and the blessing upon the head of Joseph's posterity after him, were established by an oath.

The Book of Mormon also clinches this thought by stating that the choice seer was to be of the lineage of Joseph of Egypt, in the following language:—

A choice seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins. . . And his name shall be called after me [Joseph]: and it shall be after the name of his father [whose name was Joseph]. And he shall be like unto me; for the thing which the Lord shall bring forth by his hand, by the power of the Lord shall bring my people unto salvation.—2 Nephi 2: 9, 20, 21, large edition.

Rigdon, like Brigham Young. Strang, Brewster, Thompson, and all the false prophets, never pretended to be ordained according to the law governing in the case, as found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants 17: 17, as follows:—

Every president of the high priesthood (or presiding elder), bishop, high counselor, and high priest, is to be ordained by the direction of a high council, or general conference.

It is very singular that none of those pretenders and aspirants to the presidency of the church ever claimed to be thus ordained, and yet they found followers among the Saints, and it proves just as effectually that they were not being led by the Holy Spirit into all truth. But in harmony with law governing the ordination of the president of the church, Joseph, the choice seer, was ordained at Amherst, Ohio, January 25, 1832, and his true successor and son was ordained at Amboy, Illinois, April 6, 1860, in a general conference of the church. It seems strange, indeed, how it is possible for any of the Saints to be so blinded that they will still follow such pretended leaders after it has been pointed out to them that in this one essential of ordination their president has failed to comply with the law of God. But to return to my narrative.

Edwin Cadwell, Jacob Doane, Royal Stone and his son Stephen, Jotham Barrett, William W. and Winthrop H. Blair and their mother and families, Charles Williams and family, of Amboy, Illinois; Alvah Smith and wife, of Dixon, and David Fuller and mother, of East Paw Paw, were now all interested in the Reorganization. Bro. Cadwell had been president of the branch, and most of them had been members of the church in Nauvoo and well acquainted with the Prophet Joseph, and were now rejoicing in our hope, and enjoying the gifts of the Spirit to a goodly degree.

Bro. Reuben Newkirk was appointed at the conference held on April 6, 1858, at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, to meet me at Amboy the last of the month, and we soon started on our mission. Stopped the first night with Bro. Richardson, near Lamoille, ten or twelve miles south of Amboy. He was a strong Baneemyite, but treated us very kindly. We then visited some brethren in Bureau county, whom I had called on before.

We then called on Bro. Lightfoot, at Ottawa, and Brn. Benjamin, Phineas, and Charles Bronson, of Princeton, Peoria county, who were waiting for the Lord to revive his work. They had been members of the church in the days of Joseph, and soon received the Spirit attesting our hope and the coming of little Joseph to take his father's place in the church.

We then visited Bro. Z. H. Gurley, Sen., who was living near Henderson Grove, not far from Galesburg. then went eighteen miles to Abingdon, where Bro. Edwin Stafford lived. It was a very warm day, and when we reached his house we were very tired and hungry. But Bro. Stafford was thoroughly disheartened over the wicked apostasy of Brighamism. He had been interested in what he hoped was the renewal of the work under Charles B. Thompson; but having just learned of its deception, he felt sour and suspicious of all Latter Day Saints who claim a renewal of the work, and told us he wished to have nothing more to do with religion. Dinner was over and he did not invite us to eat. We then walked seven miles farther to the home of Bro. William Moore. Bro. Newkirk was cast down, and felt much discouraged. He even complained. In fact, he had been distressed much of the time before on account of leaving his home. But this was too hard a trial for him as we walked in the hot sun seven miles farther without dinner, and he finally said: "This suffering is more than Jesus Christ ever suffered." I was surprised at this remark, and replied: "How are you suffering so much?" He answered, "Here we are, off among strangers, hungry, our families at home, and Jesus never had a wife to leave, as I have." He was so thoroughly cast down and lonesome I could not revive his spirits or hope.

(To be continued.)

WHAT KIND?

As the Great Teacher sat by the seaside in the far away Holy Land, in the long ago, he said:—

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind.—Matt. 13: 47.

What was true when the above was uttered, certainly must now be true, for the same humanity exists, and the same eternal laws of the Divine one; for both the righteous and the wicked are the rule of our government, and the hope of our compensation for time and eternity.

But what of Graceland? Can we find a sufficient number of friends among the "every kind" that will supply the "all needful," that she shall survive the bondage of debt, and overcome the inconvenience of poverty and fulfill the object of her creation?

The proverb writer described one of the "every kind" thusly:—

A slothful man hideth his hand in his bosom, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth again.—Prov. 19:24.

We need not expect any help from that kind for Graceland.

The same writer had another hit at the same fellow in the following:—

The slothful man saith, There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the streets.—Prov. 22:13.

This fellow or his offspring still live, and we hear his doleful cry: "It was a mistake in building the college—it is a maelstrom, never satisfied, and is sure to bankrupt the whole church." No aid for Graceland from this kind.

Another of the "every kind" is pictured on this wise:—

The sluggard will not plough by reason of the cold; therefore shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing.—Prov. 20:4.

To anticipate any assistance for Graceland from such a source would be an empty dream, a delusive chimera!

The observant Paul tells of another class of the "every kind," which the net had caught, in the following forceful language:—

For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ; whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.—Phil. 3: 18, 19.

It would be folly gone mad to hope for help for Graceland from those who only take pleasure in eating and drinking, or as so many cattle; the only moving mainspring to action being selfishness. Those who find delight in shame are not usually active promoters of education.

A very broad hint is given by the Master of still another peculiar class of the "every kind," namely:—

For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?
—Mark 8: 36.

The spirit of the age seems to be that of grasping after wealth, the piling up of massive fortunes; indeed the "root of all evil" is firmly planted in every gateway of traffic, and to get gain, both men and women seem ready to part with health, honor, and the hope of eternal life; and it is a sad, sad thought that this world-spirit that is so sordid and sinister, and fruitful of evil, hath led captive of the household of faith. It is not probable that much help will come to Graceland from those who are afflicted with the fever of accumulating that for which the worldly strive, for that spirit cankers the soul and dwarfs the fountain of human love and kindness. A good and thoughtful brother, writing to me not long ago, said: "I could name ten men of the church who could pay the college debt, and never miss it." Suffice it to say, those who !

are in possession of the wherewith are agents under God for what they possess, and will answer in the final day of reckoning for their stewardship. All who possess wealth have not reached the conclusion of Mr. Carnegie, that it is sinful to die rich; or at least Graceland has no evidence of any considerable amount placed to her credit to either lift the debt or ease our anxiety for running expense. A gentleman, not of the church, said to me a few days since: "I would think that men of means in the church would not only feel it a duty but an honor to pay off the debt of Graceland College, and also put it in a prosperous condition." What could I say to such a statement as the above? I did not wish to find fault, or say anything that would reflect upon either my brethren or upon my church, so I made answer: "We are hopeful that before we make our financial report to the next General Conference we shall be favored with a more liberal remembrance for our Graceland."

Another class of "every kind" is brought to our notice in the following:

But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.—Matt 19:22.

Do not turn away from this appeal with the same kind of sorrow in your heart, for the clear intent of this illustration by the Master was to teach that there was such an overgrowth of the "root of all evil" in the soul of that rich man that he would prefer to cling to wealth rather than to relieve the wants of the needy, or any institution of the church.

Now, dear reader, permit me to ask, you who possess over and above your necessity and comfort, all of which you must part with when you are carried out to the last silent resting place, Are you so filled with sorrow (in love with your possessions) that you will allow us to plead in vain, for I plead for Graceland as a loving mother pleads for her child, that she fears is in danger. Yea, for Grace. land do I pray both to God and the Saints. I meditate upon what is best to be done for this institution of the church. I talk in behalf of its interests, that the youthful poor may receive the blessing of an education within her walls. I write constantly as thought and inspirations come to my assistance, that I may the better advance this misunderstood and neglected church institution.

Would I be impudent to inquire, What place do you occupy in the gospel net?

Having been duly appointed to work in the interest of Graceland, I shall strive to prove faithful until success shall crown our efforts, or in the last ditch the fading hope of triumph shall expire. For Graceland,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Lamoni, Iowa.

TO THE LAW.

One of the HERALD writers pens the following paragraph: "Then from Doctrine and Covenants 68:3, we learn that 'no bishop, or high priest,' is to be 'tried or condemned for crime, save it be before the first presidency;' but the outcome is to be according to the covenants and commandments of the church."—HERALD, vol. 48, p. 89.

The force of the above instruction to the church seems to be: that "no bishop" is amenable for wrongdoing or crime to any church tribunal, save that of the First Presidency.

Likewise, that no "high priest" can be tried for wrongdoing or crime, save before the bar of the said First Presidency. That is the way I read the brother's teaching.

How reads the law? Here it is:-

And again, no bishop, or high priest, who shall be set apart for this ministry, shall be tried or condemned for any crime, save it be before the first presidency of the church; and inasmuch as he is found guilty before this presidency, by testimony that cannot be impeached, he shall be condemned, and if he repents he shall be forgiven, according to the covenants and commandments of the church.

—D. C. 68: 3.

By a careful reading of paragraphs 2 and 3, it will be seen that the Lord was instructing the church relative to bishops, and it reads:—

No man has a legal right to this office [office of bishop], to hold the keys of this priesthood, except he be a literal descendant and the firstborn of Aaron.

And it further explains:

But as a high priest of the Melchisedec priesthood has authority to officiate in all the lesser offices, he may officiate in the office of bishop when no literal descendant of Aaron can be found.

Thus we learn that it is the high priest of the Melchisedec priesthood who has been set apart to officiate in the office of "bishop" that cannot be tried for crime or wrongdoing save at the bar of the First Presidency, and that all other high priests not thus set apart to "this ministry," the ministry of bishop, are amenable to the other courts or tribunals of the church, and that it is in error of the spirit and letter of the law to teach that high priests, as high priests, cannot be called to account for word or act save before the bar of the First Presidency.

This is not written in the spirit of faultfinding, neither with any intent or wish to provoke a controversy, but for a better and fuller understanding of the law.

Let high priests be true and loyal to their calling, and let all the church seek to comprehend the true meaning of the law of God, then may we hope to stand upon the mountains of Zion and see eye to eye.

A HIGH PRIEST.

PREPARATION FOR GENERAL CONFERENCE.

As General Conference is near, we need to be making the necessary preparations for that event; not only those who go, but those who are unable to attend. You may ask, In what way may Saints not going make preparation for it? I answer, I mean a preparation of the heart should be made by all. When we who expect, if the Lord wills, to be at conference think of making preparation for it. we should not think too much about having suitable clothes to wear, but each brother and sister expecting to be in that assembly of Saints from different parts of the world should first examine their own hearts and see if they want to go to do all the good they can or if their desire to attend is prompted by love of display of dress or talents. Let us not get it into our minds that the conference could not get along without us. If some of us who now contemplate attending conference should by force of circum. stances be compelled to stay away, we should be reconciled and believe that the work would move on just the same. While there are marvelous things connected with the work of General Conference, yet we must not allow the contemplation of that fact to make us nervous, but rather let us be sober minded. True, conference is a place of work; but let us not "cross the bridge before we reach it," but let us calmly work where we are. watching and praying continually till time to go, and then will we be blessed. The General Conference is like branch meeting in one respect at least, that is, it is just what we make it. If we have a joyful time and come to a better understanding of the law and nearer the unity of the faith it will be by reason of us making preparation to thus be blessed.

I for one believe we shall have a good conference, and I hope that for spirituality it may equal or surpass any other in the history of the Reorganization. To this end let us pray.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

THE CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS. "To the law and the testimony."

And there appeared a great sign in heaven, in the likeness of things on the earth; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars. . . And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand and two hundred and three score years. And there was war in heaven; . . . And the dragon prevailed not against Michael, neither the child, nor the woman which was the church of God, who had been delivered of her pains, and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ. . . When the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child. Therefore, to the woman was given two wings of a great eagle, that she might flee into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent. And the serpent casteth out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood. And the earth helpeth the woman, and the earth openeth her mouth, and swalloweth up the flood which the dragon casteth out of his mouth. Therefore, the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.—Rev. 12:1, 5-7, 13-17, I. T.

Many have spoken and written upon the theme of the "church in wilderness," yet I have felt inclined to add my mite, and hence this article. While I may differ from some who have written, yet I invite and shall welcome criticism, that thereby the truth may be manifest.

It is written, "Blessed are they who readeth, and . . . understandeth the words of this prophecy;" and it is with an earnest prayer for a better understanding of this chapter that I approach the task. Could I thoroughly indorse any of the many efforts of my brethren in this line in the past, I would have no need to undertake it, hence will first state some of my objections to some interpretations of this chapter common among our ministry.

We are told that this "woman clothed with the glory of the sun" was the Church of Christ, and the "man child" was the priesthood or authority. If that be true, did the church give birth to the authority, or priesthood? Or, was not the reverse of this the case, the priesthood—or authority—"brought forth" the church?

To me the last statement is the correct position. We may go to "the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ," and we find that even John came of the priestly Zacharias, and when the geneology of Christ is given, it traces him back to David.

Again: If it be true, according to Ecclesiastes 3:14, that God always works in his own way, when we come to contemplate the bringing forth of this latter day work we find the "priesthood" restored in its "authority" to those "with whom it hath continued through the lineage" of their fathers (D. C. 84:3); and with this restoration of authority came the power to build up and establish the kingdom. If that be God's way in this latter dispensation, must it not have been his way in all ages? Then, again, we are told that this "woman" loses her chastity in the wilderness and becomes "the Mother of Harlots;" and after twelve hundred and sixty years comes to us again as Christ's accepted bride; and still we are pointed to the Roman Catholic Church as the "Mother of Harlots" still sitting upon her seat of authority, given her by the beast, yet soon to be made naked, and to be burned with fire. (See Rev. 17.)

These positions would necessitate a reformation of this "Mystery Babylon," as an organization and a coming back to Christ's favor, and that would do away with the necessity for a restoration of the kingdom of Christ. "Well," I fancy I hear some one say, "that is enough along these lines, now tell us what you are going to do about it."

I frankly acknowledge that it is oftener easier to find fault with some one's interpretation of a passage than to give the correct one; but with a firm belief in the fact as stated by Elihu, in Job 32:8, that

There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.

With a prayer for help and guidance, I turn to the Holy Scriptures, known as the "Inspired Translation," for the key to the difficulty. I read that what John saw here was "in the likeness of things on the earth." Of course the question to be settled next is, What were the "things on the earth" that filled the type seen in the heavens? And as we read carefully, we find the answer from the "Inspiration of the Almighty."

And the dragon prevailed not against Michael, neither the child, nor the woman which was the church of God, who had been delivered of her pains, and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ.—Revelation 12:7, I. T.

According to the principle of "the last shall be first," we first examine with this "kingdom of God and his Christ," and ask, "What was this kingdom?" Not the priesthood of the church which brought it forth, certainly; and our minds go back to the "beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God," and we find, according to Matthew 3:2, King James' Translation, or 3:28, Inspired Translation, that the message which John bore was:—

Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

Also according to Mark 1:14, that the Savior preached

The gospel of the kingdom of God.

Nor is this all. Luke declares that the twelve were sent

To preach the kingdom of God.—Luke 9: 2. And that the message of the seventy should be

The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

—Luke 10:9.

Now when we remember that Paul declares that the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death (Rom. 8:2) and then tells us that this "ministration of death" was that "written and engraven in stones" (2 Cor. 3:7), and then proceeds to tell us how this deliverance came, as he does in Colossians 1:13, the conviction is forced upon us that this "man child," which John saw "caught up unto God and to his throne," was this very "kingdom" which John began to preach and prepare the way for, and which Christ and the apostles—with the seventy—preached, and which Christ denominated as "my church." (See Matt. 16: 18, 19.)

"But," says some one, "Does not the Inspired Translation say that "the woman was the church of God?" Certainly. The woman was the church of God:—

This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness —Acts 7:38.

Does not the law, "Like produces like," apply here? If the woman was a church, would not her child be a church also? Surely this is the way the reasoning is applied to the seventeenth chapter of Revelation, when we say that the apostate church is the "mother" of all these other sects or churches.

Who ever this woman of the twelfth chapter was, her clothing of glory would surely indicate that she was pure in the conception of her child, and we ask, Who was the father of this "man child?" To do this we must find the woman's husband. Is it not probable that this "woman." who "was the church of God." and this "church in the wilderness," of whom Stephen speaks in Acts 7: 38, were the same individual? This seems to us to be the proper conclusion. Now tracing this matter farther, we find a declaration which places her husband before us in the person of Jehovah.

Which my covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord.—Ezek. 31: 32. (See also Isa. 50: 1.)

Was it not for this very purpose—to prepare a people through whom there might come "the kingdom of God and his Christ"—that Jehovah chose Abraham first, and the Abrahamic people? (See Isa. 41 and Psalms 33:12; also Deut. 7:7, 8.) As we write this, and recall the fact that by Amos, in the fifth chapter and second verse, also Jeremiah, in the second chapter and thirteenth verse of Lamentations, as well as by other prophets and in other portions of the scriptures, the "house of Israel" is spoken of as a "virgin," the prophecy of Isaiah, in the seventh chapter, and fourteenth to sixteenth verses comes to us and seems to take on a broader meaning than ever before: "A virgin shall conceive and bear a son," etc. As Paul declares that

The invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made (Rom. 1:20).

it seems to us that the Virgin Mary's conception and bringing forth of the child Jesus was a visible manifestation of the invisible conception and bringing forth of "the kingdom of his dear Son"—"the kingdom of God and his Christ"—by the church that was with the "angel" in the wilderness—the Jewish church.

"But," again, says my objector, "Paul declares that this Jewish people is broken off, and hence cannot be 'the church of God.'"

John does not declare it is now "the church of God," but "which was the church of God," and had been delivered of her pains, and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ, placing the event in the past perfect tense. Paul also declares that "God hath not cast away his people whom he foreknew," and Christ laments that they had not known "the things which belong unto thy peace" (Luke 19:12), and declares that because they did not, and would not, that he should "gather" them, that their House is left . . . desolate; and . . . ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.—Luke 13: 34, 35.

He does not say that they shall be destroyed, but desolate.

Now we turn back to Revelation, twelfth chapter, to try to follow the fortunes of this "woman," as outlined by John. But first, What is the meaning of the "glory" with which she is clothed? The words of Simeon come to us:—

Mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.—Luke 2: 30-32.

And we answer, the glory of Christ's salvation—the gospel dispensationwhile the "moon under her feet," was the Mosaic dispensation, having its complete fulfillment in the coming forth of this "man child." The crown of stars are the twelve princes, or tribes, of Israel. We need not trace the man child farther than the statement that it "was caught up unto God and his throne." Then there could be no marvel for the period of darkness that the world passed through, with the "glory of the sun" obscured, or absent from the world, and the "moon" refusing to shine because it had passed away. But the woman still remains, and is not destroyed. What is her lot? She is given wings, and is thus enabled to flee away to the wilderness. There is a promise of her coming out, in the fact that she is to be nourished for a certain time. Shall we see her again in her original form of organization? Certainly. The prophets are replete with promises of the regathering of Israel as a nation—both in the Bible and Book of Mormon. When shall she come back? The Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon declare that it shall be contemporary with the restoration of the everlasting gospel; so also declares Isaiah 29; and the history of the world made in these latter days confirm these prophecies. Nay, not confirm—fulfill.

I need not cite the fact that the legislation of the world removing the civil disabilities of the Jew date from about 1830.

"But," says one, "when did she go into the wilderness, and will the one thousand two hundred and sixty years fit in here?"

Yes, we think so, the woman went "into the wilderness" from John's point of view when the Jewish Church disappeared from the east as an organization. In the book entitled, "Historical Sketch of the Jews," on pages 6 and 7, speaking of the Jews in Rome, I find this statement:—

The dignity of Patriarch ceased to exist in 429, and the link connecting the different synagogues of the Eastern Empire was broken. Justin, A. D. 523, excluded all non-Christians from holding any office or dignity in the state.

Thus we find that the dates approximate as well as anyone could expect. Now comes one more thought of this scene, as presented to John: according to the text (Rev. 12:7), there is portrayed first a persecution of the Christians. Shall we cite you that of Nero as the one notable one? Then an effort at the destruction of the Jews, after the removing of the church of Christ in its authority and power; and lastly, after the disappearance of the Jewish Church, a persecuting of the remnant of the church of Christ. (See verse 17.) "And went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ." This persecution is written in the history of the "dark ages," and we think that the prophecy of Daniel that the saints of the Most High should be worn out, was perfectly fulfilled thereby.

We only remind our readers that today the world stands amazed at the rapid and marvelous reëstablishment of Israel to her inheritance and latter day Israel is everywhere declaring the restoration of the "kingdom of God and his Christ."

May the Master hasten the time when we shall see eye to eye, is my prayer.

A. M. CHASE.

Lamoni. Iowa. February 19.

French chalk rubbed in lightly will remove grease spots from velvet; or the chalk may be dropped on and allowed to remain for twelve hours. To restore the pile on velvet hold it very taut over the steam from a pan of boiling water, keeping the right side on top and having some one beside you to brush the pile up with a stiff whisk until it looks as it should. If this part of the work is carefully done the results will be most satisfactory.—
March Ladies' Home Journal.

Selected Articles.

EGYPTIAN PARALLELS TO CHRIST IN AN EARLY GREEK PAPYRUS.

The many curious resemblances to the story of Jesus found in legendary documents of non-Christian religions have been pointed out upon numberless occasions by scholars, and of recent days particularly by Dr. Paul Carus, in an interesting series of articles in The Open Court. One of the latest parallelisms discovered is in a set of tales called "The Priests of Memphis," from a papyrus belonging to the British Museum. The date of the manuscript is placed at about 67 A. D., although the actual composition of the tales may have been considerably earlier. The London Jewish Chronicle (January 11) gives the following account of these Egyptian stories. It says:

"They relate to the circumstances surrounding the miraculous birth of a child. His mother has a dream. She is told to eat the fruit of a melon vine, and she will be granted her desire of a male child. At the same time the father is told in a dream that the child will work wonders, and that he is to be given the name of Se Osiris. The child is born, and this is how he is described:-

"'It came to pass that the child Se Osiris was one year old; it being that people might have said he was two years old. He being two years old, they might have said he was three years. He grew big, he grew strong, he was sent to school, and he rivaled the scribe that they had caused to give him instruction. The child, Se Osiris, became that he began to say magic with the scribes of the House of Life in the Temple of Ptah in Memphis, and all the world wondered at him."

"This account presents a striking resemblance-too striking, indeed, to be accidental, considering that the story is about synchronous with the introduction of Christianity-with the accounts given of the birth of Jesus in the New Testament. According to Matthew 1: 20, 21, an angel appeared to Joseph in a dream foretelling the birth and future greatness of Jesus. Luke tells (2:40) how rapidly the child grew in wisdom and strength. and also (2:46, 47) how amazed the doctors of the Temple were at the questions he put to them. There is likewise, in this collection of Mr. Griffith, a story which presents a curious parallel to that of Lazarus and Dives in the New Testament. A poor man is carried out to burial with small ceremony; a rich man with great pomp and wailing. But afterward, in the lower world, the rich man is found in prison, clad in vile clothes, while the poor man occupies a seat of honor near the throne of Osiris.'

The Jewish Chronicle's comment is that "such resemblances point to a common store of ideas and legends of which writers belonging to the first two centuries would avail themselves, the authors of the New Testament included." The only Christian comment we have yet seen on this discovery is from the London Tablet (Rom. Cath.), which remarks that this is only another example of the singular facility with which Christian history and doctrines were incorporated at an early date into pagan legends.—Literary Digest, February 16, 1901.

THE COMING MONISTIC "CHURCH UNIVERSAL."

The recent marked growth in the Western world of spiritual monism, or the system of thought which resolves the universe of mind and matter into one divine substance, leads an English writer, Mr. Ernest Harrwitz. to predict that the time is not far distant when the great religions of the East and West will unite upon this philosophy as an adequate spiritual basis for a universal church. He holds that in the union of Vedântic and Christian forces there is a possibility of a tremendous revival of spiritual religion, far mightier than the forces set in operation by Luther and Calvin. In The Theosophical Review (London, November) he says:-

"The monistic revival of the twentieth century will achieve no less, I believe, than the spiritualization of scientific research and the rationalization of religious fervor. Then science and religion will cease their conflict, and will peacefully flourish, side by side, like two fruitful branches grown from the same tree of divine knowledge. A great outpouring of the spirit will pass over the earth, and the time will be ripe for the church universal, when the Christian and the Indian churches may meet as friends on the common ground of the Vedânta. The day will like-wise come when another divine institution, the Mohammedan Brotherhood, will be in-corporated into the Monistic Church, for Islam, too, has realized the 'One without the second,' thanks to the illumination of the 'God-intoxicated' Sû îs. Sâli and Hâfiz have done for Mohammedanism what Eckhart and Tauler did for Christianity, and the Vedânta for the religions of India. May the time soon draw nigh when we shall be ready to institute the church universal!"

The London Light (Spiritualistic), commenting on this, says:—

"Certainly, Vedânta teaching has significantly interested England and America for some years, suggesting to many the need and the possibility of at least a bridge between spiritual Christianity and Vedântic philosophy; or even between Vedântic philosophers and really modern scientists. We believe in the probability of this. The tendency everywhere is toward spiritual Monism. What we have to do first is to rid ourselves of the old missionary egotism or bigotry. There are many roads to God, and our true work is, not to condemn any, but to find out the one secret of them all."—Literary Digest, February 16, 1901.

Many things are difficult and dark to me; but I can see one thing quite clearly, that I must not, cannot seek my own happiness by sacrificing others.—George Elliot.

Letter Department.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 4.

Editors Herald:—Many moons have come and gone since my last communication to your letter department, nor do I make any apology for my long silence or that I am now knocking at your door for admission and place.

On account of a peculiar dream had in November, 1899, I absented myself from the General Conference place of meeting last April, until necessity seemed to compel my presence. Had it not been for my remembrance of the Jonah act, I might have gone elsewhere than to the conference; and while the dream has only had a partial fulfillment, I feel doubly assured that the path of duty is the only path of safety. I look upon the work of last General Conference as the church's unfinished business of the century, or at least a part of the unfinished business.

During the months of May and June was kept quite busy doing clerical, college, and some local ministerial work.

The early part of July found me at Pollock, Missouri, and vicinity, preaching the word to attentive and interested hearers. A small company of us gathered upon the bank of Locust creek, and there, 'neath the shade of the majestic maples, bathed in the beautiful sunlit temple of God, we joined our praise and voice with God's own woodland choir, and in the name of him who sent us out to publish salvation full and free unto the whosoever will hear and obey the angel's message, led a youthful maid into the clear and limpid water, where her covenant was made with God; and if she proves wise and faithful, the end of that act will be the obtaining of the crown that never grows dim, and the wearing of which will entitle the owner to eat of the fruit of that tree that produces its life-giving fruit every month of the year. This innocent girl was followed by her aged grandfather, who for more than threescore years has been blind; but notwithstanding this sad condition, he is a musical prodigy. None who witnessed the childlike simplicity and humility, and the earnest rejoicing of this second child life, could have refused to have lauded the God of Israel for his loving kindness. With all my soul I cry, Abba, Father!

While preaching my farewell to that little band of tried and sacrificing Saints, what a wonderful endowment of the Holy Spirit was had! A sister who was sorely tried in faith was permitted to hear the angels singing, and the voice of prophecy unto that little, faithful company was that the Lord had accepted of their sacrifice, he had watched over their labors, and in the near future others should be added to their number, the people would yet hear the truth, and the gospel shall be the standard of righteousness unto many. On our departure we were supplied with a little of the "all needful."

Boarding the train before the ticket office was open, the conductor exacted full fare, which we paid, taking receipt therefor. Upon sending the receipt to the company headquarters, our extra fare was refunded. This item may prove helpful to others.

I next spent about a week with the kind people of Bevier, and preached the word to the few who found time or had an inclination to attend. We were not forgotten in our financial necessities.

One restful day at the quiet home of Bro. F. Palfrey, of Macon, thence to Moberly, where I held a cottage meeting, and had most excellent liberty. In large places where we are denied the use of churches, and public halls are too expensive, I find the house-to-house meeting the better way to get the gospel before the people. It is a slow way, but it is a social and a sure way.

I was next at Higbee. Found the work at rather a low ebb, but there a faithful few were maintaining their covenant pledge. Storm and sickness had somewhat to do with the small attendance at our service. Our expenses were not neglected at the last three places mentioned. Thus I finish and take leave of my two-year field in the Northeast Missouri district, a field that I did not seek, but while there, in earnest faithfulness sought the advancement of gospel truth, and take the unction unto my soul that there I have left many friends, both of those in as well as those out of the church. And if I left any who hold a poor opinion of, or ill will toward, me, it has not come to my knowledge, so I can truthfully say: "Where ignorance is bliss, it is folly to be wise." I am sometimes constrained to believe that if the talebearer and scandal-monger would go out of business this would be a comparatively happy, peaceful world.

July 16, arrived at Zion's "center spot," in a much needed rainstorm, and for the four succeeding hot weeks I was busy all the time, working nights and Sundays. Perhaps in years to come the Saints will be more able to appreciate the work accomplished. With me the question never arises, Is that particular work mine, or is it required of me, but, can I aid the cause of the church? if so, it matters not to me where I labor, or what the task may be.

I was permitted to attend the reunion at Washington Park. There were not so many camped as we had expected, neither were the meetings as largely attended as we had hoped. It was the closing week of the parks, and in consequence the effort at attracting the people with worldly amusement outdid the gospel attractions. The church did not have the sole control of the park, which made some unpleasant features to our camping. Nevertheless, the church had a fine showing in the several Kansas City papers. The killing of a blacksnake by putting my heel upon its head, was one of the camp excitements. The showing up of Utahism to Elder Jacob N. Larsen, in the presence of four of his colaborers, and a large company of bystanders, was an afternoon episode that will not soon fade from memory. Helping as best we could, we were permitted to water the faithful labors of others, baptizing four in the fine park lake, in the presence of a vast multitude. Withal I can say: we enjoyed the ten days tenting 'neath the great elm tree, and we are of the opinion that good was done for Zion's cause.

The early part of September I was at the district conference at Armstrong, Kansas, and was upon invitation a helper. Several years before I had what was to me the satisfactory evidence of the call of God to Bro. James Arthur Gillen, and while, in connection with others we set him apart to the office of elder, there was enjoyed a good measure of the Holy Spirit. A day or two later he gave proof of his call by preaching an able and interesting sermon.

My next work was new to me, the active, aggressive work of Graceland; and while begging is for me a more irksome task than digging, I have not as yet flinched from duty, and allow me here to return thanks to the HERALD for kindness in my keeping this topic before the Saints. In the pulpit and in the press I have tried to prove faithful to the church-imposed responsibility.

Attended the reunion in the fine park at Dow City. It was the nicest grounds, best water, and most convenient of any place we ever attended. The weather was some unfavorable, but the results were fair. Some new experiences were gained,—a proof that we are a progressive or a changing people.

Two nights at Deloit, a fair audience first evening, and the second evening a full house. So we received kind words, and a little help, and hied us away to Woodbine for a couple of evenings, and if the "new broom" swept clean, it failed to collect a very extensive gathering. We met and rejoiced with old time friends, and formed some new acquaintances. Hazel Dell, an inland nest of the faithful, gave us a hearing for two evenings, and the interest manifested made me wish for more time. My earthly wants were remembered.

Sunday, October 14, a lively, dusty ride o'er hill and dale to street car line in Council Bluffs, thence over the 'Old Muddy," into Omaha, and four minutes late at the church, where I found a full house awaited me. In the congregation we saw a few familiar faces, but the larger number were new and strange to me. What changes since my active ministrations from this pulpit. Yet we felt neither strange nor out of place, and with the old time fire and freedom spake the gladsome word of eternal life. Supper in Omaha and breakfast in Lamoni. Steam is a most wonderful servant to man.

Since my last letter have preached at Leon, Ellston, Davis City, Lamoni, Lucas, Cleveland, Evergreen, Dow City, Deloit, Woodbine, Hazel Dell, Greenville, McGaw, and Latta schoolhouses, Iowa; Pollock, Bevier, Moberly, Higbee, Kansas City, and Independence, Missouri; Armstrong, Kansas; and Omaha, Nebraska; and while I have fewer sermons to my credit, can honestly and truthfully state that this has been one of the busiest years of my missionary experience. The good accomplished will appear, I suppose, in the sweet by and by.

Perhaps the good people of the Kirtland district would like to have a word of confession or explanation. Well, it is on this wise: The common everyday adage runs, "The willing horse pulls the load." The conference aware that I was ever willing, first of all appointed me on the committee to examine the books of Bishop's office for past nine years. Next they put upon me the responsibility of a trustee of Graceland College, which, by the way, is no picnic of a job; and still more, I was made a member of the committee to audit the accounts of the Herald Publishing House, and also of the Bishop's office for the year 1900; and lastly, they gave me a mission to the Ohio-Kirtland district. Now, if the people over there have been disappointed, I can assure them it is mutual, for this is the first mission field appointed to me that I was hindered in reaching and occupying therein, but I have done that which was considered the best and most important for the good of the church. Had we possessed the gift of prescience, we might have spent several months in Ohio: but there comes in that sad refrain, it might have been. O yes! our genesis may be quite rosy with promise, and the wormwood and the gall of bitterness be our portion at the end, making the living truth ever present. So we must await the arbitrament of Him that knows and considers all the extenuating circumstances and environments.

Some seem to think that our ministers who go into the mission work have a "soft snap;" in fact, to hear some talk one would be constrained to the opinion that the missionary's chariot was a flowery bed of ease, to waft him safely to paradise. Let me run up the curtain on one experience not many months old: "Permit me to say I am getting experiience; I mean I have heard ye elders tell of your good (?) times in the field, but I thought maybe those times had all passed away, and all old things had been made new, but alas! Hot raw biscuits and raw pork three times a day, and sandwiched between meals. I have indigestion! constipation!! and my saliva has turned to dough, so I can hardly swallow or spit, and if you could see where I was sleeping—oh my! just think of your going to bed (?) without taking any clothes off, yes, keeping your overcoat on! It is fortunate for me it has been mild weather, for some nights I cannot sleep with the cold, as it is." This is only a mild sample of present conditions.

The man who was blest with a loving, watchful mother, and later with a tender, thoughtful wife, who never let him wear an undarned sock, or ragged underwear, or the coat lining all in tatters, or the buttons missing from his garments, such a one can tell with a startling vividness the difference between the domestic life and the missionary's experiences. That which has dulled the wire edge, and soothed the briers of the itinerant, and aided me to bear patiently and uncomplainingly is that my Master spent a life of suffering; and as I think of that crown of thorns, an inspiration of love and willingness comes into my soul, and a strength from the unseen is obtained to continue in the conflict against sin, with the hope of a place and standing with those who have borne the heat and burden of the day. There is a sure reward to all those who will abide faithful until the end.

God is always true and kind, and ever the same. At last General Conference, in connection with Bro. R. C. Evans, was asked to administer to a little girl that had lost the sight of one eye, and the doctors were of the opinion that it would affect the other eye also. Here is a copy of a letter from the father of the little girl:-

"PAWNEE, Mo., April 23, 1900. "R. M. ELVIN, Lamoni, Iowa.

"Bro. Elvin:-I take the liberty of writing you in reference to our little daughter, who was entirely blind in one eye, caused by a cataract which had grown all over the ball of her eye. Yourself and Bro. Evans administered to her the first Sunday of conference, and now she is entirely well. Her eye is as clear as it ever was. Pray for her, Bro. Elvin, that all may be well for her.

"Praise be to the Lord,

"Yours in the faith,

"E. NIXSON."

Where is there room for Saints to doubt? Where will be the advantage of proving untrue?

The tripod of ignorance, hatred, and retaliation should never find place among the children of God.

Of late the Decatur district has made choice of the undersigned to preside over the same. Our horizon is not without its clouds and threatening storm, and in several places our cause languishes.

We are in correspondence with a Mr. Wm. B. Manchester, an elder of the Christian Church, relative to a public debate. Particulars will be furnished later.

This has been an open and rather a pleasant winter. The coldest was the morning of February 12, when the thermometer indicated twelve degrees below zero. The omen of spring has already appeared, the wild ducks flying north.

Still upon the watchtower, and with unshaken confidence in the gospel restored, I abide, your fellow servant in the labor of love. ROBT. M. ELVIN.

GREEN VALLEY, Iowa, March 1. Editors Herald:-I have been constantly engaged in the work since October 1, 1900, at points in eastern Iowa and northern Illinois. I have not seen as much progress and activity as is desirable, but have met many whose hearts are seemingly in the cause. I spent most of my time in the months of October, November, and December, in eastern Iowa. Began the New Year with a series of meetings at Millersburg, Illinois.

I very recently attended conference of the Eastern Iowa district, at Fulton. We had a very enjoyable time. Elder C E Hand was continued as district president. One is deeply impressed with the kind, patient way in which he presides. We have great need in this work for good, competent presiding officers in branches and districts. We look forward to, and hope for, the time to come when it may be made the special duty of high priests and many of the elders to act as "pastors" or "shepherds" over the flock in organized branches and districts. "to feed the church of God." It is evident that the church has suffered for the want of more activity in this respect.

The duty of the Twelve and Seventy is clearly defined in Doctrine and Covenants section 122: 7, which provides that the Seventy, under direction of the Twelve, shall leave places where organization is effected to the care and administration of standing ministers, and thus be free to push the preaching of the word into new fields now widening before them. This was the counsel of the Spirit, and my experience and observation have caused me to think that if this instruction had been heeded better results would have come, and more unity and better feeling obtained, and we would all feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what we have been and are now enjoying. What we need most of all is to come up a mite higher all along the line. What is meant by the term "up higher" is evidently understood: we need to grow out of sinful, selfish conditions into conditions of righteousness, which means right conditions existing between God and us and a love for right doing and right dealing, and above all to live honorable, upright, godly lives, that will prove to the world that we are the people of God in example as well as in theory. And thus in this most effective way "let our lights shine." We talk about the gathering to Zion, etc., etc., and in view of the admonition, "Let all things be prepared before you," we should all remember that nothing will hasten that notable event so much as true, faithful, noble, and obedient lives and the building up of a Christlike character. May we not become discouraged, lukewarm, or "dead" in the work, but ever press on; and though we may be tried so as by fire, let us endeavor to endure and live in hope that when we pass through the "valley of the shadow of death" we may do so in the glorious anticipation that if faithful we shall be able to grasp the nail-pierced hand of him who loved us, redeemed us, and gave himself for us, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. In bonds,

WILL E. LARUE.

TABOR, Iowa, March 1.

Editors Heralds-The Pottawattamie district conference held at Crescent was really more than we could expect, as the weather was very cold, the severest of any time all winter. Sunday school convention met on Friday morning, February 22, and held three sessions. All was done according to order and excellent good taste. Business on Saturday was dispatched in good order, and satisfactory, as we believe. Missionary in charge, J. W. Wight, and Bro. Fred A. Smith were with us, with president of district, D. R. Chambers, with a goodly number of the missionary force, and high priests and elders of the local staff, and a good turnout of membership; and not a few of our friends in Crescent and elsewhere. A splendid good spiritual feast was enjoyed, both in prayer and preaching services. Preachers did well; members not one whit behind in attendance and caring for visitors. All felt well and praised God for his goodness manifested.

The work in the district is in fair condition, as also in Fremont district. Three of for work. La grippe and sore throats trouble them some, but notwithstanding, they are doing all they can, and we hope for the best.

We have worked in the Council Bluffs branch some of late, and feel well paid. Had good liberty of speech and freedom of thought in presenting the word. Was well cared for, and they did not forget to help the elder on his way, making his heart glad and giving him the evidence that they were indeed the disciples of Christ. May God's blessing attend them and his Spirit help them to endure to the end, and obtain the crown over the kingdom of our God.

The greatest difficulty in the way of the progress of this work is the indifference of many of the membership. May God in his infinite mercy help us all to live more perfectly and do his holy will more completely. That we may not fail to obtain all that is promised, is my continual prayer. We ever feel like speaking of all the good we can, and doing the same. Many in this mission are sorely afflicted, while many have been wonderfully blessed and healed. We are hopeful for all others, and many, we believe, will recover. We feel grateful to our Father in heaven and the dear Saints of this mission for help so cheerfully afforded, both of a spiritual and temporal nature in time of need. May the rich blessing of the Master be and abide with all, is the prayer of your HENRY KEMP. brother.

SELKIRK, Oat, Feb. 27.

Editors Herald:-Since my last communication I have labored at Toronto, Humber Bay, Hamilton, and this place. Have held a lengthy series of meetings at each of these points except the first. I have not held forth there consecutively since last summer, when I conducted tent services. Have assisted local officers when called upon to do so, and have avoided creating any jealous feeling. Sometimes the best of feelings do not exist where missionaries and the pastoral ministers are required to cooperate. At Humber Bay I did not stay so long continuously, but occupied there every Sunday once or twice since last June until last December. There are some excellent Saints there whom I expect to meet in Zion (if we all live long enough) and in the celestial kingdom providing all hold out faithful including myself. In my stay there I organized a Religio, in regard to which I have heard only good things. I held forth there a month immediately after the district conference held at Toronto in the early part of last October. However, the young people's society was not organized until December 7.

On the day after, I went to Hamilton, where I remained until January 24, when I came to this place. Any of these is quite a stay in comparison with efforts made earlier in my ministry. I used to lose a great deal by passing from place to place too rapidly. I would no more than create an interest and get an audience when I would leave supposing I could go back any time and renew the work. But not so: when I returned to take up the interest in it had partly if not entirely our missionaries are not in the best of order I vanished. This was before I had learned how fickle human nature is. This was caused to quite an extent by a lack of versatility. I was not able to present very many subjects. These themes were repeated from place to place; but a second effort would, it was feared, prompt repetition and reveal a lack in resources; consequently I dreaded it to some extent. It was much easier to go right on, geographically. This lack could have been supplied by spiritual endowment, but things have never come to me except as I have studied and labored to bring them, and then gradually. However I do not, since acquiring a broader range of subjects, do so well in at least some respects as formerly. This is because of having a more biased, creedbound, aristocratic people to deal with. I have frequently longed for the audiences and interests had in Indiana in '93 and '94. I certainly could make more out of them now than then. I am more radical in doctrine for one thing, which increases efficiency as a missionary if it doesn't go too far. I once had too much regard for the feelings of men. I loved them from supposing they are all good. I love them still but from the Christ standpoint. See Romans 5: 6, 8.

My experience in California was a source of improvement in several respects. I learned to be more radical, to love God beyond, and work for him in preference to, anything or anybody else, and to follow up any advantage gained. These thing I saw or began to see while laboring with Bro. F. B. Blair, who had been a business man, and could see and had the disposition to hold on to a good thing. The humanitarian spirit used to prompt me in my labors. I took delight in laboring for humanity, and although I had its eternal interests in view I felt flattered somewhat by personal popularity. I now work for God in the interests of mankind. I toil for the former directly, and the latter indirectly. The last are very liable to not appreciate good offices, and sometimes show the basest of ingratitude in return. The principle here expressed is the same as that stated by Cardinal Wolsey, a servant of King Henry VIII. He said: "Had I but served my God as diligently as I have served my king, he would not have turned me over in my gray hairs."

Once I studied the gospel only, but later began the study of human nature, so as to be able to adapt myself to different circumstances. The latter was found to be the most difficult problem of all, and the more one studies it the more he'll reduce his ignorance to a science. In view of this fact it is not surprising that one gift of the Holy Spirit is "the discerning of spirits." It is much easier for me to understand God than men and women. He is always honest and candid, and will remain still while being analyzed. He has no disposition to elude investigation, but Satan has; and since men generally are more under the influence of the latter than the former, they have, too. Great is the mystery of human nature! It is something like tomorrow. It is frequently spoken of but never reaches us. A little boy who was very anxious about tomorrow and the execution of his plans for that time was told by mother that he could not catch it, so had enjoy today.

"You cannot catch it" applies to many other things. This being true, I shall certainly do well if I understand myself. Consequently, recently my mind has been concentrated upon myself. I have tried to be regulated by the following excellent counsel. "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?" (2 Cor. 13:5.) As a result of this course I have decided that I am, so far as I know, on the average equal to any man. (Please notice emphasis.) There is in me enough for God to use effectively if I will but allow myself to be used. The best that any man can do is to sincerely say to the Lord, "Such as I have give I thee." I do not deny that many are superior to me in some respects, I meet some one every day whose strength on some points I would like to have to reinforce my weakness; but I would not evenly exchange with him if I could. God requires me to improve myself, but does not give me the privilege of bartering myself away. Any man who fails to recognize this principle will fall, and I can easily trace all my mistakes to having trusted somebody or taken some one's advice. God's work represents his grace combined with man's agency, and the church records are in part a history of the rise and fall of men. This is very apparent in reading the new history. Man is uncertain, both in quality and quantity; and my experience has taught me that I can be sure of nothing but my motives. I can not be absolutely certain of what I would do under all definite circumstances. When loiterering along "the cool, sequestered vale of life" I count over my intentions and feel somewhat confident; but when "in the world's broad field of battle, the bivouac of life," I say or do some unwise or erroneous thing which, although little, convinces me "I'll be an angel by and by."

There is nothing so admirable as perfect unity and confidence among God's children. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" (Ps. 133: 1.) "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds." (Col. 3: 9.) "Wherefore laying aside all malice and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as new born babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." (1 Peter 2:1, 2) "In malice be ye children, but in understanding be men." (1 Cor. 14: 20.) What a desirable condition! Most of people, however, lose as they grow to maturity that freedom from malice which characterizes childhood although it is possible to be both without lessening either. If not Paul would not have commanded it. This high standard the writer is endeavoring to reach. Some progress has evidently been made and yet as ever the room for improvement is the largest room in the world. If all could see this their advancement would be much greater. Let all beware of Bunyan's "enchanted ground" where pilgrims are wont to go to sleep. At times I have not manifested as much zeal as I ! Years by two preachers of what they call did in my early youthful days. I was as much a man in disposition when fifteen as I am now, and I am as much a boy now as I was then. As I look back over my past life short though it is, I can entertain but one regret and that is having placed at times too much confidence in man. Notwithstanding this "regret" I have confidence in my fellow soldiers and officers in God's army.

> Yours in bonds, ALMA C. BARMORE.

RIVERVIEW, Ontario, March 1.

Dear Herald:-I am still trying to build up the kingdom of God set up in these last days; and while the Lord has informed us of the means to bring this about as is recorded in Doctrine and Covenants section 4: 1, 2, I hope to be found with this clothing provided by God that I may be able to abide the day of the coming of him who has said his reward is with him. I realize it is the last hour for labors and that I with others have been called to labor for the last time. I wish to be faithful to the charge committed to me. The pathway of duty has fts temptations. and I have need for the shield of faith. It can ward off, and believe it will, all that may come against us. It was what gave victory to all the faithful servants of God, from Adam down; and James tells us it was the means by which they in his day overcame the world. The promised reward is ours to gain, and while one may be appointed in one place, and others in other places, yet we are all laboring for the one great end.

My labors in the new year have been in London, Egement, Younel, North Arthur, and at present, Riverview. All these places are in the London district. It is hard at times to get the people out. I know our chances are not always the best where we have to take a private house or schoolhouse; but seeking for wisdom from God we try to act to the best interest of the people and the church, believing that when we do our part God will do his. I trust for the encouragment of the Saints who read your interesting news, that some are interested in the work. One showed this by being baptized on the 17th, in the river Jordan named from for the man who owned the same. It was a cold day, lots of snow to walk through, and three quarters of a mile from the house where the change was made; but with riding and walking through deep snow the writer, with Elder W. Morrison, of Egement, and others rejoiced to see one more come through the gate into the kingdom of God.

I am pleased to tell you that things look somewhat bright at Riverview. I came up here on February 19, driven up by Priest W. Jordan, father-in-law of the sister baptized. The first week I held meetings in the house of Bro. and Sr. Hurlbert, but thought it wise to try to get the schoolhouse. I prayed about it, and received encouragement from the Spirit of God; so on Saturday, the 23d, Bro. Hurlbert drove me to see the trustees. I got consent, and am now preaching there with good interest.

The schoolhouse has been used since New "Evening Lights," and since I have come they only use it Sunday, 10: 30; and Friday, eight p. m. I occupy Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Sunday, three and seven p. m. I am looking for good results. I hope that before I leave some will be baptized and a branch formed, also a Sunday school.

I may have to stay here some little time because of the other preacher; and while I feel the Spirit of my calling is with me, I take it for granted all is well. I feel my weakness, but God's power. Pray for me that truth may triumph to the glory of God and the good of the work.

Your brother in Christ, R. B. HOWLETT.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 23.

Editor Herald:-As I wrote to you for information of whereabouts of Latter Day Saints. I now write to inform those who answered, that I feel more at home, and thank them for kindly help. I was greatly benefited spiritually by the large number of letters I received bearing testimony of the Spirit and true gospel. It makes me sad to learn that out of more than twenty-five letters not one was from a young man. Whu? I know there are many young men in the church. Can it be that they sleep? Have they no care for their brothers in the wilderness? Are they keeping the Lord's commands? No, they leave it to the angel women to go out to seek the lost.

I found a branch organized here of a few faithful Saints, just a dezen now, although we do not get them all to attend, because some are prevented by their work, while others live a long way out. Still we have a gathering every Sabbath. Our beloved elder, George E. Ward, is away in Arizona on business for a time. He is much missed, and will be welcomed home by his lonely wife and six children, and little band of faithful Saints. When Bro. Ward left he charged me to keep the flock together; and as I do not hold the priesthood I resort to holding meetings at two p. m., in the form of Bible study. February 3 we had a gathering of seven ladies and three gentlemen. Sr. Hastings, who lives thirty-five miles away, was with us and enjoyed the meetings.

February 10 we cut the Bible lesson short and turned the meeting into a real old-fashioned latter-day prayer and song service, and there was not one of that little band who did not receive freely of the Holy Spirit. The meeting lasted over two hours, and as on the Sunday previous, we had one, Sr. Mann, who was almost an entire stranger to the church, having been baptized last October. She had not been permitted to enjoy a Latter Day Saint service since. Sr. Mann received a full measure of the Spirit. She lives out in the forest twelve miles from any Saints, with a daughter who is not a believer in the latter-day dispensation.

Stop a moment and let us reason together, dear Saints. Why do we complain because we are isolated? When we are not able to attend meetings with the Saints, but one among a vast civilization, a surging throng of people, often a half-mile walk will take us to a neighbor, where, if we so choose, we may enjoy a season of talk upon the Bible. Still we become weak and careless. Here is one quite aged sister who has not heard a sermon since she was confirmed five months ago! I feel ashamed of myself for complaining as I did when I see those who have to bear far more. Sr. Mann left us the next day, but went her way rejoicing, for which we thank God.

Bro. John Davis, our traveling elder and missionary, has kindly sent us Bro. Upton, a very promising young man, who has just entered the field and delivered to us his seventh sermon, which was well spoken, with good liberty, and a good selection for the occasion, as we had a stranger to the true gospel who had become interested and come out to hear us. I think she is now still more interested. We feel thankful to Bro. Davis for his kindly thought toward us, and thankful to our Lord and Master for the servants he sends us. We were sorry Bro. Davis could not meet with us before he went home, but hope he will return after General Conference, refreshed and imbued with new zeal; and a stronger spirit. He certainly needs a rest.

Hoping I may continue to labor for the cause, and grow stronger in the faith, better acquainted with the doctrine, and that I may some day labor in the field, and that I may share a part of the prayers of the Saints, I am ever,

A brother in bonds,

J. O. GREGORY.

1925 Seventh Avenue.

NORTH PLYMOUTH, Mass., Feb. 24. Editors Herald:-I thought I would let the church in general know of my labors for the last four or five months. I have a great field of labor in Hanover and Cohasset, and such open-hearted friends it has not been my lot to meet for many a day. It seemed very hard at first to leave the Saints in Plymouth, but the more I see such kind friends, the more I am drawn toward them. They seem nearer to me every time I go among them. May the good Lord bless Bro. Reed and wife for opening their house for meetings. May the good Spirit be with them to comfort, is my earnest prayer. I believe they are interested in this great work. Other precious souls are there. William Wood and his gifted wife and her noble son, whom I baptized, seem to be firm in the work. May the Lord bless them. They seem anxious to see the work prosper. I hope and pray that I shall be faithful to my trust. When I see such noble people, I am afraid I shall not be faithful so that the Lord can work through me for their good. Yet I anticipate that if I sow in tears I shall reap with joy. I was informed there was one lady who was rather opposed to Bro. and Sr. Reed opening their house for meetings, but I believe the first sermon she heard she was convinced there was something in the latter-day work she had not been aware of. May the good Spirit lead her and her husband into the waters of baptism, is my prayer.

Our brother in Hanover is trying to use his influence for the good of the work. There is some prejudice there yet, but we are in hopes that by persistent effort we will break it down by the pure testimony. I hope to see precious souls come into the work in that part of the vineyard. May the good Lord give the increase in his own due time. I love to labor where there are souls thirsting after truth. It seems so good, sometimes, to break the bread of life to them that I rejoice to think the Lord has intrusted me with the true riches of Christ to preach to others; but for all this, I may become a castaway, as says the apostle. I have been comforted so much by those among whom I have labored that I sometimes feel unworthy of the confidence given me. I want to keep close to his word. that his Spirit may guide me into the eternal truths of heaven. Just think of it: We have an unction from the Holy One, by which we may know all things. We have no need that any man should teach us, for this anointing teaches all truth. I am so grateful that we have a church with the spiritual officers and spiritual laws for the perfecting of the Saints and for the work of the ministry that we might go on to perfection, that I want to say, Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth, good will to men!

May we all take heed to the Spirit when it bids us come up higher. May the Lord bless you, Brother Joseph, and the church in general. Your brother in the one faith,

N. C. NICKERSON.

84 Wyndham Crescent, Canton, CARDIFF, Feb. 21.

Editors Herald:-Just a few lines from this part of the Lord's vinevard to let you know how the work is progressing, also with a request for the prayers of the Saints on behalf of Elder A. N. Bishop, missionary to west of England and Wales. I am sorry to say that our brother is very sick, and unless the Lord stretches forth his hand on his behalf and heals him he will not be with us much longer. He has been confined to his bed since December 28, and he is growing weaker and weaker every week. Last evening when visiting him he said he did not think his strength would last more than a month, and he desires the prayers of the Saints on his behalf that if it is the Lord's will he may be healed. He has a desire to live and preach the gospel in these lands as a witness. He has been very faithful since his appointment, preaching wherever opportunity offered. He has done considerable preaching in the open air, which has hastened his sickness, as he has not been well for several months, but would not give up until forced to do so. His physician says he cannot survive. The past year was a year of great trial to many of the Saints, myself included; but I feel thankful to my heavenly Father for grace sufficient to overcome. I am as strong as ever in the faith, and have as great a desire to do my duty as a servant of the meek and lowly Jesus.

There has been considerable pruning of the vine going on of late, and more to be done yet.

Most of the Saints are feeling well in the work and desire to see its progress, while others are careless and indifferent and have lost their first love. Truly the seed falls on different kinds of soil! Some receive the word with gladness at first, but soon fall away if everything does not suit them. Others let trifles choke the word and it withers and dies.

The burden of the work in Cardiff has to be done by just four families. Others are indifferent, but some of your readers will say, Did you not baptize several from the Utah Church into the Cardiff branch about two years ago? We did; but where are they to-day? Echo says, Where are they?

I have hope for the Sunday school and its scholars. This is going to bring the most lasting good to the church. I presume the false doctrines and corrupt practices of Brighamism are of such a nature that there is no room for the pure gospel and its simple truths.

I ask an interest in your faith and prayers. I find it is hard work at times after toiling all the week for that which perisheth to satisfy the natural man and to hold two meetings and Sunday school on Sunday also do visiting. It is quite a busy day, but all I ask is strength to continue faithful and to do what I can for him who has done so much for me. Yours in gospel bonds,

THOMAS GOULD.

FULTON, Ky., March 5.

Dear Herald:—As I have never contributed to your pages, I feel I have neglected duty. I have always felt backward in writing for publication or speaking in prayer meeting. It is wrong to cultivate this habit, but it seems so hard to overcome it.

I have been a member of the church fifteen years, being baptized by Bro. I. N. Roberts when I was eight years old. It seems to me I have accomplished very little for my Master, but I am trying to live right as near as I can. I am stronger in the faith than ever before.

At our conference, held February 9 and 10, Bro. Kelley delivered a sermon that was inspiring to me at least. I had been praying for understanding, and he made it so plain to me! I thank God for it! My mind was in a chaos so long; now I can see clearly.

We are going to have our next reunion at our new church, Oakland, and the Saints around there should strive for the blessings that are promised the children of God. Live that your neighbors may see and know we have something different from other churches! Visit one another! Do not say anything that will hurt anyone. Organize a prayer meeting, and a Sunday school, and go and do your part; there are Saints enough to have an excellent prayer and Sunday school service. Of course some live a great distance, but close enough to attend; and if we never make any sacrifice, what kind of a reward will we have?

Pay your tithes! Some of us are very negligent in this matter! I am anxious to see the Saints rouse themselves and go to work. There will be a great deal more good accomplished by the Saints living right than all the preaching that is done in a year. You know we must "practice what we preach." If we will do this, we will soon be able to say to others, "Come up higher." Saints, young and old, take your church papers and books, and read them, praying for light and knowledge, and do not think what our worldly friends will do or say. Remember we are to come out from the world. Soon you will see a branch that will be a blessing to all.

I have a little boy near four years old, and I desire to raise him up to be an honor to his father and mother, and I want the prayers of all the Saints that I may so live that he will think mother's ways are pure and in harmony with the teachings of our blessed Redeemer.

Ever praying for the advancement of this work, Your sister in bonds,

NOLA MYERS.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 5.

Editors Herald:—Perhaps the following might be of interest to you, which I have translated from a Danish paper. It suggests two thoughts to my mind: one is that the world has no objection to receiving something additional to the Bible, just so it does not come through Joseph Smith. The other is, the thought seems to have dawned upon their minds that the canon of scripture is not complete, which they have virtually acknowledged in this clipping. Here it is:—

"The two untiring and educated Englishmen, Bernard P. Grenfell and Arthur S. Hunt, whose names are connected with all-important discoveries in later years, formulated plans a year ago this winter for excavations in Fayum, supported by an American university.

"Fayum is located on the left shore of the Nile, south of Cairo, and is filled with burial places, where the embalmed mummies are wrapped in written rolls of papyrus.

"Grenfell and Hunt commenced excavation December 3, 1899, with forty workmen; but this force was soon increased to one hundred forty, and the work continued all of last winter. The result exceeded all expectation. They stayed in the vicinity of Urum el Baragat, three miles south of the town Tutun, whose ancient name is now determined to be Teptunis. Those ruins have been saved by Egyptian searchers for papyrus, because all seemed to belong to the time of the Mohammedans, hence had no value for explorers of antiquities, who search for Egyptian and Grecian remnants.

"Grenfell and Hunt first struck the ruins of a temple for the crocodile-god, Sebek, and surrounding it were the remnants of the dwellings of the priests in whose cellars were found many rolls of papyrus,—in all about two hundred all covered with Greek inscriptions from the three first centuries after Christ.

"In January, 1900, a discovery of a burial place was made south of the town. Here lay about fifty mummies wrapped in papyrus, all well preserved. This place belonged to the time of Ptolemaus between the years 323 and 30 B. C.

"The first and most surprising discovery was made when they discovered a burial place for crocodiles. Here lay several thousand corpses of these horrid looking animals. These corpses are from four yards long down to very small of the young ones, all well preserved. What makes the discovery of great value for the learned in antiquities is the method by which they are preserved.

"The animals are wrapped in beautiful, long rolls of papyrus, all covered with Greek inscriptions. There are pieces which in size exceed all that have hitherto been found. The eggs of the holy animals are also preserved. On the outside one mummy looks like another; but when opening some of the thick rolls of papyrus, nothing is found other than crocodile-eggs. A portion of the rolls are destroyed by dampness, and have decayed; but the happy finders assure us that the number of pieces of Greek papyrus from the last three centuries before Christ have doubled since discovering the burial places of the crocodiles.

"The discovered rolls of papyrus have been sent to Oxford to be read and translated. Naturally some time will elapse before it will be known what they contain. Much of the Greek literature has been lost, as also a couple of letters of the apostles. Will we here regain some of that which lost?"

In gospel bonds,

S. K. SORENSEN.

HARBOR BEACH, Mich., March 3.

Editors Herald:-I have been a HERALD reader for the past fourteen years, and have read many letters and articles that contained instruction and food for thought, and have been taught many things concerning this great latter-day work. Hence I venture a few lines with the hope that they will benefit some of my brethren and sisters. In the near past we have been having some letters as to where the ministry should labor, some claiming they labor too much in the branches and among the Saints, and others that not enough labor is bestowed on the branches. In my experience in Michigan I have come to the conclusion that the latter class is the nearest right. There are many scattered Saints here, and many of the branches are only partially organized so that for months together we never see a traveling elder nor hear a sermon. What is the result? The Saints do not advance as they should because they are not sufficiently taught. What good, thoughtful farmer would think of setting out fruit trees and expect them to grow and become thrifty, fruit-bearing trees unless taken care of? Or, again, would this same man turn his sheep into the pasture in the spring and leave them there all summer without ever seeing them and expect them all in a healthy condition? I think not; but he will see them often, give them salt when they need it, see they have proper food, and then if he discovers some are not doing as well as they ought he gives them special care until he sees they are making proper development.

Jesus told Peter to feed the sheep and lambs; so may we be fed! Many times in the past when discouraged and downcast we have been cheered and comforted by the visit and preaching of some of the brethren who would teach us in our homes. It revives us and gives us renewed courage and vigor to struggle on.

Just two weeks ago Bro. A. Barr, our district president, was here. He gave us two sermons and some good fireside preaching that helped us out again. How I wish he would come oftener and stay longer! Brethren, you may not preach so many sermons if you remain in the branches, but it seems to me it would be a good plan to visit the Saints oftener, teach them at their homes, and get better acquainted with them.

In many places now schoolhouses are being closed against us, and it seems as if the people are so much taken up with the pleasures of the world and seeking for worldly riches and honor that they have no time to seek their own souls' salvation.

Ever looking for the redemption of Zion, Your brother,

THOMAS RAWSON.

BLACKFOOT, Idaho, March 6.

Editors Herald:-It is nearing conference time again, and many of the Saints will gather at Independence, to worship God in spirit and in truth, renewing their covenant with him and learning more of his divine law. How I wish I could be with them! but circumstances forbid; nevertheless I pray God's blessings to rest upon all present, and also the scattered ones, that we may each share a portion of his peace and joy. Especially I pray the Lord to bless Bro. Joseph at this coming conference that if it is his will we may receive more instructions pertaining to the gathering of his people to Zion, for I feel that it is time for the Saints to gather to the appointed place. O how happy the day when we can praise God with one voice in the place he has appointed! My heart leaps forth with joy as I think of the peace and happiness of that day, but sinks with sadness as I realize we are not enjoying that blessing yet. I am hopeful of a brighter day when the Saints can live in this peace and joy of our Lord, not only in thought, but in reality, -when Zion shall be cleansed and the pure in heart shall see God as did the great city of Enoch. I try to live aright, but feel my weakness. How true the saying of the apostle, That I would do, I do not; and that I would not do, that I do. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that I may be faithful, and if it be the Lord's will that I may be of some service to him in this great latter-day work. I have some good testimonies to the truth and divinity of this great work, for which I am thankful to God, and his divine care and love have been manifested to me in many ways, and I feel to praise and glorify God all the day long.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and her people, Your sister in Christ,

FRANCES HATON.

SEDALIA, Ky., Feb. 24.

Editor Herald:—I am always glad to read the SAINTS' HERALD. Conference of Kentucky and Tennessee district convened at Foundry Hill branch, February 9, 10, and had a good attendance of outsiders, considering the weather. Had a very good conference, but very few Saints were in attendance considering the number in the district. I think the Saints in this district are not doing their duty. They seem to have very little interest in the work of the Lord. When meeting time comes they begin to fix up some excuse why they cannot go. At least, I suppose that is the way they do, for when I ask them why, they say it was too bad, or too cold, or the roads too muddy or too dusty; "I was not right well," and several other excuses. If they want to go to town or some other place to partake of the pleasures of this world, it may be cold or hot, roads muddy or dusty, still they go to town. When it comes to paying tithing, but few pay at all, and very few who do, pay all they ought. Some of those who do not pay tithing will say, "I must pay my tithing. I am going to pay my tithing sometime." What would you think of a man who owed you ten dollars, who every now and then would say, "I must pay you, and I am going to pay you sometime"? I think it as much a duty to pay tithing as it is to be baptized for remission of sins. The Lord says if we keep his commandments he will bless us.

I live three fourths of a mile from church. My father's family and mine are the only families living nearer than seven or eight miles from the church. We have meeting once a month. The outsiders will not, as a rule, come out to hear the gospel preached.

Your brother in Christ,

W. C. COOK.

Original Poetry.

SUPPLICATION.

I would love thee, God the Father, Thou my refuge and my king; O may I in time of trouble All my trials to thee bring!

O, forgive my erring spirit,
I am weak, as thou dost know;
O, be then my strength in weakness!
Teach me, Lord, thy will to do.

Not myself alone, O Father,
There are others here today
Who would gladly share the blessing;
Help them, Father, on the way.

Lord, we know our days are numbered, All our hopes on thee we cast; O, let thy blessings rest upon us, That we be chosen with the blest.

T. HAMILTON.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Talk faith. The world is better off without Your uttered ignorance and morbid doubt. If you have faith in God, or man, or self, Say so; if not, push back upon the shelf Of silence all your thoughts, till faith shall come; No one will grieve because your lips are damb."

OUR MOUNTAIN HOME.

I remember one cold frosty morning,
As the first golden rays of the sun
Fell over our snow covered valley,
How grandly I thought all things done.

The tree tops and bushes just glistened, Like silver and crystal so bright; The artist, Jack Frost, had been with us, Bringing wonderful visions to light.

To make the scene lifelike and perfect, Some magpies fly merrily by, And light on the tree tops and bushes, Where the crystals so sparkingly lie.

Our home was quite distant and lonely,
The neighbors were far, far away;
But the scene on that cold, frosty morning,
Made me happy for many a day. J. H.
January 14, 1901.

ANAHEIM, Cal.

Mrs. M. Walker, Dear Sister:—If it is not out of place, I would like to write just a short piece to the Home Column. I have thought so many times I would love to cast in my mite with the mothers in Zion, but for fear of intruding I have withheld and kept my pen still. Not so my busy mind and brain. Oh, I have such a longing to help in some way to roll on this great latter-day work. I would love to say a word to help to encourage some poor downcast soul not to give up the battle, for the promise is only for those who hold out faithful to the end.

One of the greatest trials of my life is, and has been, to have my own dear companion safe in the fold of Christ. It has been thirteen years since we were married, and I have held him up before the Lord in prayer these many years, and it has not seemed to please God as yet to answer my prayers. Not many days since I was talking with a good Saint, and he said to me, "Well, sister, don't give it up yet; send in a request to the Prayer Union." So now I request you to put it before the sisters to pray for him, if it is the will of the good Lord, in some way to show him where he is wrong in not obeying the gospel of our dear Lord and Savior. He knows and says the doctrine is right and true, but in some way has not got the courage to obey. Oh, it seems so strange to me when they know a thing is right and then will not do it! It was one of the greatest pleasures of my life to accept and obey the gospel of Christ; and it is my greatest desire to try and help some one else to see the good way, and accept and walk in the light. Yes, the true light of God.

Oh, what a glorious thing it is for the Lord to reveal his will to mortal man! What great pleasure it gives a true child of God to know and do his blessed will. I was very much interested in the article that the sister wrote on sanctification. It is just what I have been looking and praying for a long time. I know in my very being that there will never be any Zion built until God has sanctified people to live there. What would be the use of the Saints going to the land of Zion and not be holy, which means sanctified and nothing else? I do not think for a moment that the Saints could live together in peace unless they were sanctified. Turn now with me to 1 John 3: 1-10, and see what it says about a man committing sin, and what it says about a saint sinning: "Whosoever abideth in him [Christ] sinneth not; whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him." If that is the case, we that call ourselves Saints must quit sinning and get to living holy and sanctified lives, or not claim to be a true child of God. In the seventh verse he calls us "little children" and says, "Let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he [Christ] is righteous." And he further says, "He that continueth in sin is of the devil." Pretty plain language. I cannot see how we are going to get around this. We all know that Christ did not sin, and he is our pattern, and if we expect to see him as he is, we must be sanctified.

Now, dear Saints, let each one of us examine and see if there is one spark of sin left in us. If there is, it is very liable to be seen blazing sometime, sooner or later. We have got to be so dead to sin that it has no control over us at all; and then we will be fit to live in Zion. Hoping to hear more about sanctification, I close my short chat. I am as ever, Your sister,

M. C. HANNAH.

IF YOU CANNOT HAVE-GIVE.

"Mother, we cannot afford to take a vacation, but what do you think of our affording to give a vacation?" Sweet-faced Mrs. Irwin looked up into her mother's face and said, as they sat in their cozy sitting room one afternoon early in June.

"Why, dear, what do you mean?

"I mean, mother, that Fred's business will not warrant our usual summer outing. And now that I have gotten over the disappointment of it, my brain has been very busy with some other thoughts that seem to be creeping in to take the place of the disappointed ones. I feel there may be some worthy young woman, or even two young women, who would be delighted to come to our home for a few days or a week."

Mr. and Mrs. Irwin had a pleasant home twelve miles out from Chicago. Mrs. Irwin was one of the busy women of this suburb, active in church and society work. For the past year she had done her own housework, as the financial depression had sadly affected Mr. Irwin's income, and she felt more than ever the need of the summer rest.

But when her husband told her that they would have to forego that pleasure her active mind was not long depressed.

"I think," she said to her mother, "I will go and see Mr. Pratt; he may know of some one, or be able to tell me to whom I shall go to find just the young women to whom I may give this pleasure."

Mr. Pratt was the rector of the little vineclad church to which most of the worthy residents of this little suburb wended their way every Sabbath morning, and devoutly turning their faces to the east fervently said, "Incline our hearts to keep this land."

Mrs. Irwin's call upon Mr. Pratt resulted in her learning that the last consultation he had with the Bishop was upon this very subject—the crying need of refined homes being opened to the poor working girls of the city, where they might go as guests and be allowed to come in touch with the peace, quiet, and healthfulness of country life, and save the weekly pittance that was so necessary to their

Mrs. Irwin's heart was light and consequently her feet also, as she went home with a promise from Mr. Pratt that he would see she had the desired guests the second week in July.

Through the zeal of Mr. Pratt, the Bishop, and another rector, Mrs. Irwin's guests had been secured,—two west side factory girls. She had sent them a polite little note, their response had come, and she had called at the factory to see them after the manner of the true woman meeting sister souls. No royal guests could have greater preparations made for their arrival.

Today is a busy day, for tomorrow they come, and Mrs. Irwin is busy with light bread, sweet rolls, and some dainty sponge cakes, for these are truly guests and not pensioners upon her bounty at arm's length, and she is using a little forethought and management.

The day has arrived; the spare chamber has been thrown open, that the glorious sunlight and air may fill it full. There are jars of flowers on dresser and table from the woods near by. The hammocks are hung in the shadiest place, the table is spread in the daintiest way.

The guests are come, they feel the large heart, the warm hospitality, and their timidity and embarrassment are flown, taken on the wings of this country air.

Mrs. Irwin reads to them the "Princess" as they swing lazily in their hammocks, and that they may the more appreciate the worth of true men, she reads to them "Adam Bede." She does not know what freshness of thought and newness of life she brings into the hearts of these two girls, who are pent up in meager homes, whose lives are a round of toil.

After five days of this grand hospitality, they return to their homes and work, better and happier that one woman has given them of herself, her home and her heart, and Mrs. Irwin says to her friends, "It's the happiest vacation I ever spent."—Union Signal.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

Some day,

When others braid your thick brown hair, And drape your form in silk and lace, When others call you "dear" and "fair,"

And hold your hands and kiss your face, You'll not forget that far above All others is a mother's love.

Some day,

When you must feel love's heavy loss,
You will remember other years,
When I, too, bent beneath the cross,
And mix my memory with your tears,
In such dark hours be not afraid,
Within their shadows I have prayed.

Some day,

At longest it cannot be long,
I shall with glad impatience wait,
Amid the glory and the song,

For you before the Golden Gate, After earth's parting and earth's pain Never to part! never again!—Selected.

NOTICE.

Secretaries of Daughters of Zion local societies are hereby requested to send to me as soon as possible after reading this notice, a full list of members, also stating changes in membership, and giving names of those lost and gained since last report. Address: Mrs. Callie B. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

CALLIE B. STEBBINS, Recording Secretary.

_____

PRAYER UNION.
SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Bell Ross Farrar, of Burlington, Iowa, asks the prayers of the Saints in her behalf, having been very sick for a long time.

Sr. M.V. Emmons, of Carroll, Montana, asks your faith and prayers in behalf of Mr. J. H. Prince, of Houghton, Michigan, that it may please God to heal him and prolong his life to his family, who sorely need him.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

INCENTIVES.

It is ever an interesting question to the teacher, and one which every teacher should consider with great care, "How can I excite among my pupils an interest in the Sunday school work?" The intelligent teacher feels that this is

THE GREAT QUESTION.

Therefore he turns his attention, with all earnestness, to the motives he may present, and the methods he may use to awaken and keep alive the interest of the school. Then it is necessary that the interest awakened should be an abiding one, not only for one day, but as long as one continues in the work.

The teacher will find, in a greater or less degree, in the mind of every child,

THE PRINCIPLE OF EMULATION.

This principle may be safely strengthened by being called into exercise by the teacher, provided that the eminence is sought from a desire to be useful, and not from a desire of self-glorification. If emulation means a desire for improvement, progress, growth, inciting to imitate others, or to equal, or even to excel them, without the desire of depressing others, it is a worthy principle to be appealed to. If, on the other hand, it means a desire to surpass others, to make a show or gain applause, then, without doubt, it is an an unworthy and unholy principle, and should never be encouraged by the teacher.

We should let nothing be done through

STRIFE OR VAIN GLORY,

but in lowliness of mind, let each esteem others better than himself. The more true Christianity prevails in the world, the less of that spirit which rejoices at another's mistakes; hence emulation may be recognized or renounced as an incentive, according to the signification given to the term.

For some time it has been the custom of teachers to offer some

PRIZE

as an incentive to excite interest in the school, a prize of pecuniary value, or perhaps

Every teacher is called upon to inquire whether such an incentive is a proper thing to be used in the school. Will the good expected from such an incentive counterbalance the evils that spring from that practice? Will the whole school be benefited by such a measure, and will this be a permanent or a temporary good? These are questions which press for an honest answer, and which every faithful teacher should carefully consider.

OBJECTIONS TO THE USE OF PRIZES are:

- 1. It teaches the child to undervalue the reward of a good conscience, and a love of learning for its own sake. In studying, he thinks of the prize and studies to recite well. He thinks not of duty or of future good, the prize outshines all.
- 2. The prize causes a spirit of rivalry among pupils. Such is human nature, and such it will ever be. It is the part of wisdom, then, to omit such a practice and avoid results.
- 3. It only stimulates a few, while the many become indifferent. In a short time it is obvious to all, who the two or three are that will be awarded the prize. The remainder, knowing what their fate will be, lose all interest in the work, and the good that could have been accomplished is not obtained.
- 4. There is difficulty in awarding a prize so as to do justice to all. Many times, when the excellence of a pupil's work is compared with others, some of the particulars are likely to be overlooked; therefore it is very difficult to award the prize justly,

Thus I have given my reasons why I would not use prizes as an incentive in the school. As to the use of when they are made so numerous that every one who is deserving may receive one, and when their distribution is not based on talent and success, but good intentions, and good work, I believe it is alright to give them, as expressions of the teacher's interest in the children and the approval of their well-doing. It is possible to produce such a feeling that the approving conscience of the child and the smile of the teacher shall be the richest of all rewards. These come without money or price, and may be freely and safely bestowed.

REWARDS

THE PROPER INCENTIVES to good work are

- 1. The love of approbation. The love of approbation may be appealed to by the teacher. He does not need to praise the child, a smile is sufficient. It is a reward moreover which "is twice blest; it blesseth him who gives and him who takes."
- 2. A desire to advance. The teacher may appeal to this desire, may inspire the child to come up higher, and obtain that which he has started out for.
- 3. A desire to be useful. Every teacher should impress upon the child, the object of being placed on earth was that he might be of some use to the world. "No man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself."

4. A desire to do right. This is the highest and holiest of all the motives of human nature. In the fullest sense it constitutes the principle of a religious character. Every teacher should cultivate in the child a regard for this principle, that he may judge right from wrong, and accomplish the work that God has designed for him to do.

MISS NELLIE HALL.

PERSIA, Iowa. For the Galland's Grove district convention.

NAUVOO.

District Sunday school association was called to order by usual opening exercises and address. R. C. McKiernan was elected secretary pro tem. The chair was empowered to appoint a credential committee. Secretary's report was read and found correct, also treasurer's report. The superintendent, in a brief report, stated that the schools visited were found in good condition. A motion obtained to defray the superintendent's expense of $5.94, for visiting schools. Two reports of Montrose school, one of previous four months, and the last one was referred back for correction, also the Rock Creek report. The report of Fort Madison school was accepted. The report of credential committee and the corrected report of Rock Creek school were received. elected: George Lambert, superintendent; Daniel Tripp, assistant; Marjorie Wright, secretary; and Lottie Tripp, treasurer. On account of the sisters wishing to decorate the church for the evening services, the afternoon services were postponed. In the evening a very nice literary program was rendered. The chair appointed the following on entertainment committee for the June convention at Burlington: Bro D. Tripp, Lottie Tripp, Lulu Giesch, Sr. Wooding, and Sr. Stevenson. General Conference delegates: Arthur Fletcher, William Donelson, John Head, George Lambert, and James McKiernan. Those present are empowered to cast a full vote of district. Meeting adjourned to meet at same place, one day previous to next district conference, at 10:30.

EASTERN IOWA.

Convention met at Amber, February 16. J. R. Sutton superintendent, in charge; Florence Green, secretary. Reports were received from Zion's Hope of Fulton, and Green Valley schools. Treasurers reported $3.11 on hand. Election of officers: Lizzie Haller, superintendent; Rouben Green, assistant; Florence Green, secretary; John Weir, Weir, Delegates to General Convention: treasurer. Will E La Rue, L. E. Hills, and T. J. Sheldon. Next convention to be held prior to the time and at same place as our next confer-

Conference Minutes.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.

Conference convened with Foundry Hill branch, February 9. P. B. Seaton president; by vote T. C. Kelley was chosen to preside. Remarks by Bro. Kelley, urging promptness. Branch reports: Sedalia 100. Foundry Hill 53, Haley's Creek 44, Eagle 33. High Hill not reporting. Ministry reporting: J. H. Adair, J. H. Scott, T. C. Kelley, P. B. Seaton, E. P. Cook, W. J. Seaton, G. M. Voss, and W. C. Haws. Bishop's agent's report read and accepted. P. B. Seaton, reflected president; A. J. Myers reflected secretary. Preaching by S. Reed, T. C. Kelley, and E.

P. Cook. Sacrament and prayer service conducted by P. B. Seaton and S. Reed. Delegates to General Conference: C. L. Snow, T. C. Kelley, Samuel Roberts, and J. R Mc-Clain. Delegates instructed to vote against proposed amendment to Book of Rules. Two days' meetings to be held as follows: Eagle Creek, by E. P. Cook and J. H. Adair; High Hill, by P. B. Seaton and C. Haws; Foundry Hill, by D. W. Cook and A. S. Spow; Oakland, by E. P. Cook and W. H. Griffin; New Bethel, by P. B. Seaton and W. H. Griffin; Haley's Creek and Morris Chapel, by S. Reed, J. H. Scott, and Dan Snow. Moved that we ask the brethren appointed to report success of meetings held as per appointment. Adjourned to Eagle Creek, July 27.

NORTHEAST MISSOURI.

Conference convened at Bevier, February Conference convened at Bevier, February 9. Joseph A. Tanner in the chair, assisted by I. N. White, George A. Tryon secretary, D. L. Morgan assistant. Branches reporting: Bevier 214, Higbee 94, Pollock 31, and Salt River 31. Ministerial reports were read from High Priest, J. A. Tanner; Elders W. E. Summerfield, J. T. Petre, F. J. Chatburn, F. T. Mussell, R. B. Jones, W. Chapman, F. Palfrey, W. Vaughn, and J. T. Williams; Priests D. L. Morgan, W. Kelso, Robert Grieve, Robert Thrutchley, and F. M. Burch; Teachers A. G. Young, E. Petre, and H. Teachers A. G. Young, E. E. Petre, and H. W. Gipson. Bishop's agent, J. T. Williams, reported: Received since last conference #6622 51; on hand last report $16 55: disburse-ments $526 39; due church $112 67. Treas-urer's report: Balance last report $4 48; receipts $13 76; expenditures $12.85; balance receipts $13 76; expenditures $12.85; balance $5 39. Bills of expense were allowed of president $3 40, and of secretary $4 67. Delegates to General Conference: F. T. Mussell, F. J. Chatburn, J. A. Tanner, D. L. Morgan, Sr. Nydia Thomas, J. T. Williams, Sr. Annie Williams, W. Summerfield, George A. Tryon, Srs. Louise Palfrey, Edith Palfrey, I. N. White, Sr. Ellen Davis, W. Vaughn, and Sr. Carrie Richards. Chairman of tent fund committee, F. Palfrey, reported. Reports were referred to a comported. Reports were referred to a com-After consideration of their report, the report was adopted as follows:

To conference assembled at Bevier: — I wish to say as chairman of the tent fund that to date there has been donated cash in hand. $64 60. Nothing has been received since last conference from either of the other committeemen, and the Pollock brother has failed to report. Some of the Saints have shown a very earnest desire to help this work by their cash assistance, while others do not seem to appreciate the importance of it as they should, I am sorry to say. I am thankful to some who have rendered assistance in places I could not well reach, and I feel to say, as I thought right at the start, that this district can do nothing better to get the gos-pel before the people than to fit out a tent. Hence, I advise that we go on in gathering our means together, that we may be able, so far as finance is concerned, to put the tent into the gospel field this coming summer. but I do not advise making any purchase until we see what General Conference will do for us in giving us men that will handle the tent. I urge, however, that we all take this tent

we can in getting ourselves ready to be able to make a purchase on short notice. I further advise, fearing a failure to be ready, that this conference make an order for the committee to borrow the money that may be lacking to buy and equip the tent, and that the same shall be a debt on the district to be matter into serious consideration, and do all paid as soon as possible with interest. I would further suggest that this conference make a statement as to what it thinks best as to size of tent and equipage. opinion is that some cheap means should be provided for seating the tent, and that a plain portable platform be provided, and also lamps, all to be plain and as cheap as possible to answer the purpose, and be serviceable. If the matter be left to me, I promise to do the best I can in the whole consideration, so that there shall be no just cause for complaint.

And now, dear Saints, let me ask you not to forget this matter when the conference is over, but talk it among yourselves at your homes and at your meetings, resolving to do the best you can, and let us all pray our heavenly Father to help us that we, as his instruments, may have it recorded to our credit on his books at the judgment day that we did our best in getting his gospel before our fellow creatures, and all can help in this matter as well as the preacher.

Yours most truly and for the onward march of the gospel, F. PALFRY.
Time and place of next conference was left in the hands of district president.

KEWANEE.

Conference convened at Kewanee, Illinois, Conference convened at Kewanee, Illinois, February 9. Don C. Smith in the chair. Branches reporting: Kewanee, Rock Island, Joy, Millersburg, Buffalo Prairie, White Eagle, Canton, Dahinda, and Peoria. A committee of three were appointed to confer with the several branches of Kewanee district and reunion committee of Eastern Iowa district, looking to a joint reunion of these districts during the summer, those appointed being Alma Whitehouse, chairman, Kewanee, Illinois; J. B. Johnson, Rock Island; and J. W. Terry, Joy, Illinois. A district treasurer was elected; the branches of the district will please take notice. After other routine business the conference proceeded to elect officers: President, Clarance J. Clark, 1923 Main street, Peoria, Illinois; vice president, J. S. Patterson, 230 North Walnut street, Kewanee, Illinois; Secretaries, Clara John-son, Rock Island, and James Norris 230 North Walnut street, Kewanee, Illinois, treasurer. Delegates to General Conference were elected. Preaching by W. E. LaRue, J. S. Roth, and E. K. Evans. Adjourned to meet at Millers-burg, Illinois, the second Saturday and Sunday in June.

PITTSBURG.

Conference convened at Wheeling, West Virginia, March 2; Elders G. T. Griffiths and J. F. McDowell presiding, E. E. Omohundro and F. McDowell presiding, E. E. Omohundro and E. H. Thomas secretaries. Branch reports: Pittsburg 161, Wheeling 158, Fayette City 68, Fairview 50, Beaver Falls 15, Banning, no report; total membership of district 475. Ministry reporting: J. F. McDowell, F. G. Pitt, L. D. Ullom baptized 1, O. J. Tary baptized 1, W. H. Forbes baptized 1, C. E. Miller, Joseph Maxon, Jacob Reese. James Craig, Robert Perrie, and Rees Jenkins; Priests Louis A. Serig. W. W. Hodge, J. F. A. Smith, Samuel H. Gaskill, T. D. Gaskill, W. E. Rush baptized 6, and E. H. Thomas; Teachers H. L. Benner, Jasper Dobbs, T. S. Hadfield, and A. M. Thomas; Deacons Joseph Ebeling and E. E. Omohundro. Bro. F. G. Ebeling and E. E. Omohundro. Bro. F. G. Pitt was unanimously chosen president of the district, with Bro. James Craig as assothe district, with Bro. James Craig as associate president. The secretary and Bishop's agent, L D. Ullom, were sustained. Delegates to General Conference: G. T. Griffiths, J. F. McDowell, F. G. Pitt, James Craig, L. D. Ullom, F. J. Ebeling, Thomas Hougas, Mollie Brewster, David Lewis, Nancie Smith, and F. G. Pitt, Bosolved that we beroby and F. G. Pitt. Resolved that we hereby petition the First Presidency of the church to assign Gomer T. Griffiths to this mission, if wisdom should so direct. Resolved that this conference appoint a committee to confer and cooperate with the officials of Kirtland district in their endeavors to have the General Conference held at Kirtland, Ohio, in the year 1902. F. G. Pitt, James Craig, and O. J. Tary, were appointed. Committee to audit Bishop's agents report found the same incomplete, and recommended the following resolution, which was adopted and committee discharged: Resolved that the Bishop's agent's report thirty days previous to the convening of conference, and that the district president be authorized to appoint a committee to audit the books prior to convening of conference. O. L. Martin, O. J. Tary, and Louis Serig were so appointed. A vote of thanks was given Bro. McDowell for his services as president of the district. Social service and sacrament on Sunday after-noon. Preaching by Elders Thomas Hougas and F. G. Pitt. The conference was held in conjunction with the Sunday school convenconjunction with the Sunuay school state tion. The Spirit of God met with us; a joyful and profitable session resulted. The young son of Bro. O. I. Martin was baptized during conference, also a young son of Bro. J. F. A. Smith. A vote of thanks was tendered the Wheeling Saints for their kind hospitality. Adjourned to Fayette City, Pennsylvania, at the call of district presi-

MASSACHUSETTS.

Conference convened February 23, at Providence, Rhode Island; chairmen, F. O. Coombs, F. M. Sheehy and G. H. Gates; clerks M. C. Fisher and W. A. Sinclair. Short talks by Fisher and W. A. Sinciair. Short talks by F. O. Coombs and F. M. Sheehy. Branches reporting: Boston 187, North Plymouth 37, Brockton 22, New Bedford 20, Cranston 37, Providence 220, Dennisport 62, Plainville 103, Little Compton 14, Fall River 122 Ministerial reports: W. H. Kelley, George Burnham, F. O. Coombs, William Bradbury, C. H. Gates, D. T. Shaw, M. H. Bend, Lehn G. H. Gates, D. T. Shaw, M. H. Bond, John Marchington, Richard Bullard, N. R. Nickerson. Audited report of district treasurer, R. Bullard: Balance $71.97; collections $10.12; total $82.09; expenses $15; balance on hand $67 09. Bishop Bullard's audited report: Balance due December 31, 1899. $539 75; receipts for 1900 $2,356 37; total $2,896.12; expenses $2,734 34; balance on hand December 31, 1900, $161.78 Communication from W. H. Kelley regarding appeal of C. L. Potts from decision of Fall River branch court and district conference, in which their decision was sustained. Report adopted by conference. Election of officers: District president, F. O. Coombs; vice president, G. H. Gates; clerks, M. C. Fisher and W. A. Sinclair; treasurer, M. C. Fisher. Next place of meeting left to the call of the district presidency, and to be published one month in advance. Delegates to General Conference appointed. Hereafter auditing committee must audit accounts of Bishop and district treasurer in advance, and have their report read at same conference at which said accounts are presented. District clerk authorized to purchase new record books, and have old ones copied into new forms; drawing on district treasurer for funds. Only missiona-ries, district officers, and presidents of branches to be required to report in writing to district conferences, regarding priesthood work. R. Bullard, F. P. Busiel, and M. C. Fisher instructed to purchase district tent. General and local authorities sustained. Providence Saints given vote of thanks for entertainment during conference.

EASTERN MAINE.

Conference met at Jonesport, December 1. Elder W. W. Blanchard chosen to preside, Nettie Leighton secretary. Olive and Indian River branches reported. Elders reporting: W. W. Blanchard, H. J. Davison, E. C. Foss, U. M. Kelley, J. N. Ames, and J. S. Walker; Priests L. A. Woodward and F. P. Smith. Bishop's agent's audited report: Due church $2.24; received $90.64; paid out $68.20; due church $22.44. Agent's report of tract fund read and accepted. Elders W. W. Blanchard and J. N. Ames delegates to General Conference. J. N. Ames chosen district president and U. M. Kelley assistant. Nettie Leighton sustained as clerk. A vote of thanks was extended to U. M. Kelley for past service. Next conference to meet in June; place to be named by district president. Prayer meeting on Sunday morning. Preaching by Elders W. W. Blanchard, U. M. Kelley, E. C. Foss, and J. N. Ames.

Miscellaneous Department.

QUORUM OF APOSTLES.

CHANGE OF TIME AND PLACE.

The time and place for the convening of the Quorum of the Twelve is hereby changed from the 20th of March, Lamoni, Iowa (as announced in last HERALD issue), to the 27th of March, Independence, Missouri. Explanation will be given for making this change when the quorum meets. Communications intended for the quorum may be sent to Wm. H. Kelley, Independence, Missouri, in care of Elders Joseph Luff or I. N. White. Trusting that all may see the wisdom in effecting this change in due time,

WM H. KELLEY,

President of the Quorum of Twelve.

BISHOPRIC OF GALLAND'S GROVE.

To the Saints of Galland's Grove district. Greeting:-We your brethren and servants of the Bishopric in and for the above-named district, met at Deloit, Iowa, February 13 and 14, 1901, in the Saints' church, holding four sessions.

After opening exercises, the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered, the Holy Spirit bearing witness that our meetings would result in good. With prayerful hearts, with studious minds, and with thanksgiving to God we continued to study the law and usages of the church bearing upon our duties as a quorum, with profit.

We presented a short report of our sessions to the district conference, which convened at Deloit, the same week. Decisions reached affecting branch Bishop's agents will be given in due time. With increased confidence in our brethren and sisters, in the final triumph of the great latter-day work, and in our blessed Lord and Master, we subscribe ourselves,

Your servants for the Christ's sake, CHARLES J. HUNT, Bishop.
DAVID BREWSTER, Counselor. JAMES O. SHELDON, Counselor.

FOURTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Dear brethren, please send brief reports for the closing conference year to our secretary, J. W. Gilbert, at Independence, Jackson county, Missouri. A. BARR, Pres. of Quorum.

THE FIRST SEVENTY.

The secretary has mailed, to each of you, blanks for reporting to both the General Conference and the quorum. Should any of you fail to receive them, please notify the Secretary, R. S. Salyards, Lamoni, Iowa, giving your full address, and he will send you others. It is desirable that the reports be sent in at your earliest convenience. You will notice that the blanks call for a report of the labor done up to and including February 28, and the report is to close with that date. will be observed that the blanks are alike, except that the quorum blank has a ruled space for remarks. Don't forget the Church Historian if you know of any items of inter-DUNCAN CAMPBELL,

President First Seventy.
PLEASANTON, IOWA, March 7.

PASTORAL.

Bro. W. M. Rumel reported for labor a few weeks ago, and will, for the time being, labor under the direction of Bro. L. Gamet, president of the Central Nebraska district. This notice should have appeared two or three weeks ago. It was an unintentional oversight on my part.

JAMES CAFFALL.

REDUCED RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE. CENTRAL PASSENGER ASSOCIATION.

The Central Passenger Association has also granted the same reduced rate of one and one third fare round trip, certificate plan, to the General Conference and Conventions, Independence, Missouri, and on the same general terms; namely: that going tickets must be purchased at full fare, a certificate to be obtained with every ticket purchased and corresponding therewith. How-ever, reduction will not be granted by this Association on tickets costing less than seventy-five cents. Provided further, that going tickets in this Association must be purchased from April 2-7, not later.

Certificates are not transferable. Do not forget that tickets must be handed promptly to the Church Secretary on arrival; also that all holders of certificates must be present at General Conference at Independence, Missouri, on April 9 or 10, the two days only on which certificates will be filled out and re-turned by the joint agent of the Western Association.

The territory of the Central Association is bounded on the East by Pittsburg, Salamanca, Buffalo, and Toronto; on the north by the line of and including points on the Grand Trunk Railway, from Toronto to Port Huron, thence via Lakes Euron and Michigan to Chicago; on the west by Peoria, Keokuk, Quincy, Hannibal, St. Louis, and Cairo; and on the south by the Ohio river, but including points on either side of that river.

The following lines of road are included: Ann Arbor R. R., B. & O. R. R., B. & O. S. W. R. R., C. & O. Ry., C. & E. I. R. R., Chicago & Erie and Erie R. R., C. I. & L. Ry., C. & M. V. R. R., Cincinnati Northern R. R., C. H. & D. Ry., C. C. C. & St. L. Ry., C. L. & W. Ry., C. T. & V. R. R., C. A. & C. Ry., C. N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co., C. S. & H. R. R., D. A. V. & P. R. R., D. & C. N. Co., D. & L. N. Ry., E. & I. R. R., E. & T. H. R. R., F. Ft. W. & W. Ry., G. R. & I. Ry., G. T. Ry. System, Hocking Valley Ry., Ill. Cent. R. R. (Peoria Division), I. D. & W. Ry., I. L. & I. R. R. J. & St. L. Ry., L. S. & M. S. Ry., L. & N. R. R., L. E. & W. R. R., L. H. & St. L. Ry., Mobile & Obio R. cago & Erie and Erie R. R. C. I. & L. Ry., Ry., Mich. Central R. R., Mobile & Ohio R. R., N. Y. C. & St. L. R. R., N. & W. Ry., Ohio Central Lines, Ohio Southern R. R., O. & L. K. R. R. Ohio River R. R. Pennsylvania Lines. Pere Marquette R. R., Pitts, Bessemer, & Lake Erie R. R., P. & L. E. R., P. & W. Ry., Pittsburg, Lisbon, & Western Rv., Southern Ry. (St. Louis Division), T. P. & W. Ry., T. St L & W. R. R., Van-dalia Line, Wabash R. R., W. & L. E R. R SOUTHEASTERN PASSENGER ASSOCIATION.

The Southeastern Passenger Association has also granted the same reduction in rate, and on the same general terms; except that going tickets may be purchased April 2 to 8 on any of those dates. If through ticket cannot be purchased at the starting point, the person should purchase to the most conveni-ent point at which such ticket can be obtained and there repurchase through to the place of meeting, procuring a standard certificate from each agent from whom a ticket is purchased. Certificates will not be honored by conductors; they must be presented to ticket agents.

The Southeastern Association includes the following lines: A. C. L. R. R. Co., A. G. S. R. R., A. & V. Ry., A. & N. Ry., A. & W. P. R. R., A. K. & N. Ry., A. V. & W. Ry., Blue Ridge R. R., C. & W. C. Ry., Chesapeake S. S. Co., C. of G. Ry. Co., C. R. & S. R. R., C. N. O. & T. P. Ry., E. & W. R. R., F. & P. R. R., F. E. C. Ry., Frank. & Cin. Ry., Georgia R. R., G. S. & F. Ry., I. C. R. R. (South of the Ohio river), K. C. M. & B. R. R., L. & N. R. R., Macon & Birm. Ry., M. D. & S. R. R., Mobile & Ohio R. R., N. C. & St. L. Ry., N. O. & N. E. R. R., N. & W. Ry., N. & W. S. B. Co., O. R. & C. Ry., Pa. R. (South of Washington), Plant. System. P. F. (South of Washington), Plant System, P. F. South of Washington, I take System, I. I. & P. R. R., R. F. & P. R. R., S. A. L. Ry., S. C. & G. Exten. R. R., Southern Ry., T. & N. E. R. R., V. & S. W. Ry., W. & A. R. R., W. Ry. of Ala., W. & T. R. R.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL ASSOCIATION.

The Trans-Continental Passenger Association, in reply to request for reduced rates on the certificate plan, makes the following statement:-

"After a thorough investigation as to the prospective attendance from Trans-Continental territory—the states of California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington—on the part of representatives of initial Pacific Coast lines, it has been decided that the attendance will not be sufficient to warrant any reduction below the regular nine months' Your attention is respectfully called to the fact that the nine months' rate applying daily is approximately two cents per mile each way, or one and one third fare for the round trip, which is the general excursion fare applicable throughout the East. One and one third fare is probably the lowest rate that our lines would agree to make in this case in any event."
We understand from the above that parties going to Independence, Missouri, from above territory, will be able to obtain a rate of two cents per mile, or equivalent to that granted by other associations; namely, one and one third fare round trip, though, as we also understand, not on the certificate plan. Passengers will therefore take notice and make full inquiries beforehand, from their railroad agents, that they may purchase tickets to the best advantage.

The following named roads are included in The following named roads are included in the above Association: Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; Colorado & Southern; Colorado Midland; Denver & Rio Grande; Florence & Cripple Creek; Midland Terminal; Pecos System; Rio Grande Southern; Rio Grande Western; Santa Fe Pacific; Santa Fe, Prescott & Phœnix; San Francisco & Josquin Valley; Silverton Railroad; Silverton Northern; Southern California; Southern Pacific (Pacific System); Union Pacific.

Take notice that of the above the Atchison, Topeka & Sante Fe; Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; Colorado Midland; Denver & Rio Grande; Rio Grande Western; and Union Pacific; are also among those included in the Western Association as granting rates on the certificate plan; hence passengers should make due inquiries of agents beforehand, that tickets may be purchased to best advantage-whether excursion or certificate tickets.

WESTERN PASSENGER ASSOCIATION.

The Western Passenger Association has granted the usual reduction of one and onethird fare, round trip, on the certificate plan, to the General Conference and General Conventions of Auxiliary Societies, Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, to be held at Independence, Missouri, April 5-20, 1901.

The reduced rate is granted on the terms heretofore advertised, under which the attendance of one hundred persons holding certificates showing purchase of tickets costing more than fifty cents is required; cept that where parties or clubs traveling in a body purchase round trip tickets to the place of meeting from stations from which the local one way rate is more that fifty cents and at not less than the rate announced on the certificate plan for the particular meeting in question (instead of one way tickets at regular rate) and present to joint agent a certificate from the selling agent to that effect, they will be counted by the joint agent in reckoning the attendance at any meeting."

Parties must obtain a separate certificate with every ticket purchased. No certificate will be honored which was issued to cover the sale of more than one single trip ticket.

Ministers or others who travel on clerical or half fare permits, or commutation tickets of any description, are not entitled to this reduction, nor to be included in computing the number in attendance at any meeting.

Tickets on the going trip may be purchased from April 2 to 8 inclusive, on any of those dates. "Under the method usually observed the passenger pays full fare on going trip, and on presentation of certificate to that effect and other conditions named complied with, he is entitled to a return ticket to starting point at one third the regular fare, by route traversed on going trip."

"Where the journey is made over more than one line, it is usually necessary for the passenger to purchase separate local tickets of each road's issue, between points traveled thereon, and procure certificates thereof for each of the lines in this territory over which he travels in going to the meeting, as through tickets are not always sold, and it is not always practicable for the various lines to honor each other's certificates. Passengers should, therefore, ascertain from the ticket agent what portion of their journey can be covered by the certificate obtainable from him, and procure certificate filled out to correspond with the ticket purchased."

"Failure to procure or present certificate invalidates any claim for reduction in return

Tickets for the going passage may be either limited or unlimited, according to the rate paid or the regulations in effect on the line over which it reads; but the return tickets sold at the reduced fare will, in all cases, be limited to continuous passage.

Return tickets at one third fare may be purchased any time after the necessary one hundred have been secured and certified to, until April 24, except that-joint agent of the Passenger Association will be present to stamp and return certifi-cates to delegates personally on two days only: namely Tuesday and Wednesday, April 9 and 10; hence all parties must have their tickets in the Church Secretary's hands promptly, before those dates, in order that they may be filled out by him beforehand; and parties must be present on the 9th or 10th, to receive certificates from the joint agent.

Special attention is called to the necessity of making the trip from Kansas City to Independence on the regular lines of railroadeither the Missouri Pacific or the Chicago and Alton, thus completing the journey to destination over regular lines. The local electric or steam line running between Kansas City and Independence is not included in list of lines granting reduction.

The Western Passenger Association includes the following lines of road:-

cludes the following lines of road:

Atchison. Topeka, & Santa Fe; Burlington & Northwestern; Burlington & Western; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, & Northern; Chicago & Alton; Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy; Chicago & Northwestern; Chicago, Great Western; Chicago, Milwankee, & St. Paul; Chicago, Peoria, & St. Louis; Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, & Omaha; Great Northern; Hannibal & St. Joseph; Kansas City, St Joseph, & Council Bluffs; St. Louis, Keckuk, & Northwestern; Illinois Central; Lowa Central; Jacksonville & St. Louis; Kansas City, Ft. Scott, & Memphis; Kansas City Southern; Keckuk & Western; Minneapolis & St. Louis; Kansas, & Texas; Missouri Pacific; Rock Island & Peoria; St. Louis & San Francisco; Sioux City & Pacific: Wabash; Wisconsin Central; Burlington & Missouri River; Colorado Midland; Denver & Rio Grande; Fremont, Elkhorn, & Missouri Valley; Rio Grande Western; St. Joseph & Grand Island; Kansas City & Omaha; Union Pacific.

R. S. SALYARDS, Church Secretary.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 7, 1901.

Expect the continuance of mercies from God; He is the strength of our life, the staff of our bread, the breath of our nostrils, and the length of our days.—John Mason.

The Saints' Herald.

(Established 1860.)

Published Every Wednesday, at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Subscription price, $1.50 per year.
Address communications for publication te
"Editors Herald."

Marriage, birth, and death notices: Marriages, $1.00 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, $0 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free, above that number 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to business managers.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately, as receipts for all money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Send all business letters and make all remittances payable to Herald Publishing House, Lock Box E, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as secondelass mail matter.

Subscriptions received for Zion's Engine also

Subscriptions received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all kinds of Ensign Publications.

THIRD QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Dear prothers, let us all strive to be present at the April conference and bring the love of God with us that we may have a profitable time together. Be sure and bring a full report of all labors done or send the same to Bro. C. P. Faul, Clarksdale, Missouri.

WM. SELF.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Montana district conference will convene at Deer Lodge, March 30. A full and complete report from all branches is desired, and a good representation of the work from all over the state. Let us manifest an interest in the work, by so doing we can then consistently ask the world to be interested.

Gomer Reese. G. R. Wells.

BUCK.—Bro. Robert Buck was born in Tytherington, Gloucestershire, England, November 19, 1819. [Date of death not given.] He was married in England, December 12, 1864; came to Canada in 1870, settling in London; four years later, moved to Blenheim, where they have since resided. He was baptized June 10, 1869, at Birmingham, England. He was true to his religion to the end; and leaves a widow, son, and two daughters to mourn. The funeral was largely attended, showing respect to the deceased and benefit ones. Funeral service conducted by Elder S. Brown. The Spirit of the Master was present giving liberty to the speaker.

BEVAN.—At Canton, Cardiff, February 6, 1901, William, eldest son of Bro. Fred and Sr.

J. Bevan, aged 13 years and 8 months. After a long and painful sickness he passed peacefully away as if going to a gentle sleep. Truly he has been a great sufferer. He has gone to await the resurrection of the just. Funeral services on the 11th conducted in our hall by Elder T. Gould. Many friends and Saints followed him to his last resting place on earth. Thus we lose a bright and intelligent scholar, and member of our branch.

PARK.—Arthur Curtis Park was born to James and Nancy P. Park, on April 23, 1878, in Camp township, Polk county, Iowa; died at same place, December 26, 1900, making him 22 years, 8 months, and 3 days old.

SCRANTON—Onel Almira, daughter of Mr.

SCRANTON.—Opal Almira, daughter of Mr. Jessie and Sr. Esther Scranton, was born September 13, 1900; died February 17, 1901, aged 5 months and 4 days. Funeral services at the Latter Day Saints' chapel in Millersburg, Illinois; sermon by Elder I. B. LaRue. WILLIAMS—Emma, daughter of David D. and Elizabeth Williams of Saint David Illians.

and Elizabeth Williams, of Saint David, Illi-nois; was born June 19, 1883, at same place, died at Saint David, Illinois, March 4, 1901, aged 17 years, 8 months, and 13 days. Funeral service by Elder Thomas F. Stafford, of Lewiston, Illinois, at the M. E. church, Saint David. Interment in the Greenwood cemetery, Illinois, at Canton, Tuesday, March 5

THOMAS -At the home of his son, Bro. Oscar Thomas, Lamoni, Iowa, March 6, 1901, Bro. Roswell G. Thomas, of lagrippe and pneumonia, aged 77 years, 6 months, and 2 days. His wife died in 1892, but two sons and a daughter survive him. He served in Company K Sixth Ohio Cavalry, 1861-64, and removed to Iowa in 1871. Was baptized by Bro. Asa S. Cochran in 1890. Funeral sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. J. R. Lambert.

CHRISTY.—H. E. Christy was born at Coshocton, Ohio, July 25, 1840; married at Vinton, Iowa, August 25, 1860; ten children were born to that union, four of whom, beside the widow, remain to mourn. He was baptized April 1, 1894; died February 27, 1901. Funeral service conducted and sermon preached by Elder Mark H. Forscutt, of Newson braska City. A large concourse of friends followed the remains to the cemetery on the hill, where they were peacefully laid to their final rest.

A SONG FOR MARCH.

(Frank Farrington, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for March.)

Sing ho! sing ho, for the sleet and snow For the stormy March and the winds that blow

From north and south, now high, now low, Or chill or warm!

Oh, March is the month of months for me; Its south winds set old Winter free, And tell of the springtime soon to be, With all its charm.

Sing ho, for March on the sea's bleak shore, Where the bracing breezes evermore Blow up from the ocean bearing before,

The salty spray!
Sing ho, for March among the hills! Melting snows filling the ice-rimmed rills, Streams rushing madly past meadows and mills

Day after day.

BOOK OF MORMON.

Sing ho, for the roughest month of all When shrill o'er the tempest sounds the call Of the crow from woodland tree-top tall, Telling of spring!

And ho, for the waning winter days,
When the lingering north winds cold delays
April's coming, and chills the sun's red rays!
Oh, March is king!

88. Cloth	1	65 00 25 00
94. Cloth	1	25
SAINTS' HARMONY. Music and words combined.  105. Leather backs, cloth sides  106. Gilt edges
SAINTS' HYMNAL. Words and music.  108. Paper covers, each  Per dozen		35
Per dozen	HH	75 50 00 25 50

TRACTS.

	IKACIS.
. 1.	The Nature of Man, Is He	٠
2.	The Nature of Man, Is He Possessed of Immortality, Per dozen 15c., per hundred Truth Made Manifest; per dozen 15c., 100	1	00
3.	Voice of the Good Shepherd:	1	UU
4.	per dozen 5c.; 100 Epitome of Faith and Doc-		30
	trine of the Church, and Kirtland Temple Suit; per dozen		15
5.	3c.; 100		10
6.	pel); per dozen 3c.; 100 The 'One Baptism;" Its Mode,		15
	Design, and Who Shall Ad-		4
7.	Who Then Can be Saved; per		00
8.	dozen 5c.; 100		30
9.	Spiritualism Viewed from a		UU
10.	Scriptural Standpoint; per dozen 20c.; 100	1	4 0
11.	The Plan of Salvation; per		60
12.	dozen 20c.; 100	1	40
13.	Discipleism, or the Claims of Alexander Campbell to a Re-	ı	υυ stored Primitive Christianity Examined: per dozen 15c.; 100	1	00
14.	Reply to Orson Pratt; per dozen 15c.: 100	1	00
15. 16.	How to Enter the Kingdom; per dozen 5c.; 100 Polygamy. Was it an Orig-		30
10.	inal Tenet of the Church; per dozen 10c.; 100		. 60
17.	The Atonement of Christ and the Final Destiny of Man; per
18.			50
19.	tion of the Church; per dozen, A Statement and a Correction of It: per dozen 10c: 100		30 60
20.	of It; per dozen 10c.; 100 The "One Body," or the Church Under the Apostle-		00
	ship and Under the Apostasy; per dozen 15c.; 100	1	00
21.	and Epitome of Faith; per
22.	dozen 3c.; 100		20 60
23. 24.	Baptism; per dozen 10c; 100, The Kingdom of God; per		60
25.	dozen 3c; 100		20
26.	Was Joseph Smith a Polyga-	_	30
27.	mist? per dozen 20c., 100 The Sabbath Question; per	1	1
2 8.	dozen 15c.; 100	bed bed	J.
2 9.	House; per dozen 10c.; 100	.81	60
3 0.	The Factions on Polygamy and Spiritual Wiferv: per
3 1.	dozen 15c.; 100	1	00
	doxy? and an Evangelical Church? and Epitome of Faith; per dozen 3c.; 100		20
32 .	Which is the Church? per dozen 5c.; 100		30
	en e

WM. ANDERSON, Pres. MRS. DAVID DANCER. Vice Pres. W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier. OSCAR ANDERSON, Ass't Cashier.

STATE SAVINGS BANK OF LAMONI.

Incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa, July 1, 1898. Total assets January 1, 1900, $133,032.34; April 1, 1900, $162,781.07.

We pay interest on time deposits, and especially solicit the correspondence and deposits of all Herald readers. All efters of inquiry will be promptly and carefully answered. Direct all letters to W. A. HOPKINS, Cashier, State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa

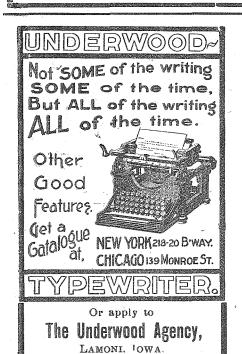

STOCKHOLDERS:—Mrs. David Dancer, Geo. H. Hilliard, A. K. Anderson, Lucy L. Resseguie, Oscar Anderson, Wm. Anderson, Frank Criley, Alice P. Dancer, Ella D. Whitehead, G. W. Blair, W. A. Hopkins.

UWANTO STOP

Using tobacco. Quit-to-bac makes it easy to do so. Three boxes postpaid, only $1.50 with positive guarantee to cure or the $1.50 cheerfully refunded! It cures others, why not you.

Address, (Bro.) B. F. ORDWAY, Peoria, Ill.

47-42 (U.S. Postage stamps taken)

173.	TESTAMENTS. Inspired Translation. Cloth, limp Cloth sides, leather back		35 50
SAIN'	TS' HYMNAL. Words only.
	Paper		15
	Per dozen	The same	60
116.	Cloth, limp		25
	Per dozen	P	70
117.	Cloth		35
	Per dozen		75
118.	Flexible, gilt edges		50

Nave you seen "LAMONI PULPITS" in the INDEPENDENT PATRIOT?

A synopsis of one sermon a week from the Saints' pulpit in Lamoni, appears in the PATRIOT. Subscription one dollar per year. Address, THE PATRIOT Lamoni.

A postal card brings a sample copy.

]	152.	PRE H. ( toria Pape	SIL O. 1 on. er	SSTON ENCY Smith,	Z. Ch	By urch	Elder His-	35 50
n	TD 4 C	NOT	Degr _e one planes.	THE	November 1980

TRACTS.

33. Trial of the Witnesses to the Resurrection of Jesus.

Each 5 cents; per doz. 50 cents.
47. The Basis of Brighamite Polygamy.

Per doz. 10 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

'HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LAT-TER DAY SAINTS. By President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. In three volumes.

121.	Leather	2	50
122.	Gilt edges	3	00
	VOLUME 2.
186.	Cloth	que que	50
	Leather back and corners
188.	Leather	2	50
189.	Gilt edges	3	00
	VOLUME 3.
190.	Cloth	I	50
	Leather back and corners		00
	Leather	2	50
193.	Gilt edges	3	00
	EL QUARTERLIES.
	Published by the General
	Sunday School Association.
	Designed for use in Sabbath school work. Issued quarterly.
72	Senior Grade, per quarter		08
10.	Per year, in advance		25
74	Intermediate Grade, per quar-		ធាប
. 12.	ter		05
	Per year		15
75.	Primary Grade, per quarter		05
	Per year		15
INTE	RMEDIATE QUESTION

76. Limp, 25c. each, per dozen... 2 50

77. Limp, 15c. each, per dozen... 1 50

The office will procure for its patrons

PRIMARY QUESTION BOOK.

any book that is obtainabl.

BOOK.

COMMERCIAL BANK

LAMONI, - IOWA,
Solicits your Deposits and pays

4 1-2 % INTEREST.
D. F. NICHOLSON, Cashier.

An interesting book of the period,

LIFE AND REIGN OF QUEEN VICTOR'A,

profusely illustrated. By Prof. Charles Morris and Murat Halstead, both renowned historians. For sale at Herald Office. Postpaid for $1.00.

LADIES' KID GLOVES.

AGENTS WANTED. — These gloves comprise all the qualities of fit, style, comfort, and economy, perfectly made and thoroughly reliable. We want a lady or miss to act as our home agent for these gloves, in every city and town in the United States and Canada. Liberal inducements. No capital required. Address with stamp, CENTURY PUBLISHING CO, 94t St. Joseph, Missouri, U. S. A.

BRING YOUR LAUNDRY TO

South Side Barber Shop.

For every five dollars worth of Laundry you receive a HANDSOME SHAVING MUG. BLACK & SHOOK, Props.

DR. E. S. SWEET, DENTIST. Decoe Building,

WOODBINE, -

IOWA

FOR SALE.

A brick business house centrally located in Lamoni that earns fifteen per cent on investment.

If interested, inclose stamp to Lock Box 7, Lamoni, Iowa.

Burlington Route passenger service between stations on Grant City branch and Chicago, both directions, is better than ever in the history of the road. Leaving Lamoni at 8:05

p. m., arriving Chicago 7:20 a. m. following morning. Leaving Chicago at 5:50 p. m., arriving Lamoni 6:25 a. m. following morning.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS.

Dates of sales, February 19, March 5 and 19, April 2 and 16, 1901, one lowest first class fare for the round trip, plus $2 00. Good for return 21 days from date of sale.

Cheap one-way colonist excursion rates to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and San Diego, California. Dates of sale February 12, 19, and 26, March 5, 12, 19, and 26, April 2, 9, 16, 23, and 30, 1901.

One-way second class settlers rates. Denver, Colorado Springs, and Pueblo. Ogden and Salt Lake. Bozeman, Helena, Butte, Anaconda, Grantsdale, Missoula, Grant Falls, Kalispell, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma. Victoria and Vancouver.

KEOKUK & WESTERN R. R. CO.

North—Leave Leon 2:40 p. m., arrive at Des Moines 6:05 p. m. South—Leave Des Moines 8:25 a. m., arrive South—Leave Des Moines 8; 25 a.m., arrive at Leon 11: 45 a.m. Trains daily except Sunday; connect with C.

B. & Q. at Leon.

THE SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." -John 8: 31, 32.

"Hearken to the word of the Lords for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wifes and concubines he shall have none."—B. of M., page 116.

VOL. 48.

LAMONI, IOWA, MARCH 20, 1901.

NO. 12.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - EDITOR.

FRED'K MADISON SMITH ASSISTANT EDITOR.

JOSEPH LUFF
D. W. WIGHT

CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 20, 1901.

A FAST.

The Presidency, after a due consultation in regard to the situation and the work before the church, have thought it advisable that there be a day of fasting and prayer to be generally observed by the church; to the intent and purpose that supplication may be made to the divine Ruler for the blessings of spiritual direction, guidance, and comfort during the ensuing April session of conference.

To this end we appoint Sunday, March 31, as such day of fasting and prayer, and recommend that on that day the Saints gather at their several places of worship and engage in the service of prayer for such time or times as the branch or officers may deem wise; the fast to be from the evening meal of the 30th to the evening meal of the 31st.

"Let all things be done decently and in order."

JOSEPH SMITH, A. H. SMITH, E. L. KELLEY, Presidency.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 16, 1901.

"OCCUPY TILL I COME."-JESUS.

The preachers constantly seek to impress upon their hearers the importance of the sayings and commands of Jesus, and the great, absolute necessity to observe and live by "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

The greatness of the law, the beauty and glory of it, its immense superiority over everything else, the safety of person and spirit there is in an obedience to it; the darkness and fear attending forgetfulness of the law, the dire results to follow willful disregard of its provisions, the dreadful consequences of falling into the hands of an offended lawgiver, the fate of men and nations who keep not the law, are all splendidly depictured by the teachers of the law.

We are sometimes impressed with awe when listening to some of these strong, impassioned appeals for observance of the law; and confess to a somberness of feeling lest we be found wanting in due respect and observance of "the things of the law." And were it not for the fact that some of the strongest appeals are made by those who at the time fail to properly discriminate between the provisions of the law they are presenting and insisting upon attention to and their own views and opinions of the law, they too frequently teaching their understanding of the law for the law, we should be much concerned both for our own and others' safety.

Men do not always have just conception of law; and, fired by zeal, are apt to magnify the importance of the immediate view of what they are considering before the people; and thus bewilder rather than inform their hearers

Among the things our Lord has spoken, the words at the head of this article appear. Do they apply to us as a people? What significance shall we attach to them? How shall we apply and observe them? How keep them?

At the opening of the gospel dispensation in these latter days it was enjoined upon the eldership to preach the New Testament theory of the Christ idea in contradistinction to the ways of men, including the personality of Jesus the Christ and what was wrought by his coming to earth, his life, his death, and his resurrection. In a large sense to "know nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified.' "Teach nothing but repentance to this generation." This preaching of repentance necessarily included the reasons for repentance, true repentance and the results to follow in its train. This was the first work of the church.

As an auxiliary and an abiding basis for the preaching of this New Testament gospel, the voice of revelation was heard and the altar fires of inspiration were rekindled and the men called of God basked in the light and warmth thus restored. The realization of what had been tradition, long hoped for and anticipated, was had and men rejoiced therein. Much that was dark was brought to the light, much that was mysterious lost its mystery, became known, and was appreciated. Dogma and tradition were neither old enough, nor sufficiently sacred, to overawe the truths which revelation brought and stifle the spirit | of rejoicing inquiry. The plan of salvation in Christ took definite form, and the purpose of Deity shone out on the world in vivid clearness. Priesthood rights so long lying dormant in the lives of men, "hid with Christ in God" were disclosed and the representative holders of the sacred calling were "called," "chosen," and "sent" to declare what should give light to the Gentiles and glory to Israel.

Under the direction of that Spirit of inspiration the men so called and chosen went out responding in meekness and prayerful earnestness to the injunction, "Let him that is warned warn his neighbor."

Whatever of sacrifice it was needful to make was made. Whatever persecution was roused against them they endured—many of them unto death—and those suffering accounted themselves happy if they could but endure as faithful servants unto the end.

Degrees of success more or less marked attended the general work. Many received the tidings they bore and joined with them, "the Lord adding to the church daily such as should be saved." In a few years a work had been done, the proportions of which challenged the question, the fear, or the admiration of the world: question on the part of those who were willing to make inquiry before passing judgment, fear on the part of those who, not satisfied that their own positions were not tenable and safe, admiration on the part of those who were not only willing to hear but were willing to obey the Master's Prosperity came, and for a few years was taken note of and enjoyed. Means for improvement were employed and thousands threw their labors into the field of occupation. In time mistakes were made, errors occurred, reverses came, disaster followed.

No matter now what these mistakes and errors were, the disaster was great, well-nigh fatal. No matter now by whom the errors were made. It is enough to know that the mistakes must be corrected, the errors retrieved, the fatal final disaster to be averted.

A readjustment was needed, was divinely ordered and begun. From the ranks of those who gave fealty to the gospel message there came a phalanx of workers. These gathered new recruits. The Spirit inspired both and the work of regathering began anew. Against heavier odds of opposition than ever encountered before the gospel messengers labored. The old crystallized prejudices against the angel's message and the voices of inspiration were hardened by the results of the mistakes which had been made, the evil consequences of the errors committed; and it has taken many more years to secure the attention of those who may be of the "other sheep" of the fold, than it did at the first.

A half century has passed in unrelaxing effort, and the church has not yet reached the goal of safety or repose. The effort must not now be suffered to abate, nor a single outpost be abandoned.

It is better that idle speculations about abstruse and hidden dogmas, or obscure passages of scripture be left for elucidation at later periods, and that the surer truths of the gospel be given chief consideration. That more consistent and purer thoughts of each other's integrity of interest and purpose be given preference. That jealousies, personal or official, be relegated to the past, and a more coherent estimate of gospel unity among its advocates and beneficiaries take their place.

The command, "Occupy till I come," is in force. As time is with the Master the ever present now, his words were for all time. To him there is no past, no future. His labor for the emancipation of man began when time began for man. He takes no vacation, makes no excuses, and delays are unknown to him.

As coworkers with God, with powers delegated to us for which we must answer to him, in a court where no idle, vain, or vicious excuse will be permitted us, we must arise to higher conceptions of duty and renewing our courage be busily engaged, not in other men's matters, but in the things entrusted to our ministry, occupying till he come, lest when he comes we shall be found not doing.

AN EFFORT IN BEHALF OF POLYGAMY.

The following is the text of a bill passed by both houses of the Utah Legislature, the scope of which is all too plain to those outside of Utah:—

Every person who has reason to believe that a crime or public offense has been committed must make complaint against such person before some magistrate having authority to make inquiry of the same; provided, that no prosecution shall be commenced except on complaint of the husband, or wife, or relative of the accused within the first degree of consanguinity, or of the person with whom the unlawful act is alleged to have been committed, or of the father, or mother of said person, and no prosecution for plural marriage shall be commenced except on complaint of the wife, or alleged plural wife of the accused; but this proviso shall not apply to prosecutions under section 4,208 of the revised statutes of Utah, 1898, defining and punishing polygamous marriages.

Of the speeches made upon the occasion we reproduce from the columns of the Descret Evening News for March 11, the following:—

Mr. Van Horne offered an impassioned address against the bill. He said in part:—

"When anyone has lived in the state for nearly a quarter of a century and has received the stranger with friendship and hospitality, it would need to be a colder heart than mine that would bring hardship on such an one." He reviewed some of the points of the polygamy prosecutions.

"During all this time it was almost impossible to prove a polygamous marriage for the reason that the marriages were solemnized with a solemn oath of secrecy. Women, who with a solemn oath of secrecy. Women, who believed themselves pure, declared under oath that they did not know who were the fathers of their babes. Finally the head of the Mormon Church announced that the practice of polygamy must cease. Many believed there was insincerity. This clause was put into the constitution of the state. Now gentlemen, I leave it to you whether it would be advancing the Mormon faith to adduce insincerity in the Mormon promise. You may say the country will pay no attention. I believe that the passage of this act will result in Congress passing laws on marriage more stringent than any in existence. Convictions under such laws would entail imprisonment in United States prisons. The rancor of the times of prosecution has been wiped out on the fields of battle. Sober and common sense thought must tend towards a peaceful solu-tion. If you pass this bill, remember that my voice and my vote are against a measure which will bring unnecessary trouble. In the after light I can look into the eyes of Utah and say in the words of Macbeth, 'Shake not thy gory locks at me, thou canst not say I did it.'"

Mr. Glasmann then spoke on the bill. He said he had no personal ax to grind.

"The Mormon people would never have consented to statehood had they understood that it meant giving up and ceasing to provide for their then lawful wives and children."

He called attention to page 900 of the revised statutes, to bear out his arguments, and to the constitution of the state, in which it was stated that so much of the law as referred to polygamy should remain in force in Itah in Utah.

"It especially exempted from punishment those who had been living in polygamy prior to the manifesto," thundered the speaker.

"The Mormon people would not have accepted statehood had they foreseen that the Supreme Court would rule that unlawful cohabitation included in its meaning the recognition of plural wives without actually living with them. It has been claimed that under this law people could bring their plural wives from Mexico to live in Utah; but they could not do so unless they married those wives prior to 1891, if any amendment to this bill is adopted.

to this bill is adopted.

"As to insincerity it would be on the part of the Gentiles instead of the Mormons if they sought to prevent the Mormons from recognizing their wives married prior to 1891. Pass this bill and I am ready to vote for a memorial to Congress, forever prohibiting polygamy in the United States. If you fail to pass this bill we'll have hell in Utah for twenty years to come. Where is there any disloyalty to the Union in it. Every other state in the Union has a similar law. The last test of her loyalty was the responding to President McKiniey's call for troops for Manila."...

D. C. Johnson said he had the interest of the dominant church at heart as much as any on the floor, but he thought that such a law would be a disgrace. It would throw down the bars for immorality. "The law today," he said, "is good enough for anyone who wants to keep it. The great newspapers of the United States have already telegraphed for copies of this proposed law. It will set friend against friend and brother against brother. It will create a storm at home and a storm abroad, and permit not only religious people to violate the law, but anyone who wishes to."...

Mr. Sharp spoke for the second time on the bill. He said that his father was the first who had refused to go to the penitentiary, and agreed to abide by the law. His reasons for ceasing to be a polygamist was that he would bring children into the world who would be ashamed to look any man in the face.

D. H. Morris . . . said that there was need for legislation which would legitimatize children. He referred to the bogaboo that Congress would pass laws prohibiting polygamy. "We do not care, it would affect Utah

"We do not care, it would affect Utah probably less than any other state. I believe that the moral atmosphere of Utah is purer than that of any state in the Union."

We also quote one from Salt Lake Tribune:—

Smith, following Glasmann, said, in concluding:-

"The passage of the bill under consideration would be taken by the people of the country as evidence that polygamy had been legalized." He further declared that the state would be disgraced in the eyes of the nation if the bill passed.

Of this action of the Utah legislature a dispatch to the Chicago Tribune, March 8, says:—

BREAKS COMPACT WITH NATION.

Washington, D. C., March 8.—[Special.]—Apparently Utah has attempted in this new legislation to get around the solemn compact on which the State was admitted into the union.

When Congress voted that Utah might be a State of the union there was a solemn compact made that polygamy should be forever a thing of the past. Congress, in the enabling act, stipulated that the convention of Utah should provide by ordinance, irrevocably:

cably:

"First—The perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of said State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship; provided, that polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited."

Pursuant to the act, a constitutional convention was held at Salt Lake City, and the following provisions were framed by the convention and adopted by the convention and adopted by the people as a part of the constitution.

"Article 3, ordinance: The following ordinance shall be irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of this state:—

"First—Perfect toleration of religious sentiment is guaranteed. No inhabitant of this state shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship; but polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited."

NULLIFIES POLYGAMY PROVISO.

The difficulty probably will be in the fact that the new Utah law does not legalize polygamy. It could not do so because the provision in the state constitution cannot be repealed without the consent of the United States. As it does not directly violate the constitution, but merely pretends to establish a rule of evidence, it may be held that the new law is constitutional. It evidently is against the spirit of the enabling act, as it is intended to nullify the antipolygamy provision of the state constitution and surely will have that effect.

Whatever may be the opinion of the men who in the Senate and House of Representatives of Utah voted for this bill, one thing is certain; outside of the state the act will everywhere be taken to mean that the state has broken faith with Congress and the public opinion of the states of the Union.

The fact seems to be that children are continually being born of polygamous practices, which the "manifesto" of Pres. Woodruff and his rendition of its meaning and scope of application decided must cease. To gloze over these continued infractions of the moral understanding under which statehood was secured, and to give apparent security to those who still persist in the practice which it was intended should cease, a law is made practically shielding transgressors from prosecution.

One of the speakers to the bill stated that not more than one per cent of the men of the Utah church were polygamists and asked why should all the rest of the citizens be disturbed and be made liable to trouble on account of this small portion of the people.

If it be true that only one per cent of the community are practical polygamists let that one per cent stop doing wrong, and the ninety and nine will cease from being troubled. one per cent of the men of Iowa were continually guilty of committing any given misdemeanor, would the rest of the men of the state be justified in hedging the few round with defensive legislation to prevent the prosecution of the wrongdoers? Hardly.

But we note that Governor Wells has vetoed the bill and it is not likely that it can be passed by the requisite majority over his veto.

Salt Lake City, Utah, March 14.—Governor Wells has vetoed the Evans bill relating to the making of complaints and commencing of prosecutions in criminal cases.

The Governor, after explaining that he does not question the motives of those who participated in the passage of the bill and without reflection on their patriotism, thinks that his judgment and his oath demand that he withhold his signature from the measure.

THINKS LAW WOULD DO HARM.

"In my opinion nothing can be clearer," the Governor says, "than if this bill, if passed, would be welcomed and employed as a most effective weapon against the classes whose condition it is intended to ameliorate.

"Furthermore, I have reason to believe its enactment would be the signal for a general demand upon the national Congress for a constitutional amendment directed against certain social conditions here—a demand which under the present circumstances would surely be complied with.

"While it may be urged that in every event the poor could be made to suffer, is it not an odious thought, repulsive to every good citizen of whatsoever creed or party, that the whole state should thus be put under a ban? Surely there is none so selfish and unpatriotic as to argue that this is preferable to the endurance of a few isolated instances of prosecution unbacked, as they are, by either respectable moral support or sympathy.

- SPEAKS FROM MORMON STANDPOINT.

"I yield to no one in affection for those, my people, who from the highest motives and because they believed it a divine command, entered into the relation of plural marriage. Born and reared in Utah, myself a product of that marriage system, taught from infancy to regard my lineage as approved of the Alto regard my lineage as approved of the Almighty, and proud today, as I have ever been, of my heritage, it will be granted, I trust, that every instinct of my nature reaches out to shield my friends from harm and to protect them from unjust attack. Their cause is my cause, and when they are hurt, I am hurt, for I am part of them.

"But in that same heart which is filled with sympathy for them, I find also the solemn feeling that this bill holds out only a false hope of protection, and that in offering a phantom of relief to a few it in reality invites a deluge of discord and disaster upon all."

The measure vetoed by the Governor of Utah was one providing in substance that no criminal prosecution for plural marriages could be instituted, except by relatives or plural wives of the offenders. It was passed in the face of bitter opposition from Mormon members of the Legislature.

We certainly congratulate Gov. Wells on the stand he has taken in this crisis of affairs in his state. The emancipation of the state from the grasp of the willfully erring lies with the younger elements. May they be successful should be the wish of all who have the welfare of the whole country at heart.

Governor Wells' veto of the polygamy bill was sustained by the Senate of Utah by a vote of 9 to 9the former vote of the Senate on the bill having been 11 for 7 against. Two of the senators who probably voted for the bill stated that upon consideration they believed Governor Wells to have been correct in his action in vetoing the bill.

This will probably end the effort, at least during Governor Wells' term of office.

CHEERFULNESS AND LEVITY.

The above-mentioned characteristics of the mind are so different, that ordinarily there should be but little difficulty in distinguishing between It frequently happens, however, that when manifestations of levity are met with disapproval, they are defended upon the ground that we should be cheerful; that a long face and solemn mien are not conducive to our good, or the pleasure and good of others. Evidently, in deportment, as in other things, extremes should be avoided; but there is certainly no necessity for confounding cheerfulness and levity. One may be happily disposed, pleasant and cheerful, without the least degree of manifest levity; and it is just as possible to be lightminded and frivolous, without any of the elements of real cheerfulness. Earnestness and sobriety are not at all opposed to cheeriness of disposition.

On the other hand, they are naturally productive of such a condition of

The earnest soul, alive and active in filling the opportunities of life, will be made glad in the act of doing right, in looking forward to the results of well-directed effort. resultant satisfaction will manifest itself in the animated countenance, the elastic step, and the buoyant conversation of a cheerful, energetic laborer for a good end.

Frivolity of speech and action rather denote the absence of proper activity, which alone can bring real contentedness of mind, and happiness of disposition. Frequently they are but mental efforts to fill a void caused by the lack of proper ideals toward which to direct our efforts. The soul that lies beneath may be, and is very apt to be, anything but cheerful. The influence of a cheerful, earnest person is beyond our power to estimate. It is widely different from one who The is light-minded and frivolous. former not only brings sunshine into the lives of others, but impresses their minds with good thoughts, serious resolutions, lofty ideals, and increased love for the good and true. The latter diverts the mind from its own destiny, fosters shallow conceptions of duty, and makes men and women less earnest in their considerations of life and its possibilities.

The importance of being able to make careful distinction between these two conditions of the mind may be further seen by observing what the Lord has said about it. With regard to cheerfulness he has enjoined us that Saints should be cheerful in their warfare that they may be joyous in their triumph .-D. C. 119:6.

Again:

The elders and men of the church should be of cheerful heart and countenance among themselves and in their intercourse with their neighbors and men of the world .-D. C. 119:3.

But with respect to levity,-

Remember the great and last promise which I have made unto you: cast away your idle thoughts and excess of laughter far from you.—D. C. 85:19.

Also,

There is a great work to be done by mine elders, and that they may be fitted to do this work and the accomplishment thereof be not prevented, it is enjoined upon them that they shall not only be kind of heart and of a lowly spirit, that their wisdom may be the wisdom of the Lord and their strength the strength of the Spirit, but they shall lay aside lightness of speech and lightness of manner when standing to declare the word.-D. C. 119: 2.

Evidently the Lord has reason for expressing himself as he has done on these matters. Is it not possible that the injunctions thus given are pertinent at the present time, and that a careful study of their merits, accompanied by a disposition to heed, will work results for good? The statement that "there is a great work to be done by mine elders," coupled with instructions regarding qualifications, that "the accomplishment thereof be not prevented," is worthy of more than a passing attention.

It is not hard to conceive of a body of earnest, zealous men, their souls knit together in one common cause, their cheerful countenances beaming with the light of truth, yet neither in word or action manifesting that lightness and frivolity of mind that will prevent the free operation of the Holy We feel sure that among Spirit. other things to be observed we must pay due heed to what the Lord has said upon these matters before we can receive the degree of light and revelation really needed to qualify the Saints of God for the great work intrusted to their care.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Samuel Tomlinson, writing from Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, under date of February 21, says:—

I came to this town on the 16th of this month. Am doing a great deal of visiting with those not of our faith, and find I can do much more good than by holding services every night. However, I am holding forth in the neat little church building here. every other night. Things are not as favorable as we would like; much need of spiritual growth among the members. Lots of sickness, principally the "grippe." I am not fully recovered from a two weeks' siege of it. In my illness I was tenderly cared for by Bro. and Sister Stoner, of Welland, and Sister Pew, of Low Banks.

Mrs. George H. Lawrence, under date of February 24, writes from Björneborg, Sweden:—

I am a believer in, although not a member of, your church; but with God's help I will be a member at the earliest opportunity.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In this issue in our column for selected articles, we have reproduced an editorial from the Biblical World, one of the publications of the University of Chicago, of which Dr. William Harper, president of the University, is editor.

On page 71 of the present volume of the HERALD, the article "Hæckel's Solution of the Riddle of the Universe," should have been credited to the Literary Digest.

We have received a copy of "The People, The Land and The Book," an illustrated Hebrew-Christian quarterly, treating of the old and historic people of Israel, of their native land, Palestine, and of the book, the Bible, and the Jewish traditions and literature. This periodical is being published at 436 Carlton avenue, Brooklyn, New York, and is edited by B. M. Schapiro. Price $1 per year.

News was received Monday of the death of Bro. Alma N. Bishop, of the Wales mission. Particulars have not as reached us, but will probably do so before our next issue.

Original Articles.

AUTOBIOGRAPHIC SKETCH AND IN-CIDENTS IN THE EARLY HIS-TORY OF THE REOR-GANIZATION.—NO. 12.

BY EDMUND C. BRIGGS, OF THE QUORUM OF THE TWELVE.

It was fully the middle of the afternoon before we reached Bro. Moore's. Sr. Moore received us very kindly and was talkative, but forgot, or did not think, to ask us if we had been to dinner. Her husband was away from home and did not get back till late, and it was sundown before we were invited to break our fast for that day. As it was a forced fast, and not in the spirit of prayer, it was almost a torture for dear Bro. Newkirk. I felt sorry for him, but neither of us had courage to tell Sr. Moore we had no dinner and were hungry. I took a philosophical view of the matter and concluded we must not be afraid to take some of the bitter side of a missionary's life in this world without complaining. And I remembered that Jesus also hungered at times in his mission work in this unthankful, sin-cursed world, without complaining. And this I felt to do, though I do not think I suffered so much as Bro. Newkirk. I imagined I could almost see Jesus and his disciples carrying loaves of bread and fishes under their arms when they were going where it would be inconvenient to get dinner. We had only neglected, to follow their example and take a lunch with us, hence had no complaint to make except against ourselves.

Bro. Moore is now in Lamoni, and the first time I met Bro. Stafford after that in conference, he came to me with tears in his eyes and asked my forgiveness over and over again for the way he used us. But I could not forgive him, for I had not even thought of blaming him in the matter. He had been the happy recipient of the gospel in England in 1837, when the first missionaries visited that foreign land, under the ministration of Heber C. Kimball and others, who left Nauvoo with the glad tidings of the angel's message. Bro. Stafford's love for the gospel and those men in that early day had been so betrayed by those men's apostasy, that, in the darkness which surrounded it and them, it nearly made shipwreck of But his integrity of him forever. soul was all the time just the same, and had he invited us into his home at that time, no doubt he would have been fired with our message of the same gospel we were bearing to the lost and scattered sheep of latter-day Israel, as he soon received it through Bro. Gurley.

We stayed the next day with Bro.

Moore, and the morning following started on our journey, not knowing just where to go next. While we were pondering over the matter, we agreed to make it a subject of prayer. While at prayer, Bro. Newkirk had a "vision, and saw Burlington, Iowa, and we were walking in the streets." Like Paul the ancient apostle, we gathered from this manifestation we should go there. We were then seven miles south of Burlington, and we started west. We stayed over night with a stranger five miles from the river, and there learned that the Mississippi river was very high and the ferryboats came to Shokekon, where we took the steamer for Burlington. While standing on the banks of the river waiting for the boat, teams soon came up, and the teamsters, like ourselves, patiently waited for the opportunity to cross the river; and as the ferryboat hove in sight, one of the teamsters said to us. "Gentlemen, if you will jump into my wagon it will cost you nothing to cross over to Burlington." We accepted his invitation, and in that way saved a dollar, which, by the way, we did not have. Twentytwo teams, wagons, and carriages crossed with us. As the gentleman drove up into the city he said to us, "Did one of you gentlemen pay my fare?" We had not, and he remarked, "No one asked me for it, so I am a dollar ahead also." I mention this occurrence simply to show that it seemed Providence helped us at that time.

It was some little time before we found any of the Saints. Bro. Newkirk again became discouraged, for it was most night, and neither of us had money. He waited at a hotel and I kept on the search, hoping to find some of our brethren. I finally heard that Mr. Morton, who was in the post office, was a "Mormon." I at once called on him. He was glad to see us, took us to his hotel for supper, and we lodged over night with him, and in the morning he took us to Bro. Dwight Webster's, and in the evening Bro. Oliver P. Dunham came in and we had special liberty in presenting the gospel and the promises to us of the coming of Joseph to take his father's place in the church. The Spirit bore testimony to all the brethren of our mission, and they were with us heart and hand, so much so that they gave us quite a number of dollars to help us in our mission. This was the first money I received in my mission. These brethren all once lived in Nauvoo, and were well acquainted with the choice seer, and had never followed any of the factions which broke off from the church during the apostasy, and had been waiting patiently, and hoping for one of Joseph's children to come forward and take the leadership of the church.

From there we visited Mount Pleasant, Glasgow, West Point, String Prairie, Keokuk, and Montrose, Iowa. In all of these places we found some of the Saints, whom I will mention more particularly before I close this article, and on June 28, 1858, we crossed the river to Nauvoo. On that date I find the following notes in my diary:—

"Nauvoo, Hancock county, Illinois, June 28, 1858.—This day we have visited Major Lewis C. Bidamon. Saw Bro. Joseph and wife. They are well, but we had no talk with them of our hope. Sr. Bidamon seems cast down in mind. Little David has the appearance that thought has marked his countenance; and in fact, they all seem to be lonely and cheerless. rather on suspense, or else I imagine I judge from my acquaintance with the family, which has been since December 5, 1856, something over a year. I boarded at the Mansion House. Bidamon was proprietor. With the exception of a little over three months, I worked for Joseph on his farm. I left Nauvoo, December, 1857, and went to Amboy, but today I saw Bro. Joseph again, though we have had no talk with him in regard to our hope, which is deliverance and reorganization, but while at prayer the Spirit rested on us in mighty power, and the burden of our supplications were in behalf of Bro. Joseph and deliverance, and in the name of the God of Israel and authority vested in us we took peace from Joseph in the world until he would acknowledge his calling as a deliverer in Israel."

We then returned to Burlington, and Bro. Oliver P. Dunham accompanied us to conference, which was held four miles west of Ambov. Bro. Dunham paid our fares on the cars. I was confirmed in regard to my mission, and was farther directed by the Spirit of prophecy through Bro. Samuel H. Gurley that my mission was to the north, northeast, south, and west, and then accompany the Prophet Joseph to Zarahemla, for my mission was not finished. Bro. Reuben Newkirk was again appointed by the conference to accompany me on my mission. He accepted the appointment, but soon began to get uneasy and discouraged, desiring to return home. He accompanied me as far as Beaverton, Boone county, and while at Bro. Whitcomb's he said to me, "Bro. Briggs, I am going home in the morning to see my wife and family, bût will return in six weeks or two months." He failed to keep the prom-

It was now the first of July. I stopped in Boone county through the most of the fall, and went to the conference held in Amboy, December, 1858. We had a very interesting and spiritual conference, and I returned to Beaverton and stopped with the Saints a short time longer. We had had two or three prayer meetings a week since the last of July, and preaching once in two or three weeks by Elder Samuel Powers, of Beloit. There had been twenty members added to the church here since I came. Bro. Zenos Whitcomb and wife were the only members when I went there in July. Those who joined the church enjoyed the gifts of the Holy Spirit, confirming them in the word of the Lord as in ancient times.

In January I visited many of the old Saints in Wisconsin at Burlington, Racine county, Rochester, Waukesha, and again in Fox river valley, Illinois, Bro. I. L. Rogers, the Horton family, Henry Hart, Archibald M. Wilsey, Philo and Dimic Howard, Elder James Blakeslee, and others, and at Batavia in March I baptized Brn. Crowell G. Lanphear, Harvey Blakeslee, and Louis Delmon. These are the first I ever baptized into the church. I then attended the General Conference of April 6, 1859, in Boone county, near Beaverton. The meetings continued five days and the gifts of the Holy Ghost were manifest in great power, confirming the Saints and approbating and indorsing the conference. Bro. James Blakeslee did most of the preaching, assisted by Elders Samuel Powers and W. W. Blair. Brn. Aldrich and Gaylord, of Burlington, Wisconsin, attended this conference, and were now firm in the work of the Reorganization. Ten were baptized at the conference. Sr. Lydia Blakeslee, wife of George A., of Galien, Michigan, was one of them. He was, at that time, not a member. Elder W. W. Blair was appointed to labor with me on my mission.

We visited the Saints at Burlington, Wisconsin. We found several old Saints in Kane county, Illinois, and in East Troy found Bro. Bentley, and west of Troy seven miles, a brother David Stiles. In Waukesha, Wisconsin, we visited eight families of the old Saints. Albert White, and Emeline, Emily, Julia, and Louisa, all cousins of mine; Nelson, Hiram, and Edwin Higley were old members of the church, all living there. Cousin Emeline Welch was now a spiritualist. We then went north of Waukesha

We then went north of Waukesha eight miles and found some more of the old members of the church, and in Milwaukee visited Bro. Thomas Feavel and several other families in the city. They were all expecting to move to the state of Iowa in the fall. In Racine we visited a Bro. Andrews and three other families, and then we continued our mission down the Fox river valley, visiting many families of the Saints, whom we left much interested in the faith, and we had great reason to rejoice, for we were very much blessed with the Spirit in bearing testimony of the coming of Joseph to take charge of the work commenced by his father.

We reached Amboy the 1st of June. Conference convened the 10th. Meetings lasted until the 14th. Fourteen members were added to the church by baptism. The gifts of the Holy Spirit were manifest in great power. Many of the old Saints said they never saw the power of God manifest so much in all their experience in the church before. Elder William Marks, of Shabbona Grove, extended his hand of fellowship to unite with us. The conference received him with joy, and he was now with us heart and hand. He bore a faithful testimony of the truth of the latter-day dispensation as it was opened by the Prophet Joseph. He was a beloved brother of great experience, and during this conference Sr. Helen Pomeroy, while speaking in prophecy, turned to him

"Thus saith the Lord, O thou man of God, In times past thou hast sat in council with my servant Joseph the seer, and the time is near when thou shalt sit in council with his son. When I called my servant Joseph he was as a lone tree; but when I shall call his son he shall be as one of a mighty forest."

The Saints all seemed lit up by the power of the Holy Spirit and confirmed in our blessed work. Brn. Aldrich and Gaylord were much elated and confirmed in the Reorganization, and I was comforted in my very soul by the power of the Holy Ghost confirming me in my mission. I did not feel as though I were all alone now any more as a missionary of the Reorganization. Up to this time I was the only one who was a continual missionary of the church, and my forte was in prayer meetings and constant testimony whenever I met with any of the Saints at their homes. The Spirit of revelation and prophecy was always with me in testimony whenever I met with the wandering Saints who had been in the wilderness of confusion ever since the martyrdom of Joseph, the choice seer.

At this conference Bro. C. G. Lanphear's little daughter Nettie, not more than ten or twelve years old, spoke in tongues by the power of the Holy Ghost. She was not a member of the church at the time, and I always thought the Lord permitted his Spirit to be given to her for my special benefit, for I had much desired to see some one have the gift of tongues who did not belong to the church, like it was given to Cornelius and his house that feared God, though they were not yet members of the church, as is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, tenth chapter. I knew Nettie Lanphear was an innocent little girl, and the Spirit bore testimony to me while she was speaking, and brought to my memory the conversion of the first Gentiles in the days of the disciples of Christ.

The conference again accepted my labors, as it had done all previous conferences since 1856, and now appointed Elder Blair to again accompany me on my mission west, requesting us to go as far as Council Bluffs, Iowa, and vicinity.

(Continued.)

"WHO SHALL PRESIDE?"

It appears that more may be profitably said upon this subject than was presented in the HERALD of December 5 and February 6; also that there is medium ground, perhaps the "golden mean," where truth is said to occupy sometimes, ground midway between the idea that the counselors of the president of the church can and must preside over the affairs of the church (indefinitely so) in case of the death of said presiding officer, and the idea that they have no right to preside at all in such case, but that another quorum should step in and take charge.

One writer says that there is "a vast difference between presiding over the church and over the high council." But it is quite clear to the mind of the present writer that the law (revealed word) of God makes it plain that the assistant presidents over the high council of the church are the same individuals as the assistant presidents over the whole body, that the counselors to the president of the church are they who assist him in presiding over the high council, and that they, and they only, have power to preside over said council in his absence.

Concerning said presidency the following is written:-

Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church.—D. C. 104:11.

This word, then, makes it plain that it is the privilege of the president of the church to have two counselors, that they are provided for in the law of God, and that all three are to be "appointed" to their places as well as ordained and accepted by vote of the body. And it is a fact that the high council does not "select the president's counselors to preside with him in the high council," and it is not possible (under the law) that they (the high council) may select "any two high priests to assist him in presiding over the high council."

Indeed, no; for the Lord has already provided and appointed by revelation those who shall, or who may, by right preside with the president, or in his absence. It is not a matter of choice by that council, nor high priests than the "three presiding high priests" referred to in 104:11, the two assistants being (or having been) "appointed after the same manner that he [the chief] himself was appointed;" even by "revelation." We read as follows:-

The president of the church, who is also the president of the council, is appointed by revelation, and acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church; and it is according to the dignity of his office, that he should preside over the high council of the church; and it is his privilege to be assisted by two other presidents, appointed after the same manner that he himself was appointed; and in case of the absence of one r both of those who are appointed to assist him, he has power to preside over the council without an assistant; and in case that he himself is absent, the other presidents have power to preside in his stead, both or either of them.—D. C. 99:6.

Thus, although it is not said in so many words, yet it is clear that it is 'according to the dignity" of their office that they thus "have power" to preside over that which is "the highest council of the church of God" (104:35), as well as that the president so presides "according to the dignity of his office." Both he and they occupy their positions permanently while they are in the presidency, and no others are pointed out in the law as having any possible right to so preside. Indeed no other quorum of the church has the Lord made it obligatory upon himself to appoint by revelation except this one. And incalling the president of the church by revelation he has placed dignity and honor upon him and his office. And in like manner he has placed dignity and honor upon the office of counselor, and upon the men whom he names out of all the priesthood to be assistant presidents over the church and over the high council. Then, as the Lord has provided that all three shall be named by him, therefore to say that the body known as the high council may "select any two high priests to assist" the president of the church is rather opposite to the word of God that governs the matter.

Furthermore, it is very evident that the office of assistant president over the high council is a very weighty responsibility and calling, in that they are to be placed only by revelation. And if these are not the same men as those who are counselors to the president of the church, those placed jointly with him over the affairs of the whole church, then they have a prerogative of appointment (by revelation) to a lesser office which those of the higher (the presidency) do not have, that is if the men mentioned in 99:6 are not the same persons as those mentioned in 104:11.

But the present writer believes that the Lord has made it clear that they are the same men, and that no others their privilege to select any other have authority to preside over the high council "at the seat of the presidency" (99:11) than the counselors to the president of the church. They preside by ex officio right.

Now as to the presidency over the church in case of the absence or death of the president himself: Evidently this is a subject of very great moment to the whole body, and that a very important principle of church government is here involved. Yes, the very life and perpetuity of the church is at times dependent upon a correct solution of this question. This was proven by the wandering, erring fate of those who, from 1844 forward, followed either the suppositions of men or the plans of ambitious and corrupt leaders.

But, in facing this problem, we ask, Is it possible that he who began the work by and through the ministration of angels; and who, with systematic skill, organized the church by revelation; that he who caused men "to build better than they knew," that he did not foresee or consider emergencies of this kind, nor provide a way to prevent a breaking into fragments by reason of failure on the part of his law to meet the circumstances? Did he lack foresight or forethought? Is it possible that no divine plan existed in 1844 to prevent trouble, one which if followed would have prevented the dire consequences and widespread darkness and confusion that resulted? Was there no other aid but that of individual human wisdom or individual gaining of light to inform any one whether to follow this course or that course, or to keep still? Was it really unavoidable and according to divine purpose that both God and man should wait all those years before it was possible at all to go right, or any nucleus be organized? In case of a like loss in our time, would it be really needful that we should go blindly, or should "not know what to do," as some say, or the authorities of God's house not know how to proceed to find out what to do, or what the Lord wanted done?

Instead of this, the writer believes that a way was made plain by the Lord, that it was then on record and is yet, and that if Sidney Rigdon, Brigham Young, and their fellows, had been intent upon knowing the law of God and keeping it, instead of determined to go their own ambitious or corrupt way, they neither could nor would have gone wrong as to leadership, and the Lord would have made a clear path out of all the difficulties that beset the church at that time.

No doubt all are willing to admit that the question of right leadership is one of the most vital principles in the church of God (as well as among nations), and that to comprehend the divine mind concerning this principle and its harmonious order (in his sight) would certainly be a great blessing to his people. And not only do the quorums of priesthood need light from on high, but also the members throughout the church need also this information. But if God has given us no light, if he has made no way plain for us, then what situation are we in? But we read as follows:—

In cases of difficulty respecting doctrine, or principle (if there is not a sufficiency written to make the case clear to the minds of the council), the president may inquire and obtain the mind of the Lord.—D. C. 99:10.

Right here is the method of escape from the difficulty plainly pointed out by the Lord. As remarked above, there is no principle more weighty than this concerning the proper rulership over the church. And the Lord has provided for this emergency by making it plain that the president of the high council at the time when such lack of information exists, that he, whoever of the three may be there to preside, either one or more of the three, that he or they "may inquire and obtain the mind of the Lord by revelation." If the president of the church be absent on business, or if he be disabled by sickness, or because of transgression, or if he be dead, he is absent from that high council and his counselors, the assistant presidents, have right to preside, and, for the time being only, they or either of them, whichever presides, becomes a revelator to and for the church. But this is only temporary, and the continuance of government is to be according to the word then and there received, which may or may not immediately end the jurisdiction of the counselors as presiding officers. That matter is for the Lord to decide, and for him only.

Therefore, so far as the counselors having the right to rule over the church after the death of their superior, to continue indefinitely that way, there is nothing of the kind given in the written word. But they (or the one remaining) should immediately call the standing high council together, and with prayer and fasting, ask and obtain "by revelation" that which God has already promised, that is, obtain guidance upon this great principle, learn what course should be pursued to make certain the prosperity and safety of the body, the church.

The Lord says, "In cases of difficulty," to do this, and certainly that was a weighty case of difficulty in 1844, and it may sometime be again. Neither then nor now do the counselors have right to go on of themselves and, without tidings, become rulers. If they (or either of them) are directed of the Lord to preside temporarily during the preparation or qualifying of the one who is to succeed the one removed by death or transgression, then well and good. But the paramount thing is that they are warranted in seeking and obtaining first the instruction promised in 99:6, 10, before the church can go on.

Furthermore, we read from the "History of Joseph Smith" (written by himself), as follows (date July 7, 1834):—

After singing and prayer, I gave the council such instructions in relation to their high calling as would enable them to proceed to minister in their office agreeably to the pattern heretofore given, read the revelation on the subject, and told them that if I should now be taken away I had accomplished the great work the Lord had laid before me, and that which I desired of the Lord; and that I had done my duty in organizing the high council, through which council the will of the Lord might be known on all inportant occasions in the building up of Zion and establishing truth in the earth.—Times and Seasons, vol. 6, p. 1109; Millennial Star, vol. 15, p. 109.

Thus we see that the father of the present Joseph understood that in case he should be "taken away," still the work of the Lord could go on, even through and by the means of revelation that God would impart in the way stated in section 99:10 and also by President Joseph Smith in the above instructions to the high council in 1834. And evidently he understood that this was a standing law or rule, and to be in accordance with "the pattern heretofore given" by the Lord, and that the Lord had made known to him that he (the Lord) would reveal his divine will and purpose and direct the church through the body called the high council; and this is in harmony with 99:6, 10.

Therefore, in case the church lost its president, the first move to be made (as the writer of this understands it) would be to gain knowledge as to who the Lord made choice of as the successor. For, no matter what lineage he may be of, yet God's word provides that he who is to preside must be "appointed by revelation" as well as "chosen by the body."

Had this direction from the Lord been heeded in 1844 and after (and righteousness existed too), there would have been no breaking up or scattering abroad. And, as that order was a truth then, and the Lord had by revelation provided for the emergency, as he had indeed made the way plain to all who were or are willing to see his way, so today the same truth, the same way of the Lord is provided.

However, I believe, with one of the writers, that no such sad emergency will be thrust upon us as occurred nearly sixty years ago, but that He who rules, who is "the head," will yet manifest himself in due and proper time to the guidance of his church, and that order, peace, and prosperity will yet spread abroad and bless those who shall abide in faith, in love, in mercy, and in truth. To this end I seek and pray.

LAMONI.

THE SPALDING STORY.

Since so many stories relating to the origin of the Book of Mormon have been told, the writer takes the liberty of repeating a new (?) one. It is another version of the Spalding story, which has long since ceased to be "a new thing under the sun." It has been refuted again and again, but is still adhered to by some as the best weapon with which to oppose Latter Day Saints. Doubtless it is believed to be "the survival of the fittest," and is highly prized by some, and considered a "clincher," no matter in what form it is told. The old song appears to be sung to a new tune in this case.

While laboring in California the writer read a book, generally circulated in a certain community, entitled "Conquering the Wilderness." It was written by one Frank Triplett, who bears the title of "Col." and published by N. D. Thompson and Co., New York and St. Louis, 1883.

It purports to be "a full account of the romantic deeds, lofty achievements, and marvelous adventures" of Daniel Boone, David Crockett, and other American pioneers; also "the heroic fortitude and noble deeds of the pioneer wives and mothers;" likewise "the eccentricities and self-sacrificing labors of Cartright, Axley, and other celebrated pioneer preachers." The writer who gives Col. Triplett this "send off" is very particular to state that the latter doesn't deal in poetry, but facts. To him also a fact is not a flower, but a substantial thing, a weapon of war.

In the course of his wanderings the author reaches Mormonism (so-called) and sums up Joseph Smith and his claims as follows:—

This shrewd Yankee, who had emigrated from his native State of Vermont to New York, seems to have stolen the manuscript of a novel, written in a style similiar to that of the scriptures, and entitled, "Manuscript Found." This has been proved, by unimpeachable evidence, to have been the work of one Josiah Spalding, a lawyer (some accounts say a minister) of considerable erudition. Being unable to get it published, he laid it away in an old trunk, from which it was filched by Joseph Smith, who afterwards claimed to have been directed to dig in a fabulous hill (Cumorah), where he would find the true bible, written on plates of gold. The plates of gold were entirely imaginary, the hill Cumorah was Spalding's trunk, and the new bible the lawyer's novel.—Pp. 520, 521.

The Spalding origin of the Book of Mormon is a matter of tradition and common report among the opponents of the latter day work. However, not merely some, but most accounts represent Mr. Spalding as a minister, and his first name as Solomon instead of "Josiah." That such a man existed and wrote a book bearing the above name we do not dispute. Most accounts are right in what they say of the existence of the man, but wrong in saying his romance was the original of the Book or Mormon. Moreover, the lack of unanimity in representing the man, and the last claim especially, brands the latter as a sheer fabrication. Said novel is now in the possession of Oberlin College, and was in no wise the source of the Book of Mormon, as is evident from the following letters:-

FT. BIDWELL, Calif, Feb 8, 1899.

PROF. WRIGHT, Oberlin, Ohio;

Dear Sir.—I have a copy of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, dated April 8, 1896. It contains one of a series of articles in regard to the General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, held at Kirtland, Ohio, that year. The reporter, Mr. George H. Gordon, says of you:—
"Prof. Wright, of Oberlin, was in Kirtland Monday afternoon. He delivered a lecture in Willoughby, the same evening. Prof. Wright came to examine the temple and get certain information to place in the archives of his college relative to the history of the Latter Day Saints. Prof. Wright said the Spalding Manuscript, which for forty years was believed by some to be the work that Joseph Smith copied the Book of Mormon from, is among the archives of Oberlin College. He says the belief about the Book of Mormon being copied from the Spalding Manuscript is absurd. He says there is absolutely no similarity in the two documents."

Is the above representation of your position in relation to the Spalding origin of the Book of Mormon correct? Will you kindly inform me if it is or is not? Is it true that the Spalding Romance is in the archives of Oberlin College? Is it also true that it doesn't resemble the Book of Mormon? I am anxious to get the truth in regard to this matter. The public should be correctly informed about it.

about it.

Yours respectfully,

A. C. BARMORE,

OBERLIN, Ohio, Feb. 15, 1899.

MR. A. C. BARMORE, Ft. Bidwell, Calif.;

Dear Sir:—Yes; the Solomon Spalding manuscript is in the archives of Oberlin College. The only resemblance between it and the Book of Mormon is that both books deal to a considerable extent with the supposed movements of the prehistoric Indian tribes. manuscript was discovered by President Fairchild, a few years ago. It has been faithfully copied and printed by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Lamoni, Iowa. By writing to them you can get the volume for a small sum (not over fifty cents), which will give you the circumstances of the discovery and a verbatim et literatim printed copy from which you can judge Yours truly, G. FREDERICK WRIGHT. for vourself.

Without further comment we submit the story of each person involved in the foregoing.

ALMA C. BARMORE, SELKIRK, Ont., Feb. 18, 1901.

CONFESSING CHRIST.

Matthew 10: 32-39.

Confession means full acknowledgement or public avowal of our belief in the truthfulness of any fact. To confess Christ it is necessary to know him, to know he is the Son of the living God, and the risen Savior and Redeemer of the world. How shall we know him? For he is only spiritually apprehended. The first step towards this knowledge is faith. Having faith does not only mean to believe, for the him the Son of God, but were not credited with having faith.

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord. shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 7: 21.

Faith and works go together, so we will have to show our faith by acts of obedience, which means to repent of sin and be baptized. The first act that shows to others a confession of Christ is baptism, by which our sins are remitted, and we take upon us the name of Christ. The next thing necessary is the baptism of the Holy Ghost; and not until then do we fully and truly know Christ, that we may confess him, for it is only through the Spirit he is revealed to us. Even to Peter-who was with him daily and had a personal human knowledge of him—when he said, "Thou art the Son of the living God," Jesus answered:

Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which isein heaven .-

Confession of a truth strengthens our conviction of that truth; this truth means our salvation and the coming of Christ's kingdom.

We must not be ashamed of the gospel of Christ, which Paul says is the power of God unto salvation; but by our daily life confess Christ before men, that he will not be ashamed to confess us before our heavenly Father. May we always let our daily conversation be the testimony as to the truthfulness and saving power of the gospel, our allegiance to Christ, our experience in serving him, thus encouraging our brothers and sisters, and showing the outside world we have been with Christ, and enlighten their minds with a knowledge of his plan of salvation.

Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.—Mal.

That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.—Rom. 10: 9.

With the lips confession is made unto salvation, with our hearts we believe unto righteousness; but only by our works and obedience can we manifest faith in the Son of God. Let us confess and not deny him before men, even unto the leaving or making foes of the members of our own household to take up the cross and follow him; or if necessary, lose our lives for his

For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.—Matt. 16: 25.

Just before Christ ascended into nesses unto me." Those who live nearest to God, and under the divine influence of the Spirit, are those that with faith and sincerity confess Christ. FLORALICE MILLER.

Written and read before the Baptist Young People's Union of Dunnville, Ontario.

Selected Articles.

SOME IMPLICATIONS OF THE HIS-TORICAL METHOD IN THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Nothing is more common than to speak of the Bible as a book, and nothing is more misleading. It is not a book; it is a literature of a nation and of a religious community. One has but to look at the Hebrew Bible, with its three collections of sacred books, to realize that he has before him the attempts made by the Jewish people at different periods to collect those books which they judged of the highest worth. Yet even this statement is but imperfect. Not only is the Bible a collection of literature, but this literature is at once the record and the product of an historical development, and this development is two-

On the one side, the literature of the Bible is the record and the product of a developing nation and a developing Christian community. Never was this so plain as it is today. The painstaking effort of critical scholars, however much they may differ among themselves as to details, has placed beyond dispute this fact, that in the Bible we have the literary remains of every stage of the rise and fall of the Hebrew people. The saga, the folktale, the chronicle of the preliterary period; the history and the legislation, political and religious teaching of national maturity; the lamentation, the prayer, and the song of praise and faith from years of national miseryall these have gone to make up the Old Testament. Similarly in the New Testament there are the writings of primitive, of Pauline, and of Catholic Christianity. It is an elementary step to recognize the historical processes which give rise to such literature, and until such a recognition has been made —and that, too, without reservation—no study of the Bible can claim any historical value.

Yet here again we have but imperfectly set forth the significance of the historical point of view. The recognition of the fact that the literature composing the Bible is the product of different ages and historical situations carries with it the further recognition of the development of the idea of God, which this literature has preserved. No method can be historical which finds the same content in the word devils believed on Christ and called heaven he said, "Ye shall be wit- Jehovah when used by the Israelites fresh from Egypt and when used by Isaiah. The Hebrew idea of God was one result of divine inspiration, and therefore it grew with the Hebrew race, and the stages of this process are recorded in the Hebrew literature.

But such a record of the growing knowledge of God is but another name for a growing revelation of God. Popular theology too often fails to grasp the significance of this fact. According to it, it would seem as if there existed before the foundation of the world a certain number of divine truths, all absolute, none relative. A page of these truths, so to speak, was given to Abraham, another to David, another to Hosea, another to Paul. The complete collection of these revelations constitutes the Bible. In accordance with such a view, revelation is always absolute, of equal value for all time. Clearly enough, any recognition of the historial processes which give rise to the men, and the civilization, and the thought of the Scripture literature is utterly inconsistent with such conception. No use of illustrative material, however generous, will, therefore, justify one's calling study dominated by such a view historical. Revelation is impossible apart from human experience. Even when the utmost allowance has been made for the play of human personality, men of the earliest Hebrew times thought of God imperfectly. For a moment Abraham judged it the divine willand unless one quite abandon the biblical account, who can say mistakenly? —that he should imitate the human sacrifices of the surrounding peoples. Revelation, to be revelation, must be conditioned by the moral capacities of the person through whom it is made. Only the pure in heart can see God.

And so it follows that revelation through morally imperfect men may be outgrown. Nay, in so far as it is conditional by the moral imperfection, it must be outgrown. The very fact that it was sufficient for one age makes it insufficient for that age's successor. For revelation is dynamic; it not only fills but enlarges one's needs, and it can be final only in proportion to the moral development of the person through whom it is made.

If the law was a schoolmaster to lead us to Christ, the folk-tale was a schoolmaster to lead to the law. To elevate every religious hope and expression of an imperfect man living in primitive conditions into infallible, unavoidable, eternal religious legislation is to abandon an historical method of interpretation. The supreme moral revelation of God can be that alone which has been made in the life and words of Him who, though tempted like prophet and apostle, was yet without sin.

This means, therefore, someone may ask, that one should preach only the teachings of Jesus? Certainly not. There are truth and divine revelation throughout the Bible, but one must learn to distinguish between the form and the content of truth. The generic, not the specific, the Christlike, not the merely Jewish, is the eternal element of the progressive revelation.

Are not these facts of importance to the preacher? For one thing, from the historical point of view, most of the "discrepancies" of the Bible which have played such havoc both with the faith of the literalist and the conscience of the apologist will dissolve. Further, the student and teacher of the Bible will see the growth of the divine element in human experience, and will welcome all truth, whether it comes through the imperfect life of a David or the perfect life of our Lord. He will use the Bible as a source of teaching, because it reveals to him eternal truths taught and experienced by men under the influence of God's spirit. But since he knows them to have been conditioned and limited by circumstances and forms of thought long since outgrown, he will not confuse "revelation" with "permanent authority." Authority he will find in the complete, and not the progressive, revelation.—Biblical World, March, 1901.

Letter Department.

THURMAN, Iowa, March 8.

Editors Herald:—My long silence is not attributable to a lack of interest in this great work, I assure you. My interest in the gospel of Christ and the salvation of humanity was never greater than at the present time; and I realize more and more, as the years go by, the necessity of living by every word of God.

That God is in this work, I am sure; and that we are living far beneath our privileges, I am equally sure.

Bro. J. R. Lambert's article on charity, in a late issue of the HERALD, is certainly commendable, and is worthy of more than a careless reading. The longer I labor in this work, and the more experience I have in dealing with men, both in and out of the church, the more thoroughly I become convinced that charity, the kind described by Paul in the thirteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians, is indeed a rare jewel; and I often think of the same apostle's admonition, or warning, to the Galatian saints: "But if ve bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another."-Gal. 5:15. Selfishness is one of the greatest curses of the age, and has been in most every age, and every land, of which we have any definite history; and, what is most remarkable, we do not seem to profit by the sad experiences of those who have gone before us, but plunge ahead in the same God-forbidden spirit of harsh criticism, fault-finding, and backbiting. Criticism is all right, when made in the proper spirit and with the proper motive; but alas! how little of it is done in that way! A man has a right to his honest convictions, and has a right to express his convictions, whether they are in accord with the decisions of the body or not; and to pelt a man with such unsavory epithets as "grumbler," "growler," and "sorehead," is not likely to win him over to the truth if he be in error, neither is it likely to increase the confidence of sensible men and women in the one who thus exhibits his own lack of charity. We often magnify molehills into large-sized mountains, in our own estimation or imagination, and then wonder why that brother cannot see his errors; when, at the same time, we are committing a far more serious sin, and one that is far more detrimental to the work, in judging and speaking harshly of the brother whom we suppose to be so blind or perverse. I certainly see danger, along this line, and I do hope we may have enough of God's Holy Spirit to enable us to crucify the old man, with his deeds, and to rise above self and selfish interests, into the glorious liberty of the gospel: a fullness of liberty. But "he that committeth sin, is the servant of sin;" and, if we are the servants of sin, we are certainly not free, even though we may flatter ourselves that we are.

May the Lord help us to get the beam out of our own eye before attempting to get the mote out of our brother's eye.

I hope our young people are all reading the autobiography of Bro. E. C. Briggs.

May the Lord bless his people and his work.

In gospel bonds,

ISAAC M. SMITH.

RAYMOND, Idaho, March 4.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I have been laboring in the Snake River valley, in Idaho. Had the pleasure of laboring in company with Elder S. D. Condit, for a short time; but the laborers being few, and the work being great, we thought that much would be lost should the harvest wait, so we thought it best to separate and labor along as the way opened for preaching at various points. Judging from the interest taken in our meetings and the kindness shown us by both Saints and those of other faiths, our labors will not be fruitless. I believe that in the near future some will be gathered into the fold of Christ.

Of course there are many things to discourage in this mission,-many things not met with outside the Rocky Mountain mission. Here is the stronghold of "Mormonism." and I believe it to be the stronghold of Satan, also. Nowhere else do we find all the true principles of the doctrine of Christ taught, together with so perfect a church organization, and at the same time find so much that is calculated to deceive mankind. When the servants of Christ, they who represent the true Church of Christ, which is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, come to them preaching the pure principles of the gospel of the Son of God, they are kindly received by the "Mormon" people, who say unto them, "That was a good sermon, we believe that, and teach the same." And again if the servants of Christ preach on church organization, or the gifts of Spirit of God, they are met with, "Oh, we believe all that, and have the same church organization, together with all the spiritual gifts that were had in the church organized by Jesus Christ and his apostles eighteen hundred years ago." But what a change comes over the "Mormon" people when the elders of the Reorganized Church attempt to prove the necessity for a reorganization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by examining the history of the "Mormon" church since 1844 to the present time. And although the teachings and practices of that church, both good and evil, have been published to the world by the general authorities of that church, and have thus become public property, yet when they are referred to, especially the evils taught and practiced by the church authorities in Utah and the surrounding territories from 1847 to to 1870, the people become enraged and imagine vain things. And instead of examining their history and comparing the things they (the people) have been taught in the past, with the teachings of Jesus the great lawgiver and leader of the pure and the good. they (the "Mormon" people) turn against the true servants of Christ and stand up and bear their testimony that they know that President Brigham Young was a true prophet of God, thus bearing false witness, for God has said his Spirit will not dwell in unholy temples, and they who practice abominations are not his servants

While preaching at Iona I presented some facts relative to "Mormon" history in the valleys of the mountains, and I received several compliments. Among others a woman told me that I was no gentleman. I thanked her for the compliment, and told her that my Master had to bear such things and I could stand it.

While in the valley I visited nearly all the dear Saints living there, and tried to instruct and build them up in the true faith. Met with a hearty welcome at the home of each Saint whom I visited, and was kindly cared for by all. Some aided me financially. I can say in the sincerity of my heart, God bless all those who have shown kindness to me in the Snake River valley during my sojourn with them.

On February 28, started for Montpelier, Idaho, but stopped off at Pocatello, and in company with Bro. S. D. Condit visited the Saints in that busy, bustling city, trying to ascertain the possibilities of doing some gospel work in the near future. Stopped over night with Bro. Croshaw, and then took train for Soda Springs, where I visited the few Saints living there, and also renewed acquaintance with some old-time friends. Did not have time to stay more than one night. having come on to Montpelier, where I formerly lived, in order to be identified by the agent of the O. S. L. R. R. before I could get a permit from the Western Passenger Association. Disappointment awaited me by reason of a new agent being in the office, so I had to come to Cokeville, to have the business attended to; and being so near home I could not resist the temptation of visiting home and loved ones, whom I found enjoying the blessings of health and strength and striving to abide in the true Vine from which comes the life giving power necessary for each one to have in order to effectually resist temptation and overcome evil.

Yours hopefully,
A. J. LAYLAND.

WOODSIDE, Montana, March 8.

Editors Herald:—Just a few words to say that this finds winter breaking and spring near at hand. Old hands say this has been the mildest winter for sixteen years in Montana.

In trying to get to this section, the Bitter Root valley, I had the most annoying delay of all my traveling experience. The warm weather let loose a lot of ice which, carried by these swift mountain streams, took out several bridges and "tied up" some six trains. I was thirty-seven hours going seventy-four miles. Could have walked it sooner.

Lately have had excellent attendance and interest, but sleeping on the cars has crippled my voice with a cold. I have had to stop for a season.

Was struck lately with the request received from a brother in the ministry spending his whole time, for help to get him a home. A certain weekly paper offers a home to the man who will get them the most subscribers in a prescribed time. This brother has the same issue pressing on him as most of the ministry of the church, viz., Am I always going to pay rent? What provision have I made for old age, with a family growing up? What are the prospects?

Here is a chance for me to show practical brotherly love—a chance for all the brother ministers to practice a little coöperation, and I hope they will get the chance. If each could in turn have the same opportunity to get a home it would be a grand coöperation—every one of us would have a home! We would begin to think Zion had come.

We of the ministry are only human, and the home question will not down. Some of us commenced young and have had no opportunity to get a home. Every year spent in evangelizing unfits us for other pursuits. This year I have had one or two fair offers to engage in temporal pursuits, but refused them, believing that the movement with which I am connected is divine and will supply all needs. However, the human eye sees poor prospects ahead, and we are not without trials to the flesh along these lines,

Jesus said, "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." I am reminded that the commercial interests are already practicing cooperation and community of interest. This is seen in the trusts and gigantic combines. They find it more economical than competition—can produce and operate more cheaply. There seems hard work to get the children of light to cooperate sufficiently to lift a debt from their college, the building of which the whole church under a representative delegate system authorized to be built. A brother in Deer Lodge in a recent conversation hit the nail on the head, when he remarked: "We talk of cooperating as a church and establishing Zion, in which we will solve the wage, labor, and capital questions, and build a house unto the Lord, and yet we cannot, so far, build and pay for a little college building!" He hardly thought the church would make much progress in the larger project until it learned or mastered smaller ones.

Mr. Editor, it will mean a great relief to hear this April session that Graceland is free,—and a great discourager to hear that the debt still remains. With that lifted, and the Independence branch already free to engage in "advance work," our temporal concerns ought to be considerably brighter.

In spite of discouragements, I still feel safe in clinging to the hopes and designs of this peculiar movement. We are not without hopeful signs and indications of God's care. If men can demonstrate that they can send their thoughts through space without the aid of wires. I can believe more strongly than before that revelation is possible and even scientifically sound. But we let our batteries (the soul force) run down and get out of order: not even man can communicate under such conditions. I am persuaded that the battery at the other end is always in order, and the Great Soul of the universe is always ready to put into operation the greatest and grandest of wireless telegraphy. Yes, present day revelation is a principle that stands firmer in the light of advanced science.

G. R. WELLS.

LANGDON, N. D., Feb. 17.

Dear Herald:—I thought I must write and let you know how the HERALD helps us up here, where there are no Saints, my husband and I being the only ones right here.

Last night when my husband came from town the HERALD came, and we began at the first piece, "Committee on Histories Gets Correction," and how it did our hearts good! Then Bro. J. W. Wight's debate, then Bro. I. N. White's long letter, and Bro. Briggs' piece; and how we could rejoice over it!

It seems to put new life in me to press forward in this great latter-day work, for it is glorious beyond a doubt in my mind. It seems that even if we are alone here my faith is growing stronger every day, and am learning faster.

Bro. Sparling was here to see us in December. It seemed good to see him again. Had a good visit and preaching every night. We had sickness in our house at the time, so could not have him preach here; but a dear friend let us in her house. May God bless her and show her the truth! There were only a few of us, but I feel the dear Lord was with us. I ask an interest in all your prayers that I may be a help to the blessed Master's cause and not a hindrance.

I pray that we may be able to raise our little children up in the way of the Lord, and ask an interest in your prayers that God may bless my dear husband in his office. Ever praying that we may be a help to build up Zion, I remain,

Your sister in Christ,
BERNICE CROWL.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, March 8. Editors Herald:—I have just returned from Decatur, Nebraska, where I acted as moderator for Bro. F. A. Smith, in a debate between him and J. I. Hayes, of the Utah faction. I am pleased to say that it was a complete victory for us. The attendance and attention were very good throughout. The Saints felt happy and strengthened, and those not with us declared that they now understand better tean before the difference between us and the Utah "Mormons."

Elder Hayes is an able young man and acted quite fairly. He tried to defend the doctrines of polygamy and blood atonement; but when confronted with the scriptural arguments of Bro. Smith, found himself on the wrong side. In his opposition to the Reorganization he followed the course pursued by B. H. Roberts and read largely from his work. Roberts seems to be a standard with them, and his assertions accepted as law and gospel.

Every encounter with the Utah faction that I have witnessed, or in which I have participated, has helped to show me the impenetrable position occupied by the Reorganization. I feel confident that we have nothing to lose, but much to gain by a comparison with them. Yours in bonds,

POND CREEK, Okla, March 11.

Editors Herald:-Since my last writing I

H. N. HANSEN.

labored some in Custer county, Oklahoma, and thence to conference at Okarche, but was too late for the business sessions. Heard our missionary in charge, H. O. Smith, deliver two excellent discourses. On the morning of the fourth, in company with J. M. Brown, I came to this place, and found an opening five miles southwest of town. We occupied three nights: but when we reached there the fourth we found the door locked. On Sunday morning I went to the school director and he informed me that the door was locked against us and that they didn't want any more of our preaching. Said that he did not care, but that he was simply a tool for the district. I then asked him to leave it to a vote at their Sunday school that evening, which he agreed to do. So when time came for Sunday school it found the two families of Saints, Bro. Brown, and the writer on hand. When Sunday school was over I asked for a vote of the people, but he said there were not many out and we would wait till meeting that night. A U. B. preached; and at the close of the meeting we again called for a vote of the patrons (and the house was well filled), but he refused to take a vote and declared that the doors would be locked against us. Bro. Brown and myself stated to the people that we were not connected with the Utah church as was charged against us. The United Brethren minister arose and made the statement that all that people knew we were not connected with the people in the west. He said he was acquainted with Joseph Smith and had preached alternately with him at Terre

Haute, and that to hear him preach you could not tell him from Methodist or Baptist; but when he preached to his people he preached doctrine. He had tried to show in his discourse that we should not preach doctrine

We announced meeting for the next night at Bro. Hans Hemingsen's. At the close of the meeting some of the people gave us a hearty handshake and said they did not approve of the way we were treated; that they believed in giving everybody fair play.

It will seem a little hard for Bro. and Sr. Hemingsen, as they are lately from Iowa and from a branch; but they are strong in the faith. I think we have made friends for the truth and that good will result.

Bro. and Sr. McCulloch are not permanently located here, and may be here but a few days longer. They are lately from Illinois, and are strong in the faith. May God bless such noble Saints as we find scattered over this territory! They are the means of getting the work started in many new places.

So the good work moves on in Oklahoma. We are feeling hopeful, and feel assured that some good will be done if this can be followed up with effectual labor. I do not know when I have felt more encouraged in the work than at present. I have been sick most of the time I have been in the field; but the last two months my health has improved until now I am feeling quite well.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, your colaborer, W. R. SMITH.

FULTON, Richmond, Va., March 3.

Dear Saints:-Thinking a few lines concerning our little Sunday school might be interesting, I will try to tell you about it. It opened February 17, with nine scholars and one on-looker, but no one to assist in teaching. The next Sunday had a few more to take part, and had one more to give her name. Today, had six new scholars, and one visitor; total number on roll, seventeen, besides myself. No teacher and no help. So as the scholars are all quite small, ranging from fourteen years down, I have only the primary grade of Quarterly as yet. Have arranged them in one large class, and read to them the lesson for the day from the Bible. then the scholars read the lesson story, and then I ask the questions given in lesson with such others as may suggest themselves. Then roll is called, and each one recites a verse with some word in it, which I give them the Sunday before. Today the word was peace. I gave them faith for next Sunday. But I am astonished at the ignorance of the scriptures most of them are in. They do not know how to find a verse for themselves. Out of all who promised to help me in the school not one has yet come to assist, but I am not a bit discouraged. If the Lord wants the school to prosper, he will send helpers. If not, I don't want it to, either; but the increased number today, and the improved behavior, gave me much encouragement. The first session was my birthday, and I told them I thought it the nicest way I could celebrate it.

A dear sister in Utah sent me one dollar for a birthday present, and I used it to get cards and little hymn books (Songs of Zion) for the school. Have distributed since school began thirty-five Hopes.

Now, dear Saints, I am going to ask your help. Send me Hopes, tracts, and Autumn Leaves. I have at present plenty of Ensigns and HERALDS, and as it costs something to rent hall, buy fuel and supplies, if anyone feels to assist in dollars and cents, I shall be thankful, and will use it to the best advantage I can. Testaments are sadly needed. Who will donate some?

I will be glad of any suggestions, also. I have to be superintendent, teacher, sexton, chorister, librarian, secretary, and would be treasurer, if we had anything for a treasurer to take charge of. But "Tall oaks from little acorns grow," and methinks I can see a lordly tree in the not very distant future.

Yours for the good of the cause,

ALICE R. CORSON.

LOWRY CITY, Mo., March 8.

Editors Herald.—Since our district conference held at Coal Hill chapel, February 2, Bro. J. N. Stephenson and I have been on the watch to escape the yellow flag districts, for it was certain to cheat us out of a congregation if we set our stakes to preach where they were. We opened up at Monegaw Springs, February 14. Held five services. At the close of the last service many came forward to shake hands with us, and one man, a stranger to us, said while shaking hands with me, "God bless you in your work; come again, and be sure to come to my house when you do come."

Bro. Stephenson and I separated here, each going to our homes with the intention of starting out again in two or three days. After Bro. Stephenson got home he found it necessary to move his family from near Quincy, Missouri, to Roscoe, Missouri, where he had purchased a more convenient home for them. So we did not meet each other at the time we had thought to. I started out all alone, and found an opening at the Star schoolhouse. Held five services with increasing crowd and splendid attention and words of cheer to come back again. I pray the Lord to bless all the inquiring ones.

In gospel bonds,

T. R. WHITE.

GREEN COVE SPRINGS, Florida, March 9.

Editors Herald:—I am alone as far as the church is concerned. I have been here nearly two months, and do not know of any Saints nearer than my home, Gordon, Alabams

With my husband I left home the 30th of December, a bride of a little over a week. If he were a member of the church I would be satisfied; but I can only pray God to show him the truth in his own due time.

I desire the prayers of the Saints for him and me; and for my father, A. J. Vickrey, who is suffering with rheumatism. If it is God's will, our prayers will be answered; if not, God's will be done.

Ever praying for Zion, your sister in bonds, ESTELLE GUEST.

DUNLAP, Iowa, March 11.

Editors Herald:-I began active work last August and have been working in the Galland's Grove district as steadily as circumstances would permit ever since.

In connection with Bro. Brawster, I have opened up a number of new places in Audubon county, where I spent most of the winter, and preached in a good many other places where the work was better known. Of late I have been laboring in Shelby county. My meetings have generally been fairly well attended, and I have usually had good lib-

While laboring near Dedham, I was among members of the "Church of God." A few came out to hear my preaching and expressed themselves as pleased with our position. They are relatives of Bro. Lewis, of St. Joseph, Missouri. While there, I read considerable in Mrs. Woodworth's book; she is styled by some the "Great Trance Evangelist." She represented the "Church of God," and established the work there. She is evidently a great woman. The signs and wonders that follow her teachings are marvelous. People by the thousands were completely under the control of the supernatural power she wielded. She converted entire churches into mourner's benches, and entire congregations, nearly, were seekers and workers, instead of auditors.

The floor and rostrum looked "like a battle field," she said, "covered with the slain of the Lord," people who had fallen in trances. Some would stand like statues for hours with their hand pointing heavenward. Others would fall in trances and be like dead persons miles away from her meetings or from her. Some lav in trances but a few moments. Others lay for twenty-four hours. All were converted to her theories of conversion, when they came out of their trances. Many shouted praises to God, and told of the wonderful visions they had of the beauties of heaven and the horrors of the regions of the damned; and went at once to preaching to others and warning them of the terrors of hell, and of the necessity of seeking salvation. Many who came to oppose her meetings were stricken down as dead, sometimes immediately after they entered the room.

All manner of diseases were healed under her administration of laying on of hands. Cancers gave way as readily as colds, and consumption in its worst stages was counted as a small matter. "Many sick were healed and hundreds of souls saved," was her usual statement of the various meetings she held.

I was astonished to think that such miraculous power had been given to anyone, and it seemed as though a vast amount of good was being done the human family, bodily and spiritually. I wondered how God had given her so much power, and I realized that God's chosen ministry, as I believed his elders to be, had, comparatively, so little power. It worried me, and I could not understand it. I did not feel to say it was not of God, because so much good, seemingly, was being done. And I could not say it was all fiction, because the people where I was staving had attended her meetings and declared they had seen such things.

I finally determined to take the matter to the Lord, and asked him how it was he had given this woman such power, and had not given nearly so much to the representatives of this latter-day work. Was the work a failure, or was he giving to others greater power owing to their greater degree of faith? I meditated and prayed over the matter for some time, when, all at once I caught glimpse of a person, as it were by the eye of my mind, standing by my side dressed in a dark brown suit. At the same time this person seemed to ask me, "What did Paul say?" The answer followed immediately. "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel than that which we have preached, let him be accursed." And also this scripture: "To the law and testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." The latter is found in Isaiah 8: 20. The former quotation is Galatians 1:8.

I had many times used these scriptures but, so far, I had not seen their application in the case under consideration; because much of her teaching was the same as ours; and miraculous signs followed. But I was conscious now that this had come in answer to my prayer. I felt to realize that a heavenly personage had come to answer my request. And the question and answer, as asked and answered by this messenger, were so vividly impressed on my mind. I could not but see how completely my requests had been answered.

I then remembered that she did not teach the gospel in its fullness, though she did teach the greater part of it. She had left out that perfect form of organization. She did not teach her converts that they should be "haptized into Jesus Christ," Romans 6: 3, into that body of Christ, in which there are many members, comparative to the human body, "yet but one body." 1 Cor. 12: 20. Nor were they "by one spirit all baptized into one body" (v. 13). Read the chapter. On the contrary, they were converted on the mourner's bench style and given the privilege to unite with any church or "body" they pleased. The particular conversion they received seemed to be the only essential thing. In other things they could do as they pleased.

My mind became satisfied that it did not matter how much power one has, if they have not the gospel in its fullness, when they have an opportunity to have it, it will only bring condemnation in the end. "There is no light in them," if their teachings do not agree with the scriptures. Not only in part but in full.

I then went to searching the scriptures to see where such power could come from. I found that in the last days Satan would work through some, "with all power and signs and lying wonders," to deceive those who will not believe the truth, "that they all may be damned." (2 Thess. 2: 9-12) Also that the "false prophets shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." Matt. 24:24.) And again, "He doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven." (Rev. 13:13.)

These scriptures, with others, show what great "signs and lying wonders" shall be used by Satan to deceive the very elect, if possible, when God is accomplishing his great and marvelous work in the last days.

I am glad to be able to represent a work that embraces every principle of the plan of salvation, in its most comprehensive sense.

May Satan with all his cunning wiles and boasted power and legions of emissaries never be able to overcome God's children, is the humble prayer of,

Your brother in the faith,

J. M. STUBBART.

ALLEGAN, Michigan, March 11. Dear Herald:-We are few in numbers, yet we know God is with us when we are faithful and humble.

Bro. Durand has been here, and accomplished a good work. May God bless him! While here he organized our Sunday school, with twenty-one members, and now we have about twenty-six or twenty-seven. We feel that God remembers us even if we have not a branch. We ask the prayers of the Saints for our Sunday school. They have appointed me superintendent, and I feel I have great need of help. I want to be found ready to do all the good I can.

> Your sister in gospel bonds, CARRIE RUSSELL.

> > PALMER, Pa., March 12.

Dear Herald:-Our conference at Cleveland was a complete success, from beginning to end. In the point of sociability it could not be excelled. After such gatherings we can all the more appreciate the Zionic condition of the Saints. The Cleveland Saints are adepts in making conferences a success.

They are now creating a fund toward the building of a church. The young are the moving power behind the enterprise, and at present things look encouraging. They think it more business-like to build a place worship of their own than to pay out fifteen or sixteen thousand dollars for hall and have nothing to show for it but a bushel of receipts.

Have had, in some respects, an unusually successful winter. Brn. Parsons, Davidson, and F. C. Smith will be pleased to hear of Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads, who so cheerfully opened their doors for the preaching of the word, up the west hill from Akron, Ohio, now being in full fellowship with us. They promise to become useful in the Master's cause.

The work is making gradual improvements all along the line in the historical Kirtland district. The Macedonian cry is heard on all sides, and our hearts are sometimes pained that we cannot relieve them.

My little nephew, Myron Thomas, aged fourteen years, was ordained a priest on last Sunday, by Ben. G. T. Griffiths, F. G. Pitt, McDowell and self. He intends to begin at once to magnify his calling. This looks very encouraging for the future of the church. Wheeling branch can well boast of the good fruits of their Sabbath school.

On next Friday night I begin a thirteen nights' discussion with a Holiness preacher at Blyston, Pennsylvania. For the first five evenings he will contend that the kingdom of heaven is in the heart, and the millennium reign began in the fifth century and ended in the fifteenth. If this man's interpretation be true, Lord help us when the Devil is turned loose!

The debate will be reported and published in book form. More anon,

F. J. EBELING.

GUY, Oklahoma, March 6.

Editors Herald:-On February 16 I went southeast, preached some fifteen miles from home to over twenty men at a mill, about two p. m. Had good attention and was invited to the schoolhouse, where I preached over Sunday, assisted by Elder Vrooman, who accompanied me. Left appointment for him over the next Sunday. Found a Sister Jansen who had lived there two years and never knew of the Saints at Guy. She was very glad to see us. Was baptized by Bro. William Pender, in Kansas. She has a large family, and her husband is very kind and favorable to the truth. Others there much Went further, eight miles, where I had been before: found some much interested reading the Book of Mormon, and sent for Ensign. Had many invitations to preach in new places. Everywhere people want to hear.

Wife and I next went to Advent settlement northwest. Found preachers of different kinds had been busy telling "all about old Joe Smith, his numerous wives, stealing propensities," etc., causing me to preach first and last there on the mission of the great seer. Never more blessed in my life. Twenty-three there the first night, audiences increasing until house was full. Nearly a dozen wanted to read the Book of Mormon. Have ordered four copies of the Book of Mormon, and one of the Inspired Translation, nine copies of the Voice of Warning, and two sent for the Ensign.

Baptized two Monday; two more ready, Seventh-day Advent friends, but the day was so cold lady was afraid of water because of rheumatism, and we have put it off until April. Bro. and Sr. Moore are overjoyed at their neighbors coming in and so many more being interested. Christian minister assisted in singing at water and dismissal ordinance. Another Advent invited us to spend "Sabbath" with him, which we did, and Sunday night said publicly after sermon, "Advent no longer," and wants to read Book of Mormon. Another took us home with him Sunday, and he is done with Adventism, and much interested in our work. Seventhday preacher has not preached at Dighton since debate, and never will again, I think. February 25 he raised his tent eight miles north of Dighton, and I want to visit him next week.

An artist set his camera and took a view of the baptism. He sent for Book of Mormon and Ensign. I am trying to get the brethren to put the gospel tent in that place soon; think it would do great good, as their schoolhouse is small.

I go tomorrow to county seat, with Bro. Scott, who hears that a preacher there is David said in ancient times, "Behold, how "spoiling for a fight," saying "the Mormons will not meet him."

I noticed in a First-day Advent paper that they had organized a church this winter about twenty miles west, of fifty-six members. Thought to visit them soon, as many of them are leaving the old traditions and looking for more truth In gospel bonds,

D. S. CRAWLEY.

P. S.-I heartily indorse the idea of a late writer in regard to getting out a cheaper edition of the Book of Mormon. How many will take a dozen or more to loan or sell at forty cents if such an edition is published? I for one. If one or two thousand will do so and will notify the Board of Publication, it may cause such a reduction in price. And I urge upon all the great help of the Voice of Warning. I now have eighteen to loan, and take orders for what I can. Many say that it gives more light than any book they ever read. Let the light shine!

GRANNIS, Ark., March 11.

Editors Herald:-I am still striving to advance the cause of Christ among the children of men. I just returned from Euclid, Arkansas, where I held meetings for one week with increased interest. The Saints have built a nice little church at Euclid and Grove, a nice Sunday school and church; three elders and one missionary (seventy), J. W. Jackson. This is one of the best branches in the North Texas and Choctaw district; not the largest now, but the most permanent, composed of settled farmers. This is the place where I received forty lashes save five some nine years ago. The country then was full of wildcat distilleries, making wildcat whisky; but now on the creeks and hollows where those wildcats existed then there are Latter Day Saint farms. The Saints have opened up nice farms in the very place of these outlaw wildcat whisky dens. Some have moved in from Faulkner county, and taken homesteads. Some homesteads yet can be obtained, but the best land is taken already; however, some very good homes could be settled vet. I do not regret my labor, sacrifice, and persecution at that place.

I had quite a time getting back to Grannis owing to rain and high waters; but by the help of our noble young brother and elder. James Phillips, I arrived all right Sunday morning, in time for preaching at eleven a. m. Had a good meeting last night at Grannis. It is very pleasant work to feed sheep. No persecution; but to get out in the world, take all kind of names and treatment, there is no good time about it; a man that would claim so needs to be bored for the simples. However, it is the duty of missionaries to preach the gospel to the world as well as feed

We are all finite beings and must have charity or love in order to be God's people: and if we have love for one another we will not conclude ourselves better than any one else. Shakespeare said not one wise man in twenty will boast of himself and Shakespeare was superior to Robert G. Ingersoll.

I am fixing up for General Conference.

good, how pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity." I hope this will not be set aside at General Conference.

The work is progressing in these parts. The Devil is also doing his work at Cove and other places. In bonds of peace and love,

J. D. ERWIN.

HARLANVILLE, Texas, March 11.

Editors Herald:-The HERALD is ever a welcome visitor to us. As we gather in the family circle and read the letters and the spiritual sermons, it encourages me to press forward, and calls to my mind many happy hours spent in divine worship, and many past blessings that are consoling. The world may scorn us, and close doors against us, as was done to us a short time ago while we were trying to carry on a Sunday school, but there is grand consolation in the thought that the Lord will hear and reward us as much by worshiping him in our private houses.

Not many Saints live here, but a few of us now meet and hold services, and I feel that the Lord blesses our efforts.

Conference was held here on February 22 to 24, and we had an enjoyable time. I was glad to meet with the Saints again.

I ask the prayers of the Saints.

Your sister in Christ, MARY A. SPICER.

MOLINE, Ill., March 14.

Editors Herald:-History repeats itself with variations. King Henry VIII., of England, lived with a wife eighteen years, when his heart wandered after another, and poor Catherine of Aragon, his queen, became a decided obstacle to his happiness. A pope, with opinions contrary and ways displeasing to his majesty, also stood between Henry and his loved Anne Boleyn. But what is faithful wife, revered pope, or spiritual or temporal law to a king in love? A cardinal is arrested, the universities are consulted, an ecclesiastical court is held, a divorce is granted, the king marries his choice, and forthwith a new church springs into being with himself its head. Thus the church, the institution that should be the instrument of high heaven for holy purposes, became the tool in the gratification of an earthly love.

Nearly four centuries have passed, and we might well hope that that church had ceased to lend and bend itself to human loves, but not so, according to late newspaper reports. A love affair springs up between Canon Ingram, pastor of a poor parish in East London, and Lady Ulrica Duncombe, daughter of the Earl of Faversham. Proud papa and relatives induce the lady to jilt the parson because of his low estate. But the lady's love will not down. The Princess of Wales becomes interested, but fails in attempt to overcome objections of proud relatives. Presently the princess becomes Queen Alexandria, and the power of the new king is invoked, when presto, change! Canon Ingram is Lord Bishop of London, with fifty thousand pounds a year, the title of an Earl, a seat in parliament, large estates in city and country, prospect of succeeding to the Archbishopric of Canterbury, and best of all, the certainty of the bride of his choice. And the world applauds! But over the gospel lightened imagination pass the commingling sights and sounds of Satan's joy, angel's sorrows and the frown of an offended God at what things are done under the cloak of Christian religion and in the name of holy priesthood.

Science, especially material science, is exact, mathematical, positive. In this character it sometimes assumes to overrule revelation. Hence the believer in revelation must be interested in the weaknesses of science as they may be demonstrated. Now comes Professor Miethe, of Berlin, with the claim that he has demonstrated, in effect, the possibility of producing light without consuming fuel. If this be so, one of the bulwarks of infallibility in scientifically discovered principle must fall, and the law of conservation of energy be revised. Shall we yet see perpetual motion rolling its wheels over the necks of scientists, and the "cranks" who have believed in it in the face of the scorn of science regarded as martyrs to a worthy hope?

Truth is always beautiful, and when well expressed is worth repeating, no matter by whom it is uttered. Bishop John Spaulding (Catholic) of Peoria, on January 15, at Galesburg, Illinois, said, "The spirit of the twentieth century shall be the striving to make human life possible for all men and women. He who grinds men down to starvation wages in the war of competition is a wicked man. Competition is not the life of trade when it is the death of men. . . . Instead of competition for life, let it be cooperation for life." While perverted Christianity is bearing fruit in the elightenment that enables men to rise, at least in thought and speech, above the iniquitous effects of modern methods in business, is the restored gospel bearing the better fruit of social, spiritual, and temporal equality? These are essential products of the tree God has planted in the latter days. How long shall it be barren, or yield wild figs (fruit common to the world) and not be cut down? Shall we be at ease in the church, content with what has been and is being done, forgetful of the great things yet unattempted?

The writer was kept at home at and after the time of the district conference by sickness which left no member of the family untouched, but which has now left us all unmarked. March first I went to Ohio, Illinois, and endeavored to preach at East Grove chapel (Union), but the weather was there ahead of me and occupied the territory until I left on Monday last. I am spending this week in the Tri-cities expecting to go to Muscatine, Iowa, next week. Bro. Russell is expected here on Saturday. The work here seems to have made perceptible if not pronounced, advance during the past year. Just now a cloud is somewhat obscuring the spiritual sky, but its early passage appears assured.

We are not dead up at Plano. The church has needed repairs for some time, and active preparations for the work are under way. At last report, one hundred and sixty dollars had been subscribed by Saints and friends. As to meetings, there is ample room for increase of congregations. But the faithful, who have kept the faith while their locks have turned from the clear, strong colors of early years to the gray or white that is prophetic of an early voyage over the dark waters, stand fast in the service, and in the hope of the fadeless green fields and renewed, endless youth beyond the sea. So may we all abide. Your brother, ADAM J. KECK.

Original Poetry.

SONG OF PRAISE.

Tune.—"I cannot tell how precious."
I'll sing of my Redeemer
And chant aloud his praise,
Restoring in its fullness
The gospel in these days.
The same in mercy herald,
By Peter, John, and Paul,
Informed direct from heaven,
In duty great and small.

CHORUS:-

All join to sing his praises
With instrument and voice,
And as each pean raises,
Let every heart rejoice.

The gift of faith and knowledge,
And wisdom from on high,
Tongues and th' interpretation,
While others prophesy.
And what can be more cheering
To every Christian heart,
The Spirit voice commanding
All sickness to depart.

CHORUS.

O, what a blessed gospel,
Uncertainty all fled,
To know the mind of Jesus,
And by his Spirit led
To you celestial glory,
Prepared by Mercy's hand,
For all that are obedient
To each divine command.

CHORUS.

Why should the world get angry
When we such tidings bear?
We only do our duty,
That they with us might share.
As Father is impartial
To his creation, man,
For all may come, and welcome,
To his soul-saving plan.
HORUS.

JOHN D. JONES.

KEWANEE, Illinois, Sept. 22, 1900.

At Portland, Maine, there is a publication entitled the Safeguard and Armory, which is issued quarterly, and deals with numerous questions of the day. In the April number of 1900 the question of Christian Science is handled by answering the questions, "Is it Christian?" and "Is it Scientific?" Thirty pages are devoted to this subject, and then about ten to the use of the editor. The publication is issued by the Safeguard Publishing Co., 305 Cumberland street.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Be brave, dear heart, nor faint, nor fail
To send thy love-fraught cargoes forth;
For though these perish, sail on sail,
Thy freight has an immortal worth."

A MOTHER WHO HELPED.

Our best deeds we often do unconsciously. Certain it is that nothing was farther from my mind than pushing my friend's cause with the great man of the railway company for which I flourished my brush. But it is equally certain that, as I turned over my sketches of scenes from camp life with the lumbermen and miners, I found myself talking with full enthusiasm of the two men who filled my imagination as the greatest of all men I had yet met. The railway man kept me talking of Graeme for an hour and then said: "Bring your friend to me tomorrow," which I did, to the mutual and lasting advantage of them both; for, when Graeme came back to me after his interview with the great man, he greeted me with a whack and demanded to know with what yarns I had been regaling his chief's ears.

"Chief?" I asked, in delighted surprise. "So! But how did you do it?" he replied. "With what material did you pack him?"

"Pack him? Not at all! I simply gave him a few yarns and showed him some sketches."

"Yarns and sketches! O, I know you and your tricks and your ways," he answered, shaking his head at me. "All the same, old man, I owe it to you that I sign myself 'Confidential Secretary to the Superintendent of Construction,' with almost unlimited powers."

"Good, man!" I shouted. "When you are president, I'll take an annual pass, if you don't mind."

"You can get a pass out now, if you want to come."

"Not yet. But when do you go?"

"Next week."

"Next week?" I cried, in dismay, thinking of the sweet, pale face of the beautiful little lady at the manse in the country.

